VIGOROUS PROTEST

Made at Victoria Against the United States.

Object to the Unrestricted Killing of Seals.

Victoria, B. C., June 12.—In the legislature last evening, the following resolution, moved by H. D. Helmicken, member for Victoria, was passed unanimously.

Whereas, British subjects have faithfully observed the regulations made pursuant to the award dated Aug. 15, 1893, passed for proper protection and preservation of fur seals in Behring sea, and

Whereas, It is announced that the government of the United States has lately passed an edict, that unless a modus vivendi prohibiting the killing of seals be secured at the opening of pelagic season of 1902, authority will be given to kill all the male and female seals with the exception of ten thousand females and one thousand males, and

Whereas, the execution of such presumed authority is contrary to the finding of the Behring sea tribunal and the direct violation of the agreement entered between the governments of Great Britain and the United States, and an unwarrantable interference with an infringement upon undoubted rights of British subjects, be it, therefore

Resolved, that this house would regret the commission of such an act and in the opinion of this house, a humble address be presented to his honor, the lieutenant governor protesting against such action and urging that all proper steps be taken to bring this matter to the attention of the imperial government.

ATTACKED BY BLACKS

Crew Wrecked Off North Australia Was Seized By Natives and All But One of Them Were Killed.

Victoria, B. C., June 12.—According to advices received by the steamer Aorangi, a Malayan sailor recently arrived at Port Darwin and reported that he was the only survivor of a crew of ten men of a Malaya trading schooner, which had been wrecked off Cape Wilberforce, North Australia. The crew were attacked by blacks and all but one killed. The survivor experienced many hardships. The Dutch bark Gertruida Gerada, which left Java, March 22 in ballast for New Castle, was thrown on her beam ends and abandoned at sea by all but three of her crew who were rescued by the steamer St. Mary. The remainder of the crew has not been heard of since.

The Loyalty islands were swept by a disastrous cyclone during April and many buildings destroyed, including a convent, two temples and a church at Nathlo. Many plantations were ruined and copra crops were destroyed. A number of marine disasters also occurred. At Maeton, Brittain island, almost every residence was damaged. Severe earthquake shocks were also felt.

There were sixteen cases of plague in Sydney when the Aorangi left, and a peculiar feature of the outbreak was that a number of animals in the zoo were attacked.

STUDENTS ARE INJURED

Des Moines, June 12.—For the first time in two days telegraph and telephone communication with Washington has been obtained.

Four wagon loads of students enjoying a picnic at Coppoc, nine miles south of Washington, were caught by the storm during their return journey. One wagon, containing nine members of the high school class which had just graduated, sought shelter in a school house, which was blown to pieces, burying all in the debris.

The injured: Mildred Mittlin, bones broken in several places and body bruised, eyes filled with mortar, blind, will die; Charles Chance, collar bone broken in several places, badly crushed all over, still unconscious, recovery doubtful; Myrtle Stewart, badly bruised about the head and face; Blanche Stewart, shoulder dislocated, head cut, bruised; Myrtle Shields, leg badly injured, severely bruised; Jessie Klein, back wrenched, badly cut; Gertie Reeves, face cut seriously; Mary Jerard, ankle dislocated, several flesh wounds.

TWO HUNDRED EXECUTIONERS

Turs, France, June 12.—A crowd of 3000 persons witnessed the execution at midnight in the city park of the largest of Barnum & Bailey's performing elephants. While on the way to the railroad station the animal suddenly went mad, broke its chains, tried to kill its keepers and had to be killed immediately. Two hundred men tugged at the rope which strangled the elephant.

CONVICTS ELUDE PURSUERS

Portland, Ore., June 12.—Harry Tracy and David Merrill, the escaped convicts who were surrounded in the woods near Gervais by the sheriff's posse and state troops, eluded their pursuers during the night and at 6 o'clock this morning were seen five miles north of Gervais. The fugitives stopped at a farm house, where they took breakfast and obtained some food to take with them.

GOING TO RELIEVE BALDWIN

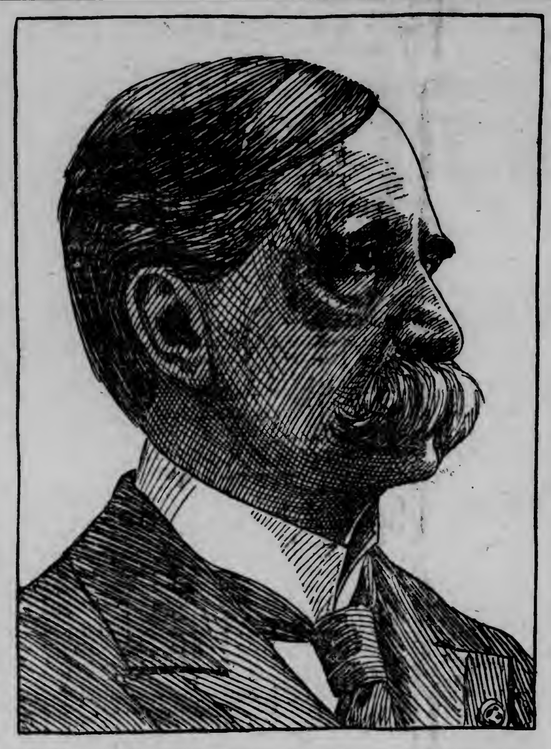
London, June 12.—W. S. Champ, secretary of the Baldwin-Zeigler Arctic expedition, and Dr. S. G. Hurkley, of New York, start tomorrow for Tromsoe, Norway, where they will sail July 1 on the Frithjof for Franz Josefs land to take coal to Mr. Baldwin's ship, the America, and obtain news of the Arctic explorer. Mr. Champ expects to find the America in about 82 degrees. If Mr. Baldwin has succeeded in his dash to the pole he will be brought back. Otherwise the Frithjof will leave a well equipped sledge party to search for Mr. Baldwin. The Frithjof will return Oct. 1 at the latest. The Baldwin-Zeigler Arctic expedition, consisting of the America and the Belgica, left Thomsoe, Norway, July 16, under the command of Evelyn B. Baldwin.

TO INSPECT EVERY HOSPITAL

Chicago, June 12.—Every hospital and sanitarium in Chicago will be inspected at once by the city building department as a result of the fire that took the lives of ten inmates of the St. Luke's hospital Monday. The investigation will start today at the Washingtonian home, an institution for the care of victims of the drink and drug habit. Many of the institutions have no fire escapes; only two or three fire proof; most of them have narrow stairways, while at least half of the officers say that their institutions are seeking better quarters or are planning improvements. The inspection will be under the personal supervision of Deputy Building Commissioner Timothy O'Shea and Chief Inspector Barry.

ACCIDENT ON THE WABASH

Montpelier, Ohio, June 12.—While a Wabash railroad work train was backing into this city last evening the engine and three cars were derailed. The engine turned over and Engineer Pherry was killed. Fireman Behl was burned somewhat about the face and was bruised, and Conductor Belyea suffered a broken leg. Brakeman Shore and Rheinvel were also slightly bruised.



LABOR COMMISSIONER WRIGHT, WHO IS INVESTIGATING THE COAL STRIKE.

Carroll D. Wright, the national commissioner of labor, who as the result of a conference with President Roosevelt is now making an exhaustive investigation of the great coal strike, will proceed as rapidly as possible with the work in order that the result may be reported to congress in time for any desired action to be taken prior to adjournment.

HAD A DOUBLE STORM

Peoria, Ill., and Vicinity Has Two Visitations From a Hurricane, Which Caused Several Deaths and Great Damage to Property.

Peoria, Ill., June 12.—The double storm that struck Peoria at 10 o'clock Tuesday night and again at 2 o'clock yesterday morning, was the worst Central Illinois has experienced since 1845. Rain fell in torrents and the damage caused by the high winds is inestimable at this time. Probably the worst damage in proportion to the size of the town was at Kingston Mines, a small mining town twenty miles below Peoria.

Three people were killed outright and ten were injured, three fatally. The killed are:

MRS. THOMAS MURRAY.

INFANT CHILD OF MRS. MURRAY.

MRS. ROBERT McELWEE.

The fatally injured are as follows: Infant child of Mrs. McElwee, Robert McElwee, Thomas Murray. The other injured are: Mrs. Mocha, Rey Bitner, Jud Marsh, Cora Rosbottom, James Lacock, Mrs. Frank Brazena, Mrs. Keefe.

George Reardon, an empoye of the Eectric company, was instantly killed yesterday morning while repairing the storm damage at Glen Oak Park. He was caught by a live wire and died instantly. George Ashlock, another lineman, was seriously burned in attempting to extricate Reardon from the wires.

The Peoria & Pekin round house was blown down shortly after 10 o'clock. In it at the time were eight men, and all escaped without serious injuries, but Samuel Spence, an Iowa Central engineer, who was caught by the falling walls, received serious injuries to his back. He is now at the Cottage hospital and is in a very serious condition.

Thirteen locomotives, owned by the Illinois Central, two by the Iowa Central, four by the Toledo, Peoria & Western, and five by the Big Four were almost totally wrecked.

The Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific train which left this city at 11:25 o'clock last night for Chicago, ran into a washout just above the city. The engine is buried in sand and mud and the baggage car turned over. Robert Atkinson, the engineer, was the only person injured.

The roof of the new warehouse at the Corning & Co. distillery was blown off, as was also that of the Clark Distillery.

The roof of the Harned & Von Maur Dry Goods store was blown off and damage to the stock of $25,000 was occasioned by water. There was no insurance. Charles Cannon & Co., gent's furnishings, was wrecked by water. They carried no insurance. Schipper & Block lost considerable on account of the water.

Shortly after 11 o'clock a report reached the police that the people living in Dry Run, on the bluff, were in danger of drowning as they had been caught by the flood. Rowboats were hauled to the scene at once, and the police took twelve people from their homes. They were standing on planks, with the water almost to their necks. Within an hour all would have been lost.

All communication with the outside world was destroyed for over twelve hours, and it was almost noon yesterday when a wire was secured between Peoria and Chicago and St. Louis. All street car service was stopped and the fire alarm system was completely paralyzed.

A tug boat and a steam launch, which have been plying on the river at this point, have disappeared since the first storm, and it is believed they are now at the bottom of Peoria lake. Their pilots have not been seen.

MILITIA GUARDS CARS

Rhode Island Troops Are Patrolling the Streets of Pawtucket to Prevent Further Trouble From Street Car Men's Strike.

Pawtucket, R. I., June 12.—The city officials have declined to increase the police force to meet the unusual conditions resulting from the strike of the Union Traction company's men here and in Providence. By order of Governor Kimball, six companies of infantry and two troops of cavalry are patrolling the streets today.

The action of the governor was precipitated by a serious disturbance which took place last evening, when a detachment of sixteen special deputy sheriffs were attacked by a crowd which had held up and demolished a street car. The officers were stoned and a number of persons were injured. There was no semblance of trouble this forenoon. The soldiers were stationed at short spaces and maintained practically a solid line, while care were run, each having a guard, the schedule being maintained with some show of regularity. There were few passengers.

Franklin, Pa., June 12.—As a result of the street car boycott growing out of the trouble between the Venango Power company and its employes, the street car employes both in this city and in Oil City have been sworn in as deputies by Sheriff McCollum. Very few people are riding on the cars. Up to a late hour last night several hundred men lined the tracks on the principal streets, hooting the motormen and conductors and endeavoring to dissuade people from patronizing the line. Torpedoes were placed on the tracks in many places, but no serious trouble resulted from the demonstration.

PEACE PATCHED UP IN OHIO

Cleveland, June 12.—The Leader today prints the following special from Hot Springs, Va.: A compromise has been arrived at between Congressmen Burton and several Republicans, who went from this city to try bring about peace in the matter of the proposed withdrawal of Congressman Burton as a candidate for re-election to congress, from this district, because of alleged "petty bosses and bossism." The compromise reported is that there shall be a Burton committee as well as a general committee and that the Burton committee shall have charge of the fall campaign.

A BARON KILLED

New York, June 12.—Baron George von Bleischroder, whose death in Prussia from an automobile accident has just been announced, was one of the best known men in Paris, as well as in Berlin, says a dispatch from the former city to the Herald. Two brothers, Barons Hans and James von Bleischroder, have been in Paris for some time.

Baron Hans received a dispatch at noon informing him that his brother had met with an automobile accident. A second dispatch was addressed to Baron James, the third and youngest brother, requesting him to come at once, as the condition of Baron George was hopeless. A third dispatch summoned all the members of the family. The two brothers, who were in Paris, took the first train for Cologne.

Baron George was about 40 years old, of handsome appearance and very popular with his many acquaintances. The news of his death produced a profound impression among his numerous friends in Paris.

The name of Baron von Bleischroder is one of the earliest connected with the Automobile club in France. He was always known as a very careful chaffeur and it is thought his machine must have slipped on a muddy road.

Details of the accident are lacking, however. It is known that the baron took a train in Paris on Tuesday afternoon, to go to Lechenich, near Liblar, about twenty kilometres from Cologne, for the purpose of inspecting his horses. Subsequently he telegraphed to one of his employes to send an automobile to meet him at Duren, as this would save him the trouble of going all the way to Cologne and he would be able to arrive earlier at Lechenich. He had the intention of returning the same evening.

Paris, however, was always a great attraction for the baron. Last winter he purchased a pretty little hotel at No. 9 Rue Newton. He was often seen at Monte Carlo, and about two years ago won 500,000 francs. He was present at the principal race meetings at Long Champ and Auteuil previous to his departure.

The baron was one of the directors of the celebrated banking house bearing his name and was the second son of the banker who rendered great assistance to Prince Bismarck in founding the German empire.

Baron George von Bleischroder was a special partner in the banking and brokerage firm of Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., of New York. No information was received by the firm during the night, touching upon his death. Five years ago the baron made two visits to New York to become acquainted with the local end of the business. Since that time he has not been here.

His racing stable, near Cologne, is known as the Roemerhof stud. "Fred" Foster, who once owned Dr. Rice, was his trainer, and "Eddie" Ross is the rider. All his stable hands were Americans. He was known as the "Roseberry of the German turf," and early this year he discharged every German who had anything to do with his racing stable, from trainer to stable boys, and replaced them all with Americans, among whom are several colored men. He told his turf acquaintances he was convinced that Americans knew how to get the best out of racing horses and that he intended to employ no other nationality in his stable. A few days ago, however, he announced his intention of retiring from the turf.

AT HAWAII.

An Eruption Is Expected From the Volcano Kilanea.

Honolulu, June 4 (via Victoria, B. C., June 12).—The transport Solace arrived here on June 1 from San Francisco with a case of scarlet fever on board and was at once put into quarantine. She will coal here and leave for the Philippines at once.

United States Agricultural Commissioner Jared Smith has just returned from a trip through the island of Hawaii. He reports conditions there favorable to the small farmers who have homestead lands under the Hawaiian land laws. Mr. Smith says the cut worm and other insect pests are making havoc with the farms.

The latest news from the volcano Kilauea, Hawaii, indicates an outbreak. On Sunday, June 1, there were two explosions observed, red ashes and sulphur were thrown up. The cloud of smoke from the volcano was larger than usual. Several earthquakes have been felt in Honekaa district, a considerable distance from the volcano. Many Honolulu people are preparing to take steamers to Hawaii to witness the expected outbreak. The Bank of Hawaii has agreed to come to the rescue of the government in the present financial difficulties. The bank will advance $150,000 to help the territorial treasury pay its warrants taking treasury notes as security.

REPORT IS DENIED.

New York, June 12.—Reports that the syndicate which underwrote the $50,000,000 of Chicago, Burlington & Quincy 4 per cent bonds has asked for another extension of time, is denied on high authority.

FIRED FROM AMBUSCADE

Attempt Made to Murder Mine Superintendent.

A Locomotive and Tender Riddled With Bullets.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 12.—It is learned at the office of the Lehigh Valley Coal company today that an attempt was made last night on the life of Superintendent Thomas Thomas of the William A. colliery of the Lehigh company, at Old Forge, north of this city. For the last four days crowds have been gathering each morning and threw stones at the men at work within the enclosure. The day and night superintendents do not live in the colliery, as do many of the other employes, and they are taken to and from the colliery on an engine. Last night the night superintendent reached the colliery safely. A few minutes later Superintendent Thomas came out and, when about 300 yards from the breaker, a number of men who were in ambush opened fire on the locomotive. Fortunately the engine was traveling rapidly, and it was soon out of range of fire. The officials say about ten shots were fired. The Miners' union is doing everything possible to have its idle men at that point keep the peace. Old Forge is in Lackawanna county, just across the Luzerne county line. The sheriff has several deputies stationed at that point.

This was pay day at all the Lehigh Valley collieries in the Wyoming valley for the engineers, firemen and pumpmen, fire bosses, clerks and other company employes for the last two weeks of May. Most of the engineers, firemen and pumpmen are now on strike. The pay cars are well guarded by coal and iron police.

There were six persons on the locomotive, the engineer, fireman, conductor, two brakemen and Superintendent Thomas. As soon as the firing began, the six men immediately dropped to the floor of the engine and its tender, and in that way saved themselves. The window panes of the cab were broken, and the locomotive and tender were perforated with bullets and buckshot.

District President T. D. Nichols, who with District Presidents Duffy and Fahy, were in conference with President Mitchell last night, left today for Durea, which is close to the scene of the shooting. It is believed he will attempt to get the strikers there to organize a police system to keep the borough quiet.

It will be four weeks tomorrow since the anthracite districts requested the call of a special national convention to consider the advisability of involving all the soft coal miners in the United States in the anthracite strike. Mr. Mitchell was asked today by the Associated Press reporter whether he had the consent of five directors necessary to call a national convention. He said he could not talk about the matter.

TEN THOUSAND BOERS

Have So Far Surrendered---Many of Them Are Mere Children, Although Some of the Burghers Are Septuagenarians.

Pretoria, Wednesday, June 11.—In all 10,225 Boers have surrendered up to date. Many are youngsters of 11 years old and upward. The majority of them are under thirty, though some of the burghers who have surrendered are septuagenarians. Reports from all the districts say that the burghers are increasingly friendly. The only bitterness observable among the leading Boers here is against France and Germany. They declare the war was protracted unnecessarily owing to hopes held out by the French and German press. Some of the Boers are so incensed that they have expressed the hope that some day they will fight on the side of the British against one of these powers.

The anticipated riction between the surrendered Boers and their former comrades of the National scouts has not materialized to any extent.

The Boers admit they received ammunition through Portuguese territory.

Gen De Wet says the youngsters were his best fighters and frequently held positions after the older burghers had cleared out. The Boers of the Orange River colony are handing in only a small percentage of their ammunition. They explain that they used most of it in hunting game since the peace agreement was signed. Addressing the surrendered Boers at Kroonstadt, Orange River colony, Gen. Elliott said the only wish of King Edward, his government and the British people was to help the burghers and get them back to their farms as soon as possible. The king, the general added, had telegraphed congratulating the burghers on the good stand they had made. This announcement was greeted with lusty cheers for the king and for Lord Kitchener.

TO ARBITRATE DISPUTES

An Important Agreement Made In Chicago Between Employers and Employes Which Will Prevent Future Strikes.

Chicago, June 12.—Arbitration of labor disputes has won two important victories in Chicago. The teamsters have reached an agreement with the team owners and employers, and after a long conference between the officials and employes of the city railway company, an arbitration agreement has been adopted. This ends the last danger of a strike on the South Side traction lines.

Committees of the Teamsters' union and of the team owners and employers met at the Great Northern hotel, talked over the arbitration plans, and adopted them. They were incorporated in a resolution, the vital portion of which reads as follows:

"The contracting parties agree to submit to the arbitration of this board all differences between the contracting parties, which no now or may arise during the life of this agreement."

The agreement last one year from date. It gives to the union a full recognition of its right to exist and treat with the employers. It gives to the employer the knowledge that there will be no sympathetic strikes during its life. These two points, the most vital in trades unionism, have never before been incorporated into such an agreement. The board is a representative one and contains the business agents of the unions and the heads of the largest teaming interests concerned.

The traction agreement was the result of a conference between the officers of the South Division union No. 200 of the street railway employes and General Manager Robert McColoch of the Chicago City Railway company, at the latter's office. For one year all disputes are to be settled by an arbitration board. There is to be another special arbitration committee to pass on the question of reinstatement of the discharged employes now out. The company gives full recognition to the union.

The officers of the United States Brewing company have decided to accede to the demands of the unions rather than risk a sympathetic strike in their plant. The thirty teamsters' helpers will get their $ a week increase, making their wages $12 instead of $. This is to be paid half by the firms and half by the teamsters.

THERE WAS LATER WILL

Somewhat of a Sensation Has Developed In the Contest Over the Will of Alex Moore at Sauk Center.

St. Cloud, Minn., June 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—The contest over the will of the late Alexander Moore, of Sauk Center, was productive of a sensation in the district court yesterday when D. C. Van Camp, an attorney of Sauk Center, swore that in 1893, two years after the purported will of the testator was made, he had at Moore's request executed another and subsequent will.

This will left the widow a life estate, gave several legacies of $5,000 each and then divided the residue among the children. One of the witnesses to the will also testified that this testimony was not positive as to Moore's signature. On rebuttal, an effort will be made to impeach the attorney's evidence. The contest is brought in behalf of Mrs. Carrie Vinji, of Deer River, a disinherited daughter. The estate is worth easily $100,000. Moore was a pioneer of Minnesota who died December last.

SUBURBAN BUILDING

This Summer Will See Movement In That Direction.

Scarcely a House to Be Had In Any Suburb.

An important movement in the direction of building up Duluth's suburbs will be made this summer. Thus far transactions in that class of property since the renewal of interest in real estate here have for the most part been confined to selling houses already built, which had either gone back to the land companies or to the creditor lending money on them in the boom days.

For a time there was a plentiful supply of this class of houses. For some months, however, the supply has been practically exhausted. This has been true of Lakeside and Lester Park for a number of weeks at least. The same kind of property, though of a cheaper class, has been quite eagerly sought after on Duluth Heights, a part of the city that has been neglected up to recently for several years. Now, the Heights Land company interests report that the houses they controlled have practically all been sold, and that it is next to impossible to find improved dwelling property in that part of the city that is for sale.

Something has been doing also at Glen Avon and Hunter's Park, though the lack of water service has up to this time retarded the development of prosperity for that part of the city equally with other suburban sections. Nearer town, on the same line of street railway, the property in the vicinity of the state normal school is beginning to take on a look of activity and prospects of early building developments.

"There is no better promise of investment for any man with the money," said one well known real estate man, who is especially familiar with this class of property here, and the outlook for investments of this character, "than the building of some cottages on suburban property that would rent for $10 to $15 a month, and could be sold on easy payments. We have found that the people of this city are very anxious to take advantage of such opportunities, and have already disposed of everything of that character that we have on our lists."

"Philadelphia people think Duluth is all right," said John B. Greenfield, secretary of the Lakeside Land company, who has just returned from a business trip East. "They realize that we are having a great and solid growth out here, as well as that the people are prospering as never before. They have ample faith in the city, and are willing to furnish plenty of money for loans here.

"The Tower estate and other interests in Philadelphia which now control the Lakeside company heard with much interest my reports of conditions here. The object of my visit was to secure the adoption of a more expansive policy with regard to the affairs of the Lakeside company, and in this I was quite successful.

"We shall try to arrange with the city for the extension of sewers and water and gas to cover the lots fronting on McCulloch, Roberts and Gladstone streets and Forty-third avenue. Our company owns most of these lots, and we want these facilities extended to them so that we can place the property on the market on an easy-payment plan. We have arranged to sell lots and furnish money for building houses on these lots and give the purchaser a chance to pay for them on the easy-installment plan. I am convinced that this is what this city needs, and our people looked at it in the same light when it was brought to their attention. There will be no excuse, when our plans are all arranged, for any man that pays $10 or $15 a month house rent, that does not fix things so he can own his own home.

"I hope to arrange with the city authorities for the immediate extension of water and sewerage to this part of the city, and we are prepared to extend aid for the purpose if necessary."

A Noiseless Typewriter.

Scientists claim that the exercise necessary to operate an ordinary typewriter, together with its noise, tend to injure the health and cause nervousness. A German inventor has therefore perfected a machine which is operated by air pressure on the keyboard, and does away with the noise and much of the labor. Its adoption may be one way of preserving health and preventing nervousness, but there is a better and less expensive way, and that is by using Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. All people of sedentary occupation need this wonderful medicine to aid digestion and to keep the bowels regular. It will also cure dyspepsia, biliousness, insomnia and nervousness. Don't be deceived into taking something "just as good." There is no medicine equal to the Bitters.

IS ACTIVE.

West End Club Has Several Important Matters Under Consideration.

The Business Men's club of the West End will have a meeting at the club rooms in the Normanna hall building tomorrow evening. There are several new matters of business that will be called to the attention of the club, and Secretary R. D. Haven will have a report ready regarding the prospect of getting sufficient electrical power in the West End to supply small manufacturing industries. It is the intention of the club to hold out every inducement possible for the location of a large number of manufacturing plants in that part of the city, and correspondence with that end in view will be started very soon.

It is possible that the condition of the Twenty-first street dock will come in for a share of the attention of the club. There has been more or less complaint that the dock is out of repair and has been inadequate for the amount of business transacted there, that a newer and larger dock is needed.

BOUND OVER.

Mrs. Baker of Orphanage Fame Is In Tight Fix.

Charged with obtaining 25 cents under false pretenses, Mrs. J. S. Baker, of the "Baker Orphanage," was yesterday bound over to the district court and compeled to put up $500 bail, at Hudson, Wis.

For years it has been known that the "Baker Orphanage" was a fraud, and yet the Bakers so protected themselves that they could not be touched under the Minnesota law.

The moment they began soliciting in Wisconsin, however, matters were different, and Mrs. Baker is now in danger of going to the state prison for a time, despite the small amount of money charged in the complaint.

At Hudson yesterday Mrs. Baker was bound over, mostly on the testimony of her own witnesses. Mrs. Freel, who appears on the "Orphanage" stationary as the secretary of the institution, was asked if she was the secretary.

"I may have been secretary, but I didn't know it," was her reply.

She also testified that in Duluth the "Orphanage" cared for three babies and had seven solicitors out collecting money for their support. She declined to state the amount of money collected, but from anothed source it was learned that each solicitor averaged $10 a day while canvassing the state of Minnesota, so that the three small babies were supposed to have been cared for at the rate of about $70 a day.

The "Orphanage" has deserted Duluth and there is some talk of getting up a celebration over the fact, for it certainly gave Duluth undesirable advertising throughout the state.

The present location is 707 Weeks avenue, West Superior, and it has been learned that since moving to West Superior a few weeks ago the orphanage has added another baby to its stock.

H. C. Withrow, the local humane officer, was one of the most important witnesses against the Bakers. He returned this morning and said that the Hudson case seemed to be very strong against Mrs. Baker.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

The uniform success of this remedy has made it the most popular preparation in use for bowel complaints. It is everywhere recognized as the one remedy that can always be depended upon and that is pleasant to take. It is especially valuable for summer diarrhoea in children and is undoubtedly the means of saving the lives of a great many children each year. For sale at Boyce's drug store.

HIT A WAGON.

Second Chief Grazow Hurt While Going to Fire.

Second Chief Granzow of the fire department nearly had a serious accident last night.

His horse was going on a dead run on First street between Twenty-first and Twenty-second avenues west, when the rig collided with a wood wagon that had been left standing in the street over night.

The chief's rig was wrecked and he was badly bruised up, but he lost very little time in reaching the fire.

The owner of the wood wagon has not yet been located, and it will probably go hard with him when he is found.

Throughout the city teamsters have a habit of leaving their wagons on the public streets when night overtakes them, and the drivers of fire apparatus have been complaining for the past year of the difficulty and danger in steering their horses past these obstructions.

There is an ordinance against obstructing the streets, but it is not enforced in this respect.

The fire at the Mitchell & McClure mill only did a little damage, but the run came very nearly being expensive for the fire department.

This morning about 8 o'clock the department was summoned to 30 Fourth avenue east, where a small oil stove was in a state of eruption. The damage was light.

There was a small fire in the kitchen of the residence of Dr. N. B. McNulty, No. 5 South Twelfth avenue east, shortly before noon today.

New Chapter at Tower.

Yesterday a number of Duluth women, members of the Zenith chapter of the Eastern Star, went to Tower where they assisted in instituting a new chapter last evening. Those in the party were: Mrs. Armstead, Mrs. Boer, Mrs. Burgo, Mrs. Darling, Mrs. Ford, Mrs. Forgy, Mrs. Johns, Mrs. Kelly, Mrs. Massenu, Mrs. Quinby, Mrs. Pugh, and Miss Rhinehart.

Mr. Wilson, of Minneapolis, the grand worthy patron of the order for Minnesota, was the instituting officer.

AYME SAILS FOR HOME.

New York, June 12.—American Consul Ayme has sailed for the United States to make a personal report to the state department on the destruction of St. Pierre, Martinique, says a dispatch to the World from Bassetre, Guadaloupe.

E. W. Grove This signature is on every box of the genuine Laxative Bromo-Quinine Tablets the remedy that cures a cold in one day.

RECORDS CLIPPED

Fire Department Makes Some New Ones In Inspection.

West End and West Duluth Houses Do Fast Work.

Records were clipped at yesterday's annual inspection of the fire department.

The record for a floor hitch was reduced three-fifths of a second by the companies of No. 2 fire hall in the West End. They hitched their horses and had all apparatus moving in exactly five seconds.

The West Duluth truck and hose companies, clipped one-fifth of a second off the previous department record by making the hitch in 5 2-5 seconds.

The night-hitch record was equaled by chemical company No. 3. This company got out of bed, dressed, hitched and had apparatus moving in 9 1-5 seconds.

No. 8 truck and hose companies at West End did second best time on the night hitch, performing the work in 9 2-5 seconds.

One second was knocked off the record for laying 150 feet of hose by company No. 4 of the East End fire hall. The previous record was 10 seconds flat. The No. 4 hose men yesterday run out 150 feet of hose, coupled it and had water running in 9 seconds flat.

Again the West Duluth company came to the front by equaling the previous department record and laying the required 150 feet in 10 seconds.

On the way out to West Duluth, one of the aldermen suggested to Chief Black that the alarm be turned in on Grand avenue where the inspecting board could see a straight-away run.

The chief turned in the alarm at Fortieth avenue west and Grand avenue and the department made a run of a mile and one-third in four minutes and thirty seconds. The hose company had a stream of water on the supposed fire in four minutes and fifty seconds after the alarm had been turned in.

The men were not expecting this run which adds to the credit of the performance. It was probably the quickest time ever made for the distance though previous records are binding.

After the tour of inspection the city officers were the guests of Chief Black at a banquet in the St. Louis hotel. The appointments were very artistic and the banquet a decidedly appropriate ending for an afternoon of surprises.

Chief Black gave a little talk after receiving many compliments of the work of his deuartment. He said he attributed the efficiency of the deuartment entirely to the interest and competency of the individual firemen and the cordial assistance given him by the members of the council and the board of fire commissioners.

Acting Mayor Hayeng replied on the part of the guests saying that he hoped the council and commissioners would always maintain cordial relations with the fire department and thanked the chief for the courtesies of the afternoon and evening.

Arthur A. Fider came pretty near giving away a few state secrets during his speech as a member of the board of civil service commissioners. Mr. Fider, however, says that he was incorrectly quoted in this morning's paper in being made to say that the commissioners on further examination of their rules have decided that applicants for the police department were not compelled to take civil service examinations.

Mr. Fider says that some of the commissioners are under the impression that the seventh provision of section 182 of the charter exempts detectives from the classified service and if so the mayor would have plenary powers of promotion in this department.

AT WEST DULUTH

Protest is being made on a large scale by property owners in West Duluth over the practice of what they term the wholesale and unnecessary condemnation of sidewalks. They claim that the inspectors have condemned sidewalks on certain streets and avenues in West Duluth which the outlay of a few dollars would have put in good repair and brought the cost per lot down to a mere nominal sum. One property owner says there are sections of sidewalks condemned that it would not cost more than $5 to repair for ten blocks, but a new sidewalk will cost the property benefited about $12 per lot.

The owners that are protesting are urging that the board of public works give the matter their personal attention before the inspector condemns the walks and they intimate that at the rate condemnation is being made there is some reason to believe that the contractors who have lumber to dispose of are making a good thing.

The strongest protest is being made in the Fifth division, where it is very much desired that the board of public works will call a halt in the matter until it knows whether the walks are really in such bad condition and beyond repairs. There are, of course, strips of walk that are practically worthless, but it is asserted that too much sidewalk is being taken up that is in fair condition, or would be with very little repair.

Some of the real estate agents say that so much sidewalk condemnation is holding up sales, for the reason that intending purchasers are afraid that as soon as they invest they will be called on to pay sidewalk assessments.

INHUMAN RIDERS.

Hurt Small Boy and Then Run Away.

The little 5-year-old son of William Ashbeck, of 615 Fifty-seventh avenue west, was run over and seriously injured before dark yesterday afternoon by two men riding a tandem wheel. The boy was knocked down at the corner of Fifty-seventh avenue and Cody street, the tandem coming around the corner suddenly. The wheel ran over the boy's head and the riders were thrown. Eye-witnesses to the accident claim that the boy was rendered unconscious, but that the men did not wait to ascertain his injuries but quickly mounted their machine and hastened away.

An effort is being made to locate the men and the father of the boy promises to make things interesting for them because of their inhuman act in leaving the little boy stunned and helpless on the walk, without at least trying to call for assistance or find out where he lived. The people in the neighborhood are also very indignant and are saying all manner of uncomplimentary things of the young men.

This morning the boy's condition was unchanged. No bones were broken, but he was badly bruised.

BUSY AT THE FURNACE.

One of the busiest localities in the city is found at the blast furnace. Over 100 men are now employed about the property cleaning up and repairing. Work is being done on the dock, the furnace, the buildings and the machinery. It is understood that there is still enough to do in the way of preparation to delay the starting up of the furnace for sixty days.

A BIG CELEBRATION.

"The signs are right for one of the best celebrations that West Duluth ever had on a Fourth of July," declared J. Allyn Scott this morning. "The people of West Duluth are taking great interest in the plans being made, and we will have a big crowd here."

Already persons that have attractions for Fourth of July celebrations are besieging the committee on sports, and within the next few days it is expected that the full list will be announced. One of the applicants is a balloonist.

ANOTHER RAFT COMES.

The Merrill & Ring Mill company yesterday received another raft of 2,000,000 feet of logs from Split Rock, on the north shore. The statement that these logs represent the cut of the latter part of the spring is said to be incorrect. When the log towing season commenced there were about 300,000 pieces to be towed down here, and there must be at least 200,000 left. Log towing for the Merrill & Ring company, under ordinary conditions, will not be finished until the latter part of July.

Another Improvement.

CHICAGO, BOSTON AND NEW YORK TRAVEL.

On and after June 15th, the Erie railroad will still further improve their Boston and New York service by offering to the public a handsome limited train to leave Chicago from Dearborn station every day at 10:30 a. m., arriving New York next afternoon at 3:20, and Boston at 9 o'clock.

There is no doubt that this service will be highly patronized, as this new train will land the traveler in New York city in ample time to permit him to proceed leisurely to his hotel or home, rest, dress, dine and spend the evening in whatever manner may appeal to him most.

This every-day morning train will consist of standard Pullman drawing-room and sleeping cars. All meals en route served by the famous Erie dining cars. No extra fare charged on this train.

$5.75 St. Paul & Minneapolis.

June 8th to 14th, the Northern Pacific railway (Duluth Shore Line), will sell tickets to St. Paul and Minneapolis and return for $5.75, good returning up to and including June 16th. Three trains, including Famous Lake Superior Limited, leaving 1:55 p. m. daily. For tickets and full information, call at City office, 332 West Superior street, or Union Depot.

COAL MEN COMING

About 450 members of the Coal Dealers' association of Illinois will arrive in Duluth on the steamer Manitou next Tuesday at 7 a. m. They will spend only the forenoon here, and will leave sharp at noon on their return trip down the lakes. The association is made up largely of the retail dealers of Illinois, though no doubt some wholesale men will be along. The association has chartered the steamer Manitou, which next to the Northern Steamship company boats is the finest on the great lakes for a cruise of Lakes Michigan and Superior, which begins in Chicago this afternoon and closes with return to that city a week from tomorrow afternoon.

The personnel of the party will include not only the members of the association and their wives, but also quite a number of the members' friends. Prominent among the excursionists will be Col. T. G. Lawler, formerly grand commander of the Grand Army of the United States. The details of the trip are in charge of E. H. Keeler, the secretary of the association, whose home is at Rockford, Ill.

The itinerary of the cruise is as follows: Leave Rush street bridge, Chicago, 4:30 p. m. today; leave Milwaukee 10 p. m. today; arrive Detour Friday, 5 p. m.; leave 7 p. m.; arrive at the Soo Saturday, 4 a. m.; leave 4 p. m.; arrive Port Arthur Sunday, 9 a. m.; leave 7 p m.; arrive Houghton Monday, 4 a. m.; to take a special train and visit the copper mines; leave Monday, 5 p. m.; arrive Nothern Pacific docks, Duluth, Tuesday, 7 a. m.; leave Duluth, 12 noon; arrive Marquette Wednesday, 6 a. m.; leave 10 a. m.; arrive Soo, 11 p. m.; leave Thusday, 3 a. m.; arrive Mackinac island Thursday, 9 a. m.; leave 12 noon; arrive Milwaukee Friday, 6 a. m.; leave Milwaukee 9 a. m.; arrive Chicago, 2 p. m.

As far as can be learned the local coal men have made no movement looking toward the entertainment of their party while here by any public body. It has evidently been concluded that the short stop here would preclude the idea of any set program. Some of the party have friends here and will be shown about as much as possible by them.

THE FIRST EXCURSIONS.

Northern Pacific and Great Northern to Bring Them.

Tomorrow afternoon the Northern Pacific will bring to the city from 700 to 800 people from Morris, Minn., and intermediate points. This will require about a dozen coaches, though the crowd may swell so much above expectations that the special train will have to be increased to two sections.

The local offices of the Eastern Minnesota have not been advised as yet as to the number of people that will take advantage of its first excursion of the season to Duluth, which will arrive Saturday afternoon by special from Evansville and intermediate points. Requisition has been made on the operating department by the passenger department, however, for fifteen coaches.

COMPETITION

Feared By British Ship Owners Is That of Americans.

London, June 12.—M. Renwick, member of parliament for Newcastle-on-Tyne and a ship owner, testifying before the parliamentary subsidaries committee in behalf of the owners of "tramp" steamships, objected to the government subsidizing the great lines instead of subsidizing cargoes, and said the foreign which he most feared was the American. The transfer of British ships to foreigners was absurdly simple. All the ships in the American combine could be transferred to the United States within an hour and at the cost of only a few stamps.

Mr. Renwick, when asked if he thought the American ship subsidy bill would be dropped in consequence of the Morgan shipping combine, replied that, on the contrary, he had good reason to believe it would be pressed on.

One of the most important points in connection with the American combine, Mr. Renwick pointed out, was the fact that the sellers were precluded for a number of years from engaging in the shipping business.

CONGRATULATE QUIEGAND.

Berlin, June 12.—Emperor William and the crown prince have telegraphed their congratulations to Herr Quiegand, the general director of the North German Lloyd line of steamers, on the new record made by the Kron Prinz Wilhelm between New York and Eddystone light. The Kron Prinz Wilhelm left New York June 3 and made the passage at an average speed of 23.53 knots per hour, which is the best eastward record for speed across the Atlantic.

SAIL FOR HOME.

New York, June 12.—The Count and Countess Rochambeau, who arrived here some weeks ago to attend the unveiling of the Rochambeau statue at Washington, sailed for France on the steamship La Touraine today.

Attention U. C. T.

The special train for Minneapolis and Lake Minnetonka, via the Great Northern railway, which is the official route for all U. C. T. members and their families, will leave the Union depot at 1:55 p. m. Thursday. Tickets will be sold only on membership certificates issued by C. W. Sutton, secretary, which can be secured from him Thursday morning at the Great Northern office, corner Spalding hotel. Don't fail to be on hand.

AGEN

Stevens Point, Wis., June 12.—The annual encampment of the Wisconsin department of G. A. R. convened yesterday. The feature of the first day was the address of Department Commander De Groff. The present membership is 9417 showing a net loss of sixty-nine members. A resolution condemning the use of inscriptions of any kind on the national flag carried by grand army posts was unanimously adopted. La Crosse appears to be in the lead of the next convention.

James H. Agen, of West Superior, was elected department commander, and Chippewa Falls was selected as the place for holding the next encampment. The following officers were elected by the ladies: President, Mrs. C. Slosaic, La Crosse; senior vice president, Mrs. M. Schonwalter, Lancaster; junior vice president, Mrs. M. Trimborn, Milwaukee; treasurer, Mrs. J. Hopkins; chaplain, Mrs. Spike.

LAST DAY

Of the Seventh Annual Convention of Credit Men.

Louisville, Ky., June 12.—When the final day's session of the seventh annual convention of the National Association of Credit Men met today, James McWhorter, of Nashville, delivered an address on "Co-operation Collections." The reports of committees on credit department and investigation and prosecution were presented and adopted with the exception of a clause in the latter report, providing that the debtor shall pay the cost of investigating compromise settlements.

The report of the membership committee, shows that there has been an increase of 392 during the year, the total now being 3964.

The committee on credit department methods reported in favor of continued efforts toward the establishment of local reporting bureaus among the branch associations. They also reported that twenty-one plans had been received in response to the offer of prizes for the two reputed best systems of bookkeeping for retailers.

The report of the legislative committee showed the efforts made to secure the passage of laws regulating the sales of stocks of goods in bulk in states where such laws do not exist. The committee recommended continued agitation in favor of these laws in all states where they do not exist.

The committee on investigation and prosecution reported the raising of a fund of $40,000 to pay the expenses of prosecuting persons believed to be guilty of fraudulent failure. They recommended the creating of a sentiment against dealing in any way either on a cash or credit basis with persons who have been connected either directly or indirectly with a fraudulent failure.

Chairman Murphy, of Rochester, of the investigation committee, stated that the investigation fund had been completed. A committee was appointed to investigate all matters pertaining to credit insurance especially as affecting the wording of bonds and the methods of adjusting losses.

The convention then adopted a resolution urging the passage of the amendment to the national bankruptcy bill by congress.

Harry J. Tregoe, of Baltimore, and George F. Pulfer, of Detroit, were unanimously elected president and vice president, respectively. St. Louis was selected as the next meeting place.

KNOWN SOON

Whether Boilermakers Will Return to Work or Not.

St. Paul, June 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—It was rumored today that the Great Northern boilermakers strike would end tonight and the men go to work tomorrow. Nothing could be learned definitely, as the strikers refused to discuss the story, except to say that it would be known tonight one way or the other.

The company officials have maintained all along that the strike would be a short one. The boilermakers have practically given up hope that the machinists would go out. The machinists have been expected to go out every day this week, but have kept steadily at work.

Entire quiet prevails around the yards today. The increased force of watchmen was still on duty, but only a few of the strikers were on guard outside. The police on duty have been reduced to two and no trouble is expected.

FIRE AT WHEELING, W. VA.

Conflagration Causes a Loss of $150,000.

Wheeling, W. Va., June 12.—The plants of the Exly-Watkins Preserving company, the Wheeling Mattress company and Acme Box company burned today. The loss will reach $150,000, partly covered by insurance. Three buildings located at Nineteenth and Eoff streets, were burned along with 40,000 feet of lumber, two boxcars and several stables and buildings.

The loss is divided as follows: Exly-Watkins Co., $75,000; Acme Box Co., $50,000, and the mattress plant, $25,000. About 500 persons have been thrown out of employment. No cause for the fire has been ascertained.

THEY MUST SHOW HIM

Senator Daugherty Will Run If Proper Support Is Promised.

His Friends Are Endeavoring To Prove He Is Wanted.

They Expect the Petitions Will Show This Satisfactorily.

Before going away on his fishing trip day before yesterday Senator F. B. Daugherty gave in to those who had been importuning him to run for congress, by consenting to make the run, conditionally.

His friends had been informing him with great seriousness and strong emphasis that St. Louis county wanted a candidate of her own for the Republican nomination for congress.

The condition upon which he consents to run is that they will have to show him that St. Louis county is really hungering after a candidate of its own. If they can show him that he will run.

That is the object of the petitions. If they show up properly he will run for congress. That means that they must have enough signatures, and that the signatures must be of the proper sort. If they prove to be of an encouraging sort, if they give him something to work upon and something to base his campaign upon, he will come out.

That is the way his friends and those that were pressing him to run explain the matter today. They add that the petitions are coming along all right, and that they think they will be able to secure signatures that will satisfy Senator Daugherty sufficiently so that he will run.

"It is not that we have anything against J. Adam Bede," said one of the prime movers in the scheme this morning. "I like him tip-top, and so do the others. But we believe that St. Louis county should have a candidate of her own, and that in a district which is principally St. Louis county we ought not to go to Pine county for our congressman."

Meanwhile Senator Daugherty is fishing, and the petitions are circulating. The experience of the circulators of the petitions on the board of trade was not encouraging, but they say their experience has been different in other places.

BOAT CLUB.

Directors Decide to Issue Twenty-Five Life Memberships.

The directors of the Duluth Boat club met last evening and, under the amendment of the by-laws recently adopted empowering them to issue life memberships at a price to be fixed by them and in such number as they should decide upon, decided to offer twenty-five life memberships for the sum of $100 each.

If these are sold, the proceeds together with the money which the club has on hand, will build the new club house on Park Point without the solicitation of any subscriptions.

Those who buy the memberships will be members of the club for the balance of their lives without the payment of any annual dues.

The plans for the new club house are now being prepared by Architect Wangensteen.

One of the features of the new location will be an acreage for the accommodation of launches and sail boats.

OFFICIALS IN DULUTH.

Messrs. Kimberly and Fee of Northern Pacific Here.

General Superintendent Kimberley and General Passenger Agent Fee of the Northern Pacific road arrived in the city this morning in Mr. Kimberley's private car. Mr. Kimberley has come up to make his regular inspection of the company's tracks, docks, shops and equipment here, and particularly to examine the progress that is being made in the dock and yard improvements in the vicinity of Rice's Point.

Mr. Fee said that passenger traffic with the Northern Pacific is especially heavy and active this year, and added that he looked for large crowds on the cheap excursions that his road would inaugurate to this city tomorrow afternoon.

SECOND DAY

Of Match Play of Woman's Golf Association.

New York, June 12.—The second day of match play for the Woman's Metropolitan golf championship at the Essex County Country club developed several interesting contests. The better known of the players, Miss Genevieve Hecker, the present champion, Miss Ruth Underhill, Mrs. E. A. Manice and Mrs. N. P. Rogers, were all on one side of the tournament and the match play meant the defeat of two of them. On the other side of the tournament also were some strong players.

Besides the four championship matches there were four for the consolation cup.

HUGO FILES

As a Republican Candidate For Representative.

St. Paul, June 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—N. F. Hugo, a brother of Mayor Hugo, of Duluth, today filed as a Republican candidate for representative from the Fifty-first district, now represented by George R. Layburn, who is a candidate for the senate.

ACTION OF NURSERYMEN.

Milwaukee, June 12.—The American Association of Nurserymen today passed a resolution calling upon congress to pass the law on its calendar intended to regulate the shipment of nursery stock from one state to another.

LARGE PARTY.

Leading Men Leave In Special Train For Lake Minnetonka.

The ubiquitous traveling man is missing today from his rounds in the city and from his territory in the Duluth district. About 250 of him and his wife left on a special train at 1:55 this afternoon for the Hotel St. Louis at Lake Minnetonka, where the grand lodge of his order is preparing to meet. The Duluth council, No. 40, has gone in a body. Its members wore fedora straw hats, bearing a blue ribbon with the name of the council on, as well as badges issued for the convention.

It was a pretty nobby looking crowd that took the special train provided by the Great Northern road. The train is scheduled to arrive at Mayzata station, Lake Minnetonka, at 6 p. m., and the party will be taken thence on special steamer to the Hotel St. Louis.

The Duluth delegation goes with the determination of bringing next year's grand lodge meeting to Duluth, and they bear a special invitation from the Commercial club, urging the grand lodge to come here in 1903. Among those that took the train this afternoon, which was in charge of Northern Passenger Agent Kitchell of the Great Northern were:

J. T. Corinn, Miss Corinn, O. W. Sundermann, J. F. Von Schaten, T. F. Solon, A. A. Darby, George E. Rolph and wife, H. E. Hempton, Mrs. C. N. Sanford, W. R. Russell, C. W. Sutton, A. R. Brooke, T. Monroe, L. P. Culbertson, O. E. Skelman, E. D. Kent, F. D. Patten, Roy Helm, Miss Helm, Le Roy Welty, P. Ericson, J. E. Willcuts, Joe Parker, L. Seley, T. A. Grines, Miss Davis, Charles A. Parker, W. E. McCormick, P. W. Reimer, L. M. Dwyer, N. Paine, Harry Wahl, Ben Culbertson and wife, E. G. Mason, W. H. Wilson and family, R. A. McMillan, Frank J. Nixon, L. M. Boyle and wife, E. M. Ferguson, H. B. Knudsen, John Cohn, W. M. McDonald and wife, O. O. Reitan, A. H. Overman and wife, C. A. Julsrud and wife, H. W. Wilson, A. C. Veeley, P. H. Macy, George DeLisle, R. M. Barrett, J. W. Crockett, C. L. Twohy, L. A. Rosmun, Clarence Taylor, M. Jordan, E. H. Smith, George R. Calliff, H. L. Monehan, J. W. Graham, E. J. Lyden, J. C. Elder, Henry Guyer and wife.

The Historical Society.

The Duluth Historical and Scientific association will meet tonight at the High School, when an interesting paper giving the experiences of the party that made the first discoveries of iron ore on the Vermillion range, secured by Judge Ensign, will be read. Arrangements for the annual election of officers will also be made, and other matters of interest will come up. Plans for the proceedings of the association next fall, when regular meetings will probably be resumed, will also be discussed.

AIR SHIPS.

Albert Germanson Says He Has Been Chased By Them.

Albert G. Germanson, a traveling man for the Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company, was picked up in the West End by the police yesterday afternoon, after he had written letters to his friends saying that he was going to commit suicide. He was taken to the county jail, and he was examined for insanity this morning.

The examination developed the fact that he was unquestionably deranged, but it could not be determined immediately whether it was simply the temporary result of drinking, or whether it was permanent.

Germanson said when examined that he had been followed about by an airship for four or five days, and that when he went to the office in the morning he was followed by a band of music. He did not see the airship until yesterday, though he heard voices in the air. Yesterday he saw the ship, and it had three men in it, one of whom was his brother, who lives in Neenah, Wis. He saw his brother commit suicide with a revolver and that is why he intended to get a gun somewhere and put an end to his own life.

He said his brother committed suicide because of reports that got out about him. Germanson said that he was short in his accounts with the Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company, and an inquiry at the office of the company developed that this was true, though not a very heavy amount.

Germanson said he had been drinking heavily for some time, and this, too, the officers of the company verified. He had been working for the company since May 1.

His people live at Neenah, Wis., and they have been notified. The examination was continued to await their arrival, and it is probable that Germanson will be turned over to them. As he is a resident of Wisconsin he could not be sent to the Minnesota asylum anyway. The physicians believe he will recover, but he will not be turned loose on account of his threats to kill himself.

He is about 25 years of age, and he answered all the questions put to him this morning rationally enough except when it came to his seeing the airship. He had not seen it today, and he said he guessed it had left him for a while.

AN EMBEZZLER.

James B. Orth Is Arrested at Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, June 12.—James E. Orth, manager for Karger Bros., grain dealers, with offices in the chamber of commerce, were arrested today on warrant charging embezzlement of $1000. Orth disappeared several days ago, but returned to the city today. It is alleged that he issued a check for $1000, converting it to his own use. An examination of Orth's books reveal, it is alleged, a shortage of many thousands of dollars.

BALL TEAM IN WRECK.

St. Paul, June 12.—President Lennon of the local club, received word today that the Kansas City team had encountered a wreck on the road to St. Paul and would not be able to play the game scheduled for today.

held the trophy and will fight hard to hold it again this year.

Gen. Libby will be in camp through the encampment of the three regiments. The officers are enjoying life in their new club house and headquarters. This is a novel idea and one that is receiving hearty approval.

There are slight indications of rain.

An endeavor is being made to get a company from Two Harbors to fill the vacancy made through the mustering out of the Morris company. Several towns in the state are working for this place in the guards.

A very good showing was made at the parade review last evening. A marked improvement can be seen in the work of the men and the commanding officers are well pleased.

ADDITIONAL

Details of the Great Wind Storm Reaches Burlington.

Bloomington, Ill., June 12.—Wire communication through McLean county is being resumed and additional news of Thursday's storm is coming in. One more death is added to the list. Cora Reynolds, the 2-year-old daughter of Mrs. Reynolds, residing east of Saybrook, was killed. Her mother was seriously injured and may die. Another child was picked up and carried to a field some distance away, but was unhurt. The residence was completely demolished.

A train of empty box cars on the Lake Erie & Western road was carried three miles, colliding with an eastbound train near Elliot. At Ellsworth, on the same road, a caboose was turned completely over and Conductor Stevens, of Rankin, was knocked unconscious. He is in a serious condition. The brakeman escaped with bruises.

At Emdon the new Lutheran church was completely destroyed, involving a loss of $10,000.

On the big Four road eight box cars on the siding at Farmer City were carried by the wind eight miles to Mansfield, the first station east.

It will be a week before the devastated territory will be restored.

BODIES NOT FOUND.

Efforts at Lake Mendota So Far Unsuccessful.

St. Paul, June 12.—A Madison, Wis., special to the Dispatch, says: Efforts to recover the bodies of Ada Hawley and Lorge Lohr, the university students drowned in Lake Mendota last night have been unsuccessful thus far. F. M. Burghart and W. G. George, of Milwaukee, brother-in-law of Lohr, arrived this morning and are assisting the searchers, who are dragging the lake.

FORCE WAS LANDED SAFELY.

Colon, Colombia, June 12.—The Colombian government ships which conveyed Gen. Berti and 1000 of the best troops from Panama Sunday to Pescaderias have returned to Panama, after safely landing the force, which is intended to attack the rebels at Agua Dulce, in combination with Gen. Castro's troops, which are to leave Panama today.

SOLDIERS IN CAMP

Company C of Duluth Shows Boys How to Drill.

Guards Are Preparing For Annual Inspection On Friday.

Efforts to Have a Two Harbors Company Fill Vacancy.

St. Paul, June 12.—A Lake City, Minn., special to the Dispatch says: Another ideal day for camp life has dawned with a strong lake breeze blowing onto camp. Company C, of Duluth, gave a preliminary drill and inspection for the benefit of the other companies, giving them an idea of the requirements for the general regimental inspection that will take place tomorrow to ascertain the rating and average of each company. Capt. W. W. Price, of St. Paul, will be the inspecting officer. There is not much out of the ordinary routine today, as the men will be given most of the time for preparation for tomorrow. This is the first year that inspection has been held in camp. By this move more of a strenuous effort was made to have a larger number of men in camp, thus making a better showing for the regiment. The men will also be paid in camp this year.

The Third battalion is shooting in the 300 and 500 yard ranges today, and the Second on the 200 and 300 yard ranges. The First has finished scoring on the 200 and 300 yard ranges, with very good scores.

Capt. Kinney is officer of the day today and Lieut. Caswell and Lieut. Barns officers of the guard. Battalion Sergt. Maj. Weaver went to Red Wing today on business.

The shooting and range work for the crack shot company will be very spirited this year, as the Anoka company has

ANSWER OF TRUST

To Suit Brought to Restrain Retiring of Stock.

Says Corporation Has Right to Make Its Laws.

Majority of Stockholders Have Approved the Action.

Newark, N. J., June 12.—The United States Steel corporation filed an answer today to the suit brought by Miriam Barger, of Sullivan county, N. Y., to restrain the company from retiring $200,000,000 of preferred stock and issuing bonds instead. Tomorrow the constitutional points raised in the bill will be argued. Meanwhile the rule to show cause granted by Vice Chancellor Emery last Monday, acts as a stay. The answer avers that the corporation, by virtue of the law under which it exists, has the right to make, alter or amend its by-laws, subject to the vote of stockholders, as was done in the present case. The bill denies that it was ever the intention of the defendant corporation, or its officers, to make the new bonds convertible into common stock at any price, or in any manner whatever. It claims that the action of the directors in retiring the preferred stock was voted upon and assented to by nearly all the capital stock of the corporation. In regard to the contract with J. P. Morgan & Co., the answer declares that the contract was approved by more than a majority of the stockholders, not including stock registered in the name of J. P. Morgan & Co., or any member or representative of that firm, or any subscriber to said syndicate, or any officer or director of the defendant corporation. In other words the 2,061,376 shares belonging to the persons mentioned were excluded. Of the 8, 134,435 shares remaining, 5,662,912 shares were voted in approval of the contract. Of the balance less than 13,000 shares were voted in opposition.

EXPENSES IN CUBA

Are Now Being Compiled By the War Department.

Senator Culberson's Resolution Takes Place On the Calendar.

Senator Nelson Explains More About London Dock Charges.

Washington, June 12.—At the conclusion of routine business in the senate today, a resolution introduced by Mr. Carmack (Tenn.) directing the committee on civil service and retrenchment to investigate the discharge from the war department of Miss Rebecca J. Taylor, a clerk in that department, was called up. On motion of Mr. Platt (Conn.) the resolution was referred to the committee on civil service.

The resolution introduced yesterday by Mr. Culberson (Tex.) directing the secretary of war to send to the senate an itemized statement of the expenditures made from the Cuban funds from the time of the American occupation to May 1 of this year, was taken up. Mr. Platt (Conn.) explained that the information was being compiled in the war department and the resolution was sent to the calendar.

Consideration then was resumed of the London dock charges bill. Mr. Platt (Conn.) remarked that it was difficult to ascertain what was sought by the bill.

Mr. Nelson (Minn.) explained the provisions of the bill to which Mr. Platt called attention. Mr. Platt further held that the question presented was not a subject of national legislation. Mr. Mallory (Fla.) advocated the passage of the bill, although he was not certain that the shippers would reap very great benefit from it.

Mr. Hale mentioned that this attempt to force the United States to put its hand in a trade beween the two parties, competent to make an agreement was a ruthless expenditure of legislature power and ought not to be countenanced. It was an absurd proposition.

Mr. Spooner contended that it had been the custom of congress to regulate bills of lading in both interstate and foreign commerce. He declared that the common carrier "took the shipper by the throat" and the latter was compelled to sign the bill of lading containing the "fine print conditions" under practical duress, with a knowledge that he could not have his goods shipped unless he agreed to the terms proposed.

The discussion continued until 2 o'clock. Consideration of the isthmian canal project then was resumed and Mr. Hoar formally offered his amendment of which he gave notice some time ago, in the form of a substitute. The amendment provides that it shall be the duty of the president to cause an isthmian canal to be built by such route as he may select; that he shall obtain all advice necessary, and that $10,000,000 be appropriated to begin the work.

Mr. Morgan, in charge of the pending bill discussed at length the attitude of Nicaragua, and Costa Rica toward the isthmian canal and the diplomatic negotiations between those two governments and the United States looking to the canal's construction.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, June 12.—When the house met today, Mr. Ray (N. Y.) chairman of the judiciary committee, asked the unanimous consent that Monday, after the consideration of bills under suspension of rules, and Tuesday be set apart for the bill to amend the bankruptcy act. There was no objection and the order was made.

Mr. Dalzell from the committee on rules then presented a special order for consideration of the senate irrigation bill, one day for general debate and one day for amendment under the five-minute rule. Pending the adoption of the rule, Saturday was substituted for Friday for the consideration of private pension bills and the order setting aside Sunday, June 29, for eulogies on the life and character of the late Representative Cummings of New York, was modified so as to continue the session on that day in order to permit eulogies upon the late Representative Otey of Virginia.

Mr. Underwood (Ala.) favored the adoption of the rule. Mr. Shafroth (Col.) also argued for the adoption of the rule.

Mr. Newlands (Nev.) also supported the rule. The resolution then was adopted without division. The house resolved itself into committee of the whole (Mr. Tawney, Minn., in the chair) and entered upon consideration of the irrigation bill. It was arranged that Mr. Mondell (Wyo.) should control the time for the measure, and Mr. Ray (N. Y.) against it.

Mr. Mondell submitted an extended argument in favor of the bill. The amount of land which might ultimately be reclaimed by irrigation was estimated, he said, between 35,000,000 and 75,000,000 acres. He discussed fully the reasons why the states could not undertake the work. The wisdom of national aid in the reclamation of the arid land, he declared, had been demonstrated to the satisfaction of the people of both political parties in national conventions assembled. Mr. Ray (N. Y.) opposed the bill. He declared that the friends of the bill had sought to create the impression that the irrigation of the arid lands was a continuation of the free home policy of the government. The scheme, he said, would benefit certain states, but at the expense of others. The public lands, he contended, belonged to the people of all the states. This bill proposed to take the proceeds of their sale to develop one section of the country.

BAD ADVICE.

Bertha East Followed It and Got Into Contempt.

Smiling like a diamond sunburst, Bertha East was in police court this morning to answer a charge of contempt of court.

Because her mother-in-law told her not to appear against her husband she remained away from court.

In fining her $15 and costs the court intimated that there might be some things with even more authority than mothers-in-law.

MOVES UP.

Amos Shepard In Charge of Corrigan-McKinney Mines.

Amos Shepard, formerly register of deeds of St. Louis county, has been appointed general superintendent of mines for Corrigan, McKinney & Co., the largest independent producers of ore in the Lake Superior region. Mr. Shepard succeeds George W. Wallace, who has large private iron and mining interests and will retire to devote his entire time to them.

At the office of Corrigan, McKinney & Co. this afternoon it was said that both Mr. Corrigan, Mr. McKinney, Mr. Shepard and Mr. Wallace were up on the range, and that nothing could be said regarding the matter.

It is understood that the position carries a salary better than $10,000 a year.

IS IT BROKEN?

Report That Vessel Rate On Lumber Is Cut.

Lumber shippers claim that they have succeeded in breaking the lake freight rate on lumber from Duluth to Buffalo. The rate all the season has been that fixed by the Lumber Carriers' association—$2.50 per thousand feet.

It is reported here that the Manistique and Our Son have been chartered at a lower figure than that rate for a couple of cargoes to Buffalo. It is claimed that a charter for two other vessels that had been made has been cancelled and the two vessels referred to placed in their stead.

It is reported that the lower rate was made through a Buffalo vessel broker, where the charter was made. No confirmatory details can be learned here. It is said, however, that the two vessels placed do not belong to the fleet of the Lumber Carriers' association.

GROCERS MEET.

Annual Meeting and Election of the Association.

The annual meeting of the Duluth Retail Grocers' association was held last evening. The attendance was very good, over 70 of the members being present. All of the old officers of the association, with one exception, and the old board of directors, were elected. The officers are as follows: President, T. W. Walker; vice president, George Ebert; secretary Burt Holcomb; treasurer, W. B. Logan. S. W. Hill, of the West End, was the retiring vice president, having engaged in other than the grocery business.

State Secretary Fred Mason, of the Retail Grocers' association was a guest and gave a talk along the line of splendid trade conditions. E. L. Millar, editor of the Duluth Trade News and S. W. Hill also made a few remarks along the same line.

The committee appointed to secure quarters for the association reported that the hall over Lundberg & Stone's has been engaged for the next year and the meetings will be held every second and fourth Wednesday evenings in the month instead of once a month, as formerly.

A committee comprised of Messrs. Rathbun, Logan and Lent was appointed to make arrangements for the grocers annual picnic, which will be held later in the season.

The business session was followed by a banquet in which light refreshments and cigars were served.

PROGRAM VARIED.

Father Shoots His Child and Then Himself.

Milwaukee, June 12.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Shawano, Wis., says: A man named Putnam, of this city, who was separated from his wife, wished to gain possession of his child. When his wife refused to give up the child, the father shot the child through the head, killing him instantly. Putnam then shot himself dying almost instantly.

JOHN WESLEY'S DREAM.

It is reported that John Wesley once in the crisis of the night, found himself, as he thought, at the gates of hell, says the New York Observer. He knocked and asked who were within:

"Are there any Protestants here?" he asked.

"Yes," was the answer, "a great many."

"Any Roman Catholics?"

"Yes, a great many."

"Any Church of England men?"

"Yes, a great many."

"Any Presbyterians?"

"Yes, a great many."

"Any Wesleyans?"

"Yes, a great many."

Disappointed and discouraged, especially at the last reply he traced his steps upwards, found himself at the gates of Paradise, and here he repeated the same questions.

"Any Wesleyans here?"

"No."

"Any Presbyterians?"

"No."

"Any Church of England men?"

"No."

"Any Protestants?"

"No."

"Any Roman Catholics?"

"No."

"Whom have you then here?" he asked in astonishment.

"We know nobody here," was the reply, "of any of the names you have mentioned. "The only name of which we know anything here is 'Christians.' We are all Christians here, and of those we have a great multitude (which no man can number), of all nations and kindreds and peoples and tongues."

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK.

Heins & Lafarge, architects, have completed the plans for the improvement of Grace church, and it is probable that the work will be soon begun, says the New York Tribune. The church corporation now owns three building lots fronting on Fourth avenue, adjoining the memorial to Mrs. Levi P. Morton, and the original plan for the frontage on that thoroughfare, modified by the present needs of the church, are to be carried out, at a cost of about $140,000. The plans involve a considerable enlargement of the chancel, the construction of a room for choir practice, the doubling of the residence and study accommodations for the assistant clergy, the building of a dormitory for non-resident choir boys, and an enlargement of the basement accommodations for the system of heating and ventilation, already one of the best in New York.

Adjoining the present front of the Morton memorial structure, on Fourth avenue, on the south, there will be a four-story building, with an ornamental gable, but with no entrance on that side, for the accommodation of the assistant clergy. Adjoining this will be a one-story practice hall for choir boys. Above the first story the space of the choir practice hall will form a light court for the quarters of the assistant clergy and for the choir boys' dormitory and amusement room. The structure will resemble the Morton memorial in external appearance.

The chancel is to be extended fifteen feet toward Fourth avenue, giving it a much more airy and spacious appearance.

Since the drawings were made there have been slight changes in the specifications regarding the material of which portions of the Fourth avenue front are to be constructed, but they do not alter the architectural design.

SMARTEST DINNER GOWNS ARE WHITE

Porcelan, Pearl, Ivory, Ash, Shell or Flesh White to Enhance Beauty of Different Types of Women.

New York, June 7.—Black evening gowns show no falling off in popularity, though the smartest summer dancing and dinner toilets are all of purest white. Elderly ladies and buds just timidly peeping from the school room, and belles, of gorgeous propensities in cloths, indulge alike their weakness for the snow drift-like costumes. It is safe to say that if a woman's hair has turned white prematurely or in proper accordance with her age, there is no more artfully artistically way of adequately displaying her blanched tresses and of bringing out the delicate tints of rose in her cheeks than by dressing her, from train to shoulders, in unbroken and unrelieved white of a proper color. We use the true color advisedly, for, in the shops and fitting rooms we hear glib talk of lemon white, shell white, porcelain white, flesh white, rose white, almond white and then the more familiar descriptions of ivory, pearl and oyster white. Every name here given signifies a quality of whiteness that may be more or less becoming to he complexion, hair and eyes of different women.

A distinct and delicate character is given nearly all the white costumes by the use of laces that range, in the quality of their coloring, from the palest lemon to gray, antique, tea color and soft cafe au lait.

Every species of white goods, from the finest etamine to the sheerest swiss, forms the fabric of these delicate compositions. The tall and stately figures display the transparent wools, wool veilings and satin taffeta to the greatest advantage; the youngest element have laid almost exclusive claim to Swiss and silky mull, silk batiste and the tarletons that are a revival of other days. An evening gown made wholly of white lace still remains the standard of supremest elegance and some of the robes of imitation Valenciennes and Brussels are charming and decorative beyond belief. An evening dress worked out to completion without the use of lace is not to be imagined and encouraged in this day of fine needle work, and it remains for Paris to send us robes of delicate Louis Seize point applique enriched with entire deux, bold flounces, berthas, fronts, panels and sleeves of Irish crochet.

A group of four agreeable white toilets, seen in a local establishment, contrived most gracefully and inexpensively with lace, give timely illustration to the present argument. One frock shows how a fine, transparent almond white canvas, dropped upon a white lining, is garlanded and medallioned with cream white Austrian crochet lace. A few straps of shining, flat, white silk braid are stitched on the sleeves and breast of the bodice, and alongside this most graceful frock stands a pretty decollete thing of crisp white Swiss, adorned with insertions made of broad Honiton beading. A tiny vest of mock Honiton is set in the front below two tiny coral pink ribbon rosettes, and here we have a positively ideal gown for the girl who yearns to present a picturesque and fashionable appearance for the modest outlay of about $10.

Two tucked mulls, with coarse Marie Antoinette Valenciennes insertions of a strong tea tone, are the materials of two other frocks, that are topped by broad flat yokes of heavy white Escurial lace. With all these gowns the skirts fit the hips with glove-like neatness, and flare to hitherto unusual width at the floor. The excessive skirt length of the average evening dress shows a tendency to increase rather than diminish, and the flare below the knee is in sympathy with the extraordinary skirt measurement.

Not all the dancing and dinner toilets spread so voluminously as these from the region of the knee. Women of fashionable serpentine figure have their subtle straight lines to display, and they do this to perfection with the starchless mulls, coarse silk knotted nets and lace incrusted chepe de chines that are everywhere strong in favor. Each one of the gowns made of such materials lies long upon the floor, but from hip to heel the fabric must drop quite straight, and to accomplish this perpendicularity of line the wily dressmaker lines the clinging materials on the limpest Florence silk, or makes a foundation petticoat of nothing more stable than four thicknesses of chiffon.

Meanwhile, of an evening our waists grow longer and longer. This is due to the astonishing evening corsets. They are made—those of the very last French patterns—in two pieces. The corset proper is hardly more than a perfectly straight-fronted heavily-boned, extra long-hipped girdle. Powerful elastic hose supporters are applied in order to drag this girdle down over the abdomen as far as it can go, and the unconfined bust is held firm by a slightly boned but close-buttoning corset cover that does not extend so far as the waist line. Provided with these aids to beauty the average swell young American woman presents an appearance of almost ethereal slenderness when arrayed in her white evening gown.

Next in order of popularity after white comes the pale ecru, cafe a la creme and delicate bisque mull, batiste, chiffon and Liberty silk gown. This is always tucked and often from the shoulder to the tip of the extensive train. The gauzy, tawny goods is cast upon a silk petticoat of color, and the tucks and insets of lace give all the variety and decoration desired. The tuckings know no law, and she whose gown's surface is pinched in the most various and impossible crinkles has reached the immense notch of smartness. Tiny tucks spray out from inset lace medallions, or describe ever widening circles about a wreath of lace; tucks run in a plaid or diamond figure all over a skirt, or those that alternate one wide tuck with six of the narrowest pinchings, are among the newest inventions of the hour.

The ecru and biscuit-colored gowns are very happily set off, in many instances, with treatments of black baby velvet ribbon. A pretty exemplification is given in a model of a sunburnt silk gauze dropped over an under slip of pure coral rose. Below the lace-edged Vandyke flounce, that hangs at the knees, extends a flaring flounce ridged with tucks. Every tuck is bordered with a line of black baby velvet ribbon, and this decoration is repeated on the frilled bolero and sleeve tops. At three points along the top of the bodice, clasps of coral hold fast the edging bands of black velvet; and here it is necessary to say that shoulder curls are worn less and coral beads are worn more than during the past winter. The coral bead craze is but just beginning; it promises, however, to grow in favor with the net boa, and the green veil, and the geranium toque of well night universal predominance, and to utterly destroy the spheres of influence once so exclusively occupied by the mock pearls.

One of the most exquisitely frivolous and inexpensive novelties recently introduced as an accompaniment to the evening toilet is the minute lace and tinted batiste handkerchief that is cut, trimmed and colored to represent a flower. There are pansy, rose, violet and petunia handkerchiefs, that are shaped like anyone of these flowers pressed or painted on the flat, and though they cannot endure hard usage, they are pretty and serviceable enough for the ball room.

Some women, who are brave or beautiful, boldly dress their hair low of an evening and enjoy the comfortable consciousness that it is better to be fashionable than good-looking. Other women, and these last are greatly in the majority, dress their hair high after 6 o'clock in the evening, and pompadour and undule the front cheveture as vigorously as ever. Very smart young women bind their locks with lengths of narrow but exquisitely painted white satin ribbon, the bow of which stands up with coquettishly pointed ends after having been pulled through a gold wire buckle studded with brilliants. All the women, however, have united in the use of demi-amber tucking and pompadour combs. These have short, widely-set teeth and bowed tops that are very heavy, quite smooth and very highly polished. Among the jewel-topped evening combs is the coronation idea, wrought in pearls and colored gems and arranged to nearly imitate the strawberry leaf coronet of a duchess or the splendid crown that Queen Alexandra will wear in Westminster abbey.

Happily, girls of ages from 4 to 14 years give no thought at all to the arrangement of their hair. Tots in kneelong skirts have their locks cropped in Florentine fashion for summer, and their prettiest hot weather gowns are of brown, white, pink or lilac linen, cut open in the neck, short in the sleeves and as brief in the skirt as the kilt of a Highlandman. It is the custom to box-plain the fullness of the wee smocks, for kilted simplicity is well esteemed this summer by the juveniles. How well this simple and ancient fashion may be adopted to rather elegant uses is shown in a pretty blue-sprigged pongee gown worn by a miss of 14. With kilts, a little Russian lace and some tucks, a most modest and serviceable little frock has been inexpensively evolved.

MISS AMANDA MOORE

Miss Amanda Moore, Marshall Ten., writes:

"I have suffered for several years past with acute dyspepsia and trying several remedies without any help, decided that it was my fate to suffer through this life. Last winter I took Peruna for a severe catarrh, the effects of a cold, and you can imagine my joy when I found that this wonderful remedy not only cured my catarrh but helped my dyspepsia.

"I took three bottles and found myself well and strong. I can now eat heartily and have gained twelve pounds and have good reason to praise Peruna." — Miss Amanda Moore.

Dyspepsia Is Catarrh of the Stomach.

Many Women Have Catarrh of the Stomach and Do Not Know It.

Pe-ru-na Cures Catarrh Wherever Located.

For the most acute cases of dyspepsia and the most chronic and stubborn cases of catarrh of the stomach Peruna is an unfailing cure.

Mr. E. E. Gaston, of Milton, Iowa, in a recent letter to Dr. Hartman, says:

"My wife has been sick with stomach trouble for almost three years.

"During that time we doctored with three of the best doctors in this part of the country, but they did her no good. She fell off in flesh from 134 pounds to 89 pounds, and was unable to do anything; in fact, was confined to her bed a good deal of the time. Everything she ate she would throw up, even water. The last doctor we had examined her and said she had cancer of the stomach, and said he could do her no good except to give her something to relieve the pain, and that he would not advise us to have an operation performed. This coming from one whom I have always had great confidence in, you cannot imagine my feelings and thoughts.

"It was then we decided to quit doctoring and try Peruna, and from the beginning it helped her. She is now able to do all the housework. She is gaining in flesh and I think will soon be back to her former weight.

"To make a long story short, we owe her life to Peruna, for I am satisfied had we not tried it she would now be in the grave."

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be glad to give you his valuable advice gratis.

BUSY DAY

Spent By the American Diplomats In London.

London, June 12.—This was a busy day in the American diplomatic circle. Rear Admiral John C. Watson and Gen. James H. Wilson, who will represent the navy and army of the United States at the coronation of King Edward, reached London today from Southampton, called on Whitelaw Reid, the special ambassador of the United States, and Joseph H. Choate, the American ambassador, and in other ways fulfilled the official preliminaries of their mission.

The new ambassador of Great Britain to the United States, the Hon. Michael Henry Herbert, was also among the callers at the embassy.

A large party has been invited to the dinner which Mr. and Mrs. Choate will give to Mr. and Mrs. Reid tonight.

H. Clay Evans, the United States consul general, spent a quiet day at his hotel. He will probably assume control of the consulate Oct. 16.

SPOT IRON IS SCARCE

Higher Prices Are Being Paid For Quick Delivery.

Blast Furnace Statistics Show Quite a Falling Off.

Steel Is Scarce and Considerable Is Being Imported.

New York, June 12.—Our monthly blast furnace statistics this time reflect, as they should, says the Iron Age, the special conditions which prevailed on June 1, through the temporary banking of a number of stacks in the Shenango and Mahoning valleys, the majority of which have since resumed. The result is that the capacity of the coke furnaces in operation was only 337,492 tons June 1, as compared with 345,627 tons on May 1. It is probable, however, that the output of the current month will be up to the 1,500,000-ton mark. It reached 1,570,243 tons in May, a month of thirty-one days.

From the West come reports of some buying of foundry iron for 1903 delivery, but, on the whole melters of iron seem disposed to await developments. Spot iron continues exceedingly scarce, and higher prices are being paid for it. Importations are continuing of low phosphorus iron, both Eastern Pennsylvania and the Pittsburg district having taken round lots.

The domestic production of manganiferous matter is at a low ebb, and the bulk of our consumption is now covered by importations. Among the recent purchases by one steel plant are 15,000 tons of spiegeleizen.

Steel is scarce, and it looks as though we shall have to import for some time to come. In the heavy lines, notably in steel rails, beams, structural matter and plates, the mills could run full to the end of the year, and in some lines well toward the middle of next year in order to deliver all they have sold. In steel rails they will certainly carry considerable work due in 1902 and 1903. They are now selling quite liberally for 1903 delivery, considerable additional sales having been made in the last week. The same is true in an even more pronounced degree of structural matter and largely, too, of plates.

INDEFINITE

Is the Verdict of St. Paul Coroner's Jury.

St. Paul, June 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Tony Entora, one of the Italians accused of firing upon the Roberge party last Sunday afternoon, during the riot near the old Concord street depot, was charged by the coroner's jury last night with causing Dell Roberge's death. Louis Ventrilla, who was arrested with Sentoa and who was accused of firing several revolver shots, is not mentioned in the verdict. The verdict also fails to state whether the shots were fired in self-defense; nor does it attempt to fix the responsibility for the affray on either the Roberge party or the Italian laborers.

INJUNCTION DISSOLVED.

The Plant Trust Fund May Be Removed.

Waterbury, Conn., June 12.—Judge Robinson, of the superior court, has handed down a decision dissolving the injunction which restrained the executors of the Plant will from removing the $17,000,000 trust fund from Connecticut into New York except that $15,000, the amount of a legacy to which Charles E. Hoadley, of this city, is entitled, as representing his children, must remain in this state, acording to the decision.

Judge Robinson finds that the Hoadley heirs are collateral kindred, being sons of a half brother of the tsetator, and as such they have a collateral interest in the estate. He does not find, however, that according to the will they are in any way interested in the distribution of the $17,000,000 trust fund in the event of the decease of the beneficiary mentioned in the will.

TO ABOLISH SUGAR BOUNTIES.

FITCH HAS APPENDICITIS.

New York, June 12.—According to private information received here, Clyde Fitch, the dramatist, who recently went abroad for his health, is suffering from appendicitis. It was hoped, after a short stay at Florence, that he had completely recovered his health, but a Rome physician, who was called, pronounced his illness appendicitis, and the playwright hurriedly left for Berne, Switzerland, to consult a specialist in the hope of securing relief without a surgical operation.

ROCK ISLAND

Files Its Articles of Incorporation at St. Paul.

St. Paul, June 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad company has filed its articles of incorporation with the secretary of state under the Somerville law. The company asserts that $250,000 of its capital stock is represented by the business done in Minnesota. District headquarters will be established here within three weeks. Operating and traffic officials having jurisdiction over the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern system will have offices here. Before the absorption of the Cedar Rapids, Robert Williams, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, was its vice president and general superintendent. Mr. Williams will be transferred to St. Paul in charge of the same lines, with the title, it is said, of assistant general superintendent of the Rock Island.

T. H. Simmons, former general freight agent of the Cedar Rapids, is to be transferred to St. Paul, in charge of division freight traffic. It is stated that several of the former passenger department officials of the Cedar Rapids, including J. G. Farmer, will also be transferred to the St. Paul headquarters, together with other men connected with the freight and passenger offices.

KIND TREATMENT

Had Generally Been Accorded Philippine Natives.

Washington, June 12.—Mark Evans, of Des Moines, Iowa, formerly of the Thirty-second volunteer infantry, was a witness before the senate Philippine committee today. He testified to seeing the water cure administered in the province of Batan, also to the burning of villages where insurgents were located. He also related incidents where natives were ducked under water for a half minute at a time to compel them to tell where arms were located. With these exceptions, he said, the treatment of the natives by the troops had generally been kind.

WEBB-MEYER SYNDICATE.

Affairs Will Be Settled By Banker Cannon.

New York, June 12.—James G. Cannon, vice president of the Fourth National bank, said today that he had undertaken to settle the affairs of the Webb-Meyer syndicate.

"The bank is neither directly nor indirectly interested in any of these loans or securities," said Mr. Cannon. "At the request of 103 banks and institutions throughout the country, which are interested, I have undertaken to bring about some kind of an adjustment in connection with these matters. All parties in interest are heartily co-operating. Very many of the properties have merit to them, and with careful handling and adjustment I feel that the situation can be measurably cleared up to the satisfaction of all concerned."

TO BEGIN MONDAY

Legal Contest Over Johann Mueller Estate Will Be Notable.

Lands on the Mesaba Range Basis of the Controversy.

Sixteen Heirs In Four Sets---Nineteen Lawyers Engaged.

One of the most notable pieces of litigation ever heard in Northern Minnesota will be taken up Monday morning before Judge Cant, when the case of F. S. Kosmerl, Joseph F. Ruh, Nettie L. Geist and Ellen C. Sullivan against S. F. Salvely, as administrator of the estate of Johann Mueller and others will be tried.

The case involves some iron mining lands on the Mesaba range, which has a prospective value estimated all the way from $100,000 to $500,000, though it has never been explored. It is supposed to be well and it may be worth nothing, and it may be worth a million. The chances are good that it is very valuable.

This land was the property of one Johann Mueller, who died in Superior, Dec. 28, 1898, when he was supposed to be practically a pauper, the land having no value then. No one knew then that he had a wife or any other relatives. Before he died he gave Father F. S. Kosmerl, pastor of the German Catholic church here, a second mortgage for $300 on his property. He had given one F. F. Marshek a mortgage for $125, and he gave one Peter Schweitzer a deed to the property for $600.

Soon after his death it became generally known that the property was of great value, and the struggle began. M. W. Bates was appointed special administrator of the estate, and he attempted to redeem the property from the foreclosure of the Marshek mortgage, the validity of which redemption will be one of the issues in the case. Later S. F. Snively was made administrator of Mueller's estate.

Parties that interested themselves in the case began the search for heirs, with astonishing results. Europe was looked over by emissaries who had heard of heirs there, and to the astonishment of some of the parties a wife and six children turned up in Detroit, Mich.

The issue now is between Father Kosmerl and the other plaintiffs, who secured their interests through him, and the estate. He acquired the Marshek mortgage and foreclosed it, and he acquired the Schweitzer deed. The estate sets up the claim that Father Kosmerl used his influence as the spiritual advisor of Mueller, at a time when he was sick and insane and incompetent, to procure the mortgage. The Kosmerl mortgage was foreclosed, but the defense claims that the foreclosure was invalid because no notice was served upon the occupants of the land, a logging company. The Schweitzer deed is alleged to be invalid because it was without consideration. It is claimed that Mueller owed Schweitzer $50 for board, and that that was the only consideration for the deed, which was given simply as security for the debt.

The first issue is between the plaintiffs and the estate. The estate must clear away the two mortgages and the deed before it gets the property. Then, if the court decides that the estate is entitled to the property, comes the question of the validity of the claims of the various heirs.

First is Katherina Mueller, of Detroit, who claims to be the widow of Mueller. She sets up that all of the instruments made by Mueller are void because she did not join him in executing them. She says she was married to Mueller thirty-seven years ago, and that while he deserted her, they were never divorced. Joining with her are her six children, all of them over 21 years of age, who claim to be Mueller's offspring. They are Charles Frederick Mueller, Rudolph Mueller, Otto Mueller, August Mueller, Martnannena Manderlin, Gertrude Wieska and Ferdinand Wieska. The latter claims simply as the husband of Gertrude Wieska, a daughter.

Next come Wilhelmine Possak and Anna Paciska, of Austria. Anna Paciska claims to be a sister and Wilhelmina Possak to be a niece, the daughter of a deceased sister.

The third set is also from Austria, and it includes Katherine Schafer and Christian Mueller, who claim to be a brother and sister.

The fourth set consists of Margaretha Berger, who says she is a sister, and Christine Zachman, Lizette Zachman and Christiane Zilly, who claim to be daughters of Sophie Zachman, a deceased sister of Mueller.

Numerous other alleged relatives have been heard from, including another alleged wife, at none of them have yet appeared in the case.

There are enrolled in the case sixteen heirs, four claimants through the papers made by Mueller prior to his death, when he had no idea of the value of his property, two administrators, and it will take twenty lawyers, including C. A. Severance, of St. Paul, and nineteen Duluth and Superior attorneys.

The property consists of the w½ of the sw¼ of section 15 and the n½ of the nw¼ of section 22-58-19, in the heart of the Mesaba iron country. Of the plaintiffs Father Kosmerl as a half interest, Monsignor Joseph F. Ruh, who is vicar general of the Duluth diocese of the Catholic church, has a quarter interest; Nettie L. Geist has seven-thirty-seconds, and Ellen C. Sullivan has one-thirty-second.

The case will be tried before the court without a jury. The files are voluminous, and numberless depositions have been received, forming bulky packages of documents. Many of these are from Germany, and are entirely in the German language.

TAR MACADAM

Is Finding Many Friends Among Property Owners.

Duluth property owners seem to have hit on tar-macadam as the paving for residence districts and lightly traveled business streets.

The first of this paving is now being laid on Nineteenth avenue east. A petition is in to have East Superior street, between Eighteenth and Eighth avenues paved with it; and tar-macadam estimates have been called for on First avenue west, Lake avenue and Central avenu.

All the work so far has been done under specifications made in the office of the city engineer, and executed by Duluth contractors and Duluth laborers.

The paving is simply a mixture of tar or bitumen macadam put down on a street at a temperature of from 150 to 200 degrees Fahrenheit. It is rolled while hot, with a very heavy roller, until thoroughly compressed and the surface of the street resembles the ordinary macadamized road, but it is dustless and under wheel the feeling is more like asphalt.

Since the city has been flooded with calls for tar-macadam estimates and petitions there has been a general demand for information regarding it. As a sort of reply for this request for information the city engineer will shortly make an extensive report on the new paving.

In the meantime he is kept very busy answering questions regarding the possibility of manufacturing the macadam in Duluth with local capital and possibly under municipal ownership, thereby reducing the cost of paving.

Buds and Flowers of Home Life.

Paine's Celery Compound

The children, God bless them, are the buds and flowers of our homes. Without their prattle and hearty laughter, our homes would be desolate. They should ever be carefully tended in childhood and youth, if we expect them to ripen into perfect men and women.

In the home and at school the children have their times of ill-health and suffering. We often note the pallid and bloodless cheeks, heavy eyes, nervous movements and twitchings of limbs and muscles. They complain of headache, drowsiness, weariness, dyspepsia and indigestion. All such symptoms and ailments mean that the seeds of disease will have a fast and firm hold, unless proper measures are taken to restore a perfect condition of health.

Thousands of wise and prudent parents have made their children happy, healthy and vigorous by giving them nature's medicine, Paine's Celery Compound. In many severe and complicated cases Paine's Celery Compound has restored health when the little ones were given up by physicians.

If your dear ones are not as hearty, strong and rugged as they should be in June, try the health-giving virtues of Paine's Celery Compound. It makes and keeps the children well.

AS PASTOR.

Rev. H. B. Sutherland Formally Installed at Lakeside Church.

Rev. H. B. Suthehrland, formerly of Salem, Ind., was formally installed as pastor of the Lakeside Presbyterian church last evening. He has been in Duluth for some time and has been filling the pulpit, but the formal ceremony did not take place until this time.

The occasion was one of much interest to the congregation and the church was well filled. Rev. J. M. Todd, of Virginia, moderator of the Duluth Presbytery, presided.

The sermon was delivered by Rev. H. F. Gilt, of the Two Harbors church; Rev. A. C. Manson, of the Second Presbyterian church in Duluth, delivered the installation prayer. The charge to the pastor was made by Dr. T. H. Cleland, of the First church, and the charge to the congregation by Rev. R. A. Montgomery, of Glen Avon church.

The choir of the church sang anthems.

Rev. Mr. Sutherland was received from the New Albany, Ind., presbytery.

SCOFIELD

Milwaukee, June 12.—Edward S. Scofield, of Oconto and West Superior, twice governor of Wisconsin, will be a candidate for the nomination against Governor La Follette at the Republican convention in Madison, July 16.

Maj. Scofield's candidacy has not been announced officially, but he will in a short time tell his friends that they have his consent to go ahead in his interest. The Wisconsin Republican league, the organization of the stalwarts, is committed to Senator Whitehead, of Janesville, and it will support him loyally to the end giving no encouragement, it is said, to the candidacy of Scofield.

The former governor, who was in Milwaukee a day or two ago, said that he had been very highly honored by the state in the past, but that he felt under some obligations to his friends, and, if they commanded him, he could not tell what he might do. He had not been in the habit of shirking his duties to his friends and neighbors, he said, and he doubted if he had reached the period of his life when such a thing would be in order. He would not say that he had determined to try for another nomination and election, but he did say that he had been approached and urged by friends in all parts of the state to allow the use of his name at the convention.

CLAPP SPEAKS

In Favor of Popular Election of Senators.

Washington, June 12.—Senator Clapp made a dignified, eloquent and effective speech yesterday in favor of the popular election of senators. It is generally said to be the most exhaustive and interesting presentation of the subject yet made in congress, which implies a great compliment, for some able and prominent men have at different times addressed themselves to it. Mr Clapp made a historical resume, beginning with the adoption of the constitution. He was closely followed on both sides of the chamber. This speech and the one he made on the Philippine question not long ago, have come near establishing Clapp's reputation in congress as an orator and debater of the first rank.

LEKERT WAS HANGED.

St. Petersburg, June 12.—It has become known today that Hirsch Lekert, who made a unsuccessful attempt on the night of May 18, to assassinate Lieut. Gen. Von Wahl, governor of Vilna, was hanged on Tuesday, June 10.

LOOKING FOR ORE

Exploratory Operations on Vermilion Range Are Very Active.

Martin Patterson Is Prospecting on the Aronson Property.

Exploratory operations on the Vermilion range are starting up quite briskly, considering the comparatively small scale that they have been conducted on since such great activity set in on the Mesaba.

Martin Pattison, who owns a large slice in the fee of the Chandler and Pioneer mines at Ely, has decided to look for further sources of profit on the same range. He will begin exploratory work on the John Arnson property in section 29-62-15, in a few days. The operations will be under the direction of Capt. William Munro, of Superior, who when he was a member of the Superior city council used to be known as "Beaming Billy" Munro.

It is understood also that the Minnesota Iron company is exploring properties in sections 14-60-14 and 19-62-14.

The diamond drill that has been at work on the Semer property at Ely, which is under option to Morton Miller, has been removed to the McCumber location, and another drill has been set up on the Semer location. The drill at the McCumber will endeavor to locate the trend of the ore body from the shaft that was put down during former explorations. The second level drift was run in a direction opposite from the trend of the vein, and those that are familiar with the discoveries made since the shaft was pumped out are at a loss to account for the expenditure that was made in hopeless direction. The first level drift was pushed in the direction of the vein, but it was not deep enough to strike the ore. The second struck ore, but the drift was run away from the iron.

An effort will now be made it is said to locate how far the vein extends in the opposite direction, its dimensions and in a general way the outlook for developing a working mine there.

Some explorations are being carried on on the Milner property in section 28-62-14, but by whom is not known.

It seems quite likely that a great deal of surface work will be done on the Vermilion this summer, not only in the interest of large companies or strong individuals, but by a great many explorers who can get somebody to grubstake them, if they have the necessary resources themselves.

J. B. Middlecoff and several othetr Duluth people are exploring the Carlson forty, on the Mesaba range, under the terms of an option for a lease. Pits are down thirty feet after about a month's work, with some prospect, but no results as yet.

GLEE CLUB

Concert at First M. E. Church a Fine Success.

An audience of fair size attended the concert given by the Duluth Glee club last evening at the First Methodist church. This was the second appearance of the club in concert, and that the time intervening since the first has been filled with conscientious study and training was evidenced by the marked improvement in its work. The numbers were sufficiently varied in character to exhibit the full capabilities of the chorus, and all the demands were well met. The voices harmonize well, the attack is made with good precision and the tone coloring is good. The work reflects much credit upon C. W. Weeks, the director.

A concert waltz by Buck was the opening number, and it was skilfully rendered. "When the Corn is Waving," another Buck number, was finely rendered. To many "Tom, the Piper's Son," by Kendall, while a lighter number than the others, was the best sung of all, showing much spirit, fine volume of tone and excellent modulation. Three familiar songs, "Junita," "In the Gloaming" and "Massa's in de Cold Ground," were given, the last named being a solo by John Olson with chorus. Mr. Olson is a basso and has a pleasing voice. Franz Schultz also sang a solo with chorus as an encore, and it was well received. "The Martyrs of the Arena," by De Rille, closed the program.

The club was assisted by Ada Markland Sheffield, soprano, and Frederick G. Bradbury, violinist. Mrs. Sheffield quite captivated the audience, being recalled several times and applause being given her in unstinted quantities. Her voice is a soprano of very pleasing quality, full of sympathy and admirably controlled. The aria from "Queen of Sheba," by Gounod, was her heaviest number, and it was sung with an artistic skill and apparent absence of effort that made it delightful. A group of three French songs and another group of three. "Daffodils are Blooming," "Daisies" and "Roses in June," made the balance of her program. She also sang two pretty encores, her selections in this respect being particularly happy.

Mr. Bradbury never appeared better, playing a ballad and polonaise by Vieuxtemps and an arrangement of Schubert's famous serenade by Remenyi. He also gave a fine encore number.

Mrs. Hoelscher played the accompaniments with much skill.

Learn Book-keeping.

You can readily investigate it.
The proof should convince you.

Mr. M. McLean, of 122 Second street, east, first mate on the steamship Bon Voyage, says: "There was a constant, dull aching through the small of my back, over the kidneys. The kidney secretions were unnatural and irregular and too frequent in action. I could not rest well nights and was generally run down. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills so highly recommended that I concluded to try them and got a box at W. A. Abbett's drug store. They helped me from the very start and soon freed me from all aches and pains and rendered the action of the kidneys healthy and normal."

For sale by all dealers. Price, 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

The Explosion In the Aurora Mine Was Terrific.

Ironwood—An explosion of powder occurred at A shaft of the Aurora mine Monday night, which resulted in the death of I. Ryan, O. Tregembo and T. J. Johns. The explosion was so great that I. Ryan and O. Tregembo were blasted beyond recognition. The only means that relatives had for claiming their dead was by clothing they had worn. It is thought that Mr. Johns met his death while trying to rescue his fellow-miners, but was overcome by the deadly gas. The cause of the explosion is unknown, but it is thought to have occurred by a spark from one of the candles coming in contact with a box of powder that was near.

The Cleveland-Cliffs company has structural iron for their new shaft house at the Ashland mine on the ground, and work is being pushed. When the new shaft is completed the product of the Ashland will be considerably increased, while the cost of production will be decreased. The output of the Ashland, which has several times been styled "played out," will this year approximate 225,000 tons.

Watersmut—The safe of L. Peterson's saloon at Waersmut was bdown open and $250 taken. The sheriff of Eagle River, Wis, captured two of the gang and the marshal of Monico got two more. The men had a full compliment of safe-blowing tools. They were brought to Bessemer and lodged in jail. They gave their names as George McEdwards, George Mang, George Cliton and James Wilson.

Calumet—The annual midsummer tournament of the Upper Peninsula Whist league will be held in Negaunee June 26 and 27. It is expected that teams representing all the clubs in the organization will be present. The league comprises clubs from eight cities in Northern Michigan, as follows: Sault Ste. Marie, Escanaba, Negaunee, Houghton, Ironwood, Marquette, Ishpeming and Calumet.

Marquette—At the present rate of progress a decision on the question of expansion will not be reached by the biennial council of the Michigan Maccabees. The issue was formally presented in recommendations by the commissioner on laws and is now being argued. The vote will at least be close, and a two-thirds majority is required. Commander Boynton's broader jurisdiction plan will have a difficult time in squeezing through. All but nineteen tents of the 947 tents in the state are represented in the gathering and the enthusiasm for Boynton and expansion and for Record Keeper Watson personally is rampant. Boynton will be re-elected commander practically without opposition. For the honor of entertaining the convention in 1904, Battle Creek and Bay City are candidates. Saginaw is after the headquarters of the great camp, now located at Port Huron.

CABLE BILL KILLED.

Washington, June 12.—The house dispatched the Cortiss Pacific cable bill by the same method it adopted in the case of the forest reserve bill. It struck struck out the enacting clause of the measure by a vote of 116 to 77, thus giving no opportunity to test the strength of the Dalzell substitute, which authorized the president to contract with a private company or the laying of a cable.

PENSIONS GRANTED.

Washington, June 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—The following pensions have been granted: Original—William E. Seekerson, of Rochester, $6. Widows—Mary L. Gray, of Duluth, $8.

FIRE AT EAU CLAIRE.

Eau Claire, Wis., June 12.—Henry Michel's brewery was partially burned at 3 o'clock this morning. The damage is estimated at $20,000, insurance $5000.

Special Message to Congress.

The president, who has been watching and waiting for action on the part of the senate majority looking to some decision on the Cuban reciprocity measure, will naturally be disappointed at the failure yesterday of the senators to agree upon a bill. Possibly he will wait a few days longer, but then if nothing is accomplished there is not much doubt but what he will send a message to congress covering the Cuban concession legislation desired by the administration. It is claimed that the message will be sent within the week unless there is a movement on the part of the senate majority in the direction of an agreement on the question. The proposition to send a message to congress did not originate with the president. The action has been advised by some of the Republican leaders, who have been unsuccessful thus far in their efforts to secure an agreement with their colleagues. Unless present signs fail, the message, if decided upon, will not be satisfactory to the senators who have urged its preparation. Those senators have declared in favor of reciprocal concessions as the best and only satisfactory means of solving the present tangle. They have tried repeatedly to get the president to come out squarely in favor of their plan as the only one acceptable to the administration. In this they have been successful. While there is no doubt of his inclination to favor the reciprocity plan as against the others put forward, he has not committed himself to anyone of the plans. It seems that the special message will be necessary as there is no apparent prospect of the senators agreeing among themselves. It is a party fight and it must be settled among themselves. Meanwhile the country awaits a decision.

The Trouble Between Hanna and Burton.

The statement made by Senator Hanna on Tuesday concerning the charges of Congressman Burton, was an unusual thing for the Ohio senator to do, and shows that he was much disturbed by the situation. There has been friction between Senator Hanna and Representative Burton for some time. The latter has openly opposed the senator's pet shipping bill, and when the last river and harbor bill was up there was serious disagreement between the two in regard to certain Ohio items in the measure. But responsible for Burton's man being turned down as chairman of the committee, except in a general way. Senator Hanna made his fight, they say, for the control of the organization, and in order to gain control Burton's man had to be defeated. It is stated by the senator's adherents that Congressman Burton did not ask Senator Hanna's assistance until Friday night, when it was too late for him to accomplish anything. Even at this late date the Senator sent a dispatch to Ohio, at Mr. Burton's suggestion, The Republican members of congress from Ohio are very much discouraged over the situation. They believe that for the reasons stated above Burton will insist on declining the nomination, and that if he does the Republicans will lose his congressional district, and Ohio the chairmanship of the great river and harbor committee of the house. Congressman Burton seems to have taken advantage of the action of his enemies to decline a nomination that involved, under the most favorable circumstances, a bitter fight. It is an open secret among the Republican politicians from Ohio that the party nominees for judicial honors are very weak, and that some of them are almost sure to be defeated. Burton has been aware of this ever since the state convention and he has felt that instead of pulling the rest of the ticket through, should he run, he himself might be dragged down to defeat with it. Ohio politicians believe that the withdrawal of Burton means the defeat of the ticket and that is the reason of their great disturbance. The controversy affords a great opportunity for the Democrats and they are taking advantage of it. The fact that the president has refused to take cognizance of the transparent violation of the rules prohibiting active partisanship of federal officials has strengthened the Democratic cause wonderfully in that state.

IS MASON JOKING?

Senator "Billy" Mason of Illinois always was considerable of a joker, and consequently it is not surprising that nearly every person laughs at his announcement that he is a candidate for the presidency of the United States. It is regarded as a warm weather joke. Yet the junior senator from Illinois may be serious. He is nothing if not spectacular, and he is noted for doing strange and unexpected things. When he first announced his candidacy for the United States senate, many people smiled and thought it a good joke, but Mason was persistent and worked hard and finally landed the prize. He wants a re-election to the senate, and though his prospects do not look very bright at present, he says he is going to get it, and he may.

After the senatorial fight, he will give his undivided attention to his presidential campaign, and he is expecting to make a great showing as President Roosevelt's rival for the Republican nomination. Mason has outlined his plan of campaign to a veracious Washington correspondent. His first battle ground will be the South. He believes there is a sentiment in his favor in that region, and he proposes to expand it by making a series of speeches to the people of Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, Alabama and other states south of Mason and Dixon's line. To quote his own words the senator will "campaign from New Orleans to Bangor, and from New York to San Francisco." He will visit every state and territory in the Union. He will make speeches to all who will listen to him. He will organize a Mason following, and from that a Mason machine. "My platform," said Senator Mason, "will be protection, sound money, reciprocity and a promise to the Filipinos that we will not govern them against their will. Over and above everything else, I am for the Declaration of Independence. I am a Republican. I believe that the rank and file of the Republican party shares my views regarding the final destiny of the Filipinos, and, sharing it, will rally to my support."

The senator says he will begin his Southern tour as soon as congress adjourns—certainly a heroic undertaking in midsummer unless he desires to reduce his weight. The senator, who is short and very, very fleshy, two years ago went to Alaska and camped at the base of a glacier so he could keep cool. If he is wise, he will drop the presidential ambition and repeat the trip. But it may be simply a joke.

A BANKING COMBINE.

The gigantic combination of capital which is proposed by the North American Trust company, and in which one of the banks of Duluth has been invited to participate, is one of the greatest financial enterprises ever attempted in this country. It is practically a banking trust, which is to own and control national banks in fifty or more of the leading cities of the United States, and will be known as the American Bankers' corporation. The American Bankers' corporation was incorporated some time ago with a capital of $3,000,000, the charter providing for a surplus of $45,000,000. It was chartered under the general laws of New Jersey, the capital to be divided into 50,000 shares, par value $100, at $1000 per share. The object of the corporation has been kept a secret. The promotion of the enterprise has been conducted under the seal of secrecy with all correspondence marked "strictly personal." Already a national bank has been selected in each city, and the work of negotiating for the purchase of these banks is now under way. Officials of the North American Trust company decline to discuss the matter, but in their correspondence with the banks with which they are negotiating they announce that the project is well under way.

In a letter issued by the North American Trust company, dated June 7, which has been sent to the bankers in various parts of the country who are negotiating with the promoters of the national trust, the full scheme is outlined in detail, as follows, together with the arguments advanced to show that a national bankers' trust will be successful:

"The idea of branch banking is not a new one. Various causes may be assigned for the fact that it has not been tried to any great extent in the United States, the chief reason being that each state has its own banking laws, some of them actually making the organization of banks prohibitive, so that if it were not for the national laws and private enterprises, no banks would exist within the borders of the last mentioned communities. The main office (nominally Jersey City) will only be the meeting place for the stockholders once a year. No deposits will be accepted by the parent organization, which will confine its operations to the investments of its capital and surplus. Its first purchase will be a large New York city national bank. In fact, New York city will be the practical headquarters, and from there the regulation and transfer of the surplus balances to the corporation's banks throughout the country will be carried on. The officers of the New York city bank will also be the executives of this corporation.

"The aim will be to own in each state the controlling interest in at least one good bank, which in itself will have sufficient surplus to enable the purchase or control of several local organizations.

"The ownership of these institutions by such a corporation will be sufficient guarantee to the depositing public, without necessitating large and vexatious local capital and surplus liabilities, the idea being that the smaller the capitalization, in proportion to the deposits obtainable, the larger the profits."

In this age of consolidation and concentration there seems to be no reason why banks should not be combined for mutual advantage as well as any other business. Only by a conservative management can they succeed, while with that feature there seems to be an excellent prospect of success.

PIG IRON AND STEEL.

The great demand and the shortness of stocks are the cause of the advance in the price of pig iron that has recently taken place, and it is significant that imports are being made despite high prices abroad and the tariff of $4 per ton. Never was the iron and steel trade so prosperous as at the present time, and blast furnaces are being worked to their utmost capacity to supply the demand. Nor is there any sign of a change in this happy state of things, as orders are piled up, many of which cannot be filled during the present year.

Not many years ago Bessemer pig iron sold for $9.50 a ton. In 1900 the price went up to $25 a ton, but this was an extreme figure and a reaction occurred. In February of last year it had gone back to $12.50 a ton. Combinations which were effected moved the price to $16, about which figure it remained for a considerable time. Lately contracts for next year have been made at $20 a ton, and the demand continues very lively. If the decline from $25 to $12.50 had followed a change in the tariff it would have been heralded everywhere as the disastrous result of tariff tinkering, and would have been described as ruinous. The fluctuations noted show that very great changes in prices are possible without any change in the tariff. Though the cost of production may have gone up since it sold at $9.50, there can be no doubt that the business of manufacturing at present prices is enormously profitable. The fact is that many articles on the iron and steel schedule require no protection, and the repeal of the duty would not have any bad effect on the iron and steel trade.

Steel is scarce. This is an evidence of the great prosperity of the country. It indicates the wonderful boom in building operations and in railroad improvements. The Iron Age reports that in the heavy lines, notably in steel rails, beams, structural material and plates, the mills could run full to the end of the year, and in some lines well toward the middle of next year in order to deliver all they have sold. It is stated that in steel rails they will certainly carry over to 1903 considerable work that is due in 1902; liberal sales are now being made for 1903 delivery. The same is reported to be true, in an even more pronounced degree, of structural matter, and largely, too, of plates.

With furnaces and mills all working to their fullest capacity, there is naturally a continued demand for ore, and the Minnesota ranges are furnishing the greater portion of this raw material.

"Bat" Masterson has been insulted while in New York on his way to London to see King Edward crowned. He has twenty-eight notches on the barrel of his pistol, not the one the police took away from him, but figuratively, he has led rather a strenuous life altogether but when a Mormon elder whom he relieved of $18,000 at faro accuses him of cheating his indignation is aroused. He declares he was never before accused of dishonesty and insists that he won the money "on the dead."

"Silver Dollar" Smith, who died in New York two years ago, got his nickname by causing the marble floor of his saloon to be studded with silver dollars. This was before the resumption of specie payments, when silver dollars were a rarity. Last week the saloon was dismantled and when the floor was taken up the silver dollars were found to have been worn almost to the thinnest of paper. This inevitably suggests the question how long golden streets will wear.

Hon. Robert W. Davis, member of congress from Florida, is a nice man. In his biography furnished for the latest edition of the Congressional Directory he recounts his early struggles and triumphs and adds: "Before reaching his majority he was married to Miss Peter Mercer, and to her influence is due whatever success he has attained." This public announcement of his obligation to Peter does credit to Robert. May he always feel the uplifting influence.

Russia has done Mark Twain a good turn by barring his "Innocents Abroad" from the empire, on the ground that the grave of Adam is not where the humorist located it. This action of the czar is likely to revive interest in the book and materially increase its sale. Many people will be curious as to where Mark located Adam's grave.

The State Auctioneers' association, of Iowa, has decided that an auctioneer must cry 1000 sales before he is entitled to be called colonel. The majority of army colonels earn their titles easier than that.

The St Louis Post-Dispatch wants to know if the result of the Oregon congressional election is a rebuke to President McKinley's reciprocity? Perhaps some one of the Republican organs will furnish an answer.

Senator Aldrich prophesies that there will be some Cuban legislation before the end of the session, and that congress will adjourn by July 1. Beyond that no man knoweth, and even so much prophecy is hazardous.

God made man in His own image.
Sprung from the dusk of centuries, he stands
Before the world its chief Olympian,
The majesty of nations on his brow
And in his brain the wisdom of the Seers.
Who made him lord of Rapture and Despair,
A soul that throbbed to every human grief,
And glowed with all the warmth of laughing Joy,
A son to Zeus, a brother to the stars?
Who planned and shaped this royal-mannered head?
Whose was the hand that arched this lofty come?
Whose thoughtful breath fanned into flame this life?
Who wrought this masterpiece of Man, and gave
Our minds to drink from his exhaustless spring,
And so make green the gardens of our soul—
So prove a source of sweetness and of light—
So mirror back the passions of the race?
Was this the Vision in the mind of Him
Who laid the mighty architrave of Space,
Who lit Arcturus, and didst fling across
His ether seas the vast and shining Way?

Up all the slopes of Heaven Echo shouts,
"Behold the man! Behold Dame Nature's child!
High priest of Song, first poet of this earth;
Not from the loins of princes, nor from seed
Of chance-crowned kings, but from plain yeoman sprung,
To rule the world in undisputed right."
Who digs finds stars; and he, fresh from the fields,
Such wonders wrought as Merlin never dreamed.
What peaks his fire imagination tops,
What groves his ever-nimble fancy treads!
Eternal Truth his boon companion is,
His mate the Spirit of Immortal Youth.

"Through nature up to nature's God" we move;
The fallow field, refreshed, tomorrow yields
Or those that long have slept, shall give to earth
A good account in their appointed time,
And shame the cynic into silent awe.

Grieve not, O Seers, to look upon the man
Who delves in God's sweet earth; he gathers strength
That when old War and Ruin hurry forth
And come to him, they shall encounter might
To beat him back and stamp him out, the great Immortal Lincoln smote. And Robert Burns,
Holding his plow upon a Scottish hill,
So sweetly touched the lyre that ever since
World-stranded men have loved his lark-like song.
For these were Shakespeare's brothers, born and bred
In Nature's house, and teach unto the world
That only from the soil her masters come.

Who leans upon his badge of labor also leans
Upon the lion's skin—likewise a badge.
Faint not; Christ was a Builder; God Himself
In His great Vineyard toils and loves to toil.
Toil on, with joy ineffable; the drops
That star thy brows are heralds of new worlds,
New kingdoms, cities, men—prophetic of
New melodists, new music and more light;
For, lo! the Toiler shall be king of men,
While he who lifts no torch into the sky
Shall down to darkness reel, upon his brow
Cain's mark, and in his heart the hell of Cain.

Lingering Pinch of War.

Philadelphia Ledger: The magnitude of the war against the Boers is strongly shown in the statement of the British chancellor of the exchequer, that merely to wind it up and return the British troops to their homes and the surviving Boers to their farms will cost $200,000,000. In comparison with this, the $20,000,000 we paid Spain for the good-will she did not have in the Philippines seems trifling.

AT THE HOTELS

"All the logs that were cut along the international boundary streams have been driven out of the streams," said P. A. Smith, of Koochiching, manager of the Rat Portage Lumber company, who is stopping at the St. Louis. "There was plenty of water and we not only got out last winter's cut but also 15,000,000 feet that were hung up from the winter before on the Little Fork. The amount of logs brought down from both sides of the boundary was about 75,000,000 feet. Of this aggregate, about 32,000,000 feet came from the American side—25,000,000 feet out of the Little Fork and 7,000,000 feet out of the Big Fork.

"Yes, the field for our product has broadened considerably with the settlement and development of the western part of Manitoba and of Assininiboia, but the supply has also decreased. The mills on the Pacific coast are given a lower freight rate, proportionately, into this territory than we are. Moreover, small spruce mills through the western provinces compete for this trade, so that we don't have a clear field by any means.

"We shall put in about the same amount of timber next winter that we did last, and the same will probably be true of the Keewatin people, so that the extent of logging operations on tributaries of international waters will not differ materially from last season. We are just putting on a night shift at our mill, and I am here to get some sawyers."

As It Really Was

By Angela Morgan.

(Copyright, 1902, by W. R. Hearst.)

Sylvette, "clever and beautiful chanteuse," was singing, and the patrons of the fashionable vaudeville theater, where for two weeks her name would continue to appear on the outside in electric lights, were agreeably conscious of the fact that she was in exceptionally fine voice and spirits tonight.

Sylvette had the choice place on the bill, which means that she appeared at an hour neither too early, when people were arriving, nor too late, when the audience would be weary and hard to hold.

All the lesser vaudeville lights had twinkled and disappeared from the horizon, those who were forced to submit to the indignity of "supper show hours" having retired from the scene long before the peerless Sylvette had arrived to dress for her act. And now this bright particular star could shine in all her glory, supreme in the consciousness of unrivaled splendor.

Sylvette's songs were of a various nature. She changed from a pathetic love ballad to a French ditty of the most sparkling, not to say naughty, character, and from this returned in a flash to face her delighted admirers with the latest and most approved "coon song," into which she threw herself with the utmost abandon.

Yes, Sylvette was astonishingly versatile. The array of grinning youths on the front row were unanimous in their expressions of approval, all agreeing that she "did a great act," which in their vernacular signified the very climax of appreciation.

The baldheads used their opera glasses in open admiration; not with more vigilance however, than did the women of the audience, although their interest was of not so friendly a nature.

"You can see the make-up so distinctly from here," whispered the younger of the two.

"Of course you can. Oh, she's heavily made up, that's plain enough. I wonder if she's as pretty off the stage?"

"No, she can't be. Who wouldn't be pretty under the same circumstances? And then, think of her gowns!"

"Just imagine, Marie," said the older one, "the froth and frivolity of such a life; vanity, vanity, nothing but vanity. Her nature must essentially be of an extremely inferior to permit of her singing those horrid songs with such apparent enjoyment. How dreadful to live always a life of superficiality and sham—never to have a noble incentive! Oh, it's painful, it's shameful."

Marie's eyes were upon the stage. She was but vaguely conscious of her aunt's words. "It is sad," she murmured absently. Sylvette was bowing for the last time, with a flashing of eyes and teeth and a swirl of rose-lined petticoat skirts.

"There—she's off. What comes next? Let's see your program, auntie."

"I can't forget that girl," pursued the older woman, still in her pitying mood. "Such an existence is saddening to think of. Life to her is nothing but a gay bubble, and when it bursts—what then?"

But Marie was disappointed at the appearance of Irish comedians at this juncture and replied rather peevishly as she yawned behind her fan, "I'm sure, auntie, I don't know."

The maid speedily divested her of the rose finery which but a few moments ago had shimmered in the glare of calcium footlights.

A swift application of cold cream removed the roses from her cheeks, the fascinating shadows from her eyes—and in an incredibly short time she was ready for the smart tailor made gown that Nancy was holding in readiness for her.

When dressed for the street Sylvette was still an attractive young woman, though her face was graver by far than any one would have thought possible who had seen her only on the stage.

An unopened letter, addressed in a woman's handwriting, lay on the table. As Sylvette caught it up with her gloves and pocketbook, the gravity of her face increased all at once to an expression almost of pain. She had carried the letter about with her all day, since its arrival at the hotel that morning, and had not yet found opportunity to read it—or was it that she shrank from opening it?

Dismissing Nancy as soon as she reached the hotel, she took the elevator to her room.

Even after her wraps were laid aside and she was settled in her comfortable rocker she still waited, handling the letter deliberately and musing over it, but making no attempt to open it.

For some time she meditated, her head thrown back against the cushion, her eyes half closed. Finally she straightened up with a sharp sigh and resolutely tore the letter from its sheath. This is what she read:

"Dear Daughter Sylvia: Why do you not write oftener? Messages from you are the bright spots in our monotonous existence. You are so generous, dear, to send us so many lovely things—but it is your letters we want! We know but little of your plans—your life. You make such vague mention of your musical work. You say you have engagements in and around New York, and we know you must be well paid, for you are constantly remembering us with some lovely gift. Be careful, dear, not to try yourself too far. Don't think we ever forget what we owe to you. I pray that my daughter is the same sweet Sylvia she always was and that she is happy. Won't your engagements ever bring you West? We could get you up a concert at the opera house, as we used to do in the old days before you went East. We simply must see you again, dear. You will write more fully, won't you, daughter Sylvia? Your loving

Sylvette folded the letter carefully, her eyes staring vacantly before her. Suddenly she arose abruptly and went to the writing desk in the corner, took out her dairy, sat down and wrote: "Mother has asked again why I don't tell them all about myself. I suppose I shall have to tell them some time, but not now! No, it's out of the question. They would never understand."

She underscored the last sentence and again arose, pacing the room restlessly. What a strange mood she was in tonight.

Returning again to the desk she caught up the dairy and began to turn its pages, reading them as she stood. A look of absorbed interest replaced the pained distress of her face.

At length she sank down in the rocker and read on and on, as if she were reading the story of another person.

"New York, April 10.—I am almost discouraged; I don't know where to turn. There seems to be nothing for me here. I have sung, recited and played at musicales and similar entertainments hoping that they would lead to something better. But I'm just as far from securing a pay engagement as ever. Mrs. Mills hints at my returning home. I dare say I have imposed upon her hospitality—but what can I do? I can't go home; I promised them I would succeed and send them relief and I will do it. Oh, the complications at home; I dare not think of them. Poor mother, how does she stand it? No, no, I won't give up. I will find something."

"April 25.—Letter from mother. Alice is ill—poor little thing. I know why—it's from wearing those old linen shoes. My heart aches and aches. I know mother is keeping a great deal from me. I know what desperate straits they are in. Oh, I must find something. I will make one more mighty effort. Dear God, help me and show me the way."

"May 3.—At last help has come. It is far below my ideal, but it means bread and butter and money for the folks. Once I would have scorned the offer, now I grasp at it as a dying man grasps at a straw. I am going into vaudeville. I have had a trial and the manager offers me one week, with promise of the entire circuit if I succeed. The idea is popular now—quite the fad, and pays better than anything else, they say. Mrs. Mills says I ought to be thankful enough to get such an opportunity; that it is not to be sneered at. Mrs. Mills is a New Yorker and she understands, but I can't let the folks at home know about it. In that little country town they would not look at it as Mrs. Mills does, I'm sure. No, it would never do; but I can send them money! Thank heaven for this relief."

"May 20.—What a rush I've been in! No time for a dairy. Well, I made a pretty fair success and they have promised me the circuit, but how the money flies! Photographs, costumes, everything! Couldn't send anything home for two weeks, but how proud and happy I was when I did send $50! Now, if I can just keep booked up I'll be all right. Luckily the vaudeville houses keep open all summer, so I need not be idle during the hot weather."

"June 15.—The work is awfully hard—three performances a day. I'm losing flesh somewhat, but then it means money for them. How overjoyed they were when relief came! But why will they ask so many questions? They want to know all about my work. Well, there's no use thinking of that. They could not understand. Just suppose they knew I had performed on Sunday! But God will surely forgive me—I had to do it. The work is honest and I shall always keep myself from the real theatrical lie. It need never hurt me."

"Aug. 6.—I can't imagine what is the trouble. The agents don't give me any more engagements. I haven't a single one in prospect and I have been idle now for two weeks. What can it mean?"

"Sept. 18.—I've trudged and trudged about this city in the heat until my feet ache with weariness. Every theater is booked up. I haven't sent money home for a month. Oh, what shall I do. I'm nearly desperate again. The sight of Fourteenth street, with its signs of theatrical agents, turns me positively sick. They have no use for my act."

"Oct. 3.—At last I understand. A well-meaning manager has opened my eyes to my deficiencies. He says my act is tame—needs more 'ginger,' with a coon song or two and a cake-walk thrown in. He says I must not wear long dresses. He advises me to get up some chic, dashing costume if I mean to make a real success in this business. He says my appearance and stage bearing are attractive enough (in fact he said a number of nice things about my looks), but that I need these other things to please the general public. He tells me I would command twice as much salary and play only two shows per day, but how can I ever sing those coon songs and how can I—oh, I can't—I simply can't—"

"Oct. 19.—Yes, yes, I can do it; I can do anything to save Alice. Mother writes that she has grown so delicate the doctor insists that she must have a change of climate during the coming winter. He urges them to send her—says it is absolutely necessary to her recovery. She has been ill ever since the first time mother wrote. Poor, patient little thing! Will I sing coon songs, French songs and wear abbreviated skirts? Yes, I'm nerved up to it at last. I know I can do it and make a success. Applause shall be mine! For applause means money and money means a change of climate for dear Alice."

"December 1.

"Well, it is all done. I am a full-fledged 'vaudevillan' of the most pronounced type. They have sent me away. At last the first step is over. I have sufficient ready money for my needs and the family are living in comfort—so no matter about the rest!"

Sylvette let the diary slip into her lap and read no more. After awhile she rose wearily to prepare for bed. As she did so she noticed a folded bit of paper on the floor, and picking it up discovered it to be a postcript to her mother's letter.

"How strange I did not notice it before," she murmured. A sudden apprehension seized her. There were only a few words.

"P. S.—I don't want to worry you, Sylvie, but Alice is not improving as we had hoped. Of course there may be no cause for alarm—perhaps we are expecting the change too quickly, but the doctor writes that she is still very frail. Try not to worry, dear.

MOTHER."

Sylvette slept wretchedly that night. Frightful dreams startled her out of her slumber every hour or so. Once she awoke crying, "Alice! Alice!" and sat up in bed, shivering with terror.

She had to force her spirits next day to appear as scintillant as was expected of the radiant Sylvette. A heavy hand seemed clutching at her throat, but she flung off the somber influence. She wrote home at once and sent a letter brim full of tenderness to Alice. She began to feel hopeful once more.

On the last night of her engagement, however, she grew restless and foreboding again. She was feverishly alert when night came. It was almost time for her turn and Nancy was adding a finishing touch to the jaunty costume when a telegram was brought in by one of the stage hands.

"For me?" questioned Sylvette. Again that hand clutching her throat. She opened the telegram slowly, in a dazed way, and stood reading the words over and over. "Alice died this morning. Come at once. Mother."

Sylvette stared dumbly.

"What is it, Miss Sylvette? Lord! look at her lips!"

"Are you sure this is right?" Sylvette asked the boy.

"Yes, ma'am," returned the startled youth in wonder.

She took the pencil and blank and wrote mechanically:

"I start tonight. Sylvie."

She faced the stage manager with the same dazed, staring eyes.

"Must I go on? My sister is dead!" Her voice sounded strange to her, like that of another person. The applause of the audience came back to her like the sound of a waterfall.

"Good God, woman! I can't let you off now, it's too late! They're waiting for you. The Thornley sisters disappointed us, too—one of 'em's sick. I am sorry, but—"

Sylvette was on the stage smiling, sparkling. Her hands were like ice. There was a roaring in her ears, but the habit of affected buoyancy asserted itself. She sang, she piroutted. Her eyes flashed with even more than their accustomed brilliancy. Her audience thought her amazingly spontaneous tonight. Gay, winning, rollicking, she captivated them as never before. It was all a nightmare to her. The rapturous applause, the sea of upturned faces. "Alice is dead; Alive is dead." The words kept beating on her brain till it seemed the tension would snap.

When she reached the shelter of her dressing room she did not cry out nor swoon. She heard as in a dream voices murmuring: "Poor Sylvette; too bad about little sister." "Can't we help you?" "How brave you are."

Sylvette was flinging her things on a chair while Nancy packed the trunk. "Hurry, Nancy," she cried. One thing she would avoid. In the next act a quartet sang "The Lost Chord." She must get away before then. She would not, could not, endure it.

She fell to and assisted Nancy with desperate dispatch. There! We're ready."

She was dimly conscious that the stage manager spoke to her kindly and that the others pressed her hand and offered their sympathy.

She found herself gazing at the plump envelope just brought round from the box office.

"It will help pay the"—she shuddered—"the expenses."

Suddenly a sweet piercing tone arose: "Seated one day at the organ—"

Her voice broke. She was gone.

"It will do her good to cry," said the others pityingly.

Out in the box Marie and her aunt were sitting.

"The gay Sylvette was gayer than ever, wasn't she?" remarked the girl.

"Yes, and just as superficial. What a life! I wonder she never tires of it!"

NEARY IS ELECTED

William E. McEwen of Duluth Re-Elected Secretary-Treasurer.

Next Convention Is to Be Held at Little Falls.

Rochester, Minn., June 12.—The Minnesota State Feredation of Labor has elected the following officers for the next year:

President, M. E. Neary, of Minneapolis.

Vice president, Henry Goetzinger, St. Paul.

Secretary-treasurer, William McEwen, of Duluth.

The federation council went to St. Paul with the following membership: P. Mack, E. J. Curry, John Hughes, C. E. James, Joseph McCarthy.

The Union of Minneapolis is rejoicing in the fact that it was chosen the official paper. The next convention is to be held at Little Falls.

Reports from delegates read at the morning session showed most unions to be in a flourishing condition both as to members and financially. The Coopers' union, St. Paul, has 70 members. The Black Drivers' union requests that union men employ none but union drivers.

The carpenters of Duluth increased 75 per cent in numbers last year. The scale of wages was raised. They have united with the West Superior carpenters, and now have a permanent emergency fund, but they are in peril from non-unionists in surrounding towns. Therefore they ask the convention to take vigorous measures to organize these towns. The organized cigarmakers of Winona number ninety. The bricklayers also have a small union there, and the carpenters of that town have succeeded in obtaining a wage increase of 25 cents a day.

There are thirty-two union cigarmakers at Rochester. The young Clerks' union here is flourishing; only 27 out of 175 members are active, but the prospects for the future are bright, especially after the election of officers, June 16.

St. Cloud granite cutters report a raise of 25 cents per hour in wages. The bricklayers are not organized there.

The union sawmill workers of Stillwater are numerous, the union having a membership of 2000, an increase of 400 in sixty days.

The Mankato steam engineers have obtained a small wage increase. The Minneapolis Federation is prosperous, 250 men having been added to the rolls within two months.

The city firemen of Minneapolis showed what could be done in that line. They have been granted a 5 per cent raise.

Delegate McConley, superintendent of the police alarm system in St. Paul, said that the craft he represented was the best paid in the United States. Other reports of a similar nature were made.

There were twenty resolutions. The first was to provide an amendment to the primary election law whereby the names of all candidates be placed on the same paper without any indication as to which political party they belong.

A resolution that excited much interest and discussion among delegates was rejected for its politics. Other resolutions were as follows:

To regulate the practice of horseshoeing.

To prohibit the use of second-hand flour sacks, unless cleaned.

To protect machinists.

To set aside engineers' protest as unreasonable.

In regard to questions asked applicants for railroad positions.

Shoemakers also made a similar protest and asked that the injunction laws be amended.

PECULIAR DECISION

In Case of Domestic Trouble at Chicago.

Chicago, June 12.—Judge Holden decided on Tuesday that a man has as much right to keep a mother-in-law in his house as he has to keep a dog, and that a wife who objects to the presence of the mother of a former wife has no just complaint in law.

In deciding against the petition for separate maintenance filed by Mrs. Ernestina Giese against her husband, Wilhelm Giese, the judge said, after comparing as household members the dog and the mother-in-law:

"If the dog does not bite, a man's wife cannot complain because he keeps it in the house, and it is the same with an ex-mother-in-law—that is, the mother of a former wife—if she doesn't harm anybody, the last wife has no grounds for complaint. I will dismiss the bill for want of equity."

Mrs. Giese, who is the fourth wife of the defendant in the suit, was a widow living at 194 Lawndale avenue before her marriage to Giese in October, 1900. Trouble arose between the pair over property matters and the presence in the household of Mrs. Caroline Helden, mother of two of Giese's former wives. Mrs. Giese, with her little daughter, left her husband and went back to her old home to live because, she said, Mrs. Helden "wanted to run things."

In an affectionate letter to her husband, written after she had left his house, Mrs. Giese said:

"In my opinion, every woman has a right to have her own home, and it is your duty to furnish me a home. If you cannot find a home for me and your daughter, you can come to my house, and we will live together there. I will be satisfied anywhere for us to live alone. I look to you for an early answer, and remain your true wife."

The case will be appealed by Mrs. Giese's attorneys.

New York, June 12.—"Herman, the mayor's bootblack"—nobody knows his last name—having lost $24,000 since the racing season opened, is back in the city hall park polishing shoes at 5 cents a shine. He started betting on the races July 5 last, and for a long time he won. On July 4 he had won $200 in a crap game. He had entered this game with $50 saved from shines.

"I'm about 30 years old," said Herman today, "just how old I don't know, and, to tell the truth, I could not swear to my last name, but I don't want my last name to be published, for the old woman don't know that I had all that money. She thought I was a stable boy at the track. That's what I was. I lived in the stables, and when this season opened I was worth $24,000 in cash. I wanted to run it up to $50,000 before I took any to the bank."

PLEASURE FOR SHRINERS.

San Francisco, June 11.—The visiting nobles of the Mystic Shrine devoted today chiefly to pleasure, though the imperial council held a secret session this morning. At 9 o'clock a large number of Shriners cross the bay to Berkeley, where they inspected the buildings and grounds of the University of California. Many more made the ascent of Mount Tamalais. The event of the afternoon was a reception to Al Malaikah temple, the attendance being very large.

CHIPPEWA FALLS STRIKE.

St. Paul, June 11.—A Chippewa Falls, Wis., special to the Dispatch says: The men employed in the mill and yards here will strike for shorter hours Monday morning. They work eleven hours now and claim they receive pay for but ten hours. The Millmen's union ordered the strike. Four hundred men are employed in the mill. The men will make a demand and if refused will not go to work.

The Best Cough Medicine.

I sell more of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy than of all similar preparations put together, and it gives the best satisfaction of any medicine I ever sold. I guarantee every bottle of it.—F. C. Jaquith, Inland, Mich. This remedy is for sale at Boyce's drug store.

SQUIRES MAY NEGOTIATE.

Washington, June 11.—It is probable that Mr. Squires, our minister to Cuba, will be called upon at once to open negotiations with the Cuban government for an extradition treaty.

WORK OF DRIVING

Brooks-Scanlon Has St. Louis River Crowded With Logs.

Brooks-Scanlon Road Extension Will Be Finished July 1.

River driving on the Mississippi is said to be about finished for the present, and operations will not begin again until the latter part of the month or the first of July, depending on the stage of the water in the river. The sorting works are quite busy and there is a plentiful supply of logs to draw on. Heavy rains have raised the river about a foot and the rise seems to be stationary.

The Brooks-Scanlon company, at Scanlon, is still driving on the St. Louis river, but the river is so crowded that the company depends largely on its railroad to get in the logs. Although built primarily for the use of the company, it is said that the Brooks-Scanlon company is entering into contracts for hauling logs for other concerns, and could use a double track to advantage. It is not likely, however, that an attempt will be made this year for the construction of a double track.

The road meets the Northern Pacific and Great Northern roads at Scanlon and runs about forty miles northeast along the Cloquet valley. It has connections now with the Duluth, Missabe & Northern at Adolph, and early next year will have connections with the northern end of the Duluth & Iron Range road. Twelve miles of extension work begun this spring is expected to be finished by July 1. From the present terminus of the road a branch line will be built to Alden Lake, tapping the Cloquet river at that point, and another branch is projected from the terminus for a distance of seven miles to Knife river. When all the branches are complete the Brooks-Scanlon company will be in a position to get all of its logs to the mill without river driving. The grading work is being pushed along as fast as possible, about 500 men being employed. The road is equipped with seven engines and 265 cars.

It is intimated now that the extensive improvements planned for the road indicate that its life will not terminate with the decline of the lumber cut in the district, but that it will be so substantially constructed as to be used by some one of the railroad companies after the lumber company has finished operations, and will do much in the way of developing the country passed through after the timber is cut off.

SCRAP AHEAD.

Glenmont and Scanlon-Gipson Company Quarrel Over Insurance.

Judge Smith of superior court, West Superior, has appointed Robert Shields, of West Superior, receiver for the Glenmont Lumber company, a Wisconsin corporation that manufactured lumber at Cass Lake, Minn., until its mill burned down about a year ago.

The principal liability of the lumber company is said to be $50,000 owed the Scanlon-Gipson Lumber company, of Minneapolis, which loaned the Glenmont company that sum and took a mortgage on the plant for security. The mill was insured for $32,000, and it was understood that in case of fire the insurance money was to go to the Scanlon-Gipson company, and the check of the insurance company made out to the Glenmont company was sent to the Scanlon-Gipson company. It is claimed that the Glenmont company refuses to indorse the check, but that the Scanlon-Gipson company will not lose, for the reason that the insurance money can be collected through the courts, and that the money, with the property at Cass Lake, will secure it.

The Glenmont company has brought a counter claim of breach of contract against the Scanlon-Gipson company, claiming that it sold the timber and logs. The Glenmont company has given no assurance that it would rebuild the mill that was burned, and the Scanlon-Gipson company claims that the timber was not sold until it was positive that the mill would not be rebuilt.

THEY GO OUT.

Thirty Boiler Makers at Great Northern Shops On Strike.

The anticipated strike in the Eastern Minnesota shops in West Superior occurred yesterday, when thirty boilermakers and their helpers went out.

The trouble has been brewing for some time and the delegate sent to St. Paul to confer with the Great Northern officials was unable to arrive at a satisfactory settlement with them. As was stated in The Herald some days ago, the men have been receiving 30 cents per hour for a 10-hour day and asked 37 cents per hour with a 9-hour day, the company refusing to grant either condition.

It is said that the walk-out is largely sympathetic and occasioned by the trouble between the railway company and its boilermakers at St. Paul, but the men who have struck deny this, and claim that the causes are local. The company has a large amount of work on hand at the present time, and the strike, if of long duration, is sure to hinder certain operations of the road, although there are many apprentices in the shops that do not belong to the union. The Eastern has been using every effort to get all the engines and cars possible to increase its ore shipment, and it is thought that the strike will have a tendency to upset the plans.

The fact that the trouble between the Great Northern company and its employes at St. Paul has been adjusted would, it is claimed, go to show that the strike is not a sympathetic one. The machinists say that skilled men for railroad shop work are scarce, and that the company will be seriously handicapped in trying to run the shop with apprentices.

DOING WELL ALSO.

Weather Last Week Fine Fo South Dakota Crops.

The South Dakota crop report for the week ending Monday last, like the reports for the states of Minnesota and North Dakota, tells of good weather for the growing crops. It says:

"The temperature during the week averaged slightly above the normal with generally seasonably warm afternoons and cool nights. It was a good growing week. Fair to generous well distributed rains occurred the middle of the week and were very beneficial.

"Wheat, oats, barley, rye and speltz continue in thrifty condition and are making very satisfactory growth, but there is a small percentage of the late sown wheat that is weedy. Rye and early barley are heading, and wheat, oats, and late barley are either stooling nicely or already well stooled.

"Corn planting is practically completed and generally the stand is good, but cut-worms are reducing the stand in some fields and in some instances necessitating replanting. The crop is doing well, but the nights were most too cool for best results in growth. Cultivation is becoming general.

"There is still some flax to be sown. The growing flax is generally in thrifty condition.

"Potatoes and garden stuff made fine growth. In some fields early potatoes are in blossom, but bugs are reported numerous.

"Grass is making rapid growth, pasturage is excellent, prairie grass is unusually advanced and luxuriant for the time in the season, and range live stock continues to improve in condition. The outlook for hay and winter pastrurages on the ranges is unusually bright.

"Millet sowing is still in progress and the growing millet is making fine growth."

FAMOUS CLOCKMAKER.

Seth E. Thomas and Family Visiting Here.

"Yes, I guess I'll have to stop here. I see you have one of my pieces of workmanship here."

The speaker was a middle-aged man, who stood before the desk at the St. Louis yesterday and looked up at the big regulator that hangs on the wall just above the annunciator. Clerk Michaud turned the register around, and watched for the names of the register with something more than ordinary interest.

"Seth E. Thomas and family, New York," was what was written, and then the hotel man realized that he was entertaining the head of one of the oldest clock-making houses in the world. The house was established in England over a century ago, and the American institution is a branch, though the guest at the St. Louis bears the name of his famous progenitor and the founder of his house.

Mr. Thomas is accompanied by his family of seven, and they came up the lakes for an early quiet trip. They took the boulevard drive yesterday afternoon.

VOTE TO PURCHASE.

Club Women Decide to Buy Fine Painting.

Representatives of the various women's clubs of Duluth met in the Carnegie library yesterday and voted to purchase one of the finest paintings now on exhibition in the library gallery—Mynlar's "Catechism." The picture will cost $100 and the money will be raised by subscription. With this in view a contribution box has been placed in the library building.

The club women have not decided whether to give this picture to the public library collection or include it in a prospective collection for club room decoration and study. For the present, however, it will hang in the library.

Appeals to Court.

A question of whether owners of property along a viaduct built by a railroad company have to pay for sidewalks built upon the viaduct is involved in an appeal from sidewalk assessments filed in district court yesterday by George B. Orr, Alice M. Scott, E. L. Orr and the Annie R. Wemyss heirs and estate, owners of lots on Lake avenue. They appeal from the assessments for the sidewalk on the grounds that it was not a necessary improvement, that the property was not benefitted, and that the walks were not built on Lake avenue, but on the Lake avenue viaduct, which was built by the railroad companies. It is claimed that the buildings of sidewalks is part of the maintenance of the viaduct. W. G. Joerns is the attorney.

WHY DON'T THEY GO?

A Way to Push Off the "Hang On's."

Perhaps some day you will wake up to the fact that coffee is quickly and surely doing the business for you. You wonder why the symptoms of disease which grow more and more pronounced do not disappear, but hang on in spite of all the medicines you can take.

Fixed organic disease may result if you keep up your present course, and yet it is an easy thing to give up coffee and get well. Have your cook make Postum Food Coffee strictly according to directions, and that is easy. Use enough of it and boil long enough to bring out the taste, then you will find that the famous food drink will satisfy your coffee taste and the old troubles gradually disappear.

There are hundreds of thousands of cases in America that prove the truth of this statement.

A gentleman from Columbus, Ga., says: "My wife had been an invalid for some time and did not seem to yield to any sort of medicines. She could not eat anything without distress, and naturally was badly run down in every way.

"Finally we concluded that perhaps it was the coffee that hurt her, so she quit it and went on to Postum, also began using Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food. She immediately began to improve and kept gaining strength and health, now she can eat heartily of anything she wants, vegetables and anything else, without hurting her. She has gained nearly thirty pounds since she made the change.

I saw such an improvement in her health that I decided to quit coffee myself and you would be surprised to see the change. I have gained in flesh about twenty-five pounds, and have entirely lost the old, dull headaches that I used to have so much.

"Our two children are very fond of Postum. You can use my name if you like." T. M. Coggin, 1220 Tenth avenue, Columbus, Ga.

LAUNCHING.

The new steel steamer Sonora, belonging to the Superior Steamship company, of which G. A. Tomlinson is president and manager, was successfully launched at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the Superior Shipbuilding yards. The boat was christened by Miss Catherine Hunter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hunter, of this city, who broke a ribbon-bedecked bottle of champagne over the bows as the Sonora slid down the ways into the water. The launching was witnessed by a large crowd of people. The Sonora is 325.52 feet long and 48-foot beam, with a net tonnage of 2850.85 tons.

EXPECTS TO COME.

Ray W. Jones to Be Here For the Banquet.

Hon. George J. Mallory received a letter today from Ray W. Jones, of Minneapolis, candidate for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor of Minnesota, stating that unless some unforseen circumstance prevents, he will surely be here for the Republican banquet at the Great Eastern hall in West Duluth, one week from this evening. Arrangements have been made to accomodate 300 people at this banquet and Mr. Mallory says that the tickets are going very fast. The West Duluth Republican club has planned to make the event one of the largest of the kind ever held in the city.

AMUSEMENTS.

MYRKLE & HARDER COMPANY.

Last evening the Myrkle & Harder company presented "A Man of Mystery" at the Lyceum. The play gave good satisfaction and the specialties between the acts, which are supplied in liberal numbers, were well received. Tonight the company will present "An Indiana Romance."

New Coal Dock.

Another coal dock has been added to the list of those receiving at the head of the lakes. The Jones & Adams' new dock at West Superior, which has been building the past winter and spring is completed. It is located on St. Louis bay, outside the Philadelphia and Reading coal dock. The structure is modern throughout and is equipped with three Brown hoisting rigs, engine house, coal sheds, etc. One of its features is a large revolving coal screening apparatus, said to be the only one of the kind at the head of the lakes.

Pupils' Piano Recital.

A piano recital will be given by pupils of Gerard Tonning, at the Endion M. E. church, Nineteenth avenue east and First street, tomorrow evening. The recital is under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid society of the church, and the young pianists will be assisted by Miss Alice Cooley, soprano; Miss Antoinette West, contralto, and Miss Else Thiel, violin.

THE DAKOTAS.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—News has just reached the city of a killing five miles from Thompson, in Walle township, which occurred at the Sampson farm in Walle township, Thorgia Kjorvestad being the victim. Kjorvestad, who is a farm laborer in the employ of Hans Johnson, Espeli, is said to have been drinking heavily with several companions all day, and in the evening went to the Sampson farm, which is run by Ole Thoen, who has the reputation of being a peaceable fellow. Kjorvestad tried to enter the house, it is said, and Thoen had locked the door. He broke a rear window and crawled in. Thoen and his housekeeper, who were also in the house, retreated up stairs and closed the trap door. Kjorvested followed, forcing the trap door open in spite of Thoen and the woman, who endeavored to hold it down. Thoen then seized a rolling pin and struck Kjorvestad over the head, knocking him down stairs, and later threw him out through the window. Kjorvestad later managed to get on his feet, and drank some more, but soon lay down, and it was supposed he was overcome by the alcohol he had been drinking. On investigation, however, it was found that something was the matter, and a physician was sent for, but arrived after Kjorvestad was dead. Corpner Rounsvalle is holding an inquest over the remains, and State's Attorney Wineman of this place is present at the examination. Public sympathy is with Troen.

Fargo—The Democratic state central committee met here Tuesday afternoon and decided to hold the next state convention at Fargo, July 31. As Chairman Kleinogel had resigned and removed from the state, B. S. Brynjolfson, of Grand Forks, was chosen chairman of the committee. State headquarters will be at Grand Forks.

Larimore—A typical hail cloud passed just east of Larimore and south of Thompson. Heavy hail fell along a path about half a mile wide, with scattering hail for a greater distance and a deluge of rain. Some of the stones were very large. Joseph Doyle, a farmer living a mile from Thompson, was caught in the field while harrowing. He was struck by a hailstone and had a gash cut through his scalp clear to the bone.

Jamestown—Chased by an angry crowd, Charles Heatley, a waiter in the Capital restaurant, had a narrow escape from serious injury. Heatley had aroused the anger of a number of young fellows by attempted familiarity with young ladies. The young men determined to tar and feather Heatley, and started after him. He secured a wheel and succeeded in getting away. Several shots were fired, but Heatley refused to halt.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Rapid City—The cattlemen of this section, who have been fencing government land for the grazing of cattle will have to comply with the recent order of the government to remove all fences.

Deadwood—The first work on the grading for the new stamp mill and cyanide annex of the Hidden Fortune company, was commenced Saturday in the lower part of this city. This week, the contracting company will arrive here from Denver to begin the building. It is to be completed in sixty days. Ground was also broken for the new 1200-ton cyanide plant that is to be built by the Horseshoe Mining company at Pluma.

Aberdeen—The Gilbourn and Stratton Manufacturing company, of this city, has just completed the drilling and piping of the deepest artesian well in the Northwest. The well has a special scientific value because it is sunk beyond what has been considered the western limit of the artesian basin. It is located in Western Faulk county and is 1800 feet in depth. The wells in Aberdeen are only a little over 300 feet.

Armour—The school board has elected all the teachers but one for the ensuing year. J. W. Addie, from Whitewood, this state, is the principal; Miss Elena Johnston, Pierre, assistant principal; Mrs. C. T. Kyte, Miss Pearl Ensley and Miss DeElla Lang, of this city, and Miss Ida Durrell, of Piolet Mound, Iowa, are the remainder. The board requires that all must hold first grade certificates to teach in the schools.

Sioux Falls—The state authorities and W. H. Tompkins, ex-superintendent of the state reform school at Plankinton, have got into a deadlock over the question as to which should take the lead in having the courts investigate the charges which were preferred against the ex-superintendent by the state board of charities and corrections and the woman's board of investigation. As the charges effect the reputation for morality of the ex-superintendent, Mr. Tompkins, in his letter of denial, demands that an action be commenced against him by the state officials in order that he could be adjudged guilty of the charges and punished or be cleared. Members of the board state that they have investigated the matter and find that there is no law on the statute books for the punishment of such allege crimes, and assert that if he wishes to be cleared of the charges, his proper course is to commence suit against the members of the two boards for criminal libel or slander.

Huron—The Masonic grand lodge of South Dakota has adjourned and will meet in Deadwood next year. The following officers were elected: Grand master, Frank A. Brown, of Aberleen; grand treasurer, John C. Bryan, Plankinton; grand secretary, George A. Pettigrew, Flandreau.

Members U. C. T.

Will please remember that certificates for rate to Minnetonka will be honored by Northern Pacific railway, good on all trains making connection without transfer at Minneapolis. For full information, call at City office, 332 West Superior street.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

NEELY FREE.

Released From Cuban Jail By Palma's Amnesty Act.

Havana, June 12.—C. F. W. Neely, who March 24 was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $65,701 for complicity in the Cuban postal frauds, was released yesterday under the bill signed by President Palma June 9, granting amnesty to all Americans convicted of crimes in Cuba during the term of the American occupation, and those awaiting trial.

The trials before the Audiencia court of Havana of the cases arising from the embezzlement of Cuban postal funds resulted March 24 in the sentencing of C. F. W. Neely as set forth in the above dispatch; of W. H. Reeves to ten years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $35,516, and of Estes G. Rathbone to ten years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $35,524.

Reeves was pardoned and liberated April 22 by former Governor General of Cuba Leonard Wood, because he was a witness for the state in the trials at Havana.

Rathbone was released in $100,000 bail April 21, and later President Roosevelt ordered that his case be reviewed.

Referring recently to the amnesty bill under which Neely was released, Rathbone said he would be greatly disappointed at its operation, because he wanted a new trial before what he called an uninfluenced court.

IN PERIL.

Aeronaut Dashed Against a Building In Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, June 12.—Thousand's of spectators at the Elks' fair and as many more pedestrians in the downtown streets were startled yesterday afternoon by the spectacle of an aeronaut being hurled against the roof of the new 6-story Westminster building at Seventh and Nicollet avenue. Frank Newmann had made a balloon ascension from the Elk fair grounds in the heart of the city, but the parachute did not respond to his guidance and carried him half a mile from the fair tract. The ropes became entangled as he neared the roof of the Westminster building, and the watching crowds feared he would be dashed to death. Attaches of the structure rushed to the upper windows and dragged him inside as he was being buffeted against the masonry. Newmann suffered serious injuries to his legs, but is expected to recover.

Portland, Ore., June 12.—The jurisdiction of Arkansas and the jurisdiction of Manitoba and the Northwest Territory, A. O. U. W., have filed notices with the supreme recorder stating that they have won the $2,000 offered for each jurisdiction that makes a gain of 25 per cent in membership during the year. These two jurisdictions are the only ones having made the gain of 25 per cent in membership.

An association of grand masters and field workers has been organized with William M. Jarvis, of Iowa, president, and Fred C. Wetmore, of Michigan, secretary. The purposes of the organization is to formulate plans for the more effective work in advancing the interest of the A. O. U. W., so far as concerns the duties of the officers mentioned.

The election of officers and selection of place of holding the next annual session will not probably occur this week.

BIG EVENT AT ST. CLOUD.

St. Cloud, Minn., June 12.—There will be three great days in St. Cloud on June 24, 25 and 26—the occasion of the meeting of the seventeenth annual encampment of the Northwestern district G. A. R.

The following ten counties are included in the district: Benton, Douglas, Kandiyohi, Meeker, Stearns, Stevens and Wright. Comrades and visitors from all counties are invited, however, to join in the festivities.

There are to be campfires afternoons and evenings for three days; singing by white and colored quartets; dancing in pavilion afternoons and evenings; balloon ascensions each of the three days; street performing vaudeville quartet on three days; baseball by first-class teams daily, and many other amusements.

One of the great events will be the big street parade on the second day—the 25th, which will be reviewed by the governor and staff, and Department Commander Starkweather and staff. All the local societies will join in the parade. It is expected that 2000 will be in line. A feature will be a float carrying young ladies representing the forty-five states and Columbia.

The Granite City band and the Morgan Post Drum corps (ten pieces), of Minneapolis, will be present the three days.

The list of speakers includes Governor Van Sant, Department Commander Starkweather, Past Commander John Day Smith and H. G. Hicks, Col. I. H. Mahan, Senator Buckman, Col. A. F. Foster, Dr. J. A. Dubois, H. G. Broker, Col. Jenkens and many others.

TOO MANY COLONELS.

Auctioneers Fix Limit on Right to Title.

Waterloo, Iowa, June 12.—What entitles an auctioneer to the prefix colonel before his name was the principal question of discussion in the convention of the State Auctioneers' association here yesterday. There has been much looseness in the application of the title of late and the association decided to place a limit on colonels. The motion that an auctioneer must cry 1,000 sales before he is entitled to be called colonel was at once adopted. This, it was argued, would restrict the title to the better class of auctioneers.

The Pleasant Part...

We want you to feel that everything in our store is of such a character that there will be no cause for dissatisfaction with it after the money is paid for it. That is the fact. It is the pleasant part of our business that so many of our customers come in say: "Well I always feel satisfied in buying anything here."

It has been our constant aim for years to establish such a reputation—and you can appreciate our gratification at the accomplishing of our long cherished aim.

PRESIDENT TO CADETS

Roosevelt Speaks at West Point Anniversary Exercises.

Followed By Gen. Horace Porter, Ambassador to France.

West Point, N. Y., June 12.—Immediately after lunch yesterday the hundreds of visitors in attendance on the anniversary exercises of the academy, sought Memorial hall, a new stone structure, where exercises were held. President Roosevelt, escorted by the cadets, and leading a notable party of officers, came across the parade ground and soon after his entrance the speaking began.

THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

Col. Mills made an address of welcome and then introduced the president, who said:

"Col. Mills, the graduates of West Point and you men and women who are drawn to them by ties of citizenship, or by the simple fact that you are Americans and therefore, of necessity, drawn to them. I am glad to have the chance of saying a word to you today. There is little need for me to say how well your performance has compared with prophetic promise made on your behalf by the greatest of Americans, Washington. This institution has completed its first hundred years of life. During that century no other educational institution in the land has contributed as many names as West Point has contributed to the honor roll of the nation's citizens.

"Col. Mills, I claim to be a historian and I speak simply as a reciter of facts, when I say what I have said; and more than that, not merely has West Point contributed a greater number of the men who stand highest on the nation's honor roll, but I think beyond question that, taken as a whole, the average graduate of West Point during this hundred years has given a greater amount of service to the country through his life than has the average graduate of any other institution in this broad land.

"Now, gentlemen, that is not surprising. That is what we have a right to expect from this military university founded by the nation. That is what we had a right to expect. But I am glad that the expected has been made good and of all the institutions in this country none is more absolutely American, none more, in the proper sense of the word, absolutely democratic than this. Here we care nothing for the boy's birthplace, for the boy's grade, for his social standing; here we care nothing save for his worth if he is able to show it. Here you represent with almost mathematical exactness the country geographically. You are drawn from every walk of life by a method of chance, meant to insure and which in a great majority of cases does insure, nothing but active youth. He you come together as representatives of America in the higher and more peculiar sense than can possibly be true of any other institution in the land, save your sister college, that banked on similar preparations for the service of the country on the seas.

"This morning, I have shaken hands with many of you, and I have met the men who now stand as representatives of every great struggle, every great move this great nation has made for the last fifty-five or sixty years. There are still some left among the older of you who took part in the Mexican war, a struggle which added to this country a territory vaster than has changed hands in Europe as the result of all the wars of the last two centuries. I meet always, when I see any of the older men, men who took part in the great civil war when this nation was tried as in a furnace, the men who were called upon to do the thing which had to be done under penalty of making the memory of Washington himself worthless, because if you failed then failure would have been written across the record of his works. Finally, I see the younger men as well as the older ones, the men whom I have seen myself take part in a little war, a war that was the merest skirmish compared to the struggle in which you fought from '61 to '65, and yet a war that was almost as far-reaching, not only for the destiny of this nation, but upon the destiny of the world, the war with Spain; and it was my good fortune to see in the campaign in Cuba how the graduates of West Point handled themselves and to endeavor to profit by their example, and it has become my pleasure to come here today because I was at that time intimately associated with many of your graduates.

"On the day before the San Juan fight, when we were marched up into a position, we lost communication with our baggage and food, and for supper that night I had what Col. Mills gave me, and it tasted very good, and the next morning Col. Mills was with another West Pointer, Shipp, from North Carroline. The next morning we had breakfast together and I remember well congratulating myself that my regiment—one of all volunteer regiments—could have as an example men like Mills and Shipp, whose very presence made the men cool and made them feel collected and at ease. Mills and Shipp went down with our regiment to the action. Very shortly after it was begun, Shipp was killed and Mills received a wound from which on one of us at the time thought that he would recover. I had at that time in my regiment as acting second lieutenant a graduate of West Point, who was having his holiday and took his holiday by going down with us, and just before the assault he was shot, the bullet going, I think, in his stomach, and as he fell he said, 'Good-bye, colonel; I am going to get well.'

"But I did not think he was. He is here all right, here, and his name is Haskell. And there was never a moment by day or night that I was not an eyewitness of some performance of duty being done by a West Pointer, and I never saw a West Pointer failing in his duty. I want to be frank, gentlemen. You cannot get a body of men of absolutely uniform good conduct, but I am able to say it was my good fortune to see the role of duty performed in a way that made a man proud to be an American and a fellow-citizen of such people.

"Your business here at West Point has been to teach men to do well in war, but it is a noteworthy fact that you have also taught them to do well in peace. The highest political positions in the land have been held, not exceptionally, but again and again by West Pointers.

Col. Mills, I make the answer that any man who is asked the question must make when I say that, while we would have the right to expect that West Point would do well, we could not have expected that she would have done so very well as she has done.

"And now, in closing, I want to say one word to those who are graduates and tne under graduates as well. I was greatly struck the other day by an article of one of your instructors here, himself a graduate of West Point, in which he dwelt upon the changed conditions of warfare and of the absolute need that a man who was to be a good officer should meet these changed conditions. I think it is going to be a great deal harder to be a first-class officer in the future than it has been in the past. I think that in addition to the courage and steadfastness that have always been the prime requisites in a soldier you have got to show a far greater power of individuality than has been necessary before if you are going to get up the highest level of officer-like performance of duty. As has been well said the developments of warfare during the last few years have shown that in the future the unit will be the individual man. If he does not know how to shoot, how to shift for himself, how both to obey orders and to accept responsibility when an emergency comes, when he won't have any orders to obey if he is not able to do all of that, you had better have him out of the army. In a battle hereafter each man is going to be to a considerable extent alone. It will be so that the youngest officers will have to take much of the responsibility that in former wars fell on their seniors, and many of the enlisted men will have to do most of their work without any supervision of any officer. The man will have to act largely alone and if he shows a tendency to huddle up to some one else his usefulness is pretty near at an end. If he is nervous so that he wants to feel the touch of elbows, he had better be out of the battle, and you officers, if you are going to do well, have got to learn how to perform the duty which is so essential. The task is a harder one, and through you, the officers; and that you have got to devote your time in bringing up to the standard the fighting efficiency of the men under you; not merely in doing your duty so that you can't be held to account for failure to perform it, but doing it in a way that will make each man under you able to perform his.

"Now, I want you to weigh what I say for if you take only half of it you will invert what I say. I found in my regiment that the best man was the man who had been in the regular army in actual service out in Western campaigning on the plains; that if he had been a good man in the regular army out on the plains he was the best man that I could get hold of; and, on the other hand, if he had served in time of peace a couple of years in an Eastern garrison, where he practically had next to nothing outside of the parade grounds and barracks to do, or if he had been in any ordinary National Guard regiment, that one of two things was true—if he had understood that he had only learned 5 per cent of what he was that 5 per cent better than anyone else and that was a big advantage and if he had thought that he had learned the other 95 per cent, he was worse than anyone else. I recollect perfectly one man who had been a corporal in the regular army, a young fellow who had joined us and he was apparently convinced that war in ninety days was a parade ground for maneuvering and it was almost impossible to make him turn his attention to teaching his men so that they could do the best fighting when the occasion arose.

"Now, gentlemen, I do not intend to preach upon the performance of your duty here, but it is your special business to learn them. I do not ask you to remember the difference in the military profession from what it has been in the past, and to remember continually that soldiership does not consist of excellence on parade grounds, but efficiency in actual service in the field, and that the usefulness and really great usefulness of the parade grounds and barracks work comes in its being used, not as an end, but as one of the elements of the end. I ask you to remember that I don't ask you to remember what you can't forget, the lesson of loyalty, of courage, of steadfast adherence to the highest standard of honor which all men draw in when they breathe the atmosphere of this great institution."

GEN. PORTER'S ADDRESS.

The orator of the day was Gen. Horace Porter, ambassador to France, who said:

As we stand here today a hundred years of history pass in review before us and we would fain light the torch of memory and count the brilliant beads of recollection. When our ancestors threw down the gauntlet to the mother country and resolved to conquer the right to form a government of their own, able leaders were found who had gained a valuable experience in battles with savage tribes and especially in the French and Indian wars, but there was a total lack of officers who had received military education and drill masters for our troops were eagerly sought among the trained soldiers of Europe. This want led our statesmen at an early day to consider the question of establishing a training school for officers of future armies. Washington favored West Point which had been so closely identified with his military career, as the most appropriate site for such an institution. During his second administration, in 1794, a military school was located here but in 1796 the building was destroyed by fire and for several years the instruction was suspended. In Washington's farewell address, that immortal document, well described as unequalled by any composition of uninspired wisdom, he formulated a memorable maxim in the words: "To be prepared for war is one of the most effectual means of preserving peace." Two days before his death in 1799, he wrote to Hamilton a letter, probably the last one his illustrious hand ever penned, saying, "The establishment of a military academy upon a respectable and extensive basis has ever been considered by me as an object of primary importance in this country and while I was in the chair of government I omitted no proper opportunity of recommending it to the attention of the legislature." Thus this infant of the state received at its baptism Washington's dying benediction.

The present permanent academy was founded in 1802. Of the total of 4067 graduates 228 have fallen killed or mortally wounded on the field of battle. In the trials of the self-sacrificing profession in which they cast their lot, they had to learn that "all hours wound—the last one kills." The record of West Point's heroic dead is inexpressibly sad; it is incomparably glorious. The story of their deeds rises to the sublimity of an epic. They honored the age in which they lived and future generations will read with pride the inscription on their tombs. The world can better appreciate their services since they have fallen and the historian has had time to record their achievements. A tree is best measured when it is down. When La Tour d'Auvergne, who by his matchless deeds of valor gained the proud title of the first grenadier of France, finally fell with his face to the foe, pierced by the enemy's bullets, Napoleon issued an order prescribing that this soldier's name should be carried on the active list, and to this day the sergeant of the company to which he belonged calls "La Tour d'Auvergne" and the color-bearer answers "Mort au Champ d'Honheus." If the roll of West Point's graduates were called today answer could be made not for one but for hundreds "dead on the field of honor."

I know that I voice the sentiments of every graduate, every officer of the army, and every patriotic citizen when I express the profound acknowledgments, and the deep sense of obligation due to all who have been instrumental in procuring appropriations from a generous congress for enlarging and improving the academy, with a view of keeping pace with our growing population and in order that the efficiency of the institution may increase and multiply and its usefulness be greater even in the coming ages than in the century which is closing. In these names I include those eminent statesmen whose intellect foresight has been so important in guiding national legislation, the able superintendent of the academy whose devotion to the work has been so effectively displayed and all those associated with him, and the officers of the army holding high positions in Washington, who, in cases where they are not enrolled as graduates have been as faithful and devoted to the interests of the institution as if they had been reared within its walls.

The secretary of war was the last speaker.

The event of the evening was the banquet given by the officers of West Point to their distinguished guests. It was held in Grant hall and covers were laid for 500.

TOO MUCH FOR JENKINS.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 11.—Tom Jenkins undertook too great a task last night when he tried to throw Dan McLeod, of Hamilton, Ont., twice within ninety minutes of actual wrestling time. The men met in the Central armory and about 3000 spectators saw the contest. Jenkins was able to secure but one fall and that took up fifty-three minutes of his allotted time. The fall was secured with a Nelson and a crotch hold. After a rest of fifteen minutes the men again went on the mat and McLeod stood the big Clevelander off until the time had expired, thus winning the contest.

AGAIN POSTPONED.

Chicago, June 11.—The hearing of the habeas corpus proceedings before Judge Dunne, to secure the release of Former Banker C. W. Spalding, now imprisoned at Joliet penitentiary, was postponed today until next Monday.

BEEF TRUST ESCAPED.

New Orleans, June 11.—The United States grand jury which has been investigating the alleged beef trust was today dismissed without delay, no indictment having been returned.

BLOOD POISON

The longest established, most successful and reliable specialist in diseases of men, as medical diplomas, licenses and newspaper records will show.

THESE ARE YOUR SYMPTOMS:

On account of its frightful hideousness, Syphilitic Blood Poison is commonly called the king of venereal diseases. It may be hereditary or contracted. Once the system is tainted with it, the disease may manifest itself in the form of scrofula, eczema, rheumatic pains, stiff or swollen joints, eruptions or copper-colored spots on face or body, little ulcers in the mouth or on the tongue, sore throat, swollen tonsils, falling out of the hair or eyebrows, and finally a leprous like decay of the flesh and bones.

OUR ELECTRO-MEDICAL TREATMENT

improves the patient from the beginning. Our special treatment for Blood Poison is practically the result of my life work, and is endorsed by the best physicians of America and Europe. It contains no dangerous drugs or injurious medicines of any kind. It goes to the very bottom of the disease and forces out every particle of impurity. Soon every sign and symptom disappears completely and forever. The blood, the tissue, the flesh, the bones, and the whole system are cleansed, purified and restored to perfect health, and the patient prepared anew for the duties and pleasures of life.

We do not treat all diseases, but we cure all we treat; we treat men only and cure them to stay cured. We cure to stay cured Varicocele, Stricture, Lost Manhood, Atrophied or Shrunken Organs, Syphilitic Blood Poison, Nervo Sexual Debility, Rupture, Kidney, Urinary Diseases, and all associate diseases and weaknesses of men. We charge nothing for private counsel and give to each patient a LEGAL CONTRACT to hold for our promises. Is it not worth your while to investigate a cure that has made life anew to multitudes of men, and to which countless tongues gladly testify? If you cannot call at our office, write your symptoms fully.

CREDIT MEN.

Second Day's Session of the National Association.

Louisville, June 11.—At the second day's session of the annual convention of the National Association of Credit Men an address on "Commercial Integrity" was delivered by W. B. Roberts, of Portland, Ore. The report of the committee on improvement of mercantile agencies was presented.

The committee on improvement of the mercantile agency service recommended the consideration of the proposition of a credit clearing house, and, if not found practicable that a committee of five be appointed to inaugurate a general interchange system of trade information between the local associations.

This report caused considerable discussion and was opposed by representatives of R. G. Dun and Bradstreet's mercantile agencies on the ground that certain of the proposed measures were impracticable.

An amendment was accepted to the effect that the mercantile agencies in writing or interviewing merchants ascertain in what markets they buy and the report in the office most available for such markets. The report was then adopted.

The report of the executive committee was adopted.

A committee was appointed to make an active fight for the passage of the Ray amendment to the bankruptcy law by congress. The report of the nominating committee was then presented.

SKIRKING

Chicago, June 11.—Every department of the city hall that has to do with hospitals and fires is trying to clear itself of the responsibility for the tragedy at the fire of the sanitarium of the St. Luke's society here Monday. Today an effort was made to keep O. E. Miller, head of the institution, in custody, but the appearance of the Rev. S. B. Shaw, gave him liberty on $5000 bail. Early in the day Miller was brought before Justice Prindiville and was held for manslaughter, while his nine assistants were held for disorderly conduct. Miller appealed to Judge Chetlain for a writ of habeas corpus, pleading excessive bail and unwarranted detention, but the judge remanded him to the custody of the police, saying that the police had evidence enough to hold him. It was then that the Rev. Shaw, a Methodist minister unknown to Miller, offered to go his bail, even to the extent of $25,000, because of the charitable work he said Miller had done.

GERMAN CRUISERS

Sent to Venezuela at Request of Consul.

Berlin, June 11.—The German cruisers Gazelle and Falke have been sent to La Guayra, Vez., at the special request of the German charge d'affairs at Caracas, Herr Von Pilgrim-Baltazzi, in consequence of a revolution having broken out in the suburbs of La Guayra, leading to the bombardment of the town by the forts and Venezuelan warships.

MACHINISTS AT WORK.

St. Paul, June 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—The machinists of the Great Northern shops were at work today, contrary to the report that they were expected to go out last night at 5 o'clock, if not then at 10 o'clock this morning. It is hinted that the company has agreed to requests of machinists for a higher rate of wages. The boilermakers and helpers are still out.

WONDERFUL ESCAPE.

One of the most remarkable instances of the escape of a white man from the Indians was that of John Colter, a famous hunter and trapper, says the Youth's Companion. On the day in question he and his companion were surrounded by 600 savage warriors. The companion was instantly killed and Colter was captured. His fate had no intention of saving his life, however; they wanted the sport of putting him to the torture, or at least of playing with him as a cat plays with a mouse. The chief asked if he could run. He said, "Not much." He was released and told to save his life if he could.

Colter darted away at high speed, and most of the 600 savages set off after him. There was a plain before him six miles wide, bounded on the far side by a river fringed with trees. Colter had always been famous as a runner, and his practice now stood him in good stead. He made straight across the plain for the stream, and the yells of his pursuers lent him wings. His foes had removed every shred of clothing from his body, and the plain was covered with prickly spears, so that his unprotected feet were lacerated at every stride.

Half way across the plain he glanced back and saw that only a few Indians were following him. Again he ran on, and soon realized that one of his pursuers was nearing him. He redoubled his efforts, and blood gushed from his nostrils and flowed down over his breast. The fringe of trees was near, but a hasty backward look showed him the pursuing brave close upon him with spear raised. Moved by a sudden impulse Colter stopped, turned and faced the savage with outstretched arms. The Indian was so taken aback at this unexpected movement that he stumbled and fell. This was Colbert's opportunity. He ran back, seized the spear, and pinning his antagonist to the ground, ran on.

Other savages came on, fiercer than before at the death of their comrade; but Colter reached the trees plunged into their midst and then into the river and swam to a pile of driftwood that had lodged. He dived beneath it and stuck his head up between two logs covered with smaller timbers and brush. The Indians came up and searched for several hours, but failed to find him. Again and again they walked over the driftwood. Luckily they did not fire it, as he feared they would. At last they went away. Then Colter swam out and fled through the forest.

Seven days he went on, living on roots and berries, with no clothing, until at last he reached a trading post on the Big Horn river. He never fully recovered from the effects of this terrible experience.

AT CLOQUET.

Cloquet, Minn., June 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—The new public library is to be dedicated with appropriate ceremonies on the afternoon of the Fourth of July. The contractors promise to have the building ready and the library board is busy making arrangements.

Two new banks are to be started here in the near future, one on Arch street by Leland & Marth, and one in the new Elm block, by Hansen Smith.

C. A. Van Order has removed into Western division.

Cloquet is to have a great Fourth of July celebration. Plans are being considered, and money collected to make it an event in the history of the village.

James G. Powell and Anna Nordbye were united in marriage by Justice Skemp on Tuesday evening, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. P. Soberg.

John McSweeney, our wide-awake marshal, met with a slight accident yesterday, while jumping from a train at the Johnson-Wentworth mill.

A man named William Collins, apparently about 50 years of age, was found dead under a lumber pile in the water power yard Tuesday evening. Collins came down from the woods about three weeks ago, and was suffering from heart trouble. He had been drinking heavily lately, and his death was undoubtedly due to heart failure, superinduced by alcoholism.

BRITISH COMBINE

Of Shipping Interests Still Discussed In London.

London, June 11.—The newspapers here continue to discuss the British shipping combine as though the project had assumed much more tangible shape than is yet admitted by those who are in a position to know the facts.

The Westminster Gazette today intimates that the Cunard line will not join in forming the proposed Canadian-British line and says the colonial secretary, Mr. Chamberlain, favors subsidizing the latter project rather than the Cunard plan, which is more especially directed against the Morgan shipping combine. According to the Westminster Gazette, the capital of the Canadian-British line will be £10,000,000, of which £8,500,000 will be expended for six 20-knot vessels and a dozen freighters. The promoters, it is added, anticipate a total subsidy of £500,000, besides an imperial guarantee of interest on the capital amounting to £400,000 yearly.

SHIPBUILDING TRUST

Will File Its Articles of Incorporation Thursday.

New York, June 11.—Articles of incorporation of the United States Shipbuilding company, just formed with a capital of $20,000,000, not including $16,000,000 in bonds, probably will be filed in Trenton, N. J., tomorrow. The president of the corporation probably will be W. L. Scott, of San Francisco, and Lewis Nixon, of New York, vice president.

The directors will include: Charles J. Canada, Lewis Nixon, John S. Hyde, C. R. Hanscomb, Irving M. Scott, H. W. Gause.

TITUS SAILS FOR ENGLAND.

New York, June 11.—Constance Sutton Titus, the oarsman, accompanied by his wife, will sail for England today on the steamer Manitou. He hopes to capture the diamond sculls at Henley, the blue ribbon of the Acquatic world, the emblem of the amateur sculling championship. Mr. Titus will carry three pairs of sculls and his new boat, which is one-third shorter than the sculls usually seen in races, as well as a great deal lighter.

JERMAN-SMITH.

St. Paul, June 11.—An Eau Claire, Wis., special to the Dispatch says: Ralph Wakefield Jerman, of Milwaukee, and Mary Elizabeth Smith, of Eau Claire, were married this morning at the First Presbyterian church. The bride is a daughter of John S. Smith, of Eau Claire, and grand niece of Gen. MacArthur.

THE DANGEROUS DAYS.

"I don't think I am superstitious," said a Chicago man at the Tremont, to the Galveston News, "but 'coincidences' sometimes make me feel clammy. A certain soothsayer said to the Imperial Caesar, 'Beware the ides of March!' But if the theory is correct, the modern adviser can say: 'Beware the 20th to the 26th of every month!' My assertion is verified by statistics taken from the records of railroad companies, iron works, grain elevators, boiler works, hospitals and many establishments employing large forces of men, as well as the books of the coroner's office. Reference to the records of the Cook county (Illinois) hospital for each month for the past five years shows an average of 95 cases of injuries by accident a month. Out of this total 45 occurred during the 'fatal' period. The coroner's office shows a more startling confirmation of the doctor's theory. About 55 per cent, or nearly two-thirds, of the deaths by accidents and other causes requiring official investigation occur between the 20th and 26th of each month. Of the days of the week occurring in this 'fatal' period Saturdays and Mondays appear to come particularly under the malign influence. This may be partially explained from the fact that a great many of the laboring class are paid on Saturday, and many accidents result from intemperance. As an old newspaper man said: 'Saturday means pay day, pay day means booze, booze means trouble and trouble means news.' Prof. A. R. McQueen, of Kansas City, but for many years a resident of India, and a close student of the Brahmin religion, theosophy and occult sciences, says that the priests in the Brahmin temples have had the theory for years that at this particular period of the month the serpent made his appearance in the Garden of Eden and tempted Eve, with the result that man fell from the favor of God, and ever since this particular time has been regarded as especially unlucky."

A SIMPLE CEREMONY

Cleveland, Ohio, June 12.—Much interest is taken in the approaching marriage on June 16 of Miss Mabel Hanna, the eldest daughter of Senator and Mrs. M. A. Hanna, and Harry Parsons. The wedding will take place at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon and will be witnessed by a circle of the nearest friends of the Hanna family and by the relatives, of whom there are many in the city. Mrs. D. P. Rhodes, the bride's grandmother; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rhodes, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Hough, Maj. and Mrs. J. Dwight Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Hanna, Mr. and Mrs. S. Prentiss Baldwin, Howard Hanna, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Morse, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Ireland, Mr. and Mrs. Coburn Haskell, Mr. and Mrs. Dan R. Hanna, Miss Price and Miss Phelps will be among those present.

The ceremony will be very simple and will be performed by Bishop Leonard. The bridesmaids will be Miss Ruth Hanna, the youngest daughter of Senator and Mrs. Hanna, and Miss Lucia McCurdy, her cousin. Mr. Tillman, of New York, will be the best man. After the ceremony there will be a dinner for the newly wedded couple and the guests.

The decorations will be unusually pretty, but very simple. The table of twelve covers at which the bridal party will be seated will be decorated in pink sweet peas, according to the wishes of the bride, who has personally directed all of the plans for decorations. The other guests will be seated at small tables spread on the veranda, if the weather is nice, and in the broad and spacious hall in case the weather is unfavorable. Pink and white will be the prevailing colors all over the house, the color scheme being carried out with pink and white peonies and sweet peas. A temporary altar will be built in the drawing room, with cathedral effect, and here the decorations will be entirely in white and green. White rambler roses will be used exclusively in this room. The porch will be decorated with palms and vines.

Seated at the table with the bride and groom will be the bridesmaids and the best man, and Miss Florence Cobb, Miss Linda Bole, Miss Phelps, Mr. Tillman, Mr. Corliss Sullivan and Hayward Kendall.

The gowns worn by the bride, as well as by her mother and sister, will be triumphs of the modiste's art. They are all American made, copied from imported models. The conventional wedding robe of white satin, made with a high neck and long sleeves with trimming of point lace, will be worn by the bride. She will also wear pearls and diamonds, and will carry orange blossoms. Her veil will be fastened with a coronet of orange blossoms. Both of the maids will be gowned in exquisite lace robes made over white silk with tiny ruffles of taffeta silk edging at the foot of the skirt. Mrs. Hanna's gown will be a fluffy creation of white mousseline de soie with hand-painted wreaths of black roses about the foot of it. The gown will be worn over white silk, and the effect will be filmy and summery.

Immediately after the wedding festivities are over Mr. and Mrs. Parsons will depart for the Soo on the steamer Northland. The bride to be has a little cottage at the Soo, a present from Senator Hanna over a year ago. There the honeymoon will be spent. During the winter Mr. and Mrs. Parsons will make their home in Cleveland.

SHAM BATTLE

At Camp, Between Majors Resche and Eva's Battalions.

St. Paul, June 11.—A special to the Dispatch from Lake City, Minn., says: Camp opened this morning with the officers and men in good form. The Second and Third battalion under Majs. Resche and Eva went out this morning for sham battle, each man carrying ten rounds of ammunition. The first battalion is at work on the 300-yard range today.

Private Storey, Company C, is colonel's orderly today. Private John Anderson was called to West Concord owing to the death of his mother. Dr. Cole was called to his home in Fergus Falls today, on business. He made a very flattering report on the work done in the hospital as well as upon sanitary conditions at camp.

Adjt. Matson is receiving hearty praise for his proficient work in his new office. Col. Van Dusee is planning to hold the heads of each department responsible for the results made by their men. Gen. Libby, in an interview last night, said: "I am well pleased with the personal interest taken by the officers and men in their respective duties in camp. Two trains daily stop at camp. The camp is very orderly thus far, but very little restriction has been put upon the men."

June 20 is the day set for the regimental review for Governor Van Sant and staff.

The Four-Track News.

When the different members of the editor's family ask, "Why don't the Four-Track News come?" it is getting to be like Castoria, even "the children cry for it," and this tells the story. It is the most interesting publication that comes in our exchanges, and the reason is easily told. Mr. George H. Daniels, the general passenger agent, who has charge of it, has the "Carnegie Faculty" of getting good men around him, who know their business, and the result is that in everything the publication department of the New York Central distributes it is "all right."—Brookiyn, N. Y., Journal.

The subscription price of "The Four-Track News" is 50 cents per year. A sample copy will be sent free for 5 cents by George H. Daniels, general passenger agent, New York Central & Hudson River railroad, Grand Central station, New York.

SUDDEN DEATH

Of Hollis Hamilton of Menominee, Wis.

St. Paul, June 11.—A Menominie, Wis., special to the Dispatch says: A man by the name of Hollis Hamilton was found dead in this city last evening. Squire E. Bates empanneled a jury, which brought in a verdict that he died of heart failure. He was born in Maine, where his mother resides. He was about 40 years old and leaves a widow and two children. He lived in Chippewa Falls, Wis., a number of years before he came to this city. He had often been troubled with his heart.

Ex-Alderman Hitz, who attempted to commit suicide at Eau Claire is likely to recover, so the doctor in charge stated this morning. Despondency over business troubles caused him to attempt to take his own life.

COLUMBIA DEGREES.

New York, June 11.—At the commencement exercises of Columbia university today, the honorary degree of doctor of science was conferred on Samuel Benedict Christy, professor of mining and metallurgy in the University of California. The degree of doctor of laws was bestowed on the Rt. Rev. John Lancaster Spalding, Roman Catholic bishop of Peoria.

Fortune Telling

does not take into consideration the one essential to woman's happiness — womanly health. There is many a woman whose future seems absolutely unclouded who is marked by her own condition for future disappointment and distress.

The woman who neglects her health is neglecting the very foundation of all good fortune. For without health love loses its lustre and gold is but dross.

Womanly health may be retained or regained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity, dries the drains which weaken women, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong, sick women well.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. All correspondence held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"I have taken six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Miss M. Fyfe, of Orilla, Simcoe Co., Ontario, "and two bottles of the 'Pleasant Pellets' as you advised for congestion of uterus, ovaries, and weakness, and can safely say that your medicine has been the means of restoring me to good health again, which I had not had for over three years, until taking your medicine. I thank you very much for your kind and prompt attention to my letter asking advice."

"Favorite Prescription" has the testimony of thousands of women to its complete cure of womanly diseases. Do not accept an unknown and unproved substitute in its place.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets clear the complexion and sweeten the breath.

BANQUET TO KING

Event Considered a Great Triumph For American Prestige.

J. Pierpont Morgan and King Edward Chat at Length.

London, June 12.—A crowd of several hundred persons, including a number of American sightseers, had gathered outside the house of the United States ambassador, Joseph H. Choate, on Carlton House terrace, when King Edward and Queen Alexander arrived there at 8:45 last night to attend the dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Choate. Their majesties came in w hat is known as a "town carriage,' with outriders in red livery.

The front of the embassy was decorated with the customary coronation device, a crystal transparency, showing the royal cipher. It was surmounded by the stars and stripes.

The crowd uncovered as their majesties passed in. Otherwise there was no demonstration.

The visit of King Edward and Queen Alexandra to Ambassador and Mrs. Choate was one of the most interesting incidents of the present reign, and all London was talking of it last night. The police had to clear Carlton House terrace of the many spectators who had congregated there anxious to witness as much as possible the scene of the remarkable tribute paid by their majesties to the United States.

When their majesties and Princess Victoria, with their suites, drove up to Mr. Choate's house, the ambassador, Mrs. Choate, Miss Choate, Henry White, Miss White and Mrs. Carter met them at the door. The American diplomats wore plain evening dress and black knee breeches. The king and his suite wore a dress exactly similar to that of the Americans, except that his majesty wore across his shirt front the blue ribbon of the Order of the Garter.

Greetings had scarcely been exchanged before dinner was announced, and the party somewhat mixed up. Mr. Choate found himself leading the queen into the dining room ahead of the king, who had Mrs. Choate on his arm. Previous to the beginning of the dinner, special servants of their majesties, covered with medals, had arrived at Mr. Choate's residence and taken up their places behind the chairs at which the king and queen were to sit.

The table was elaborately decorated with American beauty roses. Mr. Choate and his wife sat opposite each other, at the center of the table, at which forty covers had been laid. Queen Alexandra, who was dressed becomingly in an evening gown of black and white, touched here and there with costly jewels, and who wore a diamond tiara, sat at Mr. Choate's right hand. On his left sat Princess Victoria, while next to the princess sat Lord Lansdowne. One the opposite side of the table sat Mrs. Choate, with King Edward on her right and the duke of Norfolk on her left.

In the beginning the international banquet proceeded somewhat formally, but the vivacious humor of the king and queen soon put the guests at their ease. Throughout the dinner music was rendered by an excellent band. Finally Queen Alexandra gave the signal and the ladies rose and retired to the drawing room.

Mr. Choate then walked around the table and took the now vacant seat next to his majesty, and the king of Great Britain and the American ambassador entered into a confidential conversation. Before the conversation had got well going Mr. Choate went over to J. Pierpont Morgan, Sr., and brought him up to King Edward and for nearly the next half hour the American millionaire and the king talked earnestly together. Lord Lansdowne, Mr. Choate, Lord Roseberry and others equally known to fame respectfully sat aloof while the master of the pipeline and the master of millionaires threshed out their respective ideas. To use the words of one of the guests who sat near them, "Mr. Morgan and the king seemed equally at home and we wondered when we were going to get a chance to join the ladies in the drawing room."

At length King Edward finished talking and the men went upstairs. On their arrival in the drawing room Queen Alexandra led the way to the music room.

After supper was over their majesties chatted with various guests and especially with Lord Roseberry, who took Princess Victoria down to her carriage. It was then quite late. Escorted by the entire embassy and followed by all Mr. Choate's guests, King Edward and Queen Alexandra went out and entered the royal carriage after a night which foreign diplomats characterize as the greatest triumph ever won for American prestige in England.

Princess Victoria was dressed all in white. Lady Vernon Harcourt was clad in black silk brocaded with pink roses and wore five diamond stars in her hair. Lady Spencer wore a dress of white satin and a diamond crown. Mrs. Henry White's dress was pink and white and she wore a diamond tiara. Miss White wore a dress of white chiffon.

The floral decorations in Mr. Choate's residence were beautiful and harmonious and consisted entirely of American beauty roses arranged in a continuous scheme of color, not only in the dining room, but throughout the reception room.

WHEAT IS HIGHER

Cash Flax Seed Market Proves Puzzler to the Traders.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 12.--The wheat market was strong and higher again this morning, although there was little news to hold up prices, outside of the small receipts at primary points. The cables failed to respond to yesterday's rise in the American market and weather was generally favorable for the crops. The Minneapolis market again led in the advance, but the bulge there was no so pronounced as during the two days previous. The extreme advance there was 1-1⅝c while in Duluth and Chicago it was ¾c. Toward the close Minneapolis weakened greatly, finally showing an advance of only 1½c, while Chicago advanced ¾-⅞c and Duluth ¾c. Statistical information was scarce today. The liverpool market closed 1¢ higher and Antwerp was unchanged.

Trading in wheat on the Duluth floor was fairly light today. The market opened with July unchanged, at 73¾c, sold at 73⅝c at 9:50, reacted to 73⅞c at 9:59, sold again at 73⅝c at 10:10 and again dropped to 73⅝c at 10:25. From that point it sold to 74c at 11:30 and then declined to 73½c at 12:10 and closed there an advance of ¾-½c.

Cash prices were unchanged at ½c over July for No. 1 northern, 1¼c under for No. 2 and 3c under for No. 3. Sales were very light.

The cash flax market puzzled the traders this morning. About 11 o'clock one prominent commission firm began offering flax and steadily forced the price downward until finally one lot of 500 bushels was bought at $1.56, a decline from yesterday's closing price of 1¢. After that the price was bid back to $1.65 without a sale. No one seemed to know just what it meant and everyone wanted to know. Some figured that the sale must have been a small lot of Southwestern seed which came here from Chicago and which in the Chicago market is worth about 20 cents less than No. 1 Northwestern seed. Others figured that it was an attempt to force the price down on a large round lot which was known to be for sale. The close of the market indicated very little as to the real prices, as it often does under the rules followed here. Flax on track closed at $1.76, unchanged from yesterday, while cash flax closed at $1.65, a decline of 1c. To arrive flax closed at a decline of 10c. There was an advance of 1c in the September and October options.

There was a decline of ¼c in September rye.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—Cash, No. 1 hard, 77c; No. 1 northern, 73½c; No. 2 northern, 72¼c; No. 3 spring, 70½c. To arrive—No. 1 hard, 77c; No. 1 northern, 74c; July, 73½c; September, 70½c. Minneapolis—No. 1 northern cash, 77c; No. 2 northern, 74c. Oats—September, 26½c. Rye, 55½c; September, 53½c. Flax—Cash, $1.65; to arrive, $1.66; on track, $1.76; June, $1.66; September, $1.45½; October, $1.34.

Cars inspected—Wheat, 8, last year, 95; corn, 117; oats, 1; flax, 1. Receipts—Wheat, 5403; flax, 375. Shipments—Wheat, 185,380; oats, 1600; flax, 40,362.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

July Wheat Opened Higher on Small Receipts.

Chicago, June 12.—July wheat opened ¾c to ⅞c higher at 72c to 72¼c on small receipts and fair covering by shorts. Cables were indifferent and the weather in general was favorable. The demand was active early in the session. Although there was no particular news to sustain the market, July advanced to 72⅝c. Local receipts were 15 cars, 1 on contract grade. Minneapolis and Duluth reported 104 cars, making a total for the three points of 159 against 286 last week and 416 a year ago.

July wheat sold at 72⅛c, but the crowd followed the lead of the big elevator interests that sold rather freely, and July closed only firm, ¼@⅜c up at 72@¼c.

There was little corn for sale early and although cables were indifferent July opened ⅛c to ¼c up at 63¼c to 63⅜c in sympathy with wheat. Buying was general early and July sold up to 63½c. Receipts were liberal at 312 cars.

Corn dragged lazily most of the session, early buyers taking a little profit. July closed steady ⅛c up at 63¼c.

Oats were firm early with other grains. July opened ⅛c to ¼c higher at 38⅜c to 39¼c on fair buying of a good character. Crop reports were favorable but receipts were very small at 88 cars and all offerings were light and scattered. July soon advanced to 39⅝@⅝c.

Lower prices for hogs at the yards started a little scattered selling in provisions and a few small recessions were made early. Offerings, however, were well taken and the market held steady on manipulation by packers and brokers. July pork opened 2½c lower to unchanged at $17.67½ to $17.70 and rallied to $17.72½; July lard 5c down at $10.30 and sold to $10.35, and July ribs unchanged at $10.37½ and advanced to $10.40.

Close: Wheat, June, 72¾c; July, 72@¼c; September, 70¾c; December, 71⅝c. Corn, June, 62¾c; July, 63¼c; September, 58⅝c; December, 44½c; May, 43½c. Oats, June, 40c; July, 37⅝c; new, 39⅝c; September, 25⅝c; new, 30⅝c; December, 25⅝@⅝c; new, 30⅝c. Pork, June, $17.60; July, $17.60; September, $17.70. Lard, June, $10.25½; July, $10.20; September, $10.32½. October, $10.25; January, $8.30; May, $9.25. Ribs, July, $10.45; September, $10.25; January, $8.67½. Flax, cash Northwestern, $1.76; Southwestern, $1.56; September, $1.44; October, $1.39½. Rye, July, 56½c; September, 54¾c. Barley, cash, 44@68c. Timothy, September, $1.60. Clover, cash, $5.35. Cash wheat No. 2 red, 80@¼c; No. 3 red, 78½@80c; No. 2 hard winter, 74½@75½c; No. 3 hard winter, 73½@75¼c; No. 1 northern spring, 74¼@76¾c; No. 2 northern spring, 73½@74½c; No. 3 spring, 70@72¼c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The news on wheat was a little stronger today. The cables showed a pretty firm tone, which seemed to be due to unfavorable weather in Europe. There were no rains in this country where harvesting is in progress, but heavy rains throughout Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska. Offerings of new wheat in the Southwest while of course increasing, are not large and the wheat seems to be in good demand by local mills. Minneapolis reports much better business in flour. Speculative trade here is, however, slow and the market is without snap. Cash demand is moderate and primary receipts continue very small. Showers are predicted in the Northwest. We still think weather conditions here and abroad are what the market must now depend for any immediately better prices.

Corn—Liverpool, ½d higher. The market here was extremely dull and in every way quiet. Strength and primary receipts as a whole, they have perhaps a moderately increasing tendency, but is no great degree. Country offerings in the market continue small. There is no change in local shipments, conditions or in general crop advices. A few complaints of too much rain do not yet attract much attention.

Oats—The market is quite active. The continued strength of cash situation forced quite a sharp covering of shorts early, and July got up to 40¼c. There was some reaction at the close on profit-taking. We still regard September oats as at an unreasonable discount and a safe purchase.

Austin, Tex.—The hot winds which have prevailed in this part of Texas now for 10 days during the past three weeks have caused almost the complete destruction of corn in that section named. Many farmers have already cut the stocks and are using it for fodder.

• • •

Cincinnati Price Current: Excessive rains were slight over Ohio stocks, but crops now progressing favorably. Moisture is slightly prejudicial to the quality of a portion of the wheat. Oats indicate a large yield for the chief states, and in others moderate. Corn stands very good.

MARKET REPORT.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, 507 Board of Trade, Duluth, Minn.

Chicago, June 12.—Trade in wheat was light today, and mostly all of a local professional character. The market during the early part of the session ruled firm on showery weather and higher cables from abroad, but free realizing on the advance caused a set-back, and the close was quiet, ¼c higher than yesterday. Liverpool reported their market as firm, ¼d higher for the day in sympathy with strength in Paris. Continental markets were generally steady. The weather in France reported unsettled, but cables from Bordeaux reported prospects were for a large crop. Weather in England was also unsettled but nothing of a serious nature. The principal feature to the market today was the selling of July and buying of September. Armour & Co. probably getting out of a straddle. Cash demand was quiet here and the seaboard reported very little demand there for export. Offerings of new wheat in the Southwest are reported to be fairly free. We think the general situation tends to lower prices, still a good deal will depend upon the weather conditions both in this country and in Europe. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 20 cars.

Trade in corn was light today and there was no special feature to the market, which ruled quiet within a narrow range and closed unchanged to ⅛c higher than yesterday. Foreign markets were quiet; Liverpool closed ½d higher for the day. Country offerings were very light, but cash demand was quiet. Weather generally fair for the growing crop. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 350 cars.

There was a large and active trade in oats today and the market ruled strong on covering by shorts, owing to the excellent cash demand and very light country offerings. Cash oats on track were strong. No. 3 sold from 4-¼c to 46¾c; No. 2 mixed from 43c to 43½c. New England demand was good. Old July oats sold as high as 37⅝c and new 40¾c, but realizing by longs caused a slight setback and the market closed easier at 37⅜c and 39⅝c respectively. The September oats were not so active, but closed ⅛c to ¼c higher than last night in sympathy with the strength in July. Weather was generally favorable for the crop, although too much rain was reported in parts. The general situation is strong and we believe the cash demand alone will put prices considerably higher. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 166 cars.

Provisions opened with vigorous support although hogs receipts everywhere were large and there was a decline at the yards. On the advance there was selling by all packers and the defenseless position of pork made a raid possible. The market closed very weak on everything. The leaders have relieved themselves of considerabl product and it is not likly they will let go on small breaks of at all. We can see nothing legitimate in the situation, and consider pit conditions very bearish. Estimated receipts tomorrow, 28,000.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.—The Steels are not likely to go lower. I understand the dividend on United States Steel common will be raised to 5 per cent. Brooklyn Rapid Transit ought to go a couple of points higher this week. I am not in favor of buying the leaders unless they have a sharp dip. The poor statement issued by Southern Pacific is not a bear argument. Insiders are accumulating it and it is not their intention to issue bullish statement at this time. Referring to the action of Atchison common when it was selling around 35 will go to show that this is correct.

Waldorf to W. H. Laidley & Co.—all though the advance in prices invites very little public support, leading commission brokers say tonight that there is more disposition to buy stocks than for some time past, especially in the case of important interests and large capitalists. The standard Oil and Harriman interests for example are credited with purchases of St. Paul, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific. The Pennsylvania, through the Baltimore & Ohio, is said to have added materially to its holdings of Reading as have the Vanderbilts. At the same time, stocks are being taken steadily out of the street the investors who are buying in anticipation of July disbursements. There is a little insignificant selling pressure and as the floating supply of securities has been further reduced by the above absorption, the Chicago and Pittsburg operators who have this week resumed their activity on the bull side have little difficulty in advancing prices and very good houses adhere to their previously expressed belief that on their off days stocks should be bought. Grangers continue in favor, notably Missouri Pacific and Atchison. The buying of Missouri Pacific is considered strong and men close to Gould and Rockefeller predict that this stock will cross 120 before September. It is reported that J. R. Keene will cut short his stay in London, returning home within the next two or three weeks.

Dow-Jones to W. H. Laidley & Co.: A Canadian Pacific official close to the president says: "I can say positively that there is every possibility that the proposed trans-Atlantic combine will be consumated and the Canadian Pacific will do everything in its power to effect it. Some directors claim such as this will increase earnings 20 to 30 per cent. Last year we showed a net profit of $12,200,000 and this year will show considerably more. Undoubtedly the prospect of the formation of this combine has had much to do with making the high level of prices for our securities."

Warrington to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The market is beginning to show more activity and as a consequence prices are advancing. The situation regarding labor will be a discouraging feature for a few weeks yet and will be used as an argument to raid the market. But its adverse influence has been fully discounted. Buy the railways on every dip. I have told you all I know about Missouri Pacific. The whole street is short of the stock and I predict a big rise in the course of a month or two. Metropolitan, Brooklyn Rapid Transit and United States Steel should be bought around present prices.

DULLNESS IN STOCKS

Large Demand For Missouri Pacific In Opening Dealings.

Prices Advanced All Around But Selling Movement Started.

St. Paul Dropped Nearly a Point During Final Hour.

New York, June 12.—There was a large demand for Missouri Pacific in the opening dealings, several 1000-share blocks changing hands. The price advanced ½. Canadian Pacific rose ⅝, and Great Northern 1½. There was a fall of ¾ in Sugar. Otherwise the movement of the market was narrow and irregular.

Prices all around advanced beyond the opening level, but the demand, as on yesterday, was largely concentrated in the Southwestern group. Missouri Pacific headed this division with a gain of a point, and Texas & Pacific, Wheeling & Lake Erie second pfd, People's Gas, Kansas City Southern, Chicago-Great Western and Locomotive pfd, made a similar improvement. St. Paul was largely dealt in, but the gain was slight, which was true also of the other grangers and Pacifics. Before 11 o'clock St. Paul & Union Pacific were under last night.

Traders realized in other portions of the list when St. Paul began to sag, and by the time that stock had lost a point, very little remained of the earlier advances in the Southwestern. The coalers, Western and Pacific stocks all sold below yesterday's close. Northwestern pfd dropped 3¾, International Power gained 1 points and International Paper a point. Distilling pfd reacted 1⅝. Bonds were irregular at noon. Wabash debentures were decidedly strong.

The market stegnated, but made no aggressive recoveries. Northwestern preferred rallied 2¼ and Western Union and Amalgamated rose a point. There were decreases of a point in Rutland preferred and Ice preferred.

The market relapsed into semi-stagnation. Missouri Pacific rallied to the highest, but fell back. Fluctuations as a rule were trivial and but little interest was manifested by the traders in the market. International Power reacted 5 points to 85.

A selling movement during the final hour carried St. Paul nearly a point under last night and wiped out all but a fraction of Missouri Pacific's gain. Great Northern pfd reacted 1¾. The general list moved in sympathy but narrowly. Sugar and Westinghouse lost a point each. Northwestern pfd moved up to 2½ over last night. Chicago & Eastern Illinois opened easy 2½ off ex-dividend and then rose like a wide interval 10½. The closing was dull and steady.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Another dull day in the coppers. United Copper was again the only feature of strength, selling up to 35¼. We think well of this stock and think it will have a good move in any advance of the market; also United States Mining stock.

• • •

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The Winona Mining company will build a spur to the main line of the Copper Range road and will ship rock from the dump to the Atlantic mill as soon as the Champion mill is completed. Opinion at the Lake is that the Winona will prove a valuable property.

• • •

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.—There were more buying than selling orders in the coppers today but the market showed no snap or change worth mentioning. The street is bullish on recessions and will try to start them upward. The Metal market is unchanged with 12⅝c bid for lake copper. Leading Wall street interests assure us that they believe we are gradually working in the biggest kind of a bull market and think they are right.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 12.—Cotton opened firm in tone and 4 to 6 points higher, this being a surprise to bulls and bears alike, who had counted on further declines from the prices of last night. The forecast for tonight and tomorrow indicates showers and cooler conditions over much of the eastern belt, a portion of the central belt and in some districts of the western belt, all of which were more or less in need of moisture.

Cotton—Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 9 7-16; middling gulf, 9 11-16; sales, 224 bales. Cotton futures closed quiet; June, 8.95; July 8.73; August, 8.49; September, 8.13; October, 7.99; November, 7.91; December, 7.94; January, 7.93; February, 7.94; March, 7.97.

First National of Duluth Denies Any Knowledge of It.

The First National bank of this city is not in any banking combination, as outlined in a dispatch from New York last evening.

President A. L. Ordean, of the First National bank, said today that the banking combination was a wild scheme of some New York financier. The press reports proved the first the local bank had heard of it and President Ordean expressed the hope that it would be the last.

The proposition sent out from New York was for a big banking combination to be organized for states. One bank in every good sized city would be selected as the clearing house for the other banks of the city and the financial institutions of the surrounding territory.

In the list of banks sought in the state of Minnesota appeared the Columbia National, of Minneapolis, and the Bank of Minnesota, St. Paul.

Both of these institutions have been out of business for a number of years and are known throughout the country as "dead" banks. It is this break on the part of the New York promoter that leads the local institutions to the theory that the scheme is without foundation.

CAFE IS OPENED.

Great Rush at the Waldorf This Noon.

The Waldorf cafe, at 214 West Superior street, Huley & Lanigan, proprietors, opened at 11 o'clock today, and the new building was crowded with people during the entire noon hour. Owing to the fact that it was the opening day and a great crowd came in for dinner, the service was a little slower than the proprietors expect to have it from now on. Various little inconveniences that always make themselves felt in the opening of such new establishments were present, but were those that will be at once overcome, and the cafe will be ready from today to care for its prospective big trade. The business men's lunch, of which the new cafe will make a specialty, will include chicken croquettes and peas tomorrow noon.

Wins Third Prize.

Mrs. J. H. Sullivan, of 209 Fourth avenue west, won the third prize in the contest in a Minneapolis paper for the most popular lady in the state belonging to the Ladies' auxiliary of the A. O. H., she receiving over 40,000 votes. The prize was transportation and expenses to the national convention to be held in Denver in July.

Parted at Altar.

Guion Thompson secured a divorce in district court yesterday afternoon from Mary M. H. W. Thompson on the ground of desertion, Judge Dibell granting the order. They were married July 14, 1895, in New York city, but the plaintiff alleged that they separated immediately after the ceremony, and that they never lived together. The plaintiff claimed that his wife never even took his name, but continued to live as a single woman under her maiden name of Wood.

THE NEW SURGEON GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES ARMY.

Colonel William H. Forwood, who has been appointed surgeon general of the United States army to succeed Brigadier General Sternberg, retired, will have but a short time to serve, inasmuch as the age limit will take him from the active list Sept. 7 next. Colonel Forwood's rise in the army has been slow. He was appointed from Pennsylvania in 1861 as an assistant surgeon and during the civil war received several brevets. It was fifteen years after he became a major before there were the necessary vacancies to make him a colonel.

LUMBER RATE

A telegram, evidently somewhat mixed up, was sent out from Chicago last night relative to the lumber freight situation by rail from Duluth to Chicago and Minnesota Transfer to Chicago. It suggested a possible reduction in the rate. According to the best information obtainable in Duluth there is little likelihood of a reduction of the freight rate from Duluth to Chicago below the 10-cent basis that has been effective for some years, in the form either of a rebate from the 15-cent published tariff or more latterly of a published tariff on that basis.

"The rate will never go below 10 cents," said a traffic man this morning.

Moreover, there is said to be very little demand for a lower freight by rail than now exists for the present at least, for the dry lumber that would naturally go by rail on a weight basis is well exhausted. The extension of the Duluth rate eastbound on lumber shipments from Cloquet has had the effect of shrinking stocks of seasoned lumber there also to a very low point. Shippers would naturally prefer to consign wet lumber on the thousand-feet basis they get by lake to paying freight on sap and moisture by rail.

The real difficulty referred to in the telegram from Chicago, which was published in the morning paper, is considered by freight men here to grow out of the insistence of Mr. Hill in naming a through rate from Pacific coast points based on a proportional rate from Minnesota Transfer to Chicago of 8 cents a hundred. This rate has been in for some time, and it contributes to a reduction in the through rate of about 12 cents a hundred. The rate is named via the Northern Securities lines—Northern Pacific or Great Northern and Burlington.

Some of the other St. Paul-Chicago lines than the Burlington have been opposed to naming a lower rate from Minnesota Transfer or Minneapolis than from Duluth, and the 8-cent rate, once put in by the Minneapolis & St. Louis, was taken out again, only to be published by the Burlington as part of the through tariff from the coast. The differential of 2 cents, therefore, in favor of Minneapolis has been in existence for six weeks or so.

Local freight men admit that there is a possibility that the disagreement may result in Duluth being put on the same basis as Minneapolis in some way, but they are not looking for it just now, with seemingly little demand for it.

INVESTIGATION

Of Philippine Conditions Asked In a Memorial.

Washington, June 12.—Representative McCall, of Massachusetts, today presented to the house a memorial signed by Charles Francis Adams, Andrew Carnegie, Carl Schurz, Edwin Burritt Smith and Herbert Welsh, asking that a congressional committee of investigation be appointed to go to the Philippines to inquire into and report upon conditions existing there. Mr. Carnegie's signature was authorized by cable. The memorial is dated at Boston and states that the signers are a committee appointed at a recently held meeting of persons, irrespective of party, interested in the policy pursued by the United States toward the Philippines.

REBELS DEFEATED.

Canton, June 12.—The rebel force which has been investing Kwei Lin, capital of the southern province of Kwang Si, has been defeated by the imperial troops.

EXERCISES ARE OVER

President Roosevelt Presented Diplomas to Graduating Class.

Lieut. Gen. Miles Was Cheered Loudly When He Arose.

West Point, June 12.—The centennial celebration of the military academy closed today with the presentation of diplomas to the one hundredth graduating class. The program included the presentation of diplomas by President Roosevelt, an address by Gen. Dick of the visiting board, and remarks by Gen. Miles. The graduating class of fifty-four members will attend a theatrical performance this evening in New York city, accompanied by the furlough class of students who have been at the academy for two years. The president left at 1 p. m. for Washington.

It was expected the president would make a few remarks, but he simply shook hands with each cadet.

The speakers were Gen. Dick, for the board of visitors, Secretary Root for the government and Gen. Miles for the army. Gen. Dick said in part, after giving advice to the cadets:

"The wars conducted by the United States never have been for conquest. Cuba is now a sister republic and Porto Rico has more freedom and contentment than ever. The war with Spain was unavoidable, and we came into the possession of the Philippines as a result. Our authority there must be as absolute as our responsibility. That we will succeed gloriously in the work we have taken up in the Philippines the world now knows." He said that West Point would last as long as the nation needed an army.

Secretary Root said it was a fundamental principle that the military branch of the government should be subject to the control of the civil. He told the cadets to bear in mind that their education was not by any means complete, and that they could go on learning to be good soldiers until they retired, if they were lucky enough to live until the age of 64. The regular army in time of war, he said, was a nucleus of a greater organization, including the military and national guards, and he advised the cadets to get the good will of these bodies and of citizens interested in the army.

The two most talked-of incidents of the celebration are the speech of Gen. Horace Porter, which made a deep impression, and the defense of the army in different speeches. Gen. Miles' remarks today were chiefly those of an older to younger officers, and referred almost wholly to the business of war. He said there were supreme moments in the life of a soldier, one when the officer knows he is doing just what the enemy thinks he is not, and when he feels one more victory has been added to American glory. Gen. Miles was loudly cheered and applauded when he arose to speak.

Adjt. Gen. Corbin was one of the speakers at the banquet given last night by the officers to the distinguished guests. He said in part:

In this presence it is not necessary to set forth in detail the importance of work of the staff of the army, every one here understands full well that good work by the men behind the desk is quite necessary to provide efficient men behind the guns—but in the mind of the public it would be well if this fact could be better understood. It is from the staff that all efficient armies have their being. Laws for the government of, and appropriations for the creation of an army, are necessary, but amount to so little, until made effective by a staff administration. The recruitment, equipment, and assembling of men, and their formation into military units, is but the beginning of staff work. The making of arms and ammunition for a modern army, think what that alone means, and of the other machinery that must be put in motion in supplying clothing, camp and garrison equipage, land and water transportation, subsistence, and pay, medical and hospital supplies—the work of the engineers and of the signal corps, the latter is but a suggestion for quick communication and connecting the army with its base of operations.

How many have ever stopped to think of all that was necessary to have Gen. Shafter's army on its march to Santiago and the army in the Philippines, with all its ramifications, always within speaking distance with Washington. Think of it. And this was so with Gen. Chaffee and the allied forces in their victorious march to Pekin, and it was left to our army to do this and announce to the world the glorious victory of that expedition. It was here that the work of our staff called forth the admiration of the older armies of the world. Our transportation, food, care of the sick and wounded, the work of our engineers, our arms and ammunition all were superior to any others there. Our soldiers were as brave as the bravest and the most intelligent. A foreign officer speaking of them, said, "The trouble is that American soldiers are so intelligent and fine looking it is difficult to distinguish officers from men."

During the war with Spain, there was just complaint of the lack of carefully prepared plans and preparations as were formed were carried into execution; and this complaint has often resolved itself into a general criticism of the present staff. As a matter of fact we have not been justly subject to this criticism, because such organization as would be properly chargeable with such duties was not provided for by law. No need is more marked. The remedy has been urged by a bill prepared by the present able secretary of war, and having the approval and support of the staff of the army. This bill is now pending before the military committees of the senate and house, and its final enactment into law is earnestly hoped for.

The wise provision of a detailed staff has done away with any feeling that may have existed between the line and staff. Before the enactment of this law there was just enough feeling in the service to furnish carping critics texts for mischievous essays.

ALL IN PREACHER'S WORK.

Same Puzzling Cases Sometimes Put to Him.

"It is not a man's study of theology that makes him a great preacher," said a minister of the gospel, who spoke with the assurance of a man who is a decided success in his profession, according to the New York Sun, "but it is his experiences and knowledge of human nature.

"Really, I think my most ridiculous experience or rather the experience showing the most peculiar specimen of human nature occurred about two years ago. I had officiated at a funeral and the grieving husband assured me that he wished to pay me something for my services and would come to see me in the course of a few weeks. I protested, but thought no more of it.

"Six months later he appeared in my home, accompanied by a lady. He said he wished to marry the young woman and so I tied the knot. Then he asked me to go out into the hall, and he handed me a $10 bill, saying:

"'Say, is that enough for both jobs?'

"Let me tell you of a case which sounds like the tale of a revivalist. One stormy winter's night, when the congregation was small, I preached a sermon on honesty.

"After the service a stranger who had been sitting in one of the back seats asked me if he might have a little talk with me. I consented and took him into my study.

"He said that my sermon had stirred him all up; that several years ago he had told a falsehood, committed a dishonest act, and had thereby got possession of a large sum of money. He said that neither his employer nor anyone else knew of his dishonesty, but that he had not had a comfortable moment all these years.

"He was engaged to a spirited young woman and was about to be married. He wanted me to determine for him whether he should go to his employer, make a clean breast of the matter and then tell his betrothed and leave it to her to break or keep the engagement, as she saw fit.

"I talked with him a long while and advised him to clear up the whole affair. I told him that if he did not his marriage would mean nothing to him, as he could not possibly be a good husband with such a cloud hanging over him, and that probably it would change his whole temperament so that he would not be lovable. I advised him to get the whole thing off his conscience.

"Two weeks after I had a letter from him from a far part of the country. He wrote that he had told his employer, lost his place, ruined his reputation, lost his sweetheart, but now he was having a rest that he had not been able to enjoy for years. He said that it nearly broke his heart to give up his lady love, but that some day he might ask another woman to marry him, and then he could ask her to marry an honest man.

"But think of what a heavy responsibility the man put on me in asking me what course he should pursue.

"We run across real tragedies every once in a while and some of such a nature that they eat into your very soul and you never can give up sorrowing over them. One wild, rainy night a bedraggled woman came to my home.

"She was wet through. Her hair was flying down her back and around her face and her garments were worn and frayed. When I came into the room she was squeezing her hands together until you could hear the bones crack.

"'Do you know who I am?' she asked.

"I told her that I did not. Then she asked me if I remembered reading in the papers about a woman killing her husband, and said she was that woman.

"I remembered the newspaper story. The provocation for the murder had been so great that the grand jury would not indict her.

"She was in a fearful state, half crazy, not because she had murdered her husband, but because she believed she had sent him into eternity without a chance for repentance and salvation. She believed that by repentance her crime would be forgiven her, but she had taken away all chance of salvation from her husband.

"I reasoned with the woman and prayed with her and told her that the question of salvation did not lie in human hands, but in the hands of the Ever Just One and that He would grant mercy where it was deserved and that we mortals could not shape such things.

"I got the woman quieted and in a saner frame of mind and believed that I had settled the question for her. The month later I picked up the newspaper and saw that they had found her and her children dead in bed with both gas burners turned on. Evidently she had become crazy over the subject and could not stand it any longer.

"Do you know that anonymous letters are the bane of a clergyman's life? A neighbor of mine went crazy simply because of such letters. He had received so many threatening his life and also denouncing blackmail that he did not dare go out on the streets and finally became insane.

"Generally these letters are not a scheme for money, but are pure deviltment on the part of the writer. Of course, we get all sorts of criticisms in these letters and numerous suggestions. The only way to dispose of such letters is to throw them into the fire at once.

"The criticisms which a minister must stand directly from his congregation are often most irritating, but a Methodist friend of mine got the better of one old fault-finder. The minister's views were a little more liberal than were allowed by that denomination at that time.

"He had received warning that he was thought to be something of a heretic, so he became very careful. His sermons were a model of Methodism, but he let himself out in his prayers. When he offered these petitions he prayed for everything and everybody and was as liberal as possible.

"The elders liked his sermons, but moved around uneasily when he prayed. Finally one of the elders was appointed to visit the minister and protest.

"'You are preaching heresy,' said the elder.

"'Will you please point out in what sermon I have shown myself a hereuc?' asked the minister.

"'Well, it hasn't been exactly in your sermons,' said the elder.

"'Do I preach heresy when I read the Bible?' inquired the minister.

"'Certainly not,' was the reply, 'but you are a heretic in your prayers.'

"'See here,' flashed forth the minister, 'I'm not saying my prayers to you, but to the Lord. So long as He does not object, I shall keep right on praying just as I have been doing.'

"Talking about heresy, a young Congregationalist minister who was slowly turning Unitarian, had a funny experience. There was a meeting after the weekly prayer meeting to pronounce judgment on him. He was asked to be present and consented.

"Some of the church members denounced the minister's changing views and some declared for him. Suddenly a little woman began to rock back and forth and sob:

"'My creed, my creed, you mustn't take away my creed.'

"A sister with snapping black eyes looked at the sobbing woman in disgust for a minute and then jerked out:

"'Do behave yourself. Who wants your creed, anyway?

"'Sometimes when I pick up a magazine or a new work of fiction I vow that I will write my own experiences and they will be much more exciting that any novel written, but ministers have little time for such writing.

CRISIS IN FINLAND

Already One Collision Between Cossacks and the Citizens.

All Garrison Towns Being Filled With Russian Troops.

The latest news from Finland indicates that a crisis is approaching in the affairs of the Grand Duchy. There has already been one collision between the Cossacks and the citizens. The danger point will be reached this month, when the time expires within which the new conscripts are required to present themselves at the appointed places. All the garrison towns are being filled with Russian troops.

While the immediate cause of trouble is the new conscription law promulgated in direct violation of the Finnish constitution, the real issue is the determination of the present czar and his advisers to Russify Finland. The difference between Finland and Poland is this, that the one country has been in a state of rebellion from the first, while the other has painstakingly lived up to the obligations forced upon it.

In 1809, at the end of a disastrous war, Sweden bought peace by ceding Finland to the victor. The treaty of peace gave the Finlanders semi-independence, with a solemnly guaranteed constitution to safeguard their national existence.

Finland was to be governed by Finlanders. No change could be made in the constitution without the consent of the landtdag or parliament, which, included representatives of the four estates of the nation, the nobles, the clergy, the burgesses and the peasants. No Finlander could be arrested or tried except under the laws of his own country; nor could he be pressed into military service except in the national army, which was to be commanded by Finlanders, and retired from duty outside of Finland in time of peace. The Lutheran church was to remain the established church of the country. Finally, the official language was to be Finnish or Swedish, according to the prevalence of either in the districts concerned.

Each czar, on his accession as grand duke of Finland, took oath to respect and uphold its constitution. The attitude of the three Alexanders and the first Nicholas toward Finland was one of confidence and good will. It was reserved for Nicholas II to initiate a departure from that policy. In February, 1899, he issued a manifesto by which, with a stroke of his pen, the Grand Duchy was reduced to a dependent Russian province.

It is necessary for the welfare of Finland, the manifesto declared, that she be united by closer bonds to the empire of Russia. The landtag will be abolished, having ceased to be essential to the government of the country. His Majesty Nicholas II will in the future legislate for Finland without the latter's advice or assistance, and every new law must henceforth be passed for the Grand Duchy by the imperial council at St. Petersburg, and must be sanctioned before its enforcement by the emperor. On the other hand, a certain number of Finnish senators will be entitled to a vote in the proceedings.

The Finnish people have since then observed Feb. 15 as the day of national mourning. The public places of amusement are empty on that day. Even the streets are deserted. Everybody remains at home behind drawn blinds, and at night no lamps are lit.

The governor general appointed to carry out the czar's policy in Finland was one Bobrikoff, who had served an apprenticeship in Poland. Versed in the art of undermining nationalities, he has aimed his blows from the very beginning at three of the strongest bulwarks of Finnish national life, namely, the language, the freedom of public opinion and the national character of the administration.

The language was reached through the schools, primarily. Not only has the teaching of Russian been made obligatory in the public schools but the minimum amount of time devoted to such instruction has been fixed at thirty hours a week, which implies virtually that all instruction must be carried on in Russian. So far no direct restrictions have been placed on the teaching of the Finnish or Swedish languages.

The use of Russian has been made compulsory for all correspondence between the various government departments as well as between them and the imperial government. A ukase has been promulgated making knowledge of Russian a prerequisite to the incumbency of a number of important public offices. The governor general has already employed the language qualification as a pretext for the dismissal of many objectionable functionaries, among whom may be mentioned several members of the judiciary, the director general of customs, the director of prisons and the chiefs of police of the two largest cities.

The public press in Finland has at all times been subject to censorship. Bobrikoff either suspends the publication of the offending organ for a fixed period, ranging from one to six months, or he suppresses it entirely. The death-list of the Finnish press for the three years ending Dec. 31, 1901, includes no fewer than twenty-three newspapers. During the same time no application for permission to start a new publication of any kind in the Swedish or the Finnish languages was granted. On Feb. 1 last he forced the Finnish Telegram bureau at Helsingfors to cease its operations, whereby an end was put to the direct exchange of news between the Finnish and the continental press.

The prohibiting of public meetings of any kind has been another means resorted to by the governor general for the silencing of all troublesome expressions of opinion. The police forces of the larger cities, notably that of Helsingfors, the capital, have been reorganized under Russian chiefs.

Keenly as the nation has taken to heart all these infringements on its rights, none of them has made a more painful impression than the nullifying of the constitutional exemption of Finnish subjects from military service outside their own country. By an imperial ukase promulgated in July, 1901, the old law was arbitrarily abolished, the national army was all but wiped out of existence, and a new conscription law was forced on the people.

The new law contains no limitation on the number of conscripts that may be drawn for military service. It disregards the constitutional right of the landtdag to fix the military budget. Worst of all, it compels the Finnish conscripts to serve in Russian regiments.

The national army consisted of a regiment of footguards, a regiment of dragoons and a half dozen infantry battalions. The total numerical strength of the standing force was about 5000, with some 20,000 conscripts on duty in classes or held in reserve.

All the property of the disbanded organizations, including barracks, arms and uniforms, was at once taken over by the Russian war department, regardless of the fact that it belonged to and had been paid for by the Finnish government. The latter was thus deprived of property valued at $5,000,000. As quickly as the Finnish regiments were disposed of, Russian troops were bundled into the barracks vacated.

The Finlanders have not failed to protest against these open attacks on their constitutiona rights. From the first they have refused to recognize the validity of the new conscription laws and when this was ordered to be read in the churches the congregations in most of them rose and left in a body. In other churches the pastors refused to read the imperial ukase, for which insubordination they were subsequently disciplined.

A petition signed by 471,131 Finnishmen and women, was sent to the czar, asking him to respect the constitution and his own oath to uphold it. The petition received no attention.

While it was on its way to St. Petersburg the time came for each community to choose commissioners of conscription for the year 1902. The first election was to take place in Helsingfors.

The citizens entitled to vote assembled in town meeting, as is the usage, but only to adopt a resolution declaring that as the new law was unconstitutional, they neither could nor would do anything toward carrying out is provisions. They then adjourned without having elected any commissioners. Other communities followed the example set by the capital.

The governor general then appointed conscription commissioners, but the calls issued by them have been disregarded by the young men drawn for military service, and so far no conscripts have reported for duty. The szar has just extended the time for them to do so till the middle of June.

Thus matters stand at present. Some things that are expected to happen in the near future have been foreshadowed by more or less authentic rumors.

The present division of the country into provinces with Finnish civil governors at their head will be practically superseded by a division into three military districts, each one commanded by a Russian general. The Russian garrison in all parts of the country are to be largely increased and several strong forts may be constructed near the Swedish boundary.

Far-reaching measures against the national church establishment have also been predicted. Finally, there are impending certain administrative measures, the necessity of which the czar has referred to.

An imperial committee is now at work in St. Petersburg on what has been officially termed "a set of new instructions for the senate and governor general of Finland."

It is expected that these instructions will include a paragraph conferring on the governor general the power to deport objectionable individuals to Siberia or other parts of the empire without trial and for purely political reasons.

APPEAL TO CONGRESS

President Asks Passage of the Cuban Bill.

Says Country Is Bound By Honor In the Matter.

Washington, June 13.—After talking with a number of the leaders in congress regarding Cuban reciprocity, President Roosevelt today determined to send a message to congress reaffirming his attitude on the subject. The president has earnestly considered the matter for several days and it is stated that the action of the anti-reciprocity Republican senators yesterday in deciding to hold out against the policy advocated by the majority of the party did not influence the president in the least in deciding to transmit his message to congress today.

The president's action, it may be stated from sources close to him, was influenced by the broad question of the duty of the United States to Cuba and of fairness to the new republic. It has been pointed out to the president that his warmest political support is in the section of the country where there is greatest opposition to reciprocity, the West and Northwest, and that he should remain content with the stand he had taken without accentuating his views in a special message. It is known, however, that the president did not hesitate to arrive at the conclusion that he would not let his political prospects interfere with what he regarded as his plain duty. It is further known that he told his intimate friends that it was a source of great regret to him to take a position hostile to the wishes of his warmest supporters, but that he felt it would not be in keeping with his own nature and that of the position of chief executive, to longer remain silent on this subject and thereby give an opportunity for false speculation as to his attitude.

The president was further led to conclude that the relations of the United States and Cuba must necessarily grow closer, and that the United States should not at the outset after his declared purpose toward the island, assume a position contrary thereto and thus arouse the suspicions of the Cuban government as to our real intentions toward it.

It is stated that the president's positive declaration in his message today in regard to the duty of congress will end his active efforts to bring about reciprocity. The message is as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives: I deem it important before the adjournment of the present session of congress to call attention to the following expressions in the message which, in the discharge of the duty imposed upon me by the constitution, I sent to congress on the first Tuesday of December last:

"Elsewhere I have discussed the question of reciprocity. In the case of Cuba, however, there are weighty reasons of morality and of national interest why the policy should be held to have a peculiar application, and I most earnestly ask your attention to the wisdom, indeed to the vital need, of providing for a substantial reduction in the tariff duties on Cuban imports into the United States. Cuba has in her constitution affirmed what we desired, that she should stand, in international matters, in closer and more friendly relations with us than with any other power; and we are bound by every consideration of honor and expediency to pass commercial measures in the interest of her material well-being."

This recommendation was merely giving practical effect to President McKinley's words when, in his messages of Dec. 5, 1898, and Dec. 5, 1899, he wrote:

"It is important that our relations with this people (of Cuba) shall be of the most friendly character, and our commercial relations close and reciprocal. * * * We have accepted a trust, the fulfillment of which calls for the sternest integrity of purpose and

THE OLD AND THE NEW PRESIDENTS OF PRINCETON UNIVERSITY.

Woodrow Wilson, who succeeded Dr. Francis L. Patton as president of Princeton university upon the latter's retirement after an incumbency of fourteen years, is well known in the world of letters as a jurist and historian. He is a comparatively young man, having been born in Carlisle, England, Dec. 28, 1856. He was educated in the private schools of Augusta, Ga., and Columbia, S. C., going thence to Princeton, where he was graduated in 1879. He has held chairs in various educational institutions, having found the practice of law, to which he at first devoted himself, uncongenial. He has latterly been a member of the Princeton faculty. Dr. Patton, whom President Wilson succeeds, will devote himself to literature and incidentally will retain the chairs of ethics and philosophy of religion at Princeton.

COMPARED WITH HADES

Major Waller's Emphatic Opinion of Samar.

Only Severest Measures Can Stop Revolution.

San Francisco, June 13.—Maj. L. W. T. Waller, United States Marine corps, by far the most interesting personage to reach here on the transport Warren, which brought the battle-scarred remnant of the fighting Ninth infantry into port, expressed emphatic views in the matter of the war in the Philippines.

"You can't stop the revolution in the Philippines unless you take the severest measures," said Maj. Waller in an interview. "You would hate to see your wounded and dead mutilated. I cannot describe the fearful condition in which we found some of the bodies of men under my command who were murdered by insurrectos. I received both verbal and written orders from Gen. Jacob Smith to kill all insurrectos who were armed or who refused to surrender. It was the only thing that could be done, and I never questioned Gen. Smith's orders, with one exception. This one exception I refuse to state. There was one woman shot and she was only slightly wounded. She happened to be on the breastworks of a fort my men were storming.

"I have fought in every country in the world except Australia," said Maj. Waller. "But Samar—well, hell is a winter resort compared to Samar."

The major spoke huskily through a deep cold that he contracted during the home voyage on the transport, but he was obviously sincere. His dark eyes snapped and his nostrils twitched at the mention of the island that Gen. Jacob H. Smith had ordered him to convert into a howling wilderness.

"I left Samar a howling wilderness. They tried to make it that for us, but we made it a howling wilderness for them."

"Want any more of it?" was asked.

"No, I'm getting to be an old man now." His face relaxed. "I'm in my fifties. Besides, they've surrendered, and it's all over. It's always all over when they surrender in the Philippines,' said he satirically, and a smile curved under his moustache.

"Have you anything to say, major, regarding your courtmartial on the charge of the execution of Samar soldiers without trial. Or was that the charge?"

"The charge against me," he said, "was murder. Yes, one plain word—murder. And as for having anything to say about the courtmartial, of course I have. I objected to being courtmartialed; that was not done at my pleasure; I was not consulted in the matter; I was simply courtmartialed.

"I know who caused that courtmartial; I know who brought it forward; I know who was at the back of it all, and Washington knows as much."

ELECTRICITY

To Be Substituted For Steam on Many Railroads.

New York, June 13.—In connection with the acquisition of the Stanley Electrical Manufacturing Co. plant at Pittsfield, Mass., by William C. Whitney and his associates, the Tribune says there is, back of the purchase, a purpose to extend the works with the aid of Ganz & Co., of Budapest, one of the largest electrical concerns in Europe for the purpose of constructing steam railroads in the country into electrical railroads. The substitution of electricity for steam on American lines is not, according to the Tribune, expected to be entered upon at once, but for the immediate future the increased plant at Pittsfield is to supply the demands of the street railways in this city, Philadelphia, Northern New Jersey and in Connecticut for electrical supplies. Later, wherever there is a congestion of traffic on steam roads in the East, it is believed there will be a displacement of the locomotive by the electrical engines.

A representative of the Whitney syndicate, according to the Tribune, said the financial details of the plant by which the Ganz concern is to join hands with Mr. Whitney and his associates in the establishment of a branch factory in this country have been arranged. It is further asserted that at least fifteen locomotive building concerns in the United States will be brought into the enterprise.

STRIKE DRAGS ALONG

Leaders Succeed In Inducing Strikers to Keep the Peace at Wilkesbarre and No Further Trouble Has Occurred.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 13.—For the first time this week there was no demonstration in the vicinity of the Lehigh Valley company's William A colliery at Duryea today. The efforts of the strike leaders to have the men keep the peace have been successful and there was no gathering of idlers at the colliery to annoy the workmen. The Lehigh Valley company has followed a policy of keeping its guards in the background, so as to avoid any serious clash, but the attempted shooting of its division superintendent on Wednesday night has caused it to change its methods. Last night and today extra coal and iron police were sent to the colliery and they were distributed around the mine in large numbers. It is the company's intention to take no more chances of having its employes injured.

An attempt was made late last night to start up the pumps in the collieries of the Susquehanna Coal company at Nanticoke, but the effort was defeated by the engineers quitting work almost in a body. There is a very large number of iron and coal police in that vicinity, which fact has caused much uneasiness there.

The strike drags along without any change. Information from all parts of the strike affected territory shows the situation to be quiet today. President Mitchell had nothing to give out of any importance regarding the anthracite strike. He said the strike was complete and there was nothing to do but wait. He has received no information from West Virginia, that shows any change in the situation there. He repeated his assertion that the suspension in that locality is nearly complete.

Tamaqua, Pa., June 13.—All last night the Panther Creek valley was in a state of excitement. Large delegations of striking miners visited the homes of the non-union men and warned them not to go to work in the morning. Today it is claimed the pumps at five of the collieries in the valley are not running. The striking men here are trying to induce all tradesmen to go out. An appeal has been made to the carpenters, machinists and molders. Feeling is at very high tension and the people are in a state of apprehension.

A PATHETIC TRAGEDY

Aged Inventor, Who After Twenty-Five Years of Labor, Perfects Pleasure Device, Is Killed By His Own Invention.

New York, June 13.—Herman O. Moritz, a Brooklyn inventor, 62 years old, has been killed at Coney Island by the invention on which he had spent more than a quarter of a century and all his savings.

Moritz's invention was an aerial toboggan slide. Permission had just been granted to operate it, all the laws of the department being complied with. The first car was empty and went without any trouble. Then the cars with persons in them were sent over, the device seeming to be working to perfecting and, as the various cars, one after another, went down the steep slide and came up, Moritz stood and looked on, his face beaming with pleasure. He fairly shouted for joy. The dream of the last twenty-five years of his life was realized and his face beamed with delight as his friends alighted from the cars and pronounced the construction a success and certain to make him a fortune.

Inspector Rittenhouse and Charles Otis, a friend of the inventor, rode in the last car to be tested. Moritz stood at the foot of the incline. The car had hardly reached the top, a distance of about seventy feet. There was a cracking sound, a shout, and Rittenhouse and Otis shot backward. Their car had failed to hold the steel dog until the top of the incline had been reached. It came down with great velocity, straight for the place where Moritz was standing. The car was almost upon him when he turned to get out of the way. It was too late. The heavy vehicle struck him in the back, knocking him through the wire netting and out into the Bowery walk. He died two hours later. Rittenhouse and Otis were thrown from their seats, but were uninjured.

WANT GUARDS REMOVED

Mayor of Pawtucket Asks Governor to Order Soldiers Away, Saying Police Can Take Care of Any Further Trouble.

Pawtucket, R. I., June 13.—The first duty today of the militia who are assisting the local authorities in maintaining order in connection with the street railway strike, was to clear the streets of all debris which had accumulated during the night or had been placed on the tracks to hinder the resumption of traffic. When this had been done the street railway company was notified by Gen. Tanner, in command of the troops, that the road was unobstructed, and preparations were made for sending out cars.

Mayor Fitzgerald, who returned here last night from his wedding journey, called on the governor today to discuss the situation and to have the militia withdrawn. The mayor considers the presence of the soldiers as contributing to disturbances. He says he will guarantee protection to the cars. When asked if he would put officers on the cars, the mayor said he would not. "The officers on their beats, together with the specials, can protect the cars," he said.

The first car from Providence proceeded through this city at 10:30. It was without the usual deputation of guards. While there was no very serious demonstration five arrests were made by the soldiers, who lined the streets. Some stones were thrown and the driver and conductor were hissed, but these outbursts were quelled by the soldiers before they had assumed serious proportions.

HORRIBLE

Sight Presented By Body Found In the Woods.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., June 13.—A driver at work on the Chippewa river yesterday found the body of John Murphy, a well known woodsman, in the woods. Murphy became ill and started from camp ten days ago to consult a doctor in the nearest town. That was the last seen of him alive. When found the body presented a ghastly sight. Birds had picked the eyes out of the head and wild animals had torn flesh from the face. The remnants were shipped to relatives at Whitewater, Wis.

GREAT STEAL ALLEGED

United States Brings Suits Against Colorado Parties to Recover Damages For Conversion of Public Lands to Their Own Use.

Denver, June 13.—The government in two suits filed in the United States district court lays bare what it alleges to be the greatest theft ever perpetrated upon the mineral lands in the public domain of the state. The principal suit is entitled "the United States against the Ute Coal and Coke company, Chauncey W. Howser, Charles A. Mendenhall, Herbert J. Ross, Frank W. Stubbs and Lewis C. Jakway," the two latter being associated in business under the firm name of Stubbs and Jakway. The suit is brought on the alleged trespass upon the public domain and the conversion of coal land to defendants' own use. The amount named is $63,000, with interest and costs.

The second suit is entitled "The United States against the Colorado Telephone company, Frank Stubbs, Lewis Jakway and the firm of Stubbs & Jakway." The complaint is that the contractors furnished all the poles for the telephone company's line between Durango and Silverton from the choicest timber on government land. The damage claimed is $2970.

A GREAT DEAL OF MEAT

Is Consumed In Duluth Every Year, Says Dr. Wheelock.

Dr. Wheelock, the health officer, has been figuring on the amount of meat consumed in Duluth every year, and has arrived at the following conclusions:

Duluth has a population of 70,000 people. Each person consumes on an average 150 pounds of meat per year. This makes a total of 10,500,000 pounds of meat consumed in Duluth every year. Of this amount 2,500,000 pounds is pork, 3,000,000 pounds is veal, 5,000,000 pounds is beef.

TO AVOID DISSENSION

Prominent Democrats Meet In New York City and Discuss All the Phases of the Eastern Situation.

New York, June 13.—Edward M. Shepard has given a luncheon at the University club at which the guests were Senator Edward Carmack of Tennessee and Senator Frederick T. Dubois of Idaho, Democratic members of the senate Philippine commission; Carl M. Schurz, Horace White, editor of the Evening Post; Morfield Story, of Boston; Congressman Amos Griggs of Georgia and Congressman John Mills of Mississippi. The significance of the meeting of so many prominent anti-expansionists seems to be this: The luncheon was arranged to make impossible in the future any dissension among the leaders of the opposition to the government's Philippine policy. They met to discuss every phase of the Eastern situation, and they left the table feeling that they understood one another. Several members of the party were asked if any immediate step will be taken by the leaders present. One of the senators replied:

"We came up from Washington to meet the anti-imperialist leaders of New York and Boston. Mr. Shepard kindly invited us to the University club. There we found that every man endorsed the action of the minority which recently offered a bill in the house asking for complete independence for the Filipinos. The majority has passed in the senate a bill giving the Republicans' notion of rule in those islands. We presented a substitute bill, which was defeated.

"The majority bill is now in the hands of the house committee. The important point in this conference was the unmistakable support which we received to the substitute bill which, though defeated, brought out the existence of thorough harmony between the Democrats of both houses of congress."

MAY USE PRESERVATIVES

St. Paul, June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—There is nothing in the Minnesota law to prevent packers from using preservatives on the meat offered for sale in the state. This point was decided today by the supreme court in test cases against J. N. Rumberg and C. S. Wagenhals, begun at Minneapolis and appealed after the two butchers had been convicted in Hennepin county and fined $25 each.

The court holds that the amendment to the pure food law passed in 1901 applies only to milk and cream, and that the use of borax in meats is not illegal.

THE DEADLOCK CONTINUES

Washington, June 13.—The situation in the senate regarding the Cuban reciprocity bill today indicated a continued deadlock. There was no conference between the opposing factions, and members of the committee on Cuba said they did not know as one would be necessary. It was stated that the Cuban committee would report the reciprocity bill after a caucus of Republicans, and let the beet sugar men take the responsibility of passing the house bill if they so desired. It was generally known that the president would send in a message on the subject, and during the early hours of the session a great deal of interest was manifested in what the executive might say.

OWATONNA HORSE THIEVES

St. Paul, June 13.—An Owatonna, Minn., special to the Dispatch says: Horse thieves operated in this vicinity last night. A team of heavy sorrel horses with white faces and a buggy and harness were stolen from John Pichner, who lives two miles south of the city. Officers think they have good clues and are out looking for the thieves.

NO COLORING CAN BE USED

Washington, June 13.—Commissioner Yerkes, of the internal revenue bureau, has settled the contested question as to whether butter, or any other ingredient artificially colored, may be used in the manufacture of oleo without increasing the tax as stated.

WILL STRIKE.

Painters and Decorators Demand New Wage Scale.

New York, June 13.—By unanimous vote the painters and decorators have decided to strike unless their new wage scale is granted. The union decided to no longer deal with the employers as a body, but will attempt to get individual firms to sign the agreement. Already, they say, ten employers have signed the papers. Committees will visit the different employers, and as they decline to sign, the men in their employ will be called out at once. Between 5000 and 6000 men will be affected.

DYING FROM CANCER.

New York, June 13.—Bessie Bonnehill, the actress, is dying from cancer at a hotel in London, according to advices received by members of her family. Accompanied by her husband, W. R. Seeley, and her son, she went to Europe last September to fill an eight-months' engagement. Owing to illness, however, she was compelled to cancel many of her contracts.

An operation was performed for cancer, and for several weeks she continued to improve, but she has had a setback, and physicians say she cannot possibly live more than six months.

YALE'S PRACTICE WORK.

Gales Ferry, Conn., June 13.—The chief feature of the practice of the Yale crews this morning was the trial of racing starts by the 'varsity and freshman eights. The freshmen showed a good deal of improvement in form, but the work of the 'varsity was a little ragged. The four-oar crew was out for half an hour, taking a two-mile spin. Much of the time was devoted to practice at the catch and in recovery.

FEARFUL DESTRUCTION

Was Worked By a Terrific Tornado Which Swept Across Forest County, Wis., on Last Monday.

Milwaukee, June 13.—A dispatch to the Evening Wisconsin from Crandon, Forest county, Wis., says: L. D. Butler, a homesteader from Pine River, is here and reports that a terrific tornado swept across that county Monday afternoon, June 9, destroying everything in its path. Every tree on his place is laid low, and he escaped almost miraculously.

The road is completely blocked with timber, and the only way to get through windfalls is to crawl on one's hands and knees.

Much concern is felt about two homesteaders who went from this place to locate in that county.

Capt. Robert Mountain and A. L. Ramsdale started in the saddle today to look up these homesteaders and see what can be done in the matter.

TICKETS SOLD TO EXECUTION

Montreal, Junes 13.—Thosval Hansen was hanged here today for the murder of Eric Marotte, a 9-year-old boy, last autumn in order to obtain some change, 17 cents, which the boy was jingling in his hand. Hansen's neck was broken. Tickets of admission to the execution were openly sold at prices ranging from 50 cents to $10.

FOUR NEW DANCES SELECTED

New York, June 13.—At the convention in this city of the Normal Association of Dancing Masters of the United States and Canada, three new round dances and an original lancers have been chosen as the correct thing for the coming season. The new steps are known as the "Military Dip," "Antlers' Gavotte" "The Olympia" and the "Drawing Room Lancers."

The first named is a waltz, differing from the old dip waltz danced a generation ago, by having a dip to each move instead of every third move.

BLOOD FAILED TO RECONCILE

New York, June 13.—A duel is reported to have been fought, says a World special from Halifax, N. S., at Savoyard, near St. Pierre, Miquelon. The principals were a millionaire capitalist and a lawyer of Martinique. The weapons used were revolvers. One shot each was fired. The lawyer's bullet grazed the millionaire's head and cut his ear. The latter's shot lodged at his adversary's feet. After the exchange of shots the lawyer proposed to his opponent that they become friends. The capitalist refused and they parted enemies.

BEDE'S TARIFF VIEWS

To the Editor of The Herald:

Several prominent Republicans having asked my position on the tariff, I make the following statement:

First—As a general proposition I believe in a tariff that covers the difference in cost of production between our own country and any competing country, on all articles which it is practical for us to produce.

Second—Wheat being a world product and its price fixed by the supply and demand of all countries; and Duluth being the natural shipping point for the territoy north and west of us, I believe in free wheat from Canada. As we export wheat, it is of no advantage to us to force the Canadian wheat to go to Europe via Port Arthur or Montreal in stead of Duluth. And as diversified farming is steadily driving the wheat area further north, we must soon admit Canadian wheat or close our mills. If in congress I would be pleased to vote to remove the present tariff against wheat, but should be guided by the wishes of the district.

Third—The tariff of forty cents a ton on iron ore does not benefit the Minnesota miner, and its removal would rob the opposition of much of its thunder. In the proposed revision of the tariff as suggested by President McKinley, I have little doubt this would be removed. I think there would be no local opposition to such a course.

Fourth—The tariff of $2 per thousand feet on certain grades of lumber is, in my opinion, purely a revenue tariff at the present prices of the product, taking so much profit from the Canadian owner. If we removed it, Canada might impose an export duty, and the proceeds be transferred from our treasury to hers. I think this tariff should be used to aid in negotiating a reciprocity treaty with Canada. Lumber is high, but it is for other reasons than the tariff. Our forests are fast disappearing, while our population is doubling and the demand pressing hard on the supply.

Fifth—The chief need for a high tariff in years gone by was our high interest rate. When money was 10 per cent here and 3 per cent in Europe, nothing but a tariff could save our manufacturers. But today, thanks to a wise financial policy, for which I have ever contended, money is as cheap here as anywhere in the world. And to this are due the modified views of President McKinley, and the living leaders. The Republican party still stands for the principle of protection wherever its application is necessary, but with the expansion of our territory and our trade we have surely and forever become a world power, and the time for reciprocal trade treaties is at hand. We should diversify our foreign commerce as we do our farming, so that if one customer fails there are others with whom we can do business.

I was born a Republican and cast my first vote for Garfield, but supported Cleveland, chiefly because he was sound on the money question, while the Republicans were fooling with the Bland-Allison act and the Sherman law of later date, from which we have now been saved. Having lived several years in the South I deprecated the campaign abuse of the Southern people by Republican speakers, but the gracious acts of McKinley have stopped even that. And now we can love one another.

J. ADAM BEDE.

RANDOLPH IS FREE

Acquitted of the Charge of Slaying "One Armed" Sullivan.

Senator Baldwin Raises Unusual Point and Is Sustained.

William Randolph was acquitted of the crime of slaying "One-Armed" Sullivan by an Itasca county jury after about half an hour's deliberations yesterday noon. Randolph was declared a free man about 1 o'clock, and together with his relatives and friends, came to Duluth on the evening Great Northern train. Secondary only in point of importance and interest to the acquittal itself was a decision based on a point raised for the first time in this state by Senator C. O. Baldwin of this city, who defended Randolph.

Senator Baldwin won a victory at the outset in the form of a decision by the court ruling that he could not be tried a second time for murder in the first degree, thereby removing Randolph from the shadow of the hangman's noose. The court held, on motion of Mr. Baldwin, that Randolph could not be tried for a cirme more serious than manslaughter in the first degree.

It is the first decision of the kind in the state of Minnesota. At least the supreme court has never passed upon the issue raised by Senator Baldwin in this trial. The motion to amend the charge against Randolph from murder in the first degree to manslaughter in the first degree was based by Mr. Baldwin on the contention that Randolph having been convicted once of a more serious crime for this act than manslaughter in the first degree, a charge of murder could not subsequently stand against him. In other words, Mr. Baldwin contended that Randolph having in effect been acquitted of all degrees of murder on the former trial, he could not under the constitution be placed in jeopardy again for any of those crimes.

While Mr. Baldwin was unable to find any decisions in this state bearing on this issue, he found decisions to that effect by the highest courts of six other states. Mr. Baldwin claimed that while a second trial had been granted, it was granted on nothing that had any bearing on the proceedings of the last trial with reference to this point.

A new trial was secured by Senator Baldwin after Randolph had been convicted of manslaughter in the first degree, on the showing that liquor had been drunk in the jury room while the jury was out considering its verdict.

There will be some rejoicing up in the neighborhood of Koochiching over the acquittal of Randolph. Even if he were an ordinarily bad citizen his act in removing Sullivan from the landscape would be looked upon as in some sense at least representing the hand of providence. For Sullivan was a very tough citizen. By reason of having lost an arm he had come to impose on the good-nature of others in the belief that a good deal was his due because of his misfortune. As a result, he always became intolerantly abusive when in his cups, which was too frequent an occurrence for the peace of mind of people he came in contact with.

The sentiment along the border is perhaps voiced by P. A. Smith, manager of the Rat Portage Lumber company, a very extensive concern, who said yesterday:

"Randolph was not a bad citizen prior to his getting mixed up with Sullivan. The worst I ever knew about him was that he occasionally got a little the worse for liquor. But even then he was law-abiding and of a peaceful nature. He never got ibto trouble that I knew of until Sullivan got on his trail. Sullivan, on the other hand, was a bad man. He was frequently drunk, and whenever he was he always made it his business to make himself obnoxious to everybody he met, casting insults about as freely as water, assaulting people in a half-jocular, half-ferocious way that would be stood from nobody but a cripple."

TIME IS NOW.

Get Your Strawberries For Preserving--- Cherries Cheaper.

This week and next week will be the time for preserving strawberrfes.

The Wisconsin berries are coming into the Michigan street market in full force, and they will be coming for a week or ten days more. It is not probable that strawberries will be much, if any, cheaper than they are now. The Michigan street price is $1.50 to $1.75 per case.

Cherries will be down to canning prices in a short time. At present the California cherries are the only ones on the market, and they are somewhat expensive for preserving purposes.

Pineapples have gone up again, and they will not be as cheap again as they were last week. They have gone from $1.25 to $1.50 per dozen to $2 per dozen.

Lemons are beginning to feel the regulation effect from warm weather, when the wilting effect of the heat on the lemons themselves and on the people who take lemon in their drinks to relieve their discomfort, pushes prices up. Messina lemons are now $4.50 to $5 per box, and they were $3.75 to $5.

Naval oranges are disappearing from the market, and Valencias are taking their place at $4.50 to $5 per box.

In the vegetable line cucumbers are down to 70 and 75 cents per dozen, instead of 85 cents, and that is about all the change there is.

Meats are still holding pretty steady, of course. There is a slight change in beef, carcasses quoted at 8½ to 10 cents per pound instead of 9 to 10 cents. Pork loins are half a cent higher at 11½ cents per pound.

Butter and eggs are holding firm, and in cheese full cream twins are slightly cheaper, being quoted at 12 to 12½cents instead of 12½ to 13 cents.

MASONIC BANQUET.

Visiting Masons Entertained By Duluth Lodges.

Duluth's blue lodge Masonry banqueted Masons of the Third Minnesota district yesterday.

The guests of honor were S. L. Frazer and William A. McGonagle, of this city; C. D. Morrison and L. H. Bryan, of Two Harbors; E. J. Dunleavy and David Graham, of West Duluth; C. C. Oppel and G. H. Vivian, of Tower; A. R. Battson, A. E. Quinn and C. B. Watkins, of Cloquet; A. O. Sisson and W. B. Ellsworth, of Eveleth. Fully 30 members of the order sat down to the banquet.

During the afternoon and evening the three lodges, Palestine, Ionic and Euclid, the last named of West Duluth, exemplified the work of the thrid degree, the lodges dividing the work.

MAKING CITIZENS.

Court on Wheels Does Less Than Expected.

The "court on wheels," which has been on the iron ranges since Monday receiving applications for second citizenship papers, returned yesterday afternoon, and left again this morning for Hibbing, where a session will be held this afternoon. The trip did not come up to expectations, only 211 second papers having been issued. This is much less than the record of any previous trip, and the number of applicants was much smaller than the court had been led to expect. The papers were distributed as follows: Ely, 39; Tower, 29; Biwabik, 30; Eveleth, 61; Virginia, 44; Mountain Iron, 8.

Judge Ensign relieved Judge Cant for the Hibbing trip. The other members of the party are as follows: Clerk of Court J. P. Johnson and Deputies F. D. Tindolph and H. A. Liedel, and Deputy Sheriff H. N. Randall.

Three spectres that threaten baby's life. Cholera infantum, dysentery, diarrhoea. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry never fails to conquer them.

OVERTURNED.

Dubuque, Iowa, June 13.—A tornado yesterday overturned and sank the steamer Ravenna at Maquoketa Chute, four miles up the river. The captain and three others were drowned. The steamer Teal rescued fifteen men, who clung to the bottom of the Ravenna. The dead:

CAPT. JOHN HOY, aged 52, Stillwater, Minn.

CLERK BYRON TASK, aged 42, Stillwater, Minn.

LOUIS WALKER, aged 19, Rode's Landing.

——DELL, aged 23, La Crosse.

The tornado struck the steamer without warning, and it keeled over to starboard. The crew were thrown into the water, but some of them managed to crawl up on the bottom of the upturned steamer. Capt. Hoy was at the wheel with all the windows in the pilot house closed, and was caught as in a trap.

Clerk Trask was in his office and likewise had no chance to save himself. Capt. Hoy's son was asleep in a state room and awakened by the overturning of the boat, kicked open a skylight and escaped.

The men, huddled together on the overturned hull and clinging to the slippery sides for their lives, peered eagerly through the rain for a boat of some sort to save them. After nearly an hour of anxious waiting they sighted the steamer Teal coming down on its daily trip. Coats, hats, handkerchiefs and everything available were waved. Finally the Teal sighted the unfortunates and turned toward them. The Teal succeeded in coming alongside and making fast long enough for the men to climb to safety. Three survivors were picked up from the Iowa shore by a gasoline launch, and three others from the Wisconsin shore.

IN TROUBLE.

E. T. Bennett Found Guilty of Manslaughter.

Bay City, Mich., June 13.—E. T. Bennett a well known newspaper man of this city, and Minneapolis, was found guilty of manslaughter after a sensational trial, which has been in progress for several days.

Bennett was indicted on the charge of being an accomplice in causing the death of a young woman who expired after an operation.

The convicted man was in control of the Minneapolis Journal a number of years ago, but more recently has been identified with the Bay City Tribune.

CONSPIRACY

To Do Wholesale Kidnaping at Butte Is Unearthed.

Butte, Mont., June 13.—The police unearthed a startling conspiracy to do a wholesale kidnaping business among the wealthy families at Butte, and the alleged leader of the band, Sam Consentino, is under arrest. An attempt was made several days ago to kidnap Hazel Gindrup, the 12-year-old niece of Harry Simons, one of the big merchants of Butte, and a day later an attempt was made to steal the infant child of William Symons. The description of the men the nurse girl gave to the police led to the arrest of Consentine, and the police are searching for three others.

It is alleged Consentino tried to induce Harry Keller, his employer, to join the gang. Keller is said to have pretended to fall in with the scheme, and thus learned all of their plans, which were perfectly mapped out. Among the people whom it was proposed to kidnap and hold for ransom were the youngest son of Senator W. A. Clark; Mrs. Lulu F. Largey, a very wealthy woman, who makes her home in Butte and New York, and a number of leading merchants, bankers and mining men. Consentino is suspected of having accomplices in Chicago. Keller says the plan was to steal the Symons child first, to take it to St. Paul first and then to Chicago.

STAND FIRM.

Senatorial Insurgents Will Continue Opposition to Cuban Reciprocity.

Washington, June 13.—The Republican senators who are friendly to beet sugar, and who oppose the proposed legislation for a reduction of the tariff on Cuban products, held a conference of almost two hours duration yesterday and decided to continue their opposition to the reciprocity proposition. They will cast their votes for the reciprocity bill as it passed the house of representatives, including the Morris amendment for the abolition of the differential due on refined sugar, and they will resist all amendments that may be offered to it.

They will propose two alternatives. One of these is to drop the subject and make no further attempt to secure reciprocity legislation. The other is to accept the rebate plan.

Yesterday's conference was held in Senator Elkins' committee room. The committee of conciliation, consisting of Senators Elkins, Burrows and Jones, of Nevada, appointed to confer with the senators of the Cuban committee, at the outset reported that they had failed to secure concessions from the opposition. The effect of the Thurber testimony was thoroughly considered immediately following this report.

WILL USE ENGLISH.

The Decision of Hauges Norwegian Lutheran Synod.

Sacred Heart, Minn., June 13.—Hauges Norwegian Lutheran synod has decided that it would have to yield to the necessity of usinz the English language in its Sunday schools and hymnals. Resolutions were adopted urging churches to avoid the use of reformed Lutheran literature and calling on the various conrregations to raise a fund for the publication of an English Sunday school paper. Rev. Messrs. L. Harrisville and C. J. Eastvold were appointed a committee to cooperate with other Lutheran associations in publishing an English hymn book. In addition to the advice already given pastors to preach in English, it was decided to print the minutes of the synod sessions in that language as well as in Norwegian.

CONDITION OF HAWAII

Investigation Proposed By Resolution Introduced In Senate.

Case of Becky Taylor Made Subject to Carmack's Call.

Washington, June 13.—Soon after the senate convened today the vote by which the resolutions respecting the discharge of Miss Rebecca Taylor from the war department was referred to the committee on civil service and retrenchment, at the instance of Mr. Platt (Conn.), was reconsidered and the resolution was made subject to the call of Mr. Carmack (Tenn.).

A resolution was offered by Mr. Mitchell (Oregon) directing the committee on Pacific islands and Porto Rico to inquire into the general condition of Hawaii, the administration of affairs, the quality, condition and value of public lands in Hawaii; the crown lands and title of the former queen therein; with power to sit during the recess and by sub-committee to visit the islands, if necessary, and to report at the beginning of the next session.

Mr. Hoar proposed an amendment to the resolution providing that the committee should inquire whether the ex-queen has any claim against the United States legal or equitable, by reason of having parted hitherto with her title. Mr. Mitchell accepted the amendment and the resolution was referred to the committee on Pacific islands.

Mr. Allison (Ia.) reported the District of Columbia appropriation bill and gave notice that he would call it up as soon as possible. A bill regulating the use of telephone wires in the District of Columbia was passed. The senate then at 1:25 p. m. went into executive session, the purpose being to consider the nomination of Capt. Crozier to be chief of ordnance. The senate took no action on the nomination of Gen. Crozier but went into open session and the message of the president on Cuban reciprocity was read. Close attention was paid to the reading by all senators present.

At the conclusion of the reading of the president's message, Mr. Warren moved an executive session. While some routine business was being transacted Mr. Bailey (Tex.) asked what disposition was to be made of the message. The presiding officer said it was referred to the committee on relations with Cuba. Mr. Bailey said he was going to suggest that it would be well to refer the message to the Republican caucus.

Mr. Allison bowed to Mr. Bailey, and the senate went into executive session.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, June 13.—The house today immediately after the approval of the journal resolved itself into committee of the whole and resumed the consideration of the irrigation bill. General debate having closed yesterday, the bill was read for amendment under the 5-minute rule.

Mr. Grosvenor (Ohio) offered a substitute for the proviso in the first section providing that no part of the proceeds of the sale of public land under the act of Aug. 13, 1890 (for the endowment of agricultural colleges and mechanic arts) should be set aparat or diverted to the irrigation fund. The proviso for which the substitute was offered provided that in case a deficiency from the sale of public lands for college purposes under the act of 1890, such deficiency should be paid out of the treasury. Mr. Grosvenor speaking to this amendment opposed the whole bill.

Something of a test of strength was made on Mr. Shafroth's motion limiting the discussion on the first section. The vote was 81 to 32. The Grosvenor amendment was defeated 35 to 75.

At 2:45 p. m. Assistant Secretary Barns transmitted to the house the Cuban reciprocity message from the president. The speaker, who took the chair when the message was received, announced that he would lay it before the house if there was no objection. Mr. Underwood (Ala.) objected.

MACCABEES

Adjourn to Meet Next at Battle Creek.

Marquette, Mich., June 13.—The state Maccabees' bi-ennial convention adjourned at noon with the selection of Battle Creek as the next meeting place in 1904. A proposition to admit to membership holders of stock in brewing companies was sidetracked after a lively fight, by reference of the committee.

Salaries of the principal officers were increased and provision made for issuance of $500 and $1,500 policies.

RIVAL OF MARCONI

System Is Said to Be Much Faster Than Marconi's.

Wireless Telegraph That Will Soon Send Commercial Messages.

New York, June 13.—Far up in the air, on the roof of the Cheesebrough building, at No. 127 State street, is a wireless telegraph station, of the existence of which few persons have heard.

The system employed is the invention of an American, a Yale man not yet 30 years old, and is in no respect similar to that invented by Marconi.

The operator there has exchanged messages with the steamship Deutschland while that vessel was 100 miles at sea, and for simple demonstration messages are constantly sent to another station located at the Hotel Castleton, on the heights at St. George, S. I., from which the replies made may be seen recorded as undeniable proof.

It is asserted that the newest system has many advantages, notably in speed, and freedom of interruption, over that of Marconi; that it is no longer an experiment, but is so far advanced that when next the big Hamburg-American liner Deutschland crosses from the other side commercial messages will be exchanged between it and the Manhattan station.

Plans are under way for the erection of five new stations along the Atlantic coast, and it is asserted with the greatest confidence that communication of a practical and commercial character will soon be established with the other side of the Atlantic.

The speed of transmission by the Marconi system is at present limited by mechanical barriers to fewer than twenty-five words a minute, which is less than one-half the speed of the fastest work on land wires, where the matter sent is not abbreviated by the use of Phillips' code.

With the code, where one word sent represents a sentence of a dozen words the capacity of a wire is, of course, greatly increased, but the actual speed of transmission is not accelerated. It is said that a speed of forty words a minute has been reached by the new wireless system, which is good work on a land wire and beyond the skill of an average Morse operator.

The inventor of the new system is Lee de Forrest, Ph. D., of the class of 1896 of Yale. Mr. de Forrest began his experiments in wireless telegraphy while he was yet in the university, has perfected himself in electrical science, and there is no doubt that his system is a success to a remarkable extent, however it may eventually compare with the Marconi system in operating at a great distance.

The crowning experiment to date—that with the Deutschland—was made on April 12 last. The ship passed out of this port at 1 p. m., and the De Forrest station on Staten Island was in communication with her until 7:15 p. m.

Preparations had been made for receiving commercial messages on the steamship's return last week, but the opportunity was lost through the breaking of the ship's rudder. She is not expected in again for several weeks, as she is laid up under repairs, but it is proposed that when she does start across the Atlantic, messages for New York and other parts of the United States shall be received on Staten Island and forwarded by messengers and land wires.

This was done before, Mr. De Forrest says, when the ship was seventy miles off this port, and he asserts that the system is as certain in its results as is that of the ordinary metallic circuit on shore.

The distance covered, he says, is limited, as by the Marconi system, only by the electric energy generated. In talking with the Deutschland a strength of only 25,000 volts, giving less than one-half inch spark gap, was used.

Mr. De Forrest was found at his station on the State street building by the Post-Dispatch. He is a young man of athletic appearance, fully six feet tall, strong limbed, alert in manner and speech.

"Perhaps the greatest feature of the new system," said he, "is the receiver or responder employed. This instrument works on a principle diametrically opposite to that of the Marconi coherer. In the latter the current is ordinarily broken by the film of gas or air surrounding the filings.

"When the electric oscillations, intercepted in their passage through the ether by the upright wire, traverse the coherer at its base these filings are packed together, or cohered, and the local circuit is thus established. Now, this condition will persist until some outside mechanical force is applied to break up the chains of filings by shock or tapping.

"Notwithstanding many elaborate precautions, if this coherer is made extremely sensitive, for long-distance transmission, false signals are sometimes recorded from these side sparks, with the result of perhaps an imperfect or illegible message.

"But perhaps the greatest disadvantage arising from the use of a decohering mechanism is the slow speed of word transmission which the method necessitates. The speed of sending by the Marconi system is limited by the capacity of the coherer, decoherer and registering device, and great care must be observed by the sending operator not to exceed in speed the ability of the receiver to record.

"It was partly with this fact in mind that the form of key universally used by Marconi operators was designed.

"This is really more like a throttle lever on a locomotive than the ordinary Morse key. The contact arm travels a distance of six to ten inches, and alternately shifts the upright wire connection from the receiving mechanism to the sending apparatus. It is obvious that with such a device a manipulator would be skilled indeed who could send more than fifteen or twenty words a minute.

"With the automatic responder of the American system, a closed-circuit device, the local current is ordinarily flowing through it, energilzng the magnets of the telephone or relay in circuit. The normal resistance of the responder is some fifty ohms. When the electric wave traverses it, in its passage from the upright wire to the earth, its action is to suddenly increase the resistance of the responder, or to open the circuit altogether. This action, of course, gives a click in the telephone or on the relay.

"Now, instantly the electric wave has passed the action of the local battery is to close again the circuit at the responder and the original conditions are automically restored. This automatic quality is the great virtue of the anti-coherer principle."

HINDQUARTER ORDERS.

The colonel was entertaining some of his friends with stories of army life, and the talk turned to the inflexibility of orders. That reminded the colonel of Tim Murphy's case.

Murphy had enlisted in the cavalry service, although he had never been on a horse in his life. He was taken out for drill with other raw recruits under command of a sergeant, and, as luck would have it, secured one of the worst buckers in the whole troop.

"Now, my men," said the sergeant in addressing them, "no one is allowed to dismount without orders from a superior officer. Remember that."

Tim was no sooner in the saddle than he was hurled head over heels through the air, and came down so hard that the breath was almost knocked out of him.

"Murphy," shouted the sergeant, when he discovered the man spread out on the ground, "you dismounted!"

"I did."

"Did you have orders?"

"I did."

"From headquarters, I suppose?" with a sneer.

"No, from hindquarters."

"Take him to the guardhouse!" ordered the sergeant.

ARE DOING GOOD WORK

Mounted Police Covering More Ground Than Was Expected.

Cyclists Who Ride on Sidewalks Come to Grief.

Duluth's mounted police are proving a success.

The squad recently put on as a sort of experiment is covering outlying territory that has never before enjoyed police protection.

The men are all well mounted and it has been found that they can even cover more ground than at first anticipated.

One of the mounted officers yesterday demonstrated the ground covering possibilities in his efforts to stop sidewalk scorching along Grand avenue from Oneota to West Duluth.

One scorcher took the Grand avenue sidewalk about two blocks ahead of the officer and took particular pains to warn every wheelman he met coming from West Duluth that they were likely to collide with the mounted officer.

The officer sheered his horse off Grand avenue and took a parallel street at a gallop, coming out on Grand avenue, three blocks beyond, just in time to catch the man awheel.

The cyclist was so surprised at the sudden appearance of the enemy in front that he fell off the wheel and picking himself up remarked:

"Why, I thought you were two or three blocks behind me."

"I was," said the officer as he took the name of the offender.

The mounted men put up an exceptionally neat appearance. They are all riding horses of the same color, weight and build. The animals are bay and weigh about 1200 pounds each.

The equipment is the same as used by officers in the United States cavalry—McClelland saddles with yellow trimmings and regulation army bridles.

Since the mounted police went on there is less complaint on account of stray cattle and stock in the outlying districts. Duluth poundmaster protection has always been considered more or less of a farce for the reason that the salaries paid are insufficient for good, active men, and this department has become a sort of summer pension bureau.

The mounted officers, however, are constantly on the alert for stray cattle and other stock and a few practical demonstrations against the owners of stock captured has had a salutary effect.

There will probably be a demand for more mounted officers next year. Duluth is strung out over so much territory that it is almost impossible to furnish adequate police protection to all localities unless the men are mounted, and it is claimed that if the present mounted force could be doubled by next summer the city from Lester Park to New Duluth could be fairly well patroled.

U. C. T. Members Notice.

Any certificates issued to members of the U. C. T. by the secretary for the special rate to Minnetonka will be honored by the North-Western Line (C., St. P. M. & O Ry.), June 12th and 13th, good returning until June 23rd. Full particulars at 405 West Superior street.

ON NEW BASIS.

Historical Association to Reorganize on State Society Plan.

At last evening's meeting of the Duluth Historical and Scientific association it was decided to reorganize the association on a new basis, and a committee was appointed to submit a plan of reorganization at a meeting to be called by President C. L. Codding.

The association, after several years of experiment, has found it impossible to keep in an active condition by depending upon regular meetings, because, with the exception of a few members, attendance has been irregular, and the work more or less spasmodic.

The plan that will probably be adopted, which was suggested by Judge J. R. Carey, is to model the association somewhat on the lines of the State Historical society. This will include an executive council to handle all the business of the association. This council will secure all papers, and when they are received will call meetings to hear them read and to transact any other business that may be necessary. Members of the association will, of course, be invited to attend all meetings, but their attendance will not be necessary to keep the association alive because it has been found that a society of this nature depending upon attendance of its members for existence will have rather a precarious career.

In addition, an effort will be made to enlarge the membership, and to collect funds that will enable the association to put itself on a proper footing. If possible, funds will be secured to pay a secretary enough to enable him to devote considerable time to the affairs of the association.

The association now has some very valuable records and other possessions, which are scattered over the high school building. Secretary Brocklehurst has records of all of them, but owing to the lack of system in the organization of the association they have never been gathered together and placed in a suitable repository. One of the first things to be done will be to get all of these possessions of the association together and place them in a room in the library building, where they can be arranged, catalogued and placed at the disposal of anybody who desires to consult them. The papers will be bound and arranged conveniently.

Judge Carey's motion for the appointment of a committee on reorganization having included President as a member, he appointed Judge Carey and S. H. Bingham as the other members of the committee.

The association last evening had the pleasure of listening to the most valuable historical paper ever presented to it. It was by Prof. Albert H. Chester, of Rutger's college, New Brunswick, N. J., and it was entitled "Explorations of the Iron Ranges of Northern Minnesota During the Years 1875 and 1890." Prof. Chester was employed by Samuel A. Munson, of Utica, N. Y., and Charlemagne Tower, of Pottsville, Pa., to head an exploring party in 1875 and again in 1890. The first expedition explored and condemned the eastern Mesaba range, in 58-14, though the Vermillion lake deposits were visited and favorably reported upon. The 1890 expedition was to the Vermilion range only. These pioneer explorations are described in a most interesting manner by Prof. Chester, forming very valuable historical material and a very interesting narrative as well.

The paper will be published in full in The Herald Saturday, June 21.

AMUSEMENTS.

MYRKLE & HARDER COMPANY.

Last evening the Myrkle & Harder company presented "An Indiana Romance" at the Lyceum. The audience was not a large one, but the play was pleasing to all. The specialties came in for much praise. This evening the company will present "The Bondman."

SAVED FROM AN AWFUL FATE.

"Everybody said I had consumption," writes Mrs. A. M. Shields, of Chambersburg, Pa. "I was so low after six months of severe sickness, caused by hay fever and asthma, that few thought I could get well, but I learned the marvelous merit of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, used it and was completely cured." For desperate throat and lung diseases it is the safest cure in the world, and is infallible for coughs, colds and bronchial affections. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at W. A. Abbett's Drug Store.

BARE FISTS

Butte, Mont., June 13.—All Montana is stirred up over a sensational bare knuckle fight which took place between Roy Campbell, a son of ex-Congressman A. J. Campbell, and William G. Mangan, an athlete of some local repute and said to be a protege of W. A. Clark, Jr. The affair is said to be an outgrowth of the bitter political fight made against Senator W. A. Clark, in Washington, several years ago, in which Congressman Campbell was a leading figure, and which resulted in Senator Clark resigning. There has been considerable ill feeling between partisans of the two factions ever since. Campbell and Mangan met at a ball game, and Mangan is alleged to have insulted Campbell, who promptly knocked him down. Later in the day Campbell was waited upon by friends of Mangan and told that he must fight the latter. Campbell, who is about 20 years of age, ten years the junior of Mangan, referred the matter to his father. The ex-congressman is said to have told his son that he must meet Mangan and beat him. A number of friends of the contestants drove some distance out from Butte, where a ring was pitched. The two men stripped to the waist and the battle began. It was a bloody affair and lasted but three rounds. Campbell landed frequently upon Mangan, but his blows lacked steam and were ineffectual. Near the end of the third round the more experienced pugilist landed on the student's jaw and knocked him out. Young Clark is said to have been the referee.

BAD LUCK

Minneapolis, Minn., June 13.—Clarence Hamilton, a trick bicyclist, brought here from New York to "loop-the-loop" at the Elks' fair, followed the example of his three predecessors and fell from the giant wheel on the inside of which he tried to steer a bicycle. E. L. Fitzpatrick, John Larson and Joseph Dougherty had each been injured in attempting the feat and Hamilton, known as Moncrief, was hastened here from New York where he has been looping the loop in a similar contrivance for several weeks. In his second attempt he left the rim of the big loop just as he neared the top and was riding head downward. He was hurled with terrific force among the spectators and had several ribs fractured beside suffering internal injuries. He is now at the hospital in a serious condition.

The trick depends on the scientific principle that permits one to swing a bucket of liquid over head without spilling any of the contents. Though the management of the fair has witnessed the successive failures of those who have attempted the feat and narrowly escaped death, the effort to give the performance has not been abandoned.

McFARLAND INJURED.

Providence, R. I., June 13.—Floyd McFarland, the bicycle rider, has been injured, while working out at the Coliseum. He is at Rhode Island hospital and will be unable to race for some time.

"I suffered from dyspepsia and indigestion for fifteen years," says W. T. Sturdevant, of Merry Oaks, N. C. "After I had tried many doctors and medicines a friend persuaded me to try Kodol. It gave immediate relief. I can eat anything I want now and my digestion is good." Max Wirth.

NORMAL OPENING

Preparations For It Going Forward Rapidly as Possible.

President Bohannon Goes to Board of Control With Bids.

Nothing Done as Yet Toward Advertising the Opening.

President E. W. Bohannon of the new state normal school left for St. Paul last night to bring before the board of control bids received by him for doing work and furnishing materials and equipment for the new institution. Mr. Bohannon expects to be back about Monday, and hopes by that time to be able to announce that contracts have been let for the completion of the building and grounds, at least sufficiently to permit the school to be opened Sept. 1.

Among other things, cement floors will be laid in the basement, including the manual training school. Such apparatus as is thought necessary for the first months of the school year will be placed in the laboratories, but an effort will be made to get along with as little apparatus as possible in laboratory work until the next legislature can be asked to make a hurry-up appropriation for completing the equipment.

The manual training department will not be equipped for the present, though the room in the easterly end of the basement will be placed in condition for utilizing at any time funds become available.

Some changes will be made in the partitions, and slate blackboards will be put up in as many rooms as it seems likely the school enrollment at first will require.

In speaking of the prospective enrollment, Mr. Bohannon said before going away: "We can't tell what the attendance will be at first, and have no way of arriving at a conclusion in this regard. We have done no advertising of the fact that the school is to open, preferring to know first when it would open before leading any prospective pupils to figure on coming here and making plans for that purpose only to be disappointed. Consequently, we have no information on which to base estimates of the probable enrollment."

The grounds of the school will be graded and walks built connecting with the city walks on the highways. As much as possible will be done with the funds available, which will not go as far as it was oped they would, but which it is hoped will be augmented early next winter with an emergency appropriation from the legislature.

Mr. Bohannon says that he understands the board of control has been buying furniture for the school. As many class and recitation rooms as the board considers likely to be needed are to be furnished, and additional rooms furnished later as circumstances may require and the resources of the school will permit.

While no date has yet been set for the opening of the school, all bids received for construction work and grading has included a stipulation that the work must be performed by July 20. This will allow time for installing the furniture and equipment of the school subsequently and prior to Sept. 1, when it is hoped to begin the sessions of the school.

The part of the city in which the normal is situated is brightening up materially. Considerable dwelling building is going on in that part of town. A large area of unimproved property, part of which will shortly be put on the market, has been cleared up, graded and streets graded in a preliminary manner. Sidewalks are being built by the city so that the school can be reached with ease, and the community affords many things of interest to the pedestrian who is anxious for new sights to conquer.

STILL OUT.

Boilermakers at Superior Continue on Their Strike.

No change is yet apparent in the strike of the boiler makers in the Eastern Minnesota railway shops. Only two men are working, and the strikers say they are non-union men. The machinists have not struck, but there is a rumor prevalent that they are heartily in sympathy with the strike, and it seems to be a question whether or not they will go out also, if the railway company does not reach a satisfactory agreement with the boiler makers.

Neither the railway officials or the strikers are giving out much information, but the strikers claim to have received encouraging reports from headquarters at St. Paul, and predict that the strike will be of short duration. It has been intimated that the strike is likely to be settled on the basis of a compromise, but it is not stated just what concessions either side will make.

The strike of the boiler makers has handicapped the work of the railway shops to some extent, but if the threatened strike of the machinists takes place it will tie up the shops completely. There have been a number of non-union boiler makers in West Superior since the strike began, but none of the men have gone to work. The union is quite strong in West Superior and embraces nearly every boiler maker in the city, including the barge works.

TEMPERANCE.

Big Meeting In Its Interest at Y. M. C. A. Sunday.

A temperance meeting of unusual interest has been arranged for at the Y. M. C. A. building next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The topic to be discussed will be "The Great Anarchist: A Protest Against the Liquor Traffic."

Special music will be rendered and the program will include eight five-minute speeches by well known local members of the association. Following is a list of the speakers and their subjects:

"Whisky vs. Missions," Phil Bevis.
"A Look at the Beast," John Millford.
"The Saloon vs. the Home," John Brown.
"Historical Wrecks," Neil McKinnon.
"The Saloon and Crime," A. G. Bousfield.
"Alcohol and the Physical Man," Dr. C. M. Wilson.
"Saloons and Anarchy," Swan Ericson.
"Who's to Blame," Paul Gilbert.

The meeting is a public one, and an invitation has been extended to all interested in the movement.

SIX STORIES.

Frerker Building Adjoining Spalding to Be That High.

Concrete piers are being put in on the site of the new Frerker building, in order to afford foundation for a 6-story instead of a 3-story building, as originally planned. The management of the Spalding hotel has practically closed arrangements with Frerker Bros. for a lease of the upper three floors of the new building, which will be connected with the hotel by doorways through the brick party wall. This will make the new building of the same height as the Spalding, and will provide greater architectural uniformity throughout the greater part of the block between Fourth and Fifth avenues west.

The ground floor and the Michigan street story will be occupied by Frerker Bros.' business, the second and third floors by the Commercial club, and the fourth, fifth and sixth by sleeping rooms for the Spalding.

BOTHERED THEM.

Contractors on Kelley Building Troubled By Water.

Hugo & Tims, the contractors on the pile-driving for the Kelley-How-Thompson Hardware company building on lower Fifth avenue west, have been having considerable of a wrestle with their job for the past two weeks because of the inflow of water into the excavation. They shut it out from the slip side, but still it came in to trouble them. Finally it was found that the leak was through a stone foundation wall of the building adjoining it. Several experiments to prevent the leak failed, and then it was decided to cribpile the side next to the building in question and build a coffer dam. This has just been completed after two weeks of provoking experience, and the leak seems to have been effectually stopped. The piling is driven in very thick clusters with the evident intention of putting in a basis for a very heavy building.

Just across the street the foundation walls for the new building to be occupied by F. A. Patrick & Co., which are being constructed of Sandstone stone, are rapidly approaching completion, and bricklaying will begin very shortly.

HAVE LONGER RUNS.

South Shore Conductors Run Through to Sault.

The passenger conductors on the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic night run now run through from the Sault to Duluth, a distance of 416 miles. This is perhaps the longest consecutive run made by any conductor as a regular thing who comes into Duluth.

The change is said to have been made at the solicitation of the conductors themselves. All of them have homes at Marquette, and heretofore their longest lay-off was at that point. Under the new order of things, this lay-off at home is materially lengthened. The new arrangement also allows the conductors to get in about 6300 miles of mileage each month. Some passenger conductors running into Duluth draw pay, it is said, for as low as 4300 miles each month.

Heretofore they have run only from between Duluth and Marquette, a distance of 261 miles.

The present method was in use some six or seven years ago, but was changed at the request of the conductors themselves.

Next Sunday, June 15, Will Be the First Time.

The Pennsylvania special will leave Chicago 12 noon, going through to Pittsburg, 10:20 p. m., 468 miles, without stopping for passengers, reaching Philadelphia 6:56 a. m., New York, Twenty-third street station, 9 a. m., Eastern time. The train of Pullman compartment and drawing room sleeping cars, and dining car, will run daily. H. R. Derling, A. G. P. Agt., Chicago, will answer inquiries about it.

Another Improvement.

CHICAGO, BOSTON AND NEW YORK TRAVEL.

On and after June 15th, the Erie railroad will still further improve their Boston and New York service by offering to the public a handsome limited train to leave Chicago from Dearborn station every day at 10:30 a. m., arriving New York next afternoon at 3:30, and Boston at 9 o'clock.

There is no doubt that this service will be highly patronized, as this new train will land the traveler in New York city in ample time to permit him to proceed leisurely to his hotel or home, rest, dress, dine and spend the evening in whatever manner may appeal to him most.

This every-day morning train will consist of standard Pullman drawing-room and sleeping cars. All meals en route served by the famous Erie dining cars. No extra fare charged on this train.

BATHED IN CRATER

Of Quiet Pelee But an Eruption Soon Followed.

Swimmer Found the Water In the Crater Ice Cold.

Very Naturally, Was Unable to Reach the Bottom.

London, June 13.—We were a handful of English people who inhabited the old French Creole city of St. Pierre, writes William Trowbridge in Black and White. "Fou Anglais," the native people called us in their soft, rapid patois. Because we did mad things in the way of exploring their beautiful island—things very harmless and natural to persons in strange countries, but utterly impossible to the well-regulated Creole. But Martinique, the Pearl of the Antilles, was too fascinating to leave without having seen it thoroughly. So on fete-days and Sundays we half-score mad English exiles slipped the chains of work that tied us to the busy old-world town and scoured Martinique like the common or garden tourists.

At the end of the three months I had seen that blackened ruin, in a tangle of aloes and wild-banana trees, that was the birthplace of the Empress Josephine; I had seen H. M. S. Diamond, as a rock in the sea near Fort de France is called, where in the grand old wars a handful of Rodney's bluejackets for several months laughed to scorn all efforts of the redoubtable De Grasse to dislodge them; I had seen Behanzin, king of Dahomey, exile and prisoner of state in Martinique, and photographed him in the midst of his wives and children; I had seen the Fontaine Chaude, where high above the sea in the balmy air of a bamboo forest the fever-stricken French soldiers bathe away the malaria in a hot sulphur spring that gushes out of the rocks; I had seen the wonderful Grande Anse, where the Atlantic breaks on the shore in billows half a mile long; I had made myself hail-fellow-well-met at all the Usines, where the French royalist planters, with names like a page of Froissart, dispense hospitality as munificently as in the good old times. In a word I had seen everything that was to be seen in Martinique, everything but looked into the crater of Mont Pelee.

Two miles out of the town we passed the Usine Guerin, one of the largest sugar factories in Martinique, which in these very days has been obliterated by the lava river as it rushed with incredible velocity down the slope of Mont Pelee. In the great yard strewed with newly reaped sugar cane young Guerin was standing in the midst of his laborers, who were singing a patois song as they worked to a weird African air. He hailed us to stop, and insisted on our drinking a stirrupcup of rum and water to give us luck. Five miles further on, at the fishing village of Precheur, we found the parish priest pruning his rose trees in a quaint Creole garden. He made us breakfast with him, and an hour later we were climbing the mountain on our hardy creole ponies.

It was not long before the road came to an end in the midst of a tiny negro hamlet. Here we dismounted, sent the ponies back to St. Pierre by a negro lad, and armed with matchets—cutlasses used for reaping the sugar cane—we began the ascent of Mount Pelee, while the whole population of the hamlet, men, women and children, stood in the single street regarding us with a silence full of timid curiosity. They never expected us to return, as the mountain was said to be infested with serpents whose bite is death.

After three hours hacking our way through the dense underbrush, we came to a vast, rocky clearing, and saw towering in front of us in a blaze of dazzling sunshine the round summit of Mont Pelee—the shaved mountain, for there is no vegetation worth speaking of on the slopes of its last 1000 feet. Beneath us, over a veritable green sea of tree-ferns and bamboos, lay the Caribbean as smooth as a turquoise. We couldn't see the red roofs of Precheur, but something that glittered like a diamond we took for the city of St. Pierre 4000 feet below us. In spite of the rough climb, having to hack every foot of our way through the forest, we were not fatigued. The balmy breeze like an anodyne was blowing down the mountain, and we were too high to feel the sun. The rest of the way was comparatively easy work, and it was with a feeling of intense exhilaration, such as all those who have scaled a great mountain experience, that we finally reached the summit.

Looking away from the mountain, the view was magnificent; the whole of Martinique was spread out beneath us, and on one hand St. Lucia like a gray ghost rose out of the filmy sea, while on the other, seeming almost near enough to touch, towered the green gigantic volcano of Dominica—Mont Diablotin. But what met our eyes immediately around us was uncanny. A lake of black water without a ripple lay in what looked like an iron cup that might have belonged to a giant. It was the crater of Mount Pelee.

"I almost wish I handn't come," I said to H——, with a certain nervous dread; "there is something mysterious in the terrible silence and something menacing in the desolate grimness of everything.

"Pshaw!" replied H——, "the volcano is extinct. Why, it hasn't even smoked for nearly half a century."

We clambered down the side of the crater to the little lake at the bottom—about 150 feet. H—— began to undress.

"I am going to swim across," he said. "Come on, it will be something to say."

But the terror of the volcano was on me, and refused. I watched him with fascination as he flopped about in that black water, and my heart seemed to stand still when he twice disappeared trying to touch the bottom. "It's too deep for me and as cold as ice," he said, when he finally came out.

Towards sunset, without mishap, we reached the beautiful little town of Morne Rouge, on a plateau surrounded with hills, which give it the appearance of having been the bed of a former crater. Some friends put us up for the night. We were so tired that we went to bed at once. We had not been asleep a half hour when I awoke in a cold sweat. At first I thought I was dreaming that I was at sea. The wooden walls of the room creaked like the timbers of a ship; there was a rumbling like the breaking waves—the bed was swaying; I was very dizzy, and it was very dark!

"H——!" I cried, when I could find my voice. "O, God; what is happening!"

"It's only an earthquake! Go to sleep," said H——, petulantly.

H——'s coolness gave me courage, but when I heard the rumbling again, followed by the swaying and creaking, I got up and lit the candle. There was a sound of wailing and shrieking and the howling of dogs. I was afraid to remain in the house, and calling H—— I went into the road. There I found the whole of Morne Rouge assembled in a panic.

"Look!" said H——, who had followed me.

I turned in the direction in which he pointed. A thin column of smoke issued from the crater of Mont Pelee. Over forty years the volcano had once more become active.

Mont Pelee feel asleep after that night to awake suddenly and more appalling in these evil days, as all the world knows. Who shall ever say of a volcano that it is extinct?

LIND WILL

Again Head the Democratic State Ticket, Says Rosing.

St. Paul, June 13.—"John Lind will be nominated by the Democratic convention," said L. A. Rosing after the meeting of the Democratic executive committee. Mr. Rosing is chairman of the Democratic state central committee and Mr. Lind's close friend and chief political lieutenant.

"Will he accept the nomination?"

"The convention could scarcely be expected to nominate him, unless it was pretty certain he would accept," replied Mr. Rosing with a smile.

"Has Mr. Lind told you he would accept the nomination?"

Mr. Rosing thought a moment and glanced quizzically at the inquirer. Then he proceeded deliberately:

"Now, all I can say is that he will be nominated by acclamation. He will be the Democratic candidate for governor."

The meeting of the executive committee was called to make final arrangement for the Democratic state convention June 24 at Minneapolis. The chairman of the Hennepin county committee was present and most of the arrangements were left in the hands of the Minneapolis people. There was also a temporary chairman to elect, but the selection was not made.

It was decided at the meeting of the central committee in May to nominate Lind, and force him to accept the nomination.

VIRULENT CANCER CURED.

Startling proof of a wonderful advance in medicine is given by druggist G. W. Roberts, of Elizabeth, W. Va. An old man there had long suffered with what good doctors pronounced incurable cancer. They believed his case hopeless till he used Electric Bitters and applied Bucklin's Arnica Salve, which treatment completely cured him. When Electric Bitters are used to expel bilious, kidney and microbe poisons at the same time this salve exerts its matchless healing power, blood diseases, skin eruptions ulcers and sores vanish. GIRLS FOR CHORUS

Art of Getting Them Told By Edwin E. Rice.

No Manager Has Known As Many Extremes of Fortune.

Buried Deep Under Misfortune But Bobbed Up Smiling.

New York, June 13.—Edward Everett "Evangeline" "Up-and-Down" Rice, native of Boston, citizen of the realm of musical comedy, authority on stage beauty, is again on the wave of prosperity. "The Show Girl" may not be another "Evangeline" or "Adonis" or "1492" or "Excelsior, Jr.," but it is doing very well, thank you.

And Rice, the irrepressible, the phenix of the stage, has come to his own again. No manager in the country has known as many extremes of fortune, probably no manager has made more money than he, and certainly not one has lost so much.

There was a time when he was buried so deep under an avalanche of misfortune that those who knew him never expected to see his face again. But he bobbed up smiling, energetic, resourceful, and as optimistic as ever.

For it is the game and not the gain that appeals most to this remarkable man. It is doubtful if there is any showman who is so happy in a truly successful venture as Rice, and who cares so little whether his profits are $1,000 or $2,000 a week. And it doesn't make much difference in his expenditures.

"Put money in bank?" said Mr. Rice a friend who suggested that he exercise ordinary business caution when wealth was rolling in upon him. "Put money in bank? Me? Never. I'm too good a business man for that. If you put money in bank it goes 'bust' and then where are you?"

More than any other one man, Mr. Rice is responsible for the prominence now occupied by the chorus. Now every musical comedy and comic opera must have such a chorus as Rice once had exclusively. When he was asked about the change that has come about he sniffed.

"There hasn't been any change," he declared. "The chorus girls of today are just the same as those that helped make 'Evangeline' popular. They are a hard-working lot, and they always have been."

Rice didn't elaborate on this statement, but hurried on.

"The girls are just as pretty and bright as they ever were, and no more so. My chorus in the "Show Girl" compares most favorably with the famous beauty chorus of 'Evangeline,' '1492,' 'Excelsior,' 'Adonis,' and other productions.

"There is the present-day type of beauty," and he pointed to a photograph of the pretty, refined face of Ethel Jackson, who married Fred Zimmerman, Jr. "She is my ideal beauty.

"Of course there has been a radical change of taste so far as costuming is concerned. Everything now must be not only up to date, but a little beyond. The chorus girl of today is a very up-to-date young person, indeed, but she is not prettier nor brighter than her sister of a quarter of a centurg ago. Managers are now more careful in making their selections. They realize that nobody wants to look at ugly women."

If ever a man lived up to a motto it was Mr. Rice. "Never let the world know you are down" is his motto, and he makes it the important part of his creed. When Rice is down he simply drops out of sight so far as the Atlanta cities are concerned, but when Rice is up all the world knows about it.

For twenty years his name attached to comic opera has been a pledge of pretty girls in the chorus. And he has exploited more stars in the comic opera and musical comedy field than any of his contemporaries—Lillian Russell, Fay Templeton, Nat Goodwin, Peter F. Dailey, Henry E. Dixey, Theresa Vaughn, Pauline Hall, Louise Montague, Sadie Martinot—the list could be stretched out indefinitely.

In a reminiscent and communicative mood Mr. Rice chatted the other day to the Post-Dispatch. The famous manager was a boy showman and he ran a boy's newspaper, like many another youngster. He became a steamship agent and was an actor for a year.

Mr. Rice was 23 years old when "Evangeline' was produced at Niblo's garden in 1874. In those days Dixey played the hind legs of the heifer. Later he was to be the star in the best burlesque and most successful one ever played in this country, the record-making "Adonis."

In all of the thirty-seven successes, according to Rice, that he produced between 1875 and 1900 pretty girls were ever the feature. It was admitted that Rice had a genius for finding pretty girls and showing them to the best advantage.

"How did you always manage to have so many pretty and shapely girls in your chorus?"

"Merely by accident, I suppose. My taste happened to agree with that of the general public. My idea of feminine loveliness seemed to be theirs.

"I never had any preference for a particular typ. Blonde or brunette, it was all the same to me. Of course I knew that a plump, full face makes up better than a long, thin one, which is likely to look cadaverous on the stage, but there is not much difference in types so far as stage beauty is concerned."

"How did you succeed in having your choice of the attractive young women? Is it true that you used to write them: 'Don't do anything until you hear from me?'"

"Yes, I did, and they always waited. And I didn't pay any higher salaries than the other managers. One reason was that my choruses had a reputation for beauty, and that attracted girls. Another reason was that I always gave people a chance. I brought most of my stars up from the ranks. I was always on the lookout for talent, and I am yet, and those who gave promise of being able to do something were always given an opportunity.

"I think that is the secret of it. Most chorus girls are ambitious. I think those of a quarter of a century ago were rather more ambitious than those of today, chiefly because a pretty chorus girl is more important now than she was then. She receives more attention and can command a higher salary."

Contagious Blood Poison

Is the name sometimes given to what is generally known as the BAD DISEASE. It is not confined to dens of vice or the lower classes. The purest and best people are sometimes infected with this awful malady through handling the clothing, drinking from the same vessels, using the same toilet articles, or otherwise coming in contact with persons who have contracted it.

It begins usually with a little blister or sore, then swelling in the groins, a red eruption breaks out on the body, sores and ulcers appear in the mouth, the throat becomes ulcerated, the hair, eye brows and lashes fall out; the blood becoming more contaminated, copper colored splotches and pustular eruptions and sores appear upon different parts of the body, and the poison even destroys the bones.

Ten years ago I contracted a bad case of Blood Poison. I was under treatment of a physician until I found that he could do me no good. Then began taking S. S. S. I commenced to improve at once and in a very short time all evidence of the disease disappeared. I took six bottles and today am sound and well.
R. M. Wall, Morristown, Tenn.

S. S. S. is a Specific for this loathsome disease, and cures it even in the worst forms. It is a perfect antidote for the powerful virus that pollutes the blood and penetrates to all parts of the system. Unless you get this poison out of your blood it will ruin you, and bring disgrace and disease upon your children, for it can be transmitted from parent to child. S. S. S. contains no mercury or potash, but is guaranteed a strictly vegetable compound.

FILLING UP.

Level of Northern Pacific Yards Is Rapidly Rising.

The topography of the Northern Pacific yard grounds at Rice's Point is rapidly undergoing a marked change as the result of the flow from a huge hydraulic dredge that is located out in the basin of the westerly side of Rice's Point. Excavations are being made for the slips, and the sand is being pumped into the low ground lying between the bay shore and the main tracks. The level of the yards in the vicinity of the new roundhouse and shops has been materially raised, and, nearer the street, the space that was formerly under water has been elevated almost to a level with the main track grade.

To the east of the roundhouse and shops the yards and tracks have been raised considerably. The interior of the car shop, which will be capable of making repairs to coaches as well as to freight equipment, has been completed ready for what machinery will be installed. The easterly end of the roundhouse structure, which is devoted to machine shops, furnaces and a heater for heating water for the locomotives before they are filled up, so that steam can be gotten up in very short order, has been completed. The basement under the shop portion has been filled up with sand up to the first floor. The furnace and heater are in position.

The roundhouse is finished throughout with brick floors, and the pits are of solid brick with brick floors, and drain pipes leading to the sewers. Three sections of six stalls each have been completed, and as many more remain to be built on the upper end. The material for a great deal of this building is on the ground. Work on the water tanks has also been resumed.

BROKEN BY BOTH

License of Former Revoked and Latter Suspended Sixty Days.

Local Steamboat Inspectors Monaghan and Chalk have filed their findings, after investigating the cause of the collision between the steamers George G. Hadley and Thomas Wilson, which occurred just out of the Duluth harbor last Saturday morning.

The inspectors found the masters of both vessels to blame, but placed the burden of the blame on Capt. Fitzgerald of the steamer Hadley.

The license of Capt. Fitzgerald has been revoked, while that of Capt. Malcolm Cameron of the steamer Wilson has been suspended for sixty days.

In revoking one license and suspending the other the inspectors did so on the ground that certain rules relating to the passing of vessels were not observed.

The inspectors found that the Hadley changed her course suddenly, and blew two blasts of her whistle, but not until after it was too late to avert a collision; that the Hadley lay by after the collision and Capt. Fitzgerald and his crew did all in their power to rescue the crew of the Wilson.

The inspectors referred to rules 1 and 5 of the Pilot Rules, which relate to passing signals or whistles to be given in case either one of two vessels approaching each other is about to change its course. By the rule it is the duty of the master of the steamer first determining to pass either to the port of the other to signal his intention by one blast of the whistle. This is to be answered by a similar blast from the whistle of the other steamer. In the case of a passage to the starboard two signals must be given and answered. Rule 5 says that these signals by whistles shall be given not only when the boats are meeting "head on," but also when passing or meeting within half a mile of each other, whether passing to the starboard or port.

The inspectors find that both masters failed to observe these rules, and are equally at fault for not doing so.

That part of the findings which places the greater blame on Capt. Fitzgerald of the Hadley says that the Hadley starboarded her wheel when the vessels were about to pass each other, and that they were then too near together for the Wilson to avoid a collision, which movement is not authorized by any rule.

It was also found that after the Hadley changed her course it was the duty of the Wilson to have complied with rule 3, instead of continuing at full speed. The rule says that when steamers are approaching each other and the pilot of either vessel does not understand the course or intention of the other, whether signals are given or answered erroneously, the pilot so in doubt shall signify the same by several short, rapid blasts of the whistle, and if the boats are within a half mile of each other, both shall have slowed to a speed barely sufficient for steerageway until the proper signals have been given and the boats have passed each other.

The revocation and suspension is also based on failure to observe this rule.

"In compliance with section 4450, revised statutes, we have investigated the case of a collision between the steamers George G. Hadley and Thomas Wilson, which resulted in the sinking of both vessels and drowning of nine men, all of whom were members of the crew of the steamer Wilson.

"In the report of the master of the steamer Thomas Wilson, it appears that she was loaded with ore, and on then sual course of vessels bound down the lake; that the Hadley was bound for Duluth, on a course so far to the northward of the Wilson's course that no passing signals were given, and they were about to pass port to port when suddenly, without any signal or warning, the Hadley swung sharply to port toward the Wilson's course, as though under a hard a-starboard helm. The Wilson's wheel was thrown aport, which was the only way of avoiding a collision, and the Wilson swung to starboard away from the Hadley, but the Hadley continued her sheer to port and struck the Wilson heavily on the latter's port side, just forward of the after hatch. Just before the collision the Hadley blew a signal of two blasts of her whistle, but it was too late to do anything in response to this. The Wilson sank at once in twelve fathoms of water, carrying down and drowning nine of her crew. The collision occurred at about half past ten o'clock in the forenoon of June 7, 1902. The weather was perfectly clear, with a light breeze from the northward.

"In the report of the master of the steamer George G. Hadley, it appears that the vessel was loaded with coal and bound for Duluth; that at a little after 10 o'clock a. m., on June 7, 1902, the Hadley collided with and sunk the steamer Thomas Wilson about three-quarters of a mile from the Duluth canal piers. The Wilson immediately sank, having been struck by the Hadley on her port side, stem on. Nine of the crew of the Wilson are reported drowned. Before the collision the Wilson was bound out of the Duluth piers, while the Hadley was bound in. While headed substantially for each other the Hadley's helm was starboarded and a signal of two blasts was blown to the Wilson. Receiving no answer to this, the Hadley was immediately stopped and backed, hoping to swing clear of the Wilson, but the latter ported her helm and swung directly across the course of the Hadley, and the collision was the result. The Hadley began to fill with water rapidly, but she remained in the vicinity of the wreck and by lowering her boats and throwing life-preservers, rendered all the assistance in her power to the crew of the Wilson. After everybody had either been saved or had disappeared, the Hadley was ran for shore and succeeded in reaching the beach just south of the harbor piers at Duluth, where she went down in twenty feet of water. None of the crew of the Hadley were injured.

"The evidence shows that when the steamer "Thomas Wilson" was passing through the Duluth canal the "George G. Hadley" could be plainly seen about two miles away, a little on the port bow of the Wilson, and that each vessel continued running in their relative positions until they were within about a quarter of a mile of each other, and that no passing signals had been given by either vessel. The vessels would then be considered as approaching each other head and head, or nearly so, and each should have complied with the requirements of rules I and V of the pilot rules, which are as follows:

"'Rule 1. When steamers are approaching each other "head and head," or nearly so, it shall be the duty of each steamer to pass to the right, or port side of the other; and the pilot of either steamer may be first in determining to pursue this course, and thereupon shall give, as a signal of his intention, one short and distinct blast of his whistle, which the pilot of the other steamer shall answer promptly by a similar blast of his whistle, and thereupon such steamers shall pass to the right or port side of each other. But if the course of such steamers is so far on the starboard of each other as not to be considered by pilots as meeting "head and head," or nearly so, the pilot so first deciding shall immediately give two short and distinct blasts of his whistle, which the pilot of the other steamer shall answer promptly by two similar blasts of his whistle, and they shall pass to the left or on the starboard side of each other.'

"'Rule V. The signals, by the blowing of the whistle, shall be given and answered by pilots, in compliance with these rules, not only when meeting "head and head," or nearly so, but at all times when passing or meeting at a distance within a half mile of each other, and whether passing to the starboard or port.'

"Both steamers failed to observe these rules and are equally at fault for not doing so.

"The Hadley starboarded her wheel when the vessels were in said position, and they were then too near together for the Wilson to avoid a collision, which movement is not authorized by any rule. It was the duty of the Wilson to have complied with the requirements of rule III of the Pilot Rules, when the Hadley changed her course, instead of continuing at full speed until the collision occurred, which fact is shown by the evidence. Rule III of the Pilot Rules is as follows:

"'If, when steamers are approaching each other, the pilot of either vessel fails to understand the course or intention of the other, whether from signals being given or answered erroneously, or from other causes, the pilot so in doubt shall immediately signify the same by giving several (five or more) short and rapid blasts of the whistle; and if the vessels shall have approached within half a mile of each other, both shall be immediately slowed to a speed barely sufficient for steerageway until the proper signals are given, answered and understood, or until the vessels have passed each other.

"'Vessels approaching each other from opposite directions are forbidden to use what has become technically known among pilots as "cross signals"—that is, answering one whistle with two, and answering two whistles with one. In all cases, and under all circumstances, a pilot receiving either of the whistle signals provided in the rules, which for any reason he deems injudicious to comply with, instead of answering it with a cross-signal, must at once observe the provisions of this rule.'

"For failing to observe the rules mentioned, the license of Michael Fitzgerald, as master and pilot, is hereby revoked, and that of M. C. Cameron, master and pilot, is suspended for sixty days.

"JOHN MONAGHAN.
"MICHAEL F. CHALK."

Capt. Fitzgerald said last evening that he is satisfied if the inspectors are. He thinks the testimony told his side of the story clearly, and that when he swung over the Hadley would have cleared the Wilson had the latter held her course.

Capt. Cameron is on his way to the Soo to take charge of a tow barge of the Pittsburg Steamship company until the term of his suspension as pilot and master shall have expired, when he will be given another steamer.

Retail Lumber Trade Lively Owing to Large Amount of Building.

"While there is not much doing in the wholesale trade," said one of the local lumbermen yesterday afternoon, "the retail business at the head of the lakes is very large, in fact it is better than at any other period of the year for some years past. There is so much building going on in Duluth and vicinity, and all of the local yards are doing an excellent business. The best of it is that the prospects are for a continuance of the demand throughout the season.

"The local manufacturers are also doing a good car trade to the West and Southwest, where there was a promising field offered. The advance of 2 cents in the rate, however, has shut us off to some extent from the new territory.

"I understand that as high as $15 per thousand has been asked and received for No. 3 boards, while even higher prices have been given in some instances for better grade. Another indication of market conditions is the price of Norway, which has been sold within the last week for $15 log run. There have been times when Norway has been sold for prices as low as $5 and $6, but those times are past.

"There may not be the lumber consumption at the head of the lakes that there was ten or eleven years ago, when the docks and elevators were built of wood and from lumber sawn here, but the prices are better now than then, and the manufacturers are well pleased with conditions."

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

At Spring City, Mo., a mining camp, seven men were buried alive in a cave-in at the St. Paul mine.

A small tornado and cloudburst broke hundreds of plate glass windows in Ottumwa, Iowa, flooded basements and did heavy damage to farm buildings in that vicinity.

The main tent of the Harris Nickel Plate circus was blown down by a tornado at Sigourney, Iowa. Twenty-five people were injured. Miss Clara Campbell, aged 20, was hurt about the back and may not recover. Samuel Utterbeck was seriously injured in the head. The injuries of the others were slight. The tent was crowded at the time of the accident.

Harry Elkes broke all accredited world's bicycle records from one mile to forty-one in riding 41 miles 250 yards, in the hour, against Stinson's 40 miles 330 yards, made at Brockton last year. Elks' fastest mile was 1:23¾.

Holleben Now the Diplomatic Dean.

The people of our country who are so particular as to form and precedence in the matter of diplomatic intercourse have discovered that the fact that Herr von Holleben presented his credentials to the state department as ambassador from Germany just forty-five days earlier than did M. Jules Cambon, the ambassador from France, gives to the former the honor of being dean of the diplomatic corps at Washington. The narrow margin of six weeks in this case determined the successor of the late Lord Pauncefote to the role of dean, this title going to the ambassador with the longest service at Washington to his credit. Dr. von Holleben came here Nov. 29, 1897, and on Jan. 15, 1898, M. Cambon arrived. Now that the question of the deanship of Cuba and the deanship of the United States has been settled, it is hoped that nothing more will be heard of the matter for some years to come.

Controversies Between House and Senate.

It begins to look as though the closing days of congress would be enlivened by a controversy of the old-fashioned sort between the two houses over four measures: The army appropriation bill; the Cuban sugar situation; the Philippine bill; the anti-anarchy bill. It is said that the conferees on the army bill, who broke up in a disagreement some days ago, have not since resumed business, and while they will doubtless come together the incident has provoked considerable feeling on both sides and accentuates the other controversies. There has been no doubt for some time that at least forty-five Republicans in the senate could be secured for a Cuban reciprocity plan in line with the administration's wishes; the effort has been to secure so nearly unanimous Republican support in the senate for some compromise measure as to put out of commission the insurgent forces in the house. The party majority is so large in the senate and so small in the house that success by a narrow margin in the upper chamber would not foreshadow victory in the lower. But the administration leaders in the senate are getting very tired of waiting for the beet sugar people to agree to something that could reasonably be accepted. It is expected that one week's debate will be given to the Philippine bill in the house, and that it will begin on June 18. The debate will be chiefly devoted to the merits of the house bill, in distinction from that which passed the senate. The Republican press on the country gives evidence of rallying to the side of Governor Taft and the administration, in expressing a preference for the house bill, which greatly encourages the leaders of the committee in charge of the affair that some legislation may be enacted. There is some prospect that the subsidy bill will be reported out of house committee by means of the absence of one or more Democrats and a full attendance of Republicans. The leaders are desirous of this for while they would not expect to have the bill taken up by the house, they would like to have it put in readiness for possible action at the short session.

DULUTH NOT GUILTY.

Referring to the discussion in the Hagues Norwegian Lutheran synod of removing the seminary from Red Wing, and the offers made on behalf of Minneapolis and Duluth, the Minneapolis Tribune says:

"The whole state will feel like congratulating Red Wing upon her success in retaining the Hagues synod seminary, in the face of such formidable competitors as Minneapolis and Duluth. And without any desire to impeach the motives of the enterprising men of these cities who 'went after' the seminary, we cannot forebear remarking that it is small business for a big city to try to take an educational institution away from a little one. Such contests were a natural and inevitable feature of territorial days, but in these times of expanding development there are enough prizes for all, and it is needless for one community to attempt to build itself up at the expense of another."

The Herald is not acquainted with the circumstances under which the Minneapolis offer was made, and therefore is not in a position to say whether the charge made against that city by the Tribune in connection with the seminary location is correct. So far as Duluth is concerned, however, it is able to say most positively that there is no basis for the statement that this city, of its own initiative, tried to take the seminary from Red Wing, and that the Tribune is laboring under a misapprehension of the facts.

The Duluth Commercial club was requested by members of the Hagues synod to submit an offer of a location for the seminary. It was represented that the synod would remove the seminary from Red Wing. In the Duluth proposition no bonus was offered, but it was simply stated that if the synod favored this city a certain property, suitable for seminary purposes, could be obtained at a price considerably below its original cost. Duluth is not trying to build itself up at the expense of other communities, and made no such attempt in this case.

A PLEA FOR DELAY.

One of the arguments of the opponents to any isthmian canal legislation at present, is, that during a high tide of prosperity, such a stupendous undertaking should not be considered. They claim that it would be better to save this great enterprise, which it has been estimated will employ 50,000 men, until there is some slackening in the home demand for labor and supplies. It must be taken for granted that this railroad betterment, which is now so notable, cannot go on forever; there is only a limited amount to be done. What is going to absorb the great body of labor which drops out as this work nears completion? Our shipyards, according to many close observers, will within a year be nearly an end to the rush period occasioned by the Spanish war purchases by the government and other demands growing out of the changes made on the map of the world. Theoretically, the government ought to undertake any great operation, like an isthmian canal, at a time when it would brige over a period of depression rather than emphasize a demand already overpowering. In the matter of letting contracts, any business investor would hesitate to put out a $200,000,000 project now, with the present prices of labor and of materials. Any contracting syndicate which receives a bid on an isthmian canal at fair rates today, would make a gain of perhaps 25 per cent if there should be any slump in the market before its work was completed.

The congressional library building at Washington, with all its ornament and beauty, is a monument to the falling prices of the years when it was under construction. The money appropriated would buy a great deal more when the time came to expend it than congress had supposed, and hence the elaborateness of the decoration. Today, all our public building projects are going through the opposite experience; they are either being carried out on a more moderate scale than had been intended, or getting an additional appropriation. Some buildings have been stopped altogether because the government allowance proved too small in the face of rising prices. However, congress is not likely to consider this question, as governments are not in the habit of figuring as would individuals. Like many people the government spends the most when the most is being spent by the country at large. This policy accentuates the periods of prosperity and of depression. The great tendency which operates to correct these disparities is the movement of prices, which in years of depression puts a premium upon enlargements and a corresponding discouragement in boom times.

THE SCHOOLS IN CUBA.

The American school policy in Cuba is not highly commended by the leading members of the new republic, but whether it will be continued under the new regime is a question yet to be decided. There is nothing in the Platt amendment requiring Cuba to maintain its free schools on the scale organized during the American period of administration, but if the system should break down the judgment of the world will be unfavorable and the dissatisfaction of Cuban parents active. President Palma is himself an excellent teacher of many years' experience, and his disposition will be to improve the schools, not to let them run down. In each district boards of education are elected by the people, and other American ideas introduced to strengthen local interest in the schools everywhere. But local school taxation is unknown, so the cost falls upon the ventral government.

The situation has been set forth in a magazine article by Matthew E. Hanna, who was intrusted with the task of creating free schools in the island and who carried out the plans successfully. Before the outbreak of the last Cuban insurrection only 598 schools existed in the entire island, with an attendance of 35,000 children. Spain collected $30,000,000 in Cuba, but spent nothing for public education. One of Gen. Wood's first acts was to establish a public school system. The revenue of the island in 1901 was $17,000,000, and $3,000,000 of the amount was set apart for public education. The Americans left behind in Cuba a well-organized free school system, with 5000 schools, 200,000 pupils and 3600 teachers receiving salaries of from $30 to $100 a month. At first teachers were opposed to examinations, but none is employed now without a certificate of fitness. The cost is about one-sixth of the money raised for the Cuban treasury, and the question is, if the Cuban congress will stand an expenditure so much at variance with old conditions.

The Cuban school problem will be hard for the leaders to solve. They know what ought to be done, but whether they can do it is a question. Whatever happens, one thing will always be remembered by the people with gratitude, and that is the American school policy.

Senator Hanna declined to accept the gift of cigars sent to him by Cubans in Washington who are working for reciprocity, and who sent similar gifts to other leading public men. "I will not let a box of cigars stand in the way of my doing what I may believe to be right," he said. This may be handed down to posterity with the other remark of the man who said he would rather be right than be president.

Women are generally good at shopping, but sometimes they make mistakes. For instance, the Boston Globe relates that a Banger man gave his wife a nickel to get him something to smoke, and she came back with four cigars. Moreover, she got mad when he declined to smoke them.

Even in these days of steam and electricity, it is worth noting that the British bark Garnett Hill has just made the 4900-mile journey from Japan to San Francisco in twenty-four days, on one of which she made a run of 315 nautical miles.

The Boston Globe thinks that the person who will devise a means of getting people interested, even slightly, in the June bridegroom, will bring down the blessings of a multitude of neglected men these days.

The new British taxes on grain and flour are not to be repealed because of the coming of peace in South Africa. That ought to be the very reason for repealing them, one would suppose.

The sum of $1520 was found the other day in one of a dead circus man's socks. Yet, considering the size of the Duluth circus crowds, this is not surprising to any one here.

England pays her diplomats almost as much as the United States pays her president. The British ambassador to Germany draws $45,000 salary.

Secretary Root is going to Europe in August to accompany Mrs. Root back to the United States, and get her trunks through the custom house.

A Delaware man is sending to market strawberries so big that twelve berries fill a quart cup. They cost the consumer more than a cent apiece.

"Why should men strive after gold?" asks J. D. Rockefeller, Jr. Probably because they find that gold is a very useful article to possess.

"I tell you a young man ain't got a chance in New York nowadays," says ex-Chief Devery. Why does not Mr. Devery come West?

ODD FELLOWS.

St. Paul, June 13.—The Minnesota grand lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Minnesota Rebekah assembly concluded their annual sessions at the capital yesterday afternoon with the election of officers. There was a spirited contest for the position of grand master of the grand lodge of Odd Fellows between S. A. Farnsworth, St. Paul; C. A. Fosnes, of Montevideo, and C. R. Wilkinson, of St. Paul Park. Mr. Fosnes was elected on the second ballot. The other officers elected were: Deputy grand master, G. S. McCulloch, Brainerd; grand warden, W. S. Elliott, St. Cloud; grand secretary, A. L. Bolton, St. Paul; grand treasurer, C. M. Sprague, Sauk Center; grand representative, William McGregor, Minneapolis. The following officers were appointed by the president: Grand marshal, A. E. Botsford, Duluth; grand conductor, C. B. Waddell, St. Louis Park; grand guard, W. L. Winslow, Battle Lake; grand herald, Emile Kaiser, Winona. The proposition to change the system of electing the grand officers was defeated at Wednesday's session of the grand lodge. The proposed reduction in lodge fees and the increase in mileage allowances were also defeated. About 500 members of the grand lodge attended the sessions.

The Rebekah assembly elected Mrs. May E. Davis, of Minneapolis, but a member of Dodge Center lodge, president; Mrs. Bertha Lieber, of Minneapolis, vice president; Mrs. Margaret Scheutze, of Red Wing, warden; Mrs. Eunice Melville, of Minneapolis, secretary, and Ina Erb, of Brainerd, treasurer.

Mrs. Nellie N. Budd, of Montevideo, was chosen a member of the home board to succeed Mrs. Stella Stimson.

A constitutional amendment was adopted reducing the travel pay of delegates from 2½ to 2 cents per mile.

An effort was made to make the terms of lodge officers one year instead of six months, but this was defeated.

Martha lodge, of Minneapolis, was awarded the banner for the greatest increase in paid-up membership for the year.

GIANT

Has Dwarf Arrested on Assault Charge.

New York, June 13.—C. K. Mack, a 7 foot 2 drum major, and George Libel, a 3 foot 9 program man, were "personally conducted" to the West Side police court by the press agent of the band which employs them both. The big man said the little man pinned placards on his back with such inscriptions as "Fool," "Kid," "Lobster," and "Baby," and further annoyed him by poking him in the ribs. He wanted the program man bound over to keep the peace.

The press agent got Lawyer Moses Grossman, who is almost as short as Libel, to appear for Mack. He also said he had engaged Col. Taliaferro, who is nearly 7 feet tall, to represent Libel. Col. Taliaferro did not appear, so Mr. Grossman represented both sides, and the press agent led the principals before Magistrate Barlow.

Magistrate Barlow made short work of the case. He told the defendant to leave the plaintiff alone, and for both parties to keep the peace.

AT THE HOTELS

"Hemidji is very prosperous," said W. F. Street, Beltrami county's foremost citizen this morning. Mr. Street, who used to live at Superior a number of years ago, was at the Spalding this morning on his way home from a trip to the Twin Cities. "Our country is developing very rapidly. The new international road, which is being built north from Bemidji by the Northern Pacific is now twenty-six miles beyond Bemidji. It will be extended north to the boundary at an early date, but Koochiching may not be reached this year. This is because the country through which it must pass is so wet from the heavy rains the past spring that it will probably be impossible to work in it until late in the season. Engineers are now in the field locating the line into some timber that Minneapolis parties desire to cut the coming winter. This timber is in Itasca county. Contractors are also figuring on the job of making this extension. There is no question but that the road will ultimately and at no very distant day be running into the town of Koochiching."

"I went to the special session of the legislature last winter believing that we could take up the whole question of tax law revision and handle it at one time," said Senator McCuskick, of Pine City, at the St. Louis this morning, "but I was convinced that we should have to take up the matter piecemeal. There is no question but that the tax laws need revision badly, but we found that taking up the whole question at once embroiled too much opposition from all over the state. Everybody who was against anything was up in arms against the bill, and that includes a pretty large army. We shall have to start in and take up one part of the question at a time.

"Regarding money for your new normal school, I have always been a consistent supporter of Duluth, not only because I feel friendly and have good friends in the delegation from here, but because I realize that if the northern part of the state is going to get anything at all it must stick together on all things, just as the southern part of the state does in opposition to everything that the northern part wants. Moreover, I am a normal school product myself, and I appreciate the value of the training to be had in these institutions.

"Our part of the country is prosperous like most others just now. Vacant lands back from the railroads are settling up rapidly, and the farmers are prosperous. We can raise pretty nearly everything on our soil, but the farmers choose to raise chiefly vegetables, corn and other grains than wheat. Our country is very advantageously located for marketing these products. It is situated very nearly equally distant between the four cities—Duluth, Superior, St. Paul and Minneapolis—and finds a ready market for its potatoes and other vegetables, hay and dairy products."

Senator McCuskick said that he understood that Representative Pope of his district had concluded not to become a candidate for the senate as was an intention when he visited Duluth recently. He also added that Mr. Pope would probably not run again for the house. The most likely candidates for the house on the Republican ticket, he said, were J. L. Olson, of North Branch, and W. F. Rowe, of Lindstrom.

"Is Cloquet prosperous?" echoed J. E. Lynds, a well known lumberman of that city, who was at the Spalding for a short time this morning. "Well, I guess it is. There has been plenty of water this spring and the logs have come down in fine shape. The lumber business, as you must know here, is in a most active condition, and we would be happy if we only had more lumber to sell. I have been at Cloquet for sixteen years, and we have had 70,000,000 or 80,000,000 feet of lumber in the yards there most of the time. Now there isn't to exceed 15,000,000 feet. Of course the fact that such a large part of the old cut has been shipped out makes it seem a little quiet just now in respect to shipments, but it means simply everybody including the wage earners, have made more money than they ever have before in a winter and early summer season."

IN MICHIGAN.

Marquette—On a vote on the question of expansion in the great camp of the Michigan Maccabees the issue was defeated by a vote of 1469 to 876, the necessary two-thirds majority failing to materialize. There are two organizations—the great camp, with 101,000 members, now in session here, and the supreme tent, with 300,000 members. The great camp has no reserve fund, while the supreme tent has a reserve fund of $2,000,000. The latter's membership covers the various states, while the great camp, working on a similar basis as to its ritual and purposes, differs in financial methods.

Calumet—John S. Morrison, of this city, and Roger C. Williams, of L'Anse, have purchased from the Detroit Construction company a large tract of land well wooded, with valuable cedar and hemlock, having fifteen miles of lake front on Huron bay. With the property and lake front the right-of-way of the dismantled Huron Bay railroad has been purchased, and it may be utilized for a logging road. The transfer is one of the largest made in the upper peninsula in some time.

Wausaukee—About forty Indians passed through Wausaukee on their way to the Red river district Keneshena Indians, near Wabemo, Wis., and with them celebrate a gigantic medicine dance, which will last several days. The Indians made the entire trip, about forty miles, on their ponies. These medicine dances are annual occurrences among the Indians of this district, most of whom are of the Menominee tribe, from the White Rapids reservation.

Menominee—Arthur C. Nelson, aged 26 years, died of confluent hemorrhagic smallpox, commonly known as black smallpox. This is the only case of the disease in this form that has appeared in the city, although there were many cases of a milder type.

The burial of Daniel P. Nason, aged 77, an old member of Company E, Twelfth Wisconsin, brings forth an occurrence which is something seldom heard of now. All the pall bearers were men from the same company and fought side by side with the deceased during the civil war.

The death of Chauncey Whiting, Sr., of the town of Clitherald, occurred at his home on the 7th. Mr. Whiting was 82 years old and was one of the pioneers of Minnesota, having led the first colony to Otter Tail county in 1864.

James Cameron, of this city, purchased all the remaining logs of the Kirby-Carpenter company, which will probably be sawed by the Burns & Hicks company. The logs have not come down yet, so the exact amount is not known. It is estimated to be between 400,000 and 500,000 feet of pine. This cleans up the timber owned by the Kirby-Carpenter company doing business here about forty years.

NO TRACE

Found of Stirling, Who Threatened Suicide.

New York, June 13.—Whether Arthur Stirling carried out his expressed intention of killing himself by drowning is still unknown. His body has not been found, but neither has anything been heard from him. Because of a letter written by the despondent man to P. R. Marvin, a stenographer in the excise department, 1 Madison avenue, in which he announced his intention of drowning himself, the police have been asked to look for his body.

It is almost three months since Marvin last saw him. On Sunday, chancing to go to his office, he found there this letter:

"Dear Mr. Marvin—I have to write you a letter which you will find rather abrupt and star——ing, but I am ill, and I have not much time and can't make it any better. You must excuse my troubling you. I know no one else to turn to.

"I am about starved out—I have only a few cents left—and I have made up my mind to kill myself and save time. Want somebody to put a notice of some sort in a paper, because I have some people out in Chicago and I imagine I owe that to them. I think you owe me some change from our last bill. Make the notice short. Put Chicago papers copy, or something such. Hurriedly yours.

A. STIRLING.

"I'm going to drown myself in the Hudson. I thank you for your services and wish you happiness."

The letter was without date or address and had been posted at Station W, which is at 498 Columbus avenue. Marvin, convinced from what he knew of the man that he would keep his word, inserted in a morning newspaper the following advertisement:

"STIRLING—By suicide in the Hudson river, poet and man of genius, in the 22d year of his age, only son of Richard T. and Grace Stirling, deceased, of Chicago. Chicago papers please copy."

WILL BE NO STRIKE.

Pittsburg, June 13.—There will be no strike of iron molders in this city, the joint committee of manufacturers and workmen having reached an amicable agreement. The molders demanded an advance of 10 per cent in wages and a minimum wage rate of $3.20 a day. The terms of settlement were not given out.

PASTURAGE FOR MULES.

Lancaster, Pa., June 13.—Pasturage has been obtained at Coleraine, this county, for more than 3000 mine mules from the Schuylkill coal region. Twelve hundred have already arrived and 2400 more are on their way. The quarters have been engaged for all summer.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

WHAT IS THE RATE?

Vesselmen and Shippers Differ Over the Lumber Rate.

Shippers Claim It Is Broken But Vesselmen Deny It.

Little Lumber to Be Shipped at the Present Time.

What is the going lake lumber freight? Vessel brokers claim it is still $2.50. Shippers claim it has been successfully broken to $2.37½ or even $2.25.

The uncertainty about the matter arises from the fact that considerable chartering is done by the owners of the lumber from their offices at Buffalo or other receiving ports on the lower lakes. It is added to by the firm belief of shippers that the rate has been broken and by the determined insistence of the brokers here that it has not. "It has" and "It has not" is bandied back and forth with considerable freedom, and some little spirit at times.

It is confessed by the brokers that the rate is barely steady—well nigh weak. But they claim that 12,000,000 feet carrying capacity of the lumber fleet has been diverted to the ore trade the past week or ten days, and that this has relieved the situation materially. More vessels will go the same way ,they declare, if the lumber carrying trade seems to demand further relief from surplus tonage. Meanwhile the tow barges were laid up by action of the Lumber Carriers' association about a couple of weeks ago, are still in ordinary.

Shippers claim that the circumstances under which the Manistique and Our Boy were chartered were very peculiar. Boats had been placed to load Hurd lumber at the "going rate." That term in itself may be something of a confession of weakness, for on a firm or strong market the $2.50 price would be definitely named. Then the representatives of this tonnage are said to have begun dickering with other shippers, but not much more than feeling. Then all at once the tonnage was offered to others at the $2.50 rate. The Manistique and Our Boy took the lumber that the boats referred to had been chartered for "at the going rate." The suspicion of shippers is that the shipper and vessel owner could not get together on the rate and that the Manistique and Our Boy was offered at a shading of the $2.50 figure. Otherwise, they ask, why didn't the boats originally chartered take out the loads of Hurd lumber.

A vessel broker, when asked about this phase of the matter this morning, said: "The lumber rate has not been broken. I have heard that the vessels in question were placed at less than the agreed rate, but ths it not true. Vessels were chartered at $2.50 just before, and they have been placed since at the same price. Conditions are not as pressing for active lumber shipments as we would like, and we are seeking to relieve the freight market by diverting the surplus tonnage into other channels, but the rate is steady."

"The bulk of the dry lumber has been shipped," said a shipper this morning. "The clients of one shipper only have any quantity of seasoned lumber fit to ship, and they seem not to be anxious to move their stock.

"Very little of the lumber sawed during the winter is fit to ship yet. It seems to be true that nature intended that logs should lie in the water for a while for assistance in wasing out the sap and pitch. Winter-sawn logs are very seldom kept in the water very long. They are brought to the mill by rail and piled on the bank, because it is impossible to keep sufficient area of slip open by steam.

"The result is that this winter-sawed lumber seasons very slowly, and even when seasoned is pitchier than the lumber sawed from logs that laid in the water long enough for the sap to wash out.

"Then again, this has been a very slow seasoning spring. There has been very little warm, sunny weather. The air has been largely damp and slow to dry freshly-sawed lumber.

"Seasoned lumber has moved off very rapidly, and little is left on the docks. There is little of the new cut that could be moved to advantage. I don't see how the lumber carriers can hope to maintain the freight market at the $2.50 figure."

SUTTON RESIGNS.

Is Under Arrest on Charge of Perjury.

Saginaw, Mich., June 13.—Governor Bliss, who is at his home here, said today that he had received word from Lansing that the resignation of Col. Ell R. Sutton of Detroit, as regent of the University of Michigan, was in the executive office at Lansing. A warrant has been issued in Lansing for the arrest of Col. Sutton on the charge of perjury in connection with his trial on the charge of complicity in the state military clothing frauds, and he is missing.

DIED FROM INJURIES.

Chattanooga, Tenn., June 13.—J. T. Tompkins, of Nashville, an express messenger helper, is dead, as the result of injuries received in yesterday's wreck on the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railroad, this making the number of fatalities four. The report of the death of Express Messenger Webb was erroneous. He will live. All of the injured will also recover.

The time has arrived when first values are hardly considered for clearance. Means closed eyes to prices. As is their usual custom, they have put the price knife deeply into garments of almost every sort, but more particularly on lines that belong to small lots. Tomorrow will see many of these lots on sale, and will undoubtedly mean much to buyers of garments of any sort.

LISTEN TO THE KING

London Corporation and Council Addressed By Edward VIII.

Speeches Also Made By Lord Mayor and Others.

A Special Court Was Held at Buckingham Palace.

London, June 13.—King Edward held a special court at Buckingham palace today for the reception of addresses from the lord mayor, Sir Joseph C. Dimsdale, and the corporation, and from the London county council, congratulating his majesty on the restoration of peace. The king took occasion to express his sentiments on the subject more fully than heretofore, and the tactful recognition which he made of the sterling qualities of the Boers will doubtless materially aid in the work of appeasment in South Africa. His majesty, surrounded by the household, received the city dignitaries in the throne room and replying to the lord mayor's address, he said:

"I thank you in my own name and in the queen's for your loyal and dutiful address and the congratulation you tender us at the close of the war in South Africa. I heartily join in your expression of thankfulness to the Almighty God for the termination of the struggle which, while it entailed on my people at home and beyond the sea so many sacrifices, borne with admirable fortitude, has secured a result which will give increased unity and strength to my empire. The cordial and spontaneous exertions in all parts of my dominions as well as in your ancient and loyal city have done much to bring about this happy result.

"You give fitting expression to the admiration universally felt for the valor and endurance of the officers and men who have been engaged in fighting their country's battles. They have been opposed by a brave and determined people, and had to encounter unexampled difficulties. These difficulties were cheerfully overcome by steady and persistent effort, and those who were our opponents will now, I rejoice to think, become our friends. It is my earnest hope that by mutual co-operation and good-will the bitter feelings of the past may speedily be replaced by the case of loyalty and friendship, and that an era of peace and prosperity may be in store for South Africa."

Subsequently, in response to the address of the London county council, the king spoke as follows: "I thank you for your expressions of loyalty and affection toward myself and the queen. I rejoice with you at the thought that the victory which has crowned the perseverance and bravery of my forces will pave the way for the extension to the regions newly added to my empire of that system of government which, with God's blessing, will bring to South Africa the peace and prosperity that have in every quarter of the globe followed its establishment. The readiness with which my subjects throughout the empire have borne their part in this arduous campaign, now happily at an end, cannot fail to draw them still more closely together in bonds of loyalty and affection, and I confidently believe that the good feeling which is being displayed by those who were so recently our opponents augurs well for the future of that vast country which has been added to the dominions of the crown."

The civic dignitaries proceeded to and from the palace in gilded coaches, attired in their full state robes.

PECULIAR.

Boy Has Strange Ailment as Result of Testing Lungs.

Marlboro, Mass., June 13.—Physicians are greatly puzzled over the case of Wilrose Benoit, a boy of 14, who is suffering with a serious ailment of the throat brought on by the too free use of a lung testing machine at Lake Chauncey park, in Westboro.

According to the young fellow himself, his trouble is the direct result of blowing himself too freely.

Benoit went to Lake Chauncey in company with other young fellows, and the evening was passed about the park. Considerable time was devoted by the youngsters to a lung testing machine, which is open for business at all times on the nickel-in-the-slot plan.

A contest was soon on between the boys as to who could blow the strongest, and all were soon engaged in blowing themselves to the limit.

When it came Benoit's turn at the machine he exerted himself to such a degree in blowing into the tube that he was startled by feeling a snap somewhere in his head, and was suddenly seized with an intense pain under his right ear.

The pain continued all the way home and bothered him considerably all night. In the morning the boy's jaw and throat were badly swollen, and his condition was such as to cause his parents alarm.

He was examined by physicians, but no opinion was given out as to the nature of the injury, and the boy's condition is said to be a puzzle to those who have examined him.

KISSES

Are Forbidden In the Jersey City Depot.

New York, June 13.—"All trainmen, gatemen and ticket examiners in charge of the Jersey City exits will stop all persons from exchanging kisses upon the arrival and departure of trains in this station. This order must be rigidly enforced," is an order signed by Superintendent P. P. A. Abercrombie, of the Pennsylvania Railroad company, and read for the first time to the trainmen, ticket examiners and gatemen of the Jersey City terminus of the Pennsylvania railroad yesterday.

The employes were instructed verbally by Mr. Abercrombie to see that the order was rigidly enforced, and the gatemen are having their own troubles in carrying out their chief's directions.

It is claimed that during the rush of travel the exits and entrances have been blocked by those anxious to exchange greetings with their arriving or departing friends. John T. Metcalf, a veteran gateman, said:

"I have been with this company thirty years, but I'll be hanged if I ever had anything like this put up to me before. I see my finish right now.

It is estimated that the actual time lost each day in kissing at the Jersey City terminus, if added together, would consume ten solid days.

There were several ludicrous scenes when the gatemen attempted to prevent the affectionate caress. Men grew angry and the women—well, they generally cried and denounced the gateman as a "horrid man."

INCREASING

Are the Imports of Japan From the United States.

Washington, June 13.—The United States are making rapid gains in the share this country furnishes of the importations of Japan. The "Annual Returns of the Foreign Trade of the Empire of Japan" for the year 1901 has just been received by the treasury bureau of statistics. It shows that the United States which in 1881 furnished less than 6 per cent of the imports of Japan, supplied 17 per cent of these imports in 1901, and that the United Kingdom, our chief rival in that trade, which supplied over 62 per cent of those imports in 1881, furnished but 20 per cent of Japan's importations in 1901. The total value of Japan's imports from the United States in 1881 was 1,781,108 yen, and in 1901, 42,769,429 yen. The total value of Japan's imports from the United Kingdom in 1881 was 16,361,740 yen, and in 1901 was 50,575,788 yen.

The United States now stand second in the list of non-Asiatic countries in the imports of Japan, and fall but a few thousand yen below India, the only Asiatic country which ranks with the United States in the imports of Japan. Comparing 1901 with 1892, the growth of the principal countries of the world in the imports of Japan is shown by the following table:

Imported from	1892. Yen.	1901. Yen.
United Kingdom	20,789,332	50,575,788
British India	7,662,603	42,779,904

THE DAKOTAS.

Two Men Found Murdered In South Dakota Ranch.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sturgis—George Puck, formerly of Sioux City, and George Ostrander, formerly of Correctionville, Iowa, were found dead Thursday in their cabin on Puck's ranch, eighty miles from Sturgis. They both had been slain in their beds. No motive is known for the crime, unless it was robbery.

Huron—The Grand chapter, Eastern Star, elected and installed these officers: Mrs. Anna Marston, of Huron, grand matron; Marshall R. Brown, of Sioux Falls, grand patron; Mrs. Eva Davidson, of Springfield, assistant grand matron; Dr. J. B. Vaughn, of Castlewood, assistant grand patron; Mrs. A. H. McAllister, of Madison, grand secretary; Mrs. Alice Rowe, of Bryant, grand treasurer; Mrs. Ida Bertschy, of Keystone, grand conductress; Mrs. Lizzie Turan, of Milbank, assistant grand conductress. The Masonic Veteran association held its annual meeting and elected these officers for the ensuing year: A. W. Coe, of Deadwood, president; O. S. Gifford, of Canton, first vice president; J. L. Turner, of Springfield, second vice president; S. Drew, of Highmore, secretary; Bruce M. Rowley, of Huron, treasurer.

Steele—The barn, stabling for 100 head of cattle, granary with some seed grain and forty tons of hay, belonging to Sheriff John Noonan, located five miles north of Tappen, were burned. Neighbors arrived in time to save the house. No insurance.

Yankton—Grant Grandpre arrived from Chamberlain and identified the body from the river at this point as that of his oldest son, Earl, aged 13 years, who was drowned May 6 while fishing at Chamberlain.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—Since the strike, which delayed work on Fargo buildings, was adjusted, there has been a rush of work and the contractors are unable to secure a sufficient number of bricklayers. Efforts to secure bricklayers in the Twin Cities have been unsuccessful on account of the large amount of building in progress.

The city council passed an ordinance granting a franchise for an electric street railway of ten miles to M. E. McDonald, George H. Price and others of Scranton, Pa.

Jamestown—Engineer Mallick and family were injured by lightning, which struck their home in Valley City. The shoulders of Mr. and Mrs. Mallick were burned, their baby was struck and badly cut by falling glass, and a boy 6 years old had his hair burned off and his head scorched. All will recover.

"One Minute Cough Cure beats all other medicines for coughs, colds, croup and throat and lung troubles," says D. Scott Currin, of Loganton, Pa. Perfectly safe. Acts immediately. Croup yields to it. Cure grip, bronchitis, coughs. Max Wirth.

CROKER OUT

Of Tammany and Will Not Be Allowed to Return.

New York, June 13.—Those gentlemen who are described by the Hon. William S. Devery as sport, two spot and joke, and who are attempting to hold Tammany hall together, were poked up the other day by the Hon. David Bennett Hill, of Albany county, and were told that they ought to issue a statement to the public which would convince all who read it that they were the real thing in Tammany politics. The preparation of this proclamation was completed after forty-eight hours of the hardest kind of intellectual labor on the part of the regents, and it was given to the public. Here it is:

135 West Superior St. - Duluth, Minn.

"There has been so much criticism and misrepresentation regarding the present status of the leadership of Tammany Hall that we deem it proper to state at this time precisely what is the position of the advisory committee on this subject.

"Let it be stated once and for all that Richard Croker is not the leader in or of Tammany Hall, and that he will never again be that leader. He has gone out and shall not return.

"His friends and former associates, who regarded him as one having the highest capacity for leadership, are all agreed upon this.

"The characteristic that made him specially fitted for the place he used to fill was truthfulness. He said to the executive committee, when he indorsed the appointment of Lewis Nixon to the chairmanship of the finance committee, that he would never again enter Tammany Hall as the leader, and we have taken his word.

"The conditions that permitted individual leadership have passed.

"The executive committee has authorized the present management to do the real executive work of Tammany Hall, and, with the information and advice of all the other members of that committee, we purpose to direct the affairs of the organization to the best of our ability.

"We shall devote our best efforts to the welfare of the Democracy of the county of New York, and in this connection we will consider the advice of any true Democrat.

"CHARLES F. MURPHY.
"DANIEL F. McMAHON.
"LOUIS F. HAFFEN,
"Advisory Committee.

The statement bears a remarkable resemblance to those that Lewis Nixon used to give out, saying that he was not an agent of Mr. Croker, but Mr. Nixon never went so far as to say that Mr. Croker "shall not return."

"CHAPPIES AND LORDS."

Chicago, June 13.—"I don't want to ever hear anything from you again, or auntie, or any one else in the whole push. I am going over to London and have all the chappies and lords and counts in love with me, and I can do it, so please don't trouble me with 'any more whys or wheres or anything else."

This is part of a letter received by George W. Whitney, 42 Grand avenue, from his wife, Florence Whitney, and it was principally on the strength of it that he asked for a divorce from Judge Brown on the ground of desertion. The decree will be entered, it is expected, in a few days.

Trenton Falls, N. Y.

For a great many years Trenton Falls has been known as a summer resort with more than usual attractions. At this point the West Canada creek, which drains a large area of the Southern Adirondacks, descends about 300 feet through a picturesque gorge, forming a series of wonderfully beautiful falls and cascades, called by the Indians Kauya-hoo-ra, "Leaping Water." For several years the surroundings have been undergoing extensive improvements; an electric plant has been installed, and the falls, gorge and woods are illuminated by night, presenting a picture of rare beauty. Trenton Falls is eighteen miles north of Utica, N. Y., and is reached via the New York Central. You may read all about it in the New York Central's "Four-Track Series" No. 6, entitled "In the Adirondack Mountains." Sent free on receipt of a 2-cent stamp by George H. Daniels, general passenger agent, Grand Central station, New York.

SEMI-FINALS

Are Played In Woman's Golf Club Championship.

New York, June 13.—In the semi-final round for the Woman's Metropolitan Golf championship today, at the Essex Country County club, the chief interest centered in the match between Mrs. E. A. Manice and the present champion, Miss Genevieve Hecker. Miss Hecker's remarkable performance yesterday in making the 18 holes in 77 was sufficient in itself to attract many spectators to the links today. Mrs. Manice has been playing steady, fast golf, and her play today with the champion was watched with much interest. Before Miss Hecker's 77 yesterday, Mrs. Manice's M was the women's record for the course. Miss Helen Hernandez, of Orange, and Mrs. William Shippen, of Morris county, were the other players in the semi-finals. The day was sultry, but an overcast sky somewhat tempered the heat.

In the semi-finals for the consolation cup today, Mrs. W. F. Morgan, Baltusrol, played Miss G. E. Howard, of Essex county, and Miss A. C. Smythe, of Harbor Mills, played Miss Hester Kyle, of Essex county.

The match between Miss Hernandez and Mrs. Shippen was the first in the championship class to get away. Miss Hernandez started with a good drive. At the eleventh green she was 2 up. In playing for the 12th, Mrs. Shippen drove into the ravine and had to tee up and play 3.

Miss Hecker and Mrs. Manice got away about 11 o'clock. The first hole was halved, but Mrs. Manice won the second. The next went to Miss Hecker and made all even. The fourth and fifth went to Mrs. Manice, who was playing steadily. Miss Hecker did not start off at her gait of yesterday.

In the consolation match between Mrs. Morgan and Miss Howard, Mrs. Morgan was two down, playing for the 12th.

Mrs. Manice defeated Miss Hecker in the semi-finals for the Metropolitan championship and Miss Hernandez won from Mrs. Shippen. Mrs. Manice and Miss Hernandez will play the final match tomorrow.

FIRE BOSSES

Will Soon Decide Whether to Strike or Not.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 13.—At a meeting of the fire bosses to be held late this afternoon in this city, it will be definitely decided whether this branch of the mine employes will quit work. Several informal meetings have been held by the fire bosses, at which, it is said, the advisability of going on strike was discussed. Sixty fire bosses attended a meeting on Monday, but no definite action was taken. It was agreed to hold another meeting late today, at which it is believed final action will be taken on the future policy of the men.

AN OLD MAN'S LOVE.

He Is Rich and She Is a Belle.

Omaha, Neb., June 13.—Frederick Renard, of Oakland, Neb., although 84 years old, is anxious to marry, and the girl of his choice is aged but 22 years, Nellie Craig, the belle of the town. Renard's estate is valued at $200,000.

The family of the aged suitor sees ulterior motives in Miss Craig's readiness to wed, and they are making every effort to check the affair before she gets a hand in the old man's strong box. To do this, application was made in Knox county for the appointment of a guardian for him, but the process requires fifteen days' notice, and the old man, learning of this, started for the license bureau.

His relatives beat him to the court house and got out papers enjoining the clerk from issuing the license until after the matter of guardianship has been settled. Since the old man and the younger Renards have been racing about the country, the one seeking a license and, so far, the others beating him to the court houses and procuring injunction papers. They reached Omaha yesterday.

BOLD ROBBERY.

Minneapolis, June 13.—One of the boldest and most successful robberies ever perpetrated in Minneapolis was committed Wednesday night, when burglars entered the tailoring establishment of William Seamans, 206 Hennepin avenue, opposite police headquarters, and hauled away more than $1000 worth of goods and clothing. There is no clue to the robbers. The goods were apparently carried to the gate in the rear and there loaded on a wagon and hauled away. Not $50 worth of goods was left.

HAS MADE A RECORD

Amos Shepard Well to the Front Among Mining Men.

Showed His Ability as Manager of Quinnesec Group.

Joined Corrigan-McKinney Forces Only Three Months Ago.

It seems to be generally accepted that Amos Shepard has been promoted to be general superintendent of the mining interests of Corrigan, McKinney & Co. George W. Wallace, the retiring general superintendent of these interests, will, it is said, form a company or firm for the purpose of stripping and developing mining properties. He will also devote considerable time to his own mineral interests on the Westeren Mesaba and elsewhere.

The appointment of Mr. Shepard is said to have brought James Corrigan and Price McKinney here at this time. Mr. Shepard met them shortly after their arrival, and the following day they went up on the Mesaba to look over the Corrigan McKinney properties.

A well known iron man said yesterday that the promotion of Mr. Shepard is another illustration of the astuteness and good judgment of men that have been shown by Joseph Sellwood, who is coming to be considered by more iron men than ever before perhaps the ablest mining man in the business. Mr. Sellwood picked out Mr. Shepard for superintendent of the Quinnesec group of the American Mining company's mines, when Mr. Shepard was not particularly up on his luck. He had been in politics, and by the revolving cycle of things had dropped out. Mr. Sellwood needed a good man at the Quinnesec group, and he sent Mr. Shepard over there, though some people would not pick him for a winner.

But Mr. Shepard was made of the stuff that winners at the mining business are made of. He came of a Cornish family of miners, and mining was instinctive with him. Up at Tower he had attracted the attention of the Minnesota Iron company officials early in life, and worked up in the office to be chief clerk of the offices at Soudan. Then he went into politics, and was register of deeds of this county for four years, subsequently becoming under sheriff for a time.

Mr. Shepard's father was a miner before him, and the business has run in the family for years. His office experience broadened him and paved the way for the larger responsibilities of superintendence.

At the Quinnesec group Mr. Shepard made a fine record. Everything in the mining business nowadays is measured by the largest tonnage at the lowest possible price per ton mined. The cost statements that come from each mine monthly are voluminous and detailed in a minute way. The executive office watches these cost sheets with eagle eye, and quite frequently allows a bonus for a certain degree of efficiency shown with regard to both volume of production and cost.

Mr. Shepard made a splendid showing at the Quinnesec group, and last winter the Corrigan-McKinney people procured his services as assistant superintendent with charge of the Crystal Falls district. He has made such a line record there that when Mr. Wallace desired to retire, it is said to have been natural that Mr. Shepard should be called upon to fill his place.

Mr. Shepard will hereafter make his headquarters at the general offices in the Lyceum building.

Buys Pretty Home.

Whitney Wall reports the sale to Richard M. Sellwood of the Dr. Woodberry house, at 122 Twenty-first avenue east. The price paid is $6100. Mr. Sellwood will make the place his home. The house has been occupied by John P. Morrow for several years. It is considered one of the prettiest and most artistically-designed houses in the city. It has been owned in Massachusetts of late.

Mr. Wall also reports the sale of a lot on East First street, which will be improved soon with a brick residence.

AFTER WISCONSIN CENTRAL

May Fall Into Hands of the Goulds.

New York, June 13.—It is stated on good authority that the Gould interests are buying Wisconsin Central preferred stock. The recent purchase of the Ann Arbor road by the Goulds has led to the belief in railroad circles that they intend to extend their feeders into the very heart of the Northwest, and thus increase their traffic immensely. Control of the Wisconsin Central would give the Goulds a firm hold on a very desirable territory. At present Gates and his following are dominating the speculative interest in the Wisconsin Central deal. A deal between Gates and Gould is confidently counted on in financial circles.

GUILTY OF PECULATION.

New York, June 13.—Charles S. Shivler, who was secretary and treasurer of the American District Telegraph company in this city for many years, was arrested today at the direction of District Attorney Jerome. He was accused by the company of peculations for half a dozen years, amounting to between $16,000 and $17,000. The case was referred to the grand jury.

AT WEST DULUTH

All the machinery installed in the match factory here by S. E. Ewing, the former manager of the plant, has been taken out and replaced by modern machinery, and the Duluth Match company is now in better condition than ever before to handle its increasing trade. Suits are already pending in the courts against Mr. Ewing, it being charged that he misrepresented the machinery purchased, claiming that it was worth $10,000, when it really cost but $4,000. The factory is turning out matches at the rate of half a carload a day.

Some match factories have to close down during the summer months on account of the heat, which causes spontaneous combustion in the inflammable material used at the factories, but by a system of ventilation and Duluth's naturally cool climate, it is thought that the factory will be able to operate right through the warm months of the year.

About 150 people are employed at the factory now and the men at the machines are said to make from $2 to $2.50 per day, while the wages of the boys and young women run from 50 cents to $1.50 per day. The work is nearly all done by the piece.

YOUNGSTER TO BLAME.

According to the statements of the two boys who were on the wheel that is claimed to have run down and injured William Ashbeck, at the corner of Fifty-seventh avenue west and Cody street, the other evening, there is clearly two sides to the story and the boys were not so much to blame for the accident as it was at first made to appear. The boys are 13 and 12 years old, respectively, and were coming down Fifty-seventh avenue in the middle of the road. They claim that at Cody street the Ashbeck boy, following the practice of other small boys of the neighborhood, ran out to put a stick through the wheel between the spokes, but that the machine struck the stick with such force as to knock the youngster down. The boys claim they were not thrown off the wheel, that their bicycle did not hit the younger boy, and that looking back they saw a man picking the Ashbeck boy up and did not suppose that he was even hurt. The parents of the two boys say they will see no injustice done them and that if the parents of smaller boys in the neighborhood would punish their children for interfering with bicycle riders, there would be no accidents.

Several of the citizens residing along Fifty-seventh avenue have made complaint over the practice of wheelmen riding at a high rate of speed down the hill on the sidewalk. They claim that the practice is dangerous, not only to the riders, but to people along the sidewalks.

LAYING CEMENT WALK.

Work was started this morning of constructing a cement walk in front of the Greidler block at the corner of Central avenue and Bristol street. Before the new walks were put down on Central avenue there were reports of numerous property owners that would put down cement walks if the board of public works would establish the width at fourteen feet. Mr. Kreidler and Wieland & Wade, however, are the only property owners that are making their promise good.

WILL TAKE NOTICE.

The indications are that the board of public works will give immediate attention to the complaints that have been made regarding alleged unnecessary sidewalk condemnation in this part of the city. Two members of the board have assured one of the residents here that they will come out and look over the situation.

PENALTY FOR INTERFERENCE.

The 11-year-old son of J. C. Cox was badly bitten by a dog yesterday afternoon. The dog belonging to the lad became involved in a violent controversy with another canine, and the second dog bit the boy in the hand while he was trying to separate them. The left wrist was torn open to the bone, the dog's teeth narrowly missing the radial artery. Dr. Huntoon dressed the wound, taking a number of stitches. He does not anticipate any serious results from the dog's bite.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

The music committee for the West Duluth Republican club banquet which will be held at the Great Eastern hall next Wednesday evening has engaged Lanner's full orchestra for the evening. Special music is being prepared for the occasion.

This evening the regular monthly meeting of the West Duluth Commercial club will be held. There are a number of matters of general interest that will come up for discussion. There is some speculation as to whether the club will again take up the street railway extension proposition, many of the members believing it a matter to let alone for a time.

The committee on invitation for the Fourth of July celebration in West Duluth has sent an invitation to every fraternal order that it can reach to attend in a body the parade on Independence day. The committee says that there may be some organizations that were not reached, but that these, as well as all labor organizations, are cordially invited to assist.

Four carloads, or about 100 bronchos, arrived from the West this morning, and the railroad yard was a center of no small attraction to the West Duluth small boys today.

The annual memorial services of Old Hickory camp, M. W. A., will be held at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon in the Great Eastern hall. Rev. R. A. Saunderson, pastor of the Oneota M. E. church, will deliver the address. All other Modern Woodmen lodges have been invited to participate.

Within the next few days the Duluth Safety Car Stake company will have incorporated under the laws of Minnesota, capitalized at $20,000. The following officers have been elected: President, W. C. Gray; treasurer, H. W. Cheadle; secretary, John Cashin; board of directors, W. C. Gray, H. W. Cheadle, John Cashin, A. Hendrickson, John Feehley, Victor Method, Alex Stewart and Adam McAdams.

One of the employes at the Boston Dock and Wharf company's plant received severe cuts about the face and head this morning in falling from the top of a car.

A fire in the Mitchell & McClure lumber yards this week destroyed the roof to the company's dry kiln.

Missouri Pacific Freight Men Here---New Canadian Pacific Train.

J. O. Phillippi, assistant general freight agent of the Missouri Pacific road, is in the city today, getting in touch with freight traffic men. He is accompanied by Traveling Freight Agent Fisher, who has just been appointed to this district. Both make their headquarters at Omaha, and hereafter Mr. Phillippi, who until recently was assistant general freight and passenger agent of his road, will devote more attention to the Northwestern territory. Mr. Fisher will make this territory regularly. The Gould lines have been branching out of late in great shape, and it is presumed that this first step after Northwestern freight is in line with the new and more energetic policy that has been inaugurated. Considerable fruit comes here over the Southern lines, and this part of the country sends large quantities of potatoes and other Northern vegetables back. It may be that a heavy traffic can be worked up.

General Passenger Agent Fee of the Northern Pacific and General Superintendent Kimberly returned to St. Paul last night. Mr. Fee spent the day getting in touch with the situation here, and before leaving expressed himself as greatly pleased and grateful to Duluth people for the appreciation they are showing of the Northern Pacific's passenger facilities. He said the passenger traffic out of Duluth had shown a very large increase this year.

The general passenger department of the C. P. R. has advised General Agent Adson of the South Shore road that beginning next Sunday a handsome new transcontinental passenger train will be added to the C. P. R. service. This service will be tri-weekly—Sundays, Wednesdays and Fridays from Montreal, and Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays from Vancouver. The 2906 miles across the continent will be made in 87 hours. The cars are finished in the Louis Quinze style in red mahogany and the decorations are in ivory and gold. A tourist sleeper is attached to each train. Beautiful new dining cars have also been provided. A handsome new folder advertising this new train, which is to be known as the "Imperial Limited," has just been issued by Passenger traffic Manager Kerr of the C. P. R., showing illustrations of the train's interior and views of the picturesque country that the road passes through.

ITALIANS HELD.

Charged With the Murder of Dell Roberge.

St. Paul, June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—Tony Sentora and Louis Ventrilla were arraigned in police court this morning charged with murder in the second degree, following the death of Dell Roberge in the Sunday riot.

Through Dan Lawler, their attorney, they pleaded not guilty, waived reading of complaint and also preliminary examination. Both men were held for the grand jury by Judge Hine.

Dominico Quadrone, Savario Venrilla and Francesco Mattachere, also held by the police, were ordered discharged by the county attorney.

The two women held will have to stay in jail until next October. The next grand jury does not meet until that time.

HAS MADE A RECORD

Amos Shepard Well to the Front Among Mining Men.

Joined Corrigan-McKinney Forces Only Three Months Ago.

It seems to be generally accepted that Amos Shepard has been promoted to be general superintendent of the mining interests of Corrigan, McKinney & Co. George W. Wallace, the retiring general superintendent of these interests, will, it is said, form a company or firm for the purpose of stripping and developing mining properties. He will also devote considerable time to his own mineral interests on the Westeren Mesaba and elsewhere.

The appointment of Mr. Shepard is said to have brought James Corrigan and Price McKinney here at this time. Mr. Shepard met them shortly after their arrival, and the following day they went up on the Mesaba to look over the Corrigan McKinney properties.

A well known iron man said yesterday that the promotion of Mr. Shepard is another illustration of the astuteness and good judgment of men that have been shown by Joseph Sellwood, who is coming to be considered by more iron men than ever before perhaps the ablest mining man in the business. Mr. Sellwood picked out Mr. Shepard for superintendent of the Quinnesec group of the American Mining company's mines, when Mr. Shepard was not particularly up on his luck. He had been in politics, and by the revolving cycle of things had dropped out. Mr. Sellwood needed a good man at the Quinnesec group, and he sent Mr. Shepard over there, though some people would not pick him for a winner.

But Mr. Shepard was made of the stuff that winners at the mining business are made of. He came of a Cornish family of miners, and mining was instinctive with him. Up at Tower he had attracted the attention of the Minnesota Iron company officials early in life, and worked up in the office to be chief clerk of the offices at Soudan. Then he went into politics, and was register of deeds of this county for four years, subsequently becoming under sheriff for a time.

Mr. Shepard's first love was a miner before all and the business has run in the family for years. His office experience broadened him and paved the way for the larger responsibilities of superintendence.

At the Quinnesec group Mr. Shepard made a fine record. Everything in the mining business nowadays is measured by the largest tonnage at the lowest possible price per ton mined. The cost statements that come from each mine monthly are voluminous and detailed in a minute way. The executive office watches these cost sheets with eagle eye, and quite frequently allows a bonus for a certain degree of efficiency shown with regard to both volume of production and cost.

Mr. Shepard made a splendid showing at the Quinnesec group, and last winter the Corrigan-McKinney people procured his services as assistant superintendent with charge of the Crystal Falls district. He has made such a fine record there that when Mr. Wallace desired to retire, it is said to have been natural that Mr. Shepard should be called upon to fill his place.

Mr. Shepard will hereafter make his headquarters at the general offices in the Lyceum building.

Buys Pretty Home.

Whitney Wall reports the sale to Richard M. Sellwood of the Dr. Woodberry house, at 122 Twenty-first avenue east. The price paid is $6100. Mr. Sellwood will make the place his home. The house has been occupied by John P. Morrow for several years. It is considered one of the prettiest and most artistically-designed houses in the city. It has been owned in Massachusetts of late.

Mr. Wall also reports the sale of a lot on East First street, which will be improved soon with a brick residence.

AFTER WISCONSIN CENTRAL

New York, June 13.—It is stated on good authority that the Gould interests are buying Wisconsin Central preferred stock. The recent purchase of the Ann Arbor road by the Goulds has led to the belief in railroad circles that they intend to extend their feeders into the very heart of the Northwest, and thus increase their traffic immensely. Control of the Wisconsin Central would give the Goulds a firm hold on a very desirable territory. At present Gates and his following are dominating the speculative interest in the Wisconsin Central deal. A deal between Gates and Gould is confidently counted on in financial circles.

GUILTY OF PECULATION.

New York, June 13.—Charles S. Shivler, who was secretary and treasurer of the American District Telegraph company in this city for many years, was arrested today at the direction of District Attorney Jerome. He was accused by the company of peculations for half a dozen years, amounting to between $16,000 and $17,000. The case was referred to the grand jury.

AT WEST DULUTH

All the machinery installed in the match factory here by S. E. Ewing, the former manager of the plant, has been taken out and replaced by modern machinery, and the Duluth Match company is now in better condition than ever before to handle its increasing trade. Suits are already pending in the courts against Mr. Ewing, it being charged that he misrepresented the machinery purchased, claiming that it was worth $19,000, when it really cost but $4,000. The factory is turning out matches at the rate of half a carload a day.

Some match factories have to close down during the summer months on account of the heat, which causes spontaneous combustion in the inflammable material used at the factories, but by a system of ventilation and Duluth's naturally cool climate, it is thought that the factory will be able to operate right through the warm months of the year.

About 150 people are employed at the factory now and the men at the machines are said to make from $2 to $2.50 per day, while the wages of the boys and young women run from 50 cents to $1.50 per day. The work is nearly all done by the piece.

YOUNGSTER TO BLAME.

According to the statements of the two boys who were on the wheel that is claimed to have run down and injured William Ashbeck, at the corner of Fifty-seventh avenue west and Cody street, the other evening, there is clearly two sides to the story and the boys were not so much to blame for the accident as it was at first made to appear. The boys are 13 and 12 years old, respectively, and were coming down Fifty-seventh avenue in the middle of the road. They claim that at Cody street the Ashbeck boy, following the practice of other small boys of the neighborhood, ran out to put a stick through the wheel between the spokes, but that the machine struck the stick with such force as to knock the youngster down. The boys claim they were not thrown off the wheel, that their bicycle did not hit the younger boy, and that looking back they saw a man picking the Ashbeck boy up and did not suppose that he was even hurt. The parents of the two boys say they will see no injustice done them and that if the parents of smaller boys in the neighborhood would punish their children for interfering with bicycle riders, there would be no accidents.

Several of the citizens residing along Fifty-seventh avenue have made complaint over the practice of wheelmen riding at a high rate of speed down the hill on the sidewalk. They claim that the practice is dangerous, not only to the riders, but to people along the sidewalks.

LAYING CEMENT WALK.

Work was started this morning of constructing a cement walk in front of the Greidler block at the corner of Central avenue and Bristol street. Before the new walks were put down on Central avenue there were reports of numerous property owners that would put down cement walks if the board of public works would establish the width at fourteen feet. Mr. Kreidler and Wieland & Wade, however, are the only property owners that are making their promise good.

WILL TAKE NOTICE.

The indications are that the board of public works will give immediate attention to the complaints that have been made regarding alleged unnecessary sidewalk condemnation in this part of the city. Two members of the board have assured one of the residents here that they will come out and look over the situation.

PENALTY FOR INTERFERENCE.

The 11-year-old son of J. C. Cox was badly bitten by a dog yesterday afternoon. The dog belonging to the lad became involved in a violent controversy with another canine, and the second dog bit the boy in the hand while he was trying to separate them. The left wrist was torn open to the bone, the dog's teeth narrowly missing the radial artery. Dr. Huntoon dressed the wound, taking a number of stitches. He does not anticipate any serious results from the dog's bite.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

The music committee for the West Duluth Republican club banquet which will be held at the Great Eastern hall next Wednesday evening has engaged Lanner's full orchestra for the evening. Special music is being prepared for the occasion.

This evening the regular monthly meeting of the West Duluth Commercial club will be held. There are a number of matters of general interest that will come up for discussion. There is some speculation as to whether the club will again take up the street railway extension proposition, many of the members believing it a matter to let alone for a time.

The committee on invitation for the Fourth of July celebration in West Duluth has sent an invitation to every fraternal order that it can reach to attend in a body the parade on Independence day. The committee says that there may be some organizations that were not reached, but that these, as well as all labor organizations, are cordially invited to assist.

Four carloads, or about 100 bronchos, arrived from the West this morning, and the railroad yard was a center of no small attaction to the West Duluth small boys today.

The annual memorial services of Old Hickory camp, M. W. A., will be held at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon in the Great Eastern hall. Rev. R. A. Saunderson, pastor of the Oneota M. E. church, will deliver the address. All other Modern Woodmen lodges have been invited to participate.

Within the next few days the Duluth Safety Car Stake company will have incorporated under the laws of Minnesota, capitalized at $20,000. The following officers have been elected: President, W. C. Gray; treasurer, H. W. Cheadle; secretary, John Cashin; board of directors, W. C. Gray, H. W. Cheadle, John Cashin, A. Hendrickson, John Feehley, Victor Method, Alex Stewart and Adam McAdams.

Missouri Pacific Freight Men Here---New Canadian Pacific Train.

J. O. Philippi, assistant general freight agent of the Missouri Pacific road, is in the city today, getting in touch with freight traffic men. He is accompanied by Traveling Freight Agent Fisher, who has just been appointed to this district. Both make their headquarters at Omaha, and hereafter Mr. Philippi, who until recently was assistant general freight and passenger agent of his road, will devote more attention to the Northwestern territory. Mr. Fisher will make this territory regularly. The Gould lines have been branching out of late in great shape, and it is presumed that this first step after Northwestern freight is in line with the new and more energetic policy that has been inaugurated. Considerable fruit comes here over the Southern lines, and this part of the country sends large quantities of potatoes and other Northern vegetables back. It may be that a heavy traffic can be worked up.

General Passenger Agent Fee of the Northern Pacific and General Superintendent Kimberly returned to St. Paul last night. Mr. Fee spent the day getting in touch with the situation here, and before leaving expressed himself as greatly pleased and grateful to Duluth people for the appreciation they are showing of the Northern Pacific's passenger facilities. He said the passenger traffic out of Duluth had shown a very large increase this year.

The general passenger department of the C. P. R. has advised General Agent Adson of the South Shore road that beginning next Sunday a handsome new transcontinental passenger train will be added to the C. P. R. service. This service will be tri-weekly—Sundays, Wednesdays and Fridays from Montreal, and Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays from Vancouver. The 2906 miles across the continent will be made in 97 hours. The cars are finished in the Louis Quinze style in red mahogany and the decorations are in ivory and gold. A tourist sleeper is attached to each train. Beautiful new dining cars have also been provided. A handsome new folder advertising this new train, which is to be known as the "Imperial Limited," has just been issued by Passenger traffic Manager Kerr of the C. P. R., showing illustrations of the train's interior and views of the picturesque country that the road passes through.

ITALIANS HELD.

Charged With the Murder of Dell Roberge.

St. Paul, June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—Tony Sentora and Louis Ventrilla were arraigned in police court this morning charged with murder in the second degree, following the death of Dell Roberge in the Sunday riot.

Through Dan Lawler, their attorney, they pleaded not guilty, waived reading of complaint and also preliminary examination. Both men were held for the grand jury by Judge Hine.

Dominico Quadrone, Savarlo Venrilla and Francesco Mattachere, also held by the police, were ordered discharged by the county attorney.

The two women held will have to stay in jail until next October. The next grand jury does not meet until that time.

TO MAKE IT A PARK

Commercial Club Committee Favors One On Minnesota Point.

Will Suggest Also That Government Establish Veterans' Home.

Committee Will Favor Driveway Along Lake Shore Beach.

The Commercial club committee which is considering the Minnesota Point park scheme, will probably report in favor of making a national park out of all unplatted property on Minnesota and Wisconsin points.

Minnesota point is platted a distance of 14,000 feet from the north shore, and the plan likely to be suggested by the Commercial club committee would leave 32,000 feet for park purposes.

It may also be suggested that the government establish a recuperating station for invalid soldiers and sailors on this proposed park site.

The sentiment of the committee also seems to favor a recommendation that the city park board acquire a right of way for a beach driveway from the south side of the ship canal to a point adjoining the proposed government park.

Such a driveway would give abundant opportunity for cycling and the speeding of fast horses and automobiles.

The commercial side of the question—that is the opposition to the park scheme on the ground that Minnesota point is too good a site for the location of manufacturing industries, is not likely to be discussed in the committee's report, though it will undoubtedly be discussed by the club.

As long ago as 1881 efforts were made to induce the government to assume control of Minnesota and Wisconsin points, owing to the fact that the trees were being cut away, thereby endangering the natural breakwater.

In 1889 the matter was again taken up and has been given more or less consideration since that time.

It is supposed that at one time the shore of Lake Superior was somewhere near Fond du Lac. The discharge from St. Louis river formed Rice's and Connor's points. The gradual accretion extended Rice's point until its growth deflected towards the south, forming a quiet water at the north end, and Minnesota point was gradually washed up from the bottom of the bay.

Such is the theory of the formation of the strip of land on which it is now proposed to establish a military station and a national park. Wisconsin point lying south of the natural entry, is not platted, and it is considerably wider than Minnesota point.

The committee's suggestion that Wisconsin point be included in the national park scheme is not an entirely new one, and the suggestion seems to take favorably. The government has already acquired twenty-five acres of its northerly end and has spent $40,000 in improvements.

FINISHING.

Much Railroad Construction Work Is Nearing Completion.

A large number of the railroad construction jobs that were started early this spring are completed or will be within the next few weeks, and the labor market is already beginning to feel the effects of it. Among the contractors that will soon have their contracts finished are John Runquist, on the Duluth & Iron Range road, and Halvorson & Richards, on the Missabe. The railroad contract work at Eveleth has been completed, that at Hibbing and Virginia will be within ten days.

In Wisconsin Winston Bros. are still building road for the Northwestern, but they will finish their contract before the middle of July. It is said that there is not a piece of railroad work that will last the season.

Next week bids will be called for on a 15-mile extension of the Minnesota & International road, northward from Turtle Lake to Nebish, to connect with the old Halvorson & Richards logging road that runs back twenty-eight miles to Red lake. The logging road was bought by the Northern Pacific company last year.

This work, it is claimed, will be one of the hardest propositions that the contractors have been called on to confront in Northern Minnesota in the way of railroad extension, for the reason that the intervening country is either rocky or else well sprinkled with sinkholes.

The Great Northern company has a number of spur tracks under process of construction, but these, it is said, will not consume much time.

THEY WANT MORE.

Owners of Land Appeal From Commissioners' Awards.

Four parties whose lands have been used by the Minnesota & North Wisconsin Railroad company for logging purposes, have appealed to the district court from the awards of the commissioners in condemnation, alleging that their allowances are inadequate. They are as follows: Hogan Lindahl, owner of the ne¼ of the nw¼ and the nw¼ of the ne¼ of section 10, 50-15, claims $45 is too little; Siema E. Olson, owner of the se¼ of the se¼ of section 27, 51-15, alleges that $50 is inadequate; Julius Quade, owner of the se¼ of section 28, 52-14, says $25 is not enough; and William F. Thompson, owner of the w½ of the ne¼ of section 28, 52-14, claims that $40 is less than the land taken is worth. John Jenswold, Jr., is the attorney in all of these cases.

A LOADED BOTTLE.

Angeline Carrier Draws Much Trouble From It.

Angeline Carrier performed a most remarkable feat this morning.

She received a pressing invitation to spend a portion of the summer social season in the county jail. She reluctantly consented.

* * *

Joseph Jeannetti, a small Italian boy, born and raised next door to a volcano, and therefore always looking for trouble, was in court charged with "picking locks."

The testimony, however, showed that he only picked a few lilacs. He was more than satisfied with his little commitment for ten days. The presentation speech was made by the court.

* * *

Olaf Wilson gave the court a peculiar excuse for getting drunk. He was employed on the new steel trust building. Yesterday afternoon a hammer fell and hit him on the leg. A moment or two later a piece of brick fell and hit him on the toe. Five minutes after that a plank fell and hit him on the shoulder. Three minutes after that Wilson fell from grace.

MORE MEN AT WORK.

Fairmount, W. Va., June 13.—Reports from all up river towns are to the effect that more men are at work in the coal mines than upon any day since the strike was inaugurated.

ALL TRACE LOST.

Portland, Ore., June 13.—Trace of Tracey and Merrill, the escaped convicts, has been lost since yesterday afternoon. Three companies of militia and a posse of citizens are still in pursuit with bloodhounds.

TOW BOAT SUNK.

Rising Sun, Ind., June 13.—The tow boat Reden was sunk here last night by colliding with a barge. All of the crew of seven escaped. Thomas Allen, the steward, and his wife were injured, but they were rescued and are reported today as doing well.

COST OF FOOD.

Grape Nuts vs. White Bread, Etc.

A family figured carefully on the cost of food, taking into consideration the strength and health that Grape-Nuts furnished. The report is interesting:

"We first took up Grape-Nuts because it agreed with me so well. I was suffering from dyspepsia that medicine did not relieve. I frequently laughed at the idea when some of my friends told of the use of Grape-Nuts; however, one day Wife bought a package and we found it good and it agreed with me.

"We were accustomed to using white bread and oats, wheat or barley mushes boiled from two to four hours. We considered Grape-Nuts too expensive, but I noticed that, when I had a breakfast of Grape-Nuts I felt fine, and other days when white bread and other cereals were used I felt weak and bloated.

"One day about six months ago I said to Wife, 'I am satisfied that Grape-Nuts is the thing that makes me feel better in between the blue spells.' Then we sat down and figured awhile on the cost of living and came to the conclusion that we could live better and have on fifteen cents worth of Grape-Nuts than on twenty-five cents worth of white bread or cooked at home cereals. You see four teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts furnish more strength to work on than large quantities of other food, so we started on Grape-Nuts in earnest, using it every morning, and a wonderful change has come over me.

"I am gaining in weight every day. Never have any of the old bloated feelings. Feel strong and well and can endure more hard work than I could on the old diet, and this result is all without any doctor or drugs at all, but directly from using Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Recipes for many easy hot weather dishes in each package of Grape-Nuts.

ONE-MAN TORPEDO

A New And Wonderful Invention of Warfare Is Explained.

Can Destroy Warship Yet Not Larger Than a Fish.

Man Provided With the Means to Discharge the Weapon.

The torpedo charged so that it will blow a great warship to destruction; the man provided with means by which to discharge his dangerous weapon in a way to do the most harm.

Such is the latest of all torpedo boats—a one-man affair, not larger than a large fish, and yet as effective in its purpose, if the theory of its inventor is correct as one of the Holland submarine boats.

The man who has perfected this offensive and invisible destroyer is not a dreamer, if appearances and record count for anything.

Thomas J. Moriarity was for many years the mechanical expert in the employ of the United States government at the torpedo station at Newport.

It is said that no inventor ever before undertook a task better equipped for it than was Mr. Moriarity when he first conceived the idea of a submarine boat.

His years of service as a mechanical expert, his knowledge of what the navy would require in any submarine craft that might be adopted, his information on the various difficulties met in experimental work on the part of the government, practically qualified him for the task, and he now asserts that he has satisfactorily worked out his principles in a boat that will do just what is expected of it.

Mr. Moriarity was long ago impressed with the idea that the only way by which to make the action of the torpedo actually certain was to put an experienced operator inside it; while its automatic machinery operates with almost human intelligence, there is no certainty that it will on long ranges do exactly what is required of it.

From the idea of putting a man inside it to ..... of placing a man outside it, the transition was easy; and then it became a problem to give him a safe shelter, means of locomotion, of submerging and of discharging the projectile.

To accomp... these essentials he has devised a cigar-shaped boat of bronze plates, about 10 feet long, 3 feet deep and 5 feet wide. Beneath this is suspended the Whitehead torpedo in a frame, and it is propelled by compressed air when the operator has approached near the mark.

In making the wonderful boat ready for operation, the hatch holding it is closed, the latch is sprung, and this cover with its conning tower is opened by powerful springs, the latch sliding beneath the surface to the casing of the hull. This gives an entrance of about three feet square to the interior.

The hatches, of thick glass, are opened, and the engine, specially devised for propelling the boat, is adjusted. The stern hatches are then closed. By means of a connection with the engine, the air tank in the bottom of the boat is filled with air under great pressure.

A light is placed on the bottom of the boat forward, behind the slanting observation tube. The torpedo is slipped into the casing beneath the boat, and a circular yoke is revolved down over its nose until the point slips between the blades of the small port propeller, thus preventing it from turning, as the propelle actuates the firing mechanism after the projectile is discharged. If this point were not provided the propeller would turn with the first movement of the boat and the firing mechanism of the torpedo would be released, thus entailing a premature explosion if the nose should strike any object in the water while carried by the boat.

The operator puts on a waistcoat made of two thicknesses of air-tight material, to which is attached a small mouth tube, by which it is inflated. It serves as a padding for the body while the operator is in the boat and also as a life preserver in an emergency.

The operator enters a cock-pit and lies down on a cradle astride of its support. Padded prongs on the cradle curve over his shoulders and hold him in place, providing also a purchase for his arms when operating the lever in front of him. The boat is then put into the water.

The operator slides a movable weight along a bar, running fore and aft, until the boat sits level, bow and stern. He lowers his head and closes the hatch gaskets, making the joints with the hull water-tight. He then turns the hand-wheel beneath him, thus admitting water to the submersion tank in the bottom of the boat until the vessel sinks to the level of the base of the conning tower. Lifting his head into the conning tower, he may then see through the glass front the course before him.

By means of reflectors in front of him he sees whether the machinery behind him is properly adjusted, and, if so, pulls a lever, blowing the whistle on the forward mast, which is sounded by compressed air from the air tank. Grasping the hand levers and placing his feet on the treadles, he gives the propeller shaft a few turns, and thus starts the engine connected therewith, the gases of combustion from the machine passing through the exhaust.

Air is admitted through the rear mast also and circulates throughout the boat. This air tube is, however, automatically closed when the boat is beneath the surface of the water, and the conning tower is completely covered by means of a hydrostatic piston, open to the water at the bottom of the boat, the pressure of the water at the increased depth forcing up the piston, which actuates a lever to force a valve over the air tube opening, thus preventing the entry of water through it.

The same motion of the piston operates levers connected to a valve in the compressed air tank, opening it and thus allowing a fine stream of air to issue therefrom into the boat, and supplying the operator with fresh air. As the boat again reaches the surface, the pressure on the hydrostatic piston is released because there is less depth of water and the air tube is again opened and the air tank valve closed. An exhaust valve through the hull of the boat regulates the pressure within.

The boat is now under way. Glancing down through the slanting observation tube that extends through the top and bottom of the boat, its ends being covered with plate glass, the operator sees that the nose of the torpedo is properly held by the point and also any obstructions that might lie beneath him. In the night time a light placed just behind it and shining through the lens in the bottom of the boat upon the head of the torpedo fully illuminates it and the surroundings.

A signal light is also carried on the forward mast for use under certain conditions. The boat is steered by means of a lever.

The conning tower, being not much larger than a bucket, is well-nigh invisible on the water's surface to observers on shipboard, and this permits a close approach to a ship. As the hostile ships are neared the operator shuts off the engine.

He lifts a lever in front of him, which turns upward four fins, one being on either quarter of the vessel, bow and stern. The action of these fins is to pull the boat downward, because of the pressure of the water on them while the boat is under way. Moving the lever downward depresses these fins and caused the boat to rise.

Accordingly, the faster the vessel's speed, the more rapidly she rises and sinks. The operator then grasps the handle of the propeller shaft, places his feet on the pedals and moves forward under his own power until he is within short torpedo range of the hostile ship.

He stops, turns the hand-wheel before him. Its bevel gear revolves along the circular yoke from the war-head of the torpedo until the point, formerly resting on the propeller, strikes a rod projecting from the bottom of the boat.

This rod in turn connects with a valve in the compressed air tank, which discharges air into a cylinder fastened to the bottom of the boat. The compressed air forces out a piston in this cylinder.

To the exterior of the piston is attached a finger resting behind a projection on the top of the torpedo. The effect of the impulse is to violently thrust out the torpedo from its casing, a T-slot on the top of it holding it in line in the direction of the hostile ship.

TO SQUAWS.

New York Orphans Are Farmed Out to Them at Washburn.

G. M. Gates, a traveling man for a Chicago house, who was at the St. Louis this morning, told of what he considered an outrage that was committed at Washburn yesterday. Mr. Gates had business in Washburn. While there, he says, thirty children from some orphanage in New York state were brought to Washburn to be given homes with good and kindly disposed people. The little tots were from 2 to 4 years of age, and all of them bright and pretty as one could find in any home.

"Naturally," said Mr. Gates, "I took some interest in the class of people that had arranged to adopt the little ones. My attention had first been attracted by the very high class of children. You can imagine my consternation when I saw some of the sweetest of these children carried away by Indian women, and apparently not the best class of Indian women at that. It seems an outrage in these enlightened days that at least a dozen of these pretty children should be brought out in this Western country and farmed out among squaws."

REALLY DEAD.

Germanson's Airship Fantasy Not All a Diseased Brain Product.

A curious feature about the case of Albert H. Germanson, the Wright-Clarkson company's traveling man who was examined for insanity in district court yesterday, is that the brother he thinks he saw commit suicide in an airship in Duluth Wednesday is really dead, and that he died within a few days.

A telegram to Germanson's relatives at Neenah, Wis., yesterday afternoon developed the fact that his father was away attending the funeral of his son, Germanson's brother, who had died in another Wisconsin town, the name of which is not stated.

It is not known whether Germanson had word of his brother's death or not. He stated during his examination that he had received word that his father was dead, but the only thing he said about his brother was that he saw him commit suicide in an airship over Duluth Wednesday morning.

His father will be here as soon as he returns from the funeral of his other son, and probably Germanson will be turned over to him then. It is thought that he will recover from his insanity, which is believed to be only the result of excessive drinking.

LAST OF SEASON.

Elks Entertain Women at Pleasant Party.

Last night was "ladies' night" at Elks' hall and forty or fifty women were present at one of the pleasantest socials ever given by the Elks, who are deservedly reputed to be good entertainers. This will be the last party until fall. There was a dance at which everybody had a good time, preceded by a short musical program that was very good indeed. Dr. N. B. McNulty was chairman of the evening, and he performed his functions with good effect. Miss Allie Piper sang a solo beautifully; Miss Schultz sang delightfully, and Charles Applehagen and Franz Schulz gave pleasure with songs. Frank Huse gave a pleasing trombone solo, and Joe Medley gave a banjo solo acceptably.

STUDIES IN THE BOOK OF ACTS

PAUL CROSSES INTO EUROPE

International Sunday School Lesson For June 15, 1902.

Acts 15:6-15. "And they went through the region of Phrygia in Galatia, having been forbidden of the Holy Ghost to speak the word in Asia: and when they were come over against Mysia, they assayed to go into Bithynia: and the Spirit of Jesus suffered them not: and passing by Mysia, they came down to Troas. And a vision appeared to Paul in the night: There was a man of Macedonia standing, beseeching him, and saying, Come over into Macedonia, and help us. And when he had seen the vision, straightway we sought to go forth into Macedonia, concluding that God had called us for to preach the gospel unto them.

Setting sail therefore from Troas, we made a straight course to Samothrace, and the day following to Neapolis; and from thence to Philippi, which is a city of Macedonia, the first of the district, a Roman colony: and we were in this city tarrying certain days. And on the Sabbath day we went forth without the gate by a river side, where we supposed there was a place of prayer: and we sat down, and spake unto the women which were come together. And a certain woman, named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, one that worshipped God, heard us: whose heart the Lord opened, to give heed unto the things which were spoken by Paul. And when she was baptized, and her household, she besought us, saying, If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house, and abide there. And she constrained us."

MINISTERS OF CHRIST.

In the New Testament a very large amount of space is occupied with the deeds and writings of Paul. A casual reader might almost think that Paul had been the only worker of prominence in the propagation of the gospel outside of Judea. But there were others who, like Peter and Barnabas and Apollos, did their large share of evangelizing. Then, too, the Judaizing opponents of Paul were very active in disseminating their doctrines, especially in the Galatian religion. It was Paul's work, however, that established Christianity in the chief cities of the Roman Empire; and it was his work and massive intellect that, after Christ, determined the direction of thought and effort for all Christendom.

After their return from the council at Jerusalem, Paul and Barnabas made the Antioch church rich with their teaching and preaching. But they could not be content long to follow their beaten home paths. They were both seized with the old mission hunger, and simultaneously proposed that they go and visit the churches they had planted in Asia Minor in order to learn of their welfare and to minister to them in any way possible. But an unfortunate dispute arose between the two friends over Barnabas' proposition to take John Mark along with them. Mark had left them, without any sufficient reason, just as they were about to enter upon a critical stage of their first journey. Paul considered that defection too grave an offence against the prosperity of so important a journey to condone it with impunity and take Mark along for another trial. Hence, after a sharp contention, Paul and Barnabas agreed to part company in a friendly spirit, Barnabas taking Mark and going through Cyprus, while Paul selected Silas as his companion and journeyed northwards. At this point, Barnabas disappears from authentic history, except for one bare mention of him by Paul in I. Corinthians; but in the matter of the dispute Barnabas seems to have shown his far-sightedness, for Paul himself in after years recognized in Mark an invaluable fellow-worker (Colossians 4:10, 11. II. Timothy 4:11).

Silas was one of those upon whom had come the prophetic gifts of the spirit that had been foretold by Joel. He was a leader in the Jerusalem church, and probably a Roman citizen, for at Philippi, Paul, referring to both Silas and himself, said: "They have beaten us publicly uncondemned, men that are Romans." Silas was thus fitted by spiritual gifts, experience in his home church and citizenship for the great work to which Paul invited him.

It was in the spring of 51 A. D. that Paul and Silas, after they had been commended to the grace of God by the Antioch Christians, started on their tour of the churches. Up past the gulf of Issus, perhaps stopping at Tarsus, in Cilicia, on through the celebrated Cilician gates, they journeyed to Derbe and Lystra, where Paul renewed many friendships that had been formed in the course of his first tour. Chief among these friendships, so far as concerned the gospel, was that with a young man named Timothy, whom Paul desired to have join him in his work. He was accordingly ordained with the laying on of hands, and initiated into the work of an evangelist. The only qualification which Luke mentions to indicate Timothy's fitness for such work is that he was well reported of by those who knew him. Paul repeatedly speaks of him as his son in the gospel, and refers to him in his epistles in most affectionate terms. The student is at first very much surprised to read that Paul circumcised Timothy with his own hands. The explanation of the fact is that Timothy was about to enter upon a great work in which he must needs go among Jews and Gentiles alike. As the uncircumcised son of a Jewish mother he would not have been acceptable to the Jews. It was to fit him for acceptable service under all conditions that Paul had him circumcised. Paul would have been the last person in the world to have circumcised Timothy as a necessary prerequisite to enjoyment of the privileges of the gospel. There are some things, however, essential to qualify one for service that are not essential to one's salvation. This is as true now as it was in the time of Timothy and Paul. In matters of conscience, for instance, there are many things which one can do with impunity so far as his own moral character alone is concerned, but which he must refrain from in deference to the consciences of others whom he ought to influence for Christ.

This second journey was remarkable for the number of men whom Paul introduced as ministers of Christ. Luke was the third one. He was a native of Antioch, an uncircumcised Gentile convert, a disciple of the apostles, and a physician. He joined Paul at Troas and went with him to Philippi, where he remained until Paul's return on the third journey, after which he accompanied him until his arrival in Rome. He was with Paul in both Roman imprisonments, and is mentioned in Colossians, II Timothy and Philemon, and is perhaps referred to in II Colossians as the "brother whose praise is in all the churches." He was to Paul both a spiritual and physical comforter—an invaluable companion.

VISIONS OF DUTY.

"Man proposes, but God disposes." The route Paul planned for his itinerary was rapidly changed by the guidance of the Holy Spirit. Paul kept his mind and heart open toward heaven, so that a spiritual vision of duty was as normal to him as a personal choice of action is to the average man. He followed the paths God opened to him, which accounts for his great success in planting the gospel. He would have gone into the Province of Asia, but the Spirit forbade him and he continued through the Phrygian region confirming his former converts and gaining new ones. Then, being hindered by sickness, he devoted considerable time to the Galatians. There is much doubt as to just what is here meant by "Galatia." In the third century, before Christ, certain Gallic tribes had invaded Macedonia and Thrace, and had finally settled some distance south of the Black Sea, in Central Asia Minor. In 189 B. C., they were subdued by the Romans, but were allowed to retain self-government. Pompey created them a kingdom and Amyntas IV, their last king, greatly extended their territory, taking in parts of Phrygia, Pisidia, Lycaonia and Isauria. On the death of Amyntas, in the year 25 B. C., this extended territory became the Roman Province bearing that name, or to the smaller tribal district about Pessinus, Ancyra and Tavium. But to the present writer the evidence indicates that the "Galatia" referred to is the Roman Province, and that Paul preached to the cities he had formerly visited, being detained among them for a long time by some bodily affliction, and that he afterwards started to go into Bithynia, where numerous Jewish communities had settled, but was again directed by the Spirit to turn aside from his own plans and go westwards. The gospel, however, seems to have found early acceptance in Bithynia, for Pliny, who died about 117 A. D., wrote a letter to Trajan seeking advice how to deal with the Christians, which request implies that they were numerous in that region even at so early a date.

The Spirit led Paul through Mysia and down past the slopes of Mount Ida, of classic fame, to the city of Troas, upon which Rome had conferred special privileges because of her origin. Neither in his Epistles nor in the Book of Acts does Paul betray any fondness for the heroes of Greek legend, although he traveled over the region that is world-famous for its association with them. He was absorbed with other things, and, if he thought of Homer, and of Achilles, and Paris and Helen, it was only to associate them with ancient heathen religions and to determine to redouble his efforts to win all the devotees of idolatry he could win to faith in Christ.

At Troas Paul's waking thoughts passed into his night dreams. His one absorbing passion was to preach the gospel. His face was turned toward the west. Macedonia was the next land beyond. A man of Macedonia stood and called him to "come over and help us." It was to Paul the voice of God. He lost no time, but, in company with Silas and their new companion, Luke, they sailed from Troas, and favorable winds bore them swiftly on their course to Neapolis, the seaport town of Philippi.

A great many Christians spoil their prospects of usefulness by chafing under the restraints of the Providence that assigns them to one duty or place rather than to another which they had preferred. Paul's life is an example of how notable success can be achieved by following the leadership of the Spirit of God and doing the duty next at hand. That God loves obedience better than sacrifice is a truth for today as much as it was for ancient Israel. Obedience to the present duty is the surest guarantee of fitness for and attainment of higher and better duties. Paul could never have become the planter of the Gospel in Europe if he had not repeatedly changed his course abruptly in order to obey God's will, as when he wished to stay in Judea, but the Spirit said, "I will send thee far hence unto the Gentiles."

Philippi was named for the man who despoile Greece of her liberties, but it was the place where Paul began to tell Europe of the Savior who had come to give spiritual liberty to all mankind. It was a city of importance and a Roman colony. The story of Paul's sojourn there abounds with references to Roman customs and laws. There were not enough Jews to support a synagogue. Therefore, the few of his fellow-countrymen whom Paul found worshiped down at a place of prayer on the bank of the River Gangas. It was only a few women whom Paul met there, but he preached the Gospel faithfully to them with the result that the first convert was a woman of Thyatira, a city in that region of Asia where he had been forbidden to preach. Both she and her household were baptized in obedience to the command of Christ, and she insisted that Paul should accept the hospitality of her home, which he did, and continued his Philippian ministry.

In Philippi there was no Jewish opposition, but pagan opposition was soon aroused, because the revenue of certain men was affected by the conversion of a young girl. Religious conservatism is often a hindrance to the Gospel, as it was in Paul's experience with the Jews; but greed far oftener stifles spiritual life by putting the supreme valuation upon gold instead of personal character, leading people to coin their entire life energies into money and to despise the truer wealth of the soul without which all life is a failure.

The believers he won at Philippi were among Paul's very best friends through all his subsequent ministry. Their affection for him and their steadfastnesses in the faith were notable in a day of Christian zeal. Their difficulties continued. The opposition of evil never lets up in its fight against Christianity. But the Philippians were "nothing affrighted by their adversaries." They suffered in behalf of Christ when it was necessary to do so and were amply compensated by the comfort of Christ, the consolation of his love and the fellowship of the Spirit. Luke probably remained with the Philippians after Paul's departure, and this fact may account somewhat for the strong character of their Christian life. Christianity must not only be planted in the life; but must also be cultivated. Paul did the former at Philippi and went on to new fields, while Luke remained behind as the faithful gardener. Thus, once more, the apostolic method emphasizes the necessity of following up successful evangelistic work with the faithful toil of pastor and teacher.

BOWER REYNOLDS PATRICK.

PETRIFYING.

North Judson, Ind., June 13.—Ell Green, a resident of North Judson, is turning to stone. His muscles, skin and flesh are gradually becoming as hard as the bones of his framework. To the touch he is as dead. Only the feeble action of his heart, lungs and stomach, and a fertile and active mind, give evidence that there is any life in him whatever.

The physicians who have visited the sufferer declare that he is afflicted with a disease that runs its course in seven years, not a day more nor a day less. Green has already dragged out his existence over four of these years—only three of his short span of life remain.

So far as the medical records show, there is not recorded more than one parallel to the case of the Indiana sufferer. This was reported from Sydney, Australia, where Jacques Moritz was afflicted with the same terrible malady. Eight years ago Moritz was seized with sickness that baffled every effort made by the physicians to relieve it. It was not amenable to treatment of any description. From the patient's feet a numbness began to creep upward. That is the first sign of the disease. The numbness steadily ascended, and seven years from the day that the malady first displayed itself the sickness had eaten its way into the patient's brain and had hardened it into stone, exactly as it had hardened the muscles, flesh and skin of his body. Then death relieved the sufferer.

LOUISVILLE LADY

Declines King's Invitation to Attend the Coronation.

Louisville, Ky., June 13.—Mrs. Richard Ten Broeck is probably the only Louisville lady who has been invited to attend the ceremonies of the coronation of King Edward. This distinguished honor, it is understood, was extended by instruction of the king himself, and, though Mrs. Ten Broeck is now in England, she finds it impossible to accept the invitation on account of the great expense involved. It seems that properly to fulfill the obligations incident to attending the coronation in such a capacity one must not only be provided with the necessary court dress, but is expected to have a house and to entertain guests, and to be generally part of the public show, all of which costs a lot of money. The dress is required to be made in just such a style, with the train so many yards long; just so many square feet of space are allotted to each person to stand in, and there must be a certain number of attendants.

Mr. Ten Broeck, who was one of the most delightful men of the world in the world, was a friend of the prince of Wales when prospective majesty sat lightly on his brow, and Mrs. Ten Broeck was a friend of the princess. Probably she is the only person in the world, almost certainly the only American, who has declined the great honor of an invitation from the king himself to take part in the coronation ceremonies.

STARTLING CHARGE

Pennsylvania, June 13.—Charges of "conduct unbecoming a bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church" have been made against the Rt. Rev. Etheibert Talbot, bishop of Central Pennsylvania.

One of the most startling trials in ecclesiastical history is practically assured, as Bishop Talbot is one of the most distinguished churchmen in this country, and the charges brought against him are of a startling character.

As told originally in the Post-Dispatch several months ago, a presentment against Bishop Talbot was read to the house of bishops at the general conference in San Francisco. The charges embodied in that presentment, atsonishing the whole religious world, were in brief: That Bishop Talbot had unjustly and uncanonically unfrocked the Rev. Dr. Ingram N. W. Irvine, rector of St. John's church at Huntington, Pa.

That Bishop Talbot had conspired with a woman, Emma D. Elliott, to fasten a cause upon Dr. Irvine, so that he might be the more readily discredited and unfrocked.

That Bishop Talbot had been guilty of falsehood and conduct scandalous in a minister of God and a bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church.

This presentment to the house of bishops, which had no jurisdiction in the matter, was but to pave the way for genuine action against the accused bishop.

Influential supporters gathered to the aid of Dr. Irvine and some of the most prominent men in the Episcopal church set an investigation on foot.

These men on May 21st took action that practically insured the trial of Bishop Talbot by a court of his ecclesiastical peers. On that date they signed and forwarded to the Rt. Rev. Thomas March Clark, of Providence, R. I., presiding bishop of the Episcopal church, a formal presentment against Bishop Talbot. The presentment was promptly forwarded by the presiding bishop to the Rt. Rev. Thomas Underwood Dudley, bishop of Kentucky, who as assessor to the house of bishops, will select a committee of inquiry to consider the charges.

Around the selection of this committee is raging one of the hottest fights in church history. With that committee will rest Bishop Talbot's fate. They can whitewash him if they will or order his trial by a court of bishops.

Bishop Talbot is a man of great influence, and his friends are working with desperate zeal for the selection of a committee friendly to his cause.

But the supporters of Dr. Irvine are no less influential, and already protests have been filed with Bishop Dudley against four of the men eligible for appointment on the committee of inquiry.

There is every indication that J. P. Morgan and Bayard Cutting, both delegates to the San Francisco conference, will be among Bishop Dudley's selections.

Behind Dr. Irvine in the big fight now opening are the Rev. Dr. Daniel I. Odell, of the Church of the Annunciation, in Philadelphia, and the Rev. Dr. J. Andrews Harris, of St. Paul's church, Chestnut Hill, Pa.

These two divines represent the two branches of the Episcopal church. Rev. Dr. Odell is at the head of the High Church party, while Dr. Harris leads the liberal party.

They are both signers of the presentment now in the hands of Bishop Dudley, and both are pledged to push the charges to an ecclesiastical trial.

Dr. Irvine is denounced as a most offensive and unchristian person by Bishop Talbot and his friends.

They say that his record is bad and that he has been accused of revolting offenses and driven out of several dioceses.

Drs. Odell and Harris, with the influential church men behind them, make no attempt to defend Dr. Irvine. Of course, they believe in his honesty and truth, but the position they take is that Bishop Talbot, not Dr. Irvine, is under charges.

The presentment against Bishop Talbot, signed by Drs. Odell and Harris and five prominent laymen, is a vigorous document. There is no mincing of words or qualifications of charges.

That Bishop Talbot is charged with disturbing the peaceful relations of the parish of St. John's, at Huntington, Pa., to please one Emma D. Elliott.

That Bishop Talbot is charged with falsehood and vacillation in reference to the excommunication of Mrs. Elliott.

That Bishop Talbot is accused of conspiring with Emma Elliott and Alexander Elliott to have Dr. Irvine arrested and prosecuted.

That Bishop Talbot is charged with scandalizing religion and the church by unbecoming conduct.

WHY? IS ELECTRIC LIGHT BEST

Because it is healthy, clean, pure and brilliant.

HEALTHY— It has no odor. Professor Thompson states that one cubic foot of gas consumes as much oxygen as four adults.

SAFE— As electric bell work, no danger of suffocation.

CHEAP— By using a little care in turning off lights when not in use it is cheaper than any other illuminant.

"FOOD"

These big letters represent what improper food is to health and happiness, for the man with a growling stomach cannot be merry.

"FORCE" is the foe of indigestion. It is composed of the whole of the wheat—each kernel of which contains every element necessary to the proper nourishment and regulation of each organ of the body—blended with barley malt, the best natural tonic. In the process of manufacture both the wheat and the malt undergo the same chemical changes as are brought about during the first stage of digestion in the healthy stomach. "FORCE," therefore, saves the stomach much hard work, but still gives it sufficient exercise to keep it in first-class condition.

That's why "FORCE" is the foe to indigestion.

FLURRY IS OVER

Cash Situation In Duluth an Unusually Strong One.

The Market Closes Higher Under Several Bullish Influences.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 13.—There was no sign today of the flurry in Minneapolis July which had been underway for two or three days. On the contrary the other markets were relatively stronger than Minneapolis. That market closed a shade lower while Duluth advanced ⅜c and Chicago ½-⅝c. During a considerable part of the morning Minneapolis was only ⅜c over Duluth as compared with 1⅝c at the close yesterday.

The flurry at Minneapolis is said to have grown out of the fact that certain milling interests discovered that certain other mills had bought up practically all of the No. 2 northern wheat there and were buying the July. The result was that other millers jumped into the market and July soared. A couple of days ago a truce was patched up and one of the interests was yesterday steadily buying Duluth July and selling the Minneapolis option. Today this same interest was taking it in at about a half cent profit.

The cash situation in the Duluth market is very strong. Practically all of the No. 2 northern in store amounting to 2,300,000 bus. last Saturday, is sold. Milwaukee mills got something like 400,000 bus. and are now shipping it. Eastern mills also got considerable and local mills are said to control all that is left. Stocks of wheat are estimated to decrease 900,000 bus this week, which will leave about 1,700,000 bus of No. 1 northern and 650,000 bus of No. 2 northern. Minneapolis stocks are expected to decrease 150,000 bus. There is a much better tone to the foreign inquiries during the past day or two than has existed in some time. They are only after small lots, simply buying to fill actual needs, but seem to be more anxious to get the grain.

The wheat market opened with higher prices and held firm within a narrow range. The bullish sentiment was due to the strong cables, small Argentine shipments and general rains in the Southwest that created fears of wet harvest, though Kansas reported that the rains had done no damage. The Liverpool market closed with an advance of ¼c. Antwerp and Paris were unchanged.

Primary receipts of wheat were 327,000 bus, last year 418,000 bus. Shipments were 417,000 bus, last year 229,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 191,000 bus. Bradstreet reported exports of wheat and flour for the week of 3,400,000 bus. The Argentine shipments were only 304,000 bus for the week, as compared with 624,000 bus last year.

Corn in the Chicago market closed slightly lower while oats had an advance of ¼c. Primary receipts of corn were 360,000 bus, last year 359,000 bus. Shipments were 185,000 bus, last year 202,000 bus. Clearances were 2507 bus. Exports for the week as reported by Bradstreet were 91,800 bus.

The Duluth wheat market was active and stronged though moving within a comparatively narrow range. It opened ⅞c up at 73¾c, sold at 74¾c at 9:34; fell to 73¾c at 10:05, sold back to 74c at 10:18, and reacted to 73⅝c at 10:28, continuing at that price and closing there, an advance of ⅝c.

Cash prices continued at ⅛c over July for No. 1 northern, 1½c under for No. 2 and 3c under for No. 3. Sales were 15,000 bus.

There was light trading in the flax market and it was entirely confined to the fall futures. September declined ¾c and October 1c. Cash seed showed no change.

Wheat—Cash No. 1 hard, 75½c; No. 1 northern, 75¾c; No. 2 northern, 72⅝@74⅝c; No. 3 spring, 70⅝c. To arrive—No. 1 hard, 77⅜c; No. 1 northern, 74⅜c; July, 73⅞c; September, 71¼c. Manitoba—No. 1 northern, cash, 75⅝c; No. 2 northern, 72⅝c. Oats, September, 29c. Rye, 5c; September, 53½c. Flax—Cash, $1.45; to arrive, $1.45; on track, $1.76; June, $1.45; September, $1.44¾; October, $1.40.

Receipts: Wheat, 19 116 bus; corn, 11,324; rye, 660; flax, 1066. Shipments: Wheat, 214,550 bus; flax, 138,731.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Early Demand For Wheat and Market Strong.

Chicago, June 13.—Bullish sentiment predominated in grains at the opening. July wheat started ¼@⅜c to ⅝@⅞c up, at 72⅝c to 72½c, on higher cables and general and somewhat heavy rains in the Southwest. There was a fair demand, especially for shorts who were fearful over the possibilities of wet harvests. July easily topped 73⅝c, but news from the harvest fields of Kansas saying the rains had done little damage restored the hopes of the bears somewhat. Profit-taking eased the demand and July swung back to 72¾c, and steadied. Local receipts were 17 cars, 1 of contract grade; Minneapolis and Duluth reported 288 cars, making a total for the three points of 245 cars against 260 last week and 344 a year ago. Argentine shipments were bullishly small at 304,000 bus, compared to 624,000 bus a year ago.

There was practically no pressure late in the wheat pit. A good cash demand improved and 22 loads were worked off for France, the first in a long time. With these influences to abet the wet weather July closed firm ½@⅝c higher at 73⅝c.

The fear of too much water in the corn belt started covering and a fair commission house demand in corn at the opening. July started unchanged to ⅛c higher, at 63½c to 63⅝c, and on the wheat influence and light country offerings, advanced to 63¾c. The crowd was nervous over the possibility of the much talked of "deal" in July options. The receipts were 323 cars.

Corn ruled dull late in the day and a leading elevator unloaded liberal quantities. This caused a loss of the early strength and July closed barely steady, a shade lower at 62¾@⅞c.

Oats opened very strong and nervous.

The good cash demand and the premium cash stuff is bringing over July, together with the fear of manipulation of the new July stuff started July 2@2½c higher, at 40@40¼c. Commission houses had numerous buying orders. The wet weather was reported far from beneficial to the growing oats, and as there was no selling pressure July advanced to 40½@⅝c, and held strong. Receipts were only 132 cars.

Provisions were very dull—so much so that in spite of a higher hog market July pork had no quotation the first hour. Traders say that the manipulation by packers during the last two weeks has been prices up 80c in pork, has killed off much of the trade. There was some small purchases of lard at slightly advanced figures, but the pit was well nigh deserted. Spot pork opened 5c up, at $17.75, advanced 2c and then dropped back to its first figure. July lard opened unchanged at $10.30, and sold between $10.22½ and $10.27½; July ribs sold 5c higher, at $10.50.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago—Although the market was strong and the general tone was firm, yet it was a slow one. Some of the buying was in the way of covering by shorts and the volume of business was not large. The weather continues unsettled and showery although the reports from sections where harvesting is in progress do not bring any great complaints. The continued tendency of the weather is unfavorable and is causing some apprehension. The tone of foreign markets is strong and they are and have been for some time past feeding us in the improvement. There was good foreign buying of wheat here today and a fair export business. The Minneapolis Miller is rather bullish and indicates an early movement of new wheat. On the other hand we think we would take the long side of wheat on the soft spots for the present.

Corn: Liverpool ½d lower. The market was again extremely quiet. Elevator people were rather free sellers of July corn but not material increase in country offerings is apparent. Heavy rains through our corn country and that section is to some extent impaired by this fact but apparently not to a sufficient extent to cause much speculative buying. Cash demand is only moderate.

Chicago—September wheat in Liverpool is 17¼c over Chicago, the largest difference in a long while.

* * *

Modern Miller—The wheat harvest is advancing slowly, being delayed in some sections, notably in the South by a scarcity of harvest hands. The yield is small in the country South of the Ohio river, but is fully up to expectations elsewhere. The quality of the wheat harvested so far is up to the average of last year. There is no pressure to sell wheat on the part of growers, and the indications are that the early movement will not be heavy. The flour mills at all points are buying freely of the new crop.

MARKET REPORT.

Chicago, June 13.—Further covering by shorts on unsettled weather conditions caused the wheat market to rule firm all day and the close was a quarter cent higher than last night. Foreign markets were generally steady, Liverpool closed ¼d higher for the day. Continental markets were quiet, and Paris, after opening firm, closed easier on improved weather conditions. Late cables from Liverpool also reported improved weather conditions in England. Cash demand here was rather quiet and the seaboard reported very little demand there for export. Trade was large all day, and a great deal of short wheat has been covered. The future course of the market will depend a good deal on the weather. If it becomes settled a decline is very probable. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 35 cars.

Trade in corn was light today and the market ruled quiet. The principal feature was selling by Armour & Co., supposed to be for the bull crowd, while St. Louis shorts were said to be the best buyers. Outside of this there was no special featurde to the market. Weather is generally favorable for the growing crop. Country offerings continue very light, but cash demand is still quiet. Foreign markets were weak, Liverpool closed ⅝c lower for the day. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 325 cars.

There was a large and active trade in oats and the market during the greater part of the session ruled strong, owing to very light country offerings and excellent cash demand but realizing on the advance caused slight set-backs. Market closed steady. The weather conditions unchanged and on the whole are favorable. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 160 cars.

Provisions opened stronger on higher hogs and advance in grain, later ruled dull with advance mostly lost. There was selling of July ribs credited to a prominent holder who sold so freely two days ago. This selling checks bullish feeling of pit traders and the selling of pork by prominent brokers brings out some longs that are loosely held. Packers getting liberal supply of hogs and curtailed consumption makes it necessary for them to make contract stuff and its believed ribs and lard stocks are being rapidly increased and present rate of accumulation manipulation will be impossible. Leaders have disposed of large amounts of ribs to the shorts and tallers and it is not reasonable to suppose they will buy them back on small break or at least while legitimate situation is so unfavorable.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: It begins to look as if there was a small bull market on now, and that the reactions will be trivial.

The shorts are waiting for reactions to cover, and the public are waiting for reactions to buy. All the worst strike news seems to have been discounted. Any good news will send prices up. Stocks should be a purchase about 11:30 today or on any weak spots today. I think the general trend will be upward for the next thirty days.

* * *

Dick to Paine, Webber & Co.: I think recent buying of Missouri Pacific has been inspired by George Gould. The stock is well in hand and I believe will be put higher. Relatively it is cheap in the market as compared with the same dividend-rated roads. Its record is certainly as good as Canadian Pacific.

Warrington to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The lack of activity is somewhat discouraging, but the probability of some news of a favorable character being disseminated is quite likely at any time now and there is only one side of the market on which it is safe to trade, and that is the long side. Reactions are likely to be very small.

On any weakness this morning do not hesitate to buy Missouri Pacific, Union Pacific, St. Paul and Southern Pacific. Sugar is a better market on rallies than a buy on declines, but for the present advise letting it alone. Keep long on Metropolitan Railway. Buy B. R. T. and Copper for moderate profits. United States Steel should be bought for a moderate advance.

* * *

Strong, Sturgis & Co. to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The stock market is first to feel the impulse of returning confidence. Investors are getting back into the market and standard securities are wanted. Western and Southern stocks are first to attract the attention of buyers. Crop conditions foreshadow increased earnings. General conditions are described as in every way satisfactory, and growing properties command universal confidence.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 13.—The cotton market opened quiet with prices unchanged to 2 points higher and then eased off to 8.71 for July, 8.47 for August and 7.99 for October, under bear pressure and absence of supporting orders. For the moment further declines seemed likely, as the weather forecast indicated general showers over the eastern half of the belt, while Liverpool was down some 1½ to 2 points from the top. But when least expected the whole market took a turn for the better on dry weather news from Texas. July rallied to 8.77, August to 8.52 and October to 8.02. New Orleans telegrams stated that excessive heat was complained of in Central Texas, where hot winds were blowing and no rain was in sight. Other portions of the Western and Southern belt complained of the temperatures, though actual damage reports from the crop country were few and far between. Pretty much all the foreign speculation in cotton was very quiet and in good part of a professional character. Despite the predictions of yesterday for showers in the Eastern belt last night and today, this morning's weather map gave practically no moisture in the entire South. Near the close the English market stiffened up somewhat in response to the steadiness here, but Liverpool sentfew orders of either type.

Cotton spot closed firm; middling uplands, 9 7-16c; middling gulf, 9 11-16c; sales, 500 bales. Futures closed quiet and steady, June, 9.05; July, 8.81; August, 8.54; September, 8.19; October, 8.05; November, 7.99; January, 7.99; February, 4.99; March, 8.01.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to W. H. Laidley & Co.—The secret of Augustus Heinze's strength in copper fields against the onslaught of Amalgamated-Standard Oil people is largely due to the fact Heinze's United Copper company, Stephen E. Nash is the "company," of Watjen Toel & Co., of Bremen and New York. This is one of the wealthiest firms in Germany. It was one of the houses that carried Rio Tintos through its early troubles. Its wealth was rated at $1,000,000 a hundred years ago. It is understood this firm has been back of Mr. Heinze from the first in his fight against Standard Oil people. A. A. Brownlee is a large mine operator and represents prominent Washington and New York capitalists in Colorado and Idaho. F. W. Whitridge is legal director of the company. Mr. Whitridge is a partner in the law firm of Carey & Whitridge. He was formerly president of the Lake Erie & Western. Guillane Rensens is a wealthy tobacco importer of New York. Langdon Smith is president of the American Metal company which is the American representative of the Great European Metal combination. The Messrs. Heinze and Martin Maginnis are the mining men of the board. The election of the above board of directors for the United Copper company makes it clear that Mr. Heinze never suffered for monteitry backing in his fight against the Amalgamated Copper company, as known that the wealthy men back of the Amalgamated people who thought Mr. Heinze was on the verge of bankruptcy a number of times.

Dow-Jones to W. H. Laidley & Co.—The copper market is easier though not quotably lower. Lake sellers of all deliveries at 12¼. Electrolytic sellers, all deliveries 12.75 best bid 12¾. Standard copper 11.75 and 12 asked for spot.

* * *

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The dullness of Amalgamated at a fractional reaction held the rest of the coppers back today and prevented them from sharing in the general market improvement. We have the strongest kind of advices in regard to metal situation. There is a stronger consumptive demand and there is only a small amount of copper for sale below 13c. Feeling is better all along the line. We continue very bullish on the best of the coppers.

ACTIVITY LACKING

In the Stock Market and the Trading Was Uneven.

Western Railroads and Specialties Better Held Than Others.

Closing Was Near the Best Figures of the Session.

New York, June 13.—Trading showed some hesitancy at the start but the volume of dealings was small and fluctuations mainly trivial. The specialties were under pressure, Sugar, Brooklyn Transit and Colorado Fuel showing heaviness while the Southern railroads made some gains. The feature of the dealings was the sale of two consecutive blocks of 5000 shares each of Mexican Central at a decline of ⅝. Chicago & Eastern Illinois advanced a point.

Scattered selling of minor stocks did not affect the general list and prices advanced under the lead of St. Paul, Missouri Pacific and Southern Pacific which rose a fraction. Dealings continued large in Mexican Central and it was supported, advancing nearly a point above its opening. Westinghouse Electric first preferred jumped 6 points and Northwestern 3½. Minneapolis & St. Louis rose 2. Colorado Fuel, Pacific Mail and Ice preferred declined 1⅜ to 1½.

Trading quieted down and became uneven again. The Western railroads and the specialties were relatively better held than other stocks but the general movement was unimportant. Sugar moved up a point and Pacific Mail recovered as much. American Snuff, Lubber Goods preferred, Silver preferred and Fuller Construction gained 1⅜@2. General electric fell 7½ and Rock Island, Hunds preferred firm at noon with conspicuous strength in the Mexican Central issues.

General Electric after falling 8½, rallied a point. Steel rose 1⅜ over last night and the preferred 1⅞. Chicago & Eastern Illinois after rising 2, reacted 1¾. Fuller Construction reacted 1½ and Westinghouse lost a point. Sugar, St. Paul and Northwest

THE FIRST ARRIVES

Excursion Reaches Duluth Over Northern Pacific Road.

About Seven Hundred People From Central Minnesota Points.

Another With Nine Hundred People Expected Saturday.

Two trains brought the first summer excursion of the year to Duluth this afternoon. The excursion came over the Northern Pacific from Morris, Minn., and points between Duluth and there. Altogether there were about 685 people in both crowds.

The first section arrived at 1:55 with nine cars and carrying 385 people. The second section arrived at 2:10 with seven cars and about 300 people. Practically all the excursionists come through to Duluth, as was evidenced by the well-filled cars.

"We had a fine trip," said S. J. Jones, a farmer from near Chokio, "though our country is a little dry and we got a little dusty. Crops are looking fine, and the people are feeling good."

The people that came on the excursion are out for a good time. They are apparently largely of the farming class, who, having got their crops well started and spring work out of the way, hanker for a holiday, a sight of the big blue fresh water sea, and a look at the big docks and freighters that nowhere can be seen in such number as at Duluth.

While the public part of the Union depot train-shed was well filled with Duluth friends of the excursionists, there is no special program provided for their entertainment. Upon arrival the excursionists scattered in little parties to enjoy their stay as their personal tastes indicated.

Tomorrow afternoon another excursion will come over the Great Northern from as far west as Evansville, Minn. It is expected that this will bring about 700 people.

A PROBLEM

The street railway officials are trying to figure out a little problem in the transportation facilities to be given West Duluthians that will arise when the work is started on the Jenswold street subway and the West Duluth cars are run on West Third street and Thirty-ninth avenue west.

According to the present schedule the early morning cars for West Duluth are sent out from the Twenty-sixth avenue barn direct to West Duluth. When the service is discontinued on Superior street, west of Garfield avenue, the cars from the barn will have to be run on a Y to get them headed for West Duluth. At the present time there is no Y nearer than Eighth avenue west. The company is said to be considering the practicability of putting in another Y at Garfield avenue and West Superior street, in order to switch the cars back on the West Third street line at that point. If this is not done all of the westbound early cars must come to Eighth avenue west to be switched back, and this will mean either a cutting off of the early service, or else longer hours for the street railway employes. It is understood that something like a short line five-minute service will be maintained between Garfield and the West End, on Superior street, during the summer, while the subway is building.

The temporary track on Thirty-ninth avenue west may be complete by tomorrow night, so that service over it may be commenced early next week should it be necessary to begin the West Third street route.

The decedent has been engaged in the mining business at Rossman for some time, where his death took place several days ago.

FRIGHTFUL CASUALTY

Eight Bodies Are Known to Be In the Ruins.

Of Two Hundred Girls, Many Were Badly Injured.

Philadelphia, June 13.—Fire broke out this afternoon in the mill of H. M. Rosenblatt & Co., manufacturers of leather goods at Second and Oxford streets, and destroyed that plant and several adjoining places, including the Third Reformed Presbyterian church. A number of employes in the Rosenblatt factory were forced to jump from the windows. Half a dozen girls were taken to a hospital seriously injured.

The police report that eight bodies are in the ruins of the Rosenblatt building. Over twenty persons are injured as a result of jumping from the windows and by falling walls.

As nearly as can be learned the fire started in the celluloid department of the leather works. Within ten minutes the entire plant was ablaze. The fire escapes proved inadequate to afford exit to the employes working within. There were 200 girls at work when the fire was discovered, and immediately a stampede was made for the fire escapes. Many were knocked down and trampled upon, and others, on reaching the fire escapes, despite the shouts of the people in the streets, plunged to the pavement. The girls remaining on the fire escape were carried in safety to the street by the firemen.

Eight girls are missing, and it is believed they were trampled upon in the stampede and were unable to reach the escapes. The fire at 2:30 p. m. was reported under control.

Three bodies were taken from the ruins of the building at 3:15 o'clock. The firemen now state that at least a dozen persons perished in the flames.

FAVORS IRRIGATION.

President Desires Bill to Go Through Congress.

Washington, June 13.—President Roosevelt is using his influence in every possible way to secure the enactment of the irrigation bill into law at the present session of congress. His interest in the measure has been such that he has had a number of conferences with senators and congressmen, in which he urged upon them the necessity for such a law. Representative Mondell (Wyo.) saw him today, and at his request the president wrote a personal letter to Chairman Cannon of the house committee on appropriations, in which he strongly expressed his views on the subject, and indulged the hope that early and favorable action would be taken.

Upon leaving the White House Mr. Mondell said that the president had been of vast help to the irrigation cause, and was himself confident that the bill drawn by the joint committee of Western senators and members would pass.

A WISE DECISION.

Hobson Will Not Be Retired at Present.

Washington, June 13.—The house committee on naval affairs today decided to postpone until the next session the bill for the retirement of Naval Constructor R. P. Hobson on account of defective eyesight. The report states that only the gravest reasons would justify special legislation of this kind and that with further rest and care Constructor Hobson may so far recover as to render the service to the navy for which he is so well fitted.

ANOTHER SUIT.

To Be Filed Against the Steel Trust.

Newark, N. J., June 13.—Counsel for Charles T. Raymond, of Boston, asked permission before Vice Chancellor Emery today to file a bill for a preliminary injunction to restrain the United States Steel corporation from retiring $200,000,000 of preferred stock and issuing bonds instead. The bill was similar to that in the suit brought by Hiram Berger, of Sullivan county, N. Y. Counsel for the Steel corporation said he would not object, provided argument proceeded forthwith. Argument in the suit brought by Miriam Berger was then begun.

SEVERAL ARE HURT

Guardsman Cutter of Duluth Shot In the Leg.

Others Are In Camp Hospital With Minor Injuries.

Inspection of the Various Companies Has Been Begun.

St. Paul, June 13.—A Lake City, Minn., special to the Dispatch says: This is an ideal day for camp life and for a governor's day. The company inspection, under Maj. W. W. Price of St. Paul, started this morning with Companies B and H. Company G will be inspected this afternoon. The inspection consists of all military maneuverings, including guard mount. The men are making a good showing so far. W. W. Rosenberger, of Company C, is colonel's orderly today.

A rather serious case is in the regiment hospital in the form of W. S. Cutter, of Company C, Duluth. He was shot in the front part of his left leg, between knee and ankle, with a blank cartridge, tearing a two-inch wound to the bone. He was given immediate care and at present is resting easy. Henry Howard is in the hospital with a strained back, caused by scuffling by the company's street. C. E. Babcock received a cut over the right eye, about one-quarter of an inch in length, on the range this morning, caused by the hammer of his gun striking him. He is on duty again.

Volley firing on the 1000-yard range opened today. Col. Van Duzee made the exceptionally good revolver score of 49 out of a possible fifty points yesterday.

A large excursion on the steamer J. S. is expected at camp Sunday. Probably 2000 people will come.

Governor Van Sant and staff will arrive on the 4:36 train this afternoon, and preparations are completed for his honors, a salute of nineteen guns. A number of visitors are in camp today.

MONEY FOR JERRIGAN.

St. Paul, June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—John E. Jerrigan, formerly a fireman on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, running between La Crosse and Austin, is $8565 richer today because of a decision by Justice Brown of the supreme court, in which notice is served that local rules of Wisconsin courts are not recognized in Minnesota.

When Cupid Intrudes

By Angela Morgan.

(Copyright, 1902, by W. R. Hearst.)

When a man has determined to spend his days in bachelor contentment, free from feminine influence and consequently from trouble, it is only natural that he should resent the intrusion of the gentler element as an infringement upon his rights.

So it was no marvel that Donald Baker, returning to his room—it was the second floor back—after a particularly wearying day at the office, stood frowning in displeasure at the unwonted spectacle that met his eye.

His window panes were entirely covered with handkerchiefs—sheer, snowy things—so daintily absurd as to size that there could be no possible doubt of the owner's sex. They had apparently been pasted on the panes while still wet and had dried there, thus obviating the necessity of ironing.

Although ignorant of such domestic practices, Baker guessed the purpose of this method. The revelation served only to fan his indignation higher.

So! There was evidently some one in the house who had no respect whatever for his personal rights; some rude female who dared thus to appropriate his window for her own convenience—who thought nothing of turning his room into a laundry!

Baker closed the door with emphasis and strode to the window. There he made another discovery. On the sill stood a glass jar wound with cream satin ribbon and a bottle encircled with blue.

Baker bit his lip. What next, pray? He glanced suspiciously about him, grimly expectant of further discoveries. But that was the extent of the invader's transgressions.

Mrs. Griggs, deploring the offense against this, her most valuable boarder, had a suggestion to make. Perhaps it was the new boarder who had done it—Miss Johns, who had arrived that morning. Oh, didn't he know? Yes, she had taken a room—a most charming young lady she was. Strange she should have done anything so thoughtless. No doubt there had been some mistake. She—Mrs. Griggs—would see to it that the things were removed at once.

Her promised effort in the matter proved to be unnecessary. When Baker returned to his room he found a young woman coolly detaching the handkerchiefs from the panes.

She turned in astonishment as he entered. For one instant she seemed confused, chagrined. Then she recovered her composure.

"Pardon me," she said promptly, in a low, sweet voice. "I was under the impression that this was Mrs. Griggs' room. I am exceedingly sorry to have intruded. My room faces the street, else I should have made use of my own windows. Mrs. Griggs said I might—"

He had at last found his voice. The sight of her had rather dumfounded him. She was so entirely different from the "rude female" whom his fancy had pictured.

After she had left he stood staring vaguely at the now empty window panes. He had an uncomfortable sense of having been ungallant, unresponsive to her apology. Did she think so? He wondered.

Miss Johns was certainly an attractive, yet most baffling young woman. Baker came to this conclusion at the expiration of two weeks. During that time he had grown painfully sensible of a certain reserve, an unapproachableness in her manner that rather nettled him.

He wondered if she classed him with the shallow-pated youths with whom it was his misfortune to sit at table. The thought bit him.

Whenever he returned to his room now and saw the blank window panes he had a feeling of loss, of lack and of—yes, of longing. Foolish as it seemed, he nevertheless had an unreasoning hope each time that the sight of snowy handkerchiefs or blue ribbons would greet him.

She wore blue ribbon oftenest. He noticed that and speculated as to whether or not she had yet worn that particular blue which he had seen drying around the bottle on his window sill.

When a man begins to take notice concerning the details of a woman's dress the fact may be regarded as significant.

Then came the warm, moon-hazed evening when Baker, sitting out on the front steps with Miss Johns, discovered that her formidable reserve could give way to something quite different. Perhaps it was because he was exerting himself to talk well. He felt somehow that he was talking exceedingly well. Miss Johns was certainly listening with charming attention. There was a sympathy, a responsiveness about her that quite went to his head.

That night he dreamed that he and Miss Johns were out looking for a flat and when at last they decided upon one—such a cozy, dear little flat it was!—they discovered that all its windows were pasted with snowy handkerchiefs.

It was some time before he became well enough acquainted with her to tell her that dream. But he did—oh, yes, he did.

What she answered may be inferred from the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Donald Baker have just returned from their honeymoon to take possession of their newly furnished apartment.

Washington, June 13.—The president today sent the following nominations to the senate: William H. Smead, Indian agent at Flathead agency, Mont. Treasury—Byron S. Waite, Michigan, general appraiser of merchandise. Civil Engineer Ulysses G. White to have rank of captain; Civil Engineer R. E. Peary to have rank of commander; Civil Engineer Richard C. Holyrood to have rank of lieutenant-commander.

Postmasters: Iowa—A. S. Haselton, Council Bluffs.

ADDED A LEAF TO CLOVER.

Near Amsterdam, in 1886, Professor De Vries found a plant bearing six or seven four-leaved clovers, says Everybody's Magazine. This he set out anew in his garden, where it did not bear seeds till 1889. These he sowed, and since then he has had a new generation each year. Each time he chose his seeds from one fourth of the best plants; that is, from those which had the most four and five-leaved clovers. It was the third generation, however, in 1891, that began to be rich in the desired forms of leaves, but only with four and five leaflets, and these only in the adult plants. Still, during August and September of the same year he remarked a very few with seven leaflets. At this point he reduced his selection (or choosing his seeds from the best specimens) to a severe standard. That is, he chose for progenitors only those plants which had two-thirds of all its leaves with four or more leaflets.

The five-leaved clovers, however, are now the normal product. Professor De Vries has given its seed for practical experimenting purposes to a professor of the Minnesota Agricultural college, but as to the results, he has not yet heard. Provided that a rich soil and good culture be maintained, he holds that his five-leaved clover will keep constant, that is, it will not go back to the three-leaved.

BODIES FOUND.

Unknown Man and Louis Kaiser Picked Up.

St. Paul, June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—The body of a man was found at the boom of the St. Paul Boom company, opposite Pike's island, at 9:45 this morning. The discovery was made by Tim Sullivan, a boom hand, who saw the body, face downward, between the logs in a large jam. The body was hauled to the shore and covered with the reeds until the coroner could arrive. Acting Coroner Whitcomb ordered the remains to the morgue.

The body of Louis Kaiser, who fell off a barge at the foot of Wacouta street, was found at 10:40 this morning near Broadway. It came to the surface and was caught by fishermen in rowboats.

NEW TRIAL DENIED.

A Decision In the Case of Walter Bourne.

St. Paul, June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—Walter Bourne, formerly deputy county auditor, who is serving fifteen years at Stillwater prison, was today denied a new trial by the supreme court. Bourne was convicted on two indictments, one charging the illegal use of county warrants and the other fraud in the use of his official signature. The supreme court confirms the conviction in both cases.

A PLAN TO ANNEX CUBA

Elkins Presents Proposition to the Senate.

Would Admit Republic As State of the Union.

Washington, June 14.—Senator Elkins today introduced a joint resolution in the senate providing for the annexation of Cuba and for its admission as a state of the Union. The resolution grants the consent of congress to the annexation of the republic of Cuba as a state of the Union, "to be called the state of Cuba," with a republican form of government, to be adopted by the people of said republic by deputies in congress assembled, with the consent of the existing government. A condition is specified that the constitution of the proposed state shall be submitted to congress not later than Jan. 1, 1904. There also is a provision that the debts of Cuba shall not become a charge upon the general government. There also is an alternative provision, giving the president authority if he prefers to proceed in a more direct way for Cuba's admission under the terms of the resolution itself, "instead of proceeding to submit the resolution to Cuba as an overture on the part of the United States."

If this latter course is pursued, a state is to be formed "out of the present republic of Cuba, with a republican form of government and with representatives in congress, and be admitted into the Union by this act, on an equal footing with the existing states as soon as the terms and conditions of such admission shall be agreed upon by the governments of the republic of Cuba and the United States."

BISHOP POTTER — ARCHBISHOP IRELAND.

TWO DIVINES SUGGESTED AS ARBITRATORS IN THE COAL STRIKE.

In the effort to arrange a settlement of the present great coal strike the names of Archbishop Ireland and Bishop Potter were suggested as arbitrators. One of the magnates has already rejected Archbishop Ireland not because he thought there was any reason why the eminent divine would not make an impartial adjudicator, but because, as he saw fit to express it, "The mining of coal is a business and not a matter of philanthropy or religion."

Bishop Potter is now in Europe, whither he went some time ago in search of health, and, inasmuch as it has been intimated that he would be willing to sacrifice his vacation abroad if his services would be of value in bringing about a settlement of the differences between the miners and their employers, an earnest effort looking to his acceptance as arbitrator by the magnates is now on foot. It is generally understood that the miners are willing to intrust their case to him.

A FIGHT TO THE FINISH

No Sign of Weakening In Great Coal Strike.

Mine Operators Very Confident of Winning.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 14.—Today ends the fifth week of the anthracite coal miners' strike. Neither side has weakened an inch and each side stands just as firmly as it did thirty-five days ago. As the days go by it becomes more apparent that it is a case of the "survival of the fittest." Neither the miner or the operator has anything further to propose, and if a solution of the dispute is to come it looks very much as though it will have to come from a third party.

The entire region was quiet today and the territoy affected by the strike presents a Sunday-like appearance. Including those who are not on strike, but are affected by the suspension, there are approximately 165,000 men and boys idle. The efforts of the strike leaders to bring out the fire bosses is not meeting with as much success as they expected. President Mitchell today received advices from West Virginia, which, he says, are extremely favorable to the strikers. One tedegram from the Kanawha and New River districts, where 13,000 men are employed, says that 12,100 men are on strike in that district.

The heavy rains of last night had little or no effect on the mines. Water is slowly acumulating in some collieries, but the company officials say they have the situation well in hand. The Lehigh and Wilkesbarre company is having considerable trouble with its Nottingham colliery at Plymouth. A portion of the working lies under the Susquehanna river, and the water in the mine is rising more rapidly than it did a few days ago.

Shamokin, Pa., June 14.—A car load of coal and iron police and a number of non-union firemen and engineers arrived here today from Pottsville, and were taken to the North Franklin colliery at Treverton. The operation is owned by the Philadelphia & Reading company and has been flooded since the firemen's strike. Pumps were started shortly after the non-union men arrived.

New York, June 14.—So confident are the mine operators of winning their struggle with their employes in the anthracite region that a statement has been issued at Wilkesbarre to the effect that when operations shall have been resumed fewer men will be employed. It is planned to reduce the number of miners one-third and increase wages by one-third. In other wards, the operators believe their forces can be reduced from an approximate of 147,000 men to 100,000. The operators say that they will not attempt to resume the mining of coal at all collieries, and that restrictions will be placed on the summary closing of the mines without notice by the men remaining away from work for the purpose of celebrating various holidays, etc., and they will be expected to be on duty every day the mine is open.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 14.—The statement printed today and alleged to be from an official close to the large coal companies to the effect that the strike is teaching the operators to economize the working force at their mines, and that after the strike is over less than 100,000 will be used in the mines, is denounced as a "fake." General Manager Warriner of the Lehigh Valley company said today that neither his company nor the New Jersey Central company knew anything of the origin of the story. A prominent officer of the Lehigh company also denied all knowledge of the statement. President Mitchell says that the idea embodied in the statement is absurd, even from the operators' viewpoint.

STRIKERS USE DYNAMITE

Home of Special Officer at Cranberry Colliery Is Wrecked By Explosive---Bloodhounds to Track Perpetrators.

Hazelton, Pa., June 14.—The home of James Applegate at West Hazelton was badly shattered early today by an explosion of dynamite, which had been placed near the side of the building. The family escaped injury. Applegate has been employed as a special officer at the Cranberry colliery since the strike went into effect.

Frank Pardee, superintendent of the Cranberry colliery, has offered a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of the dynamiters. He says bloodhounds will be brought here to assist the police in running down the guilty parties.

Applegate, while returning from the Cranberry colliery, whither he had gone to report off the day on account of the explosion and the consequent shock to himself and family, was held up by two men and relieved of his revolver. He made no resistance, as four other armed men stood close by ready to assist, if necessary, in overpowering him. Applegate knows the men and they will be arrested.

Mrs. Applegate says she was told by a West Hazelton man that four houses would be dynamited if the men occupying them did not stop working at surrounding mines. Policemen are now looking for the person who is alleged to have made this threat.

STATEHOOD BILL DEAD

Committee On Territories Decides to Postpone Action On Application of Three Territories Until Next Session.

Washington, June 14.—The senate committee on territories today decided to take up for consideration at the next session of congress the statehood bill, adding into the United States the territories of Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona. The decision was reached upon the motion of Senator Nelson, and the motion was adopted by a strict party vote, the Republicans voting in the affirmative and the Democrats in the negative. This vote was preceded by two votes on motions made by Democratic members looking to the consideration of the bill during the present session. The first of these motions was to take up the question next Wednesday. This motion was made by Senator Bate and was voted down, the Republicans voting unanimously in the negative and the Democrats in the affirmative. A motion by Senator Bailey to report the bill today met with a like fate on a party vote. The Democrats opposed Senator Nelson's motion on the ground that its adoption would preclude the possibility of considering the bill during this session.

MAY GET MINNEAPOLIS MILLS

Milwaukee, June 14.—The Evening Wisconsin today says: It was learned in Milwaukee today from a prominent business man who has just returned from New York, that negotiations are now underway between the financial head of the recently organized Standard Milling company and the Washburn-Crosby and the Pillsbury Milling companies of Minneapolis, for the sale to the combine of those famous plants, the average daily output of which is 50,000 barrels. A strong effort was made three years ago to include these plants in the American Trust company, but it failed because of the opposition of Mr. Pillsbury. It is now said that the deal has more chance to go through successfully.

MISS LEE FORFEITS BAIL

Alexandria, W. Va., June 14.—Miss Mary Custis Lee, daughter of the late Gen. Robert E. Lee, today forfeited $5 collateral in default of appearance before Mayor Simpson, in the police court, on the charge of violating the law providing for separation of white and colored passengers on a train. Miss Lee was taken into custody last night on a Washington & Alexandria electric car, after refusing to change her seat at the rear of the car (the portion reserved for colored people) to the front section.

In deference to the position of the railroad company, Mayor Simpson examined several witnesses. The mayor held that the evidence showed that the conductor, in causing Miss Lee's arrest, had strictly carried out the law, and would have been amenable to the law himself had he acted otherwise.

BRUSH DISCHARGED PISTOL

St Paul, June 14—(Special to The Herald.)—Jacob Crudenski, employed at Maendler Bros.' brush factory, was probably fatally shot this morning. He was in an upper room of the factory in a stock room. Another employe had left a loaded revolver lying on a shelf. Crudenski was taking stock from a shelf, and a brush he was handling fell onto the revolver. The weapon was discharged, the bullet taking effect in the stomach. He was removed to the city hospital, where he is in a critical condition.

ROOSEVELT STREET.

Parisians Propose to Name One For President.

New York, June 14.—It is suggested here, says a Herald dispatch from Paris, that in order to commemorate the sympathy shown by President Roosevelt and the United States in the recent Martinique disaster, a street of Paris should be named Rue du President Roosevelt, a plate being affixed at each end of the street recording the facts.

The Societe Francaise Des Amis Des Arts is having an engraving made of Mrs. Roosevelt's picture painted by M. Chartran, which will be incorporated in the album given to the society's subscribers annually.

BUENCAMINO

Takes In St. Louis to Investigate the Fair.

St. Louis, June 14.—Gen. Felipe Buencamino arrived in St. Louis last night from Charleston, S. C., where he visited the exposition. Accompanying Gen. Buencamino is Frank Joanini, chief interpreter of the war department. Mr. Joanini will remain with the Filipino during the remainder of his American tour, which will include Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati and other large cities of the Middle West.

While in St. Louis Buencamino will investigate the operations of the world's fair, and include the information secured in his report on returning to Manila, where an exposition will be held in 1903.

ELEVATIONS RAISED

In United States By Recent Seismic Disturbances.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 14.—The contention of geologists that the recent siesmic disurbances in Martinique would not only affect territory adjacent to Martinique, but also would be noticed in this country, is borne out by the following letter sent by Col. H. C. Demming, of the United States geological survey to Charles D. Walcott, director of the United States survey, Washington, D. C.:

"During the past month I have taken at various places in Pennsylvania, in my geoigical work a number of elevations above sea level and I have found in every case where elevations had been taken previously that the present figures show higher elevations than before. It is possible that this is due to the seismic disturbances in the Martinique and other islands southeastwardly from the United States. I found the variation to be from two inches to more than twenty-four on comparing them with older records at Honeybrook, Chester county; Columbia, Lancaster county; Gettysburg, Adams county; Newville, Cumberland county, and Harrisburg, Dauprin county.

CHANGES IN OFFICIALS

Of Western Union Caused By Clowry's Promotion.

San Francisco, June 14.—The recent promotion of R. C. Clowry, general superintendent of the Western division of the Wsetern Union Telegraph company, with headquarters at Chicago, to the presidency of the company, says the Chronicle, is responsible for a number of changes among officials of the company throughout the country not the least important of which is the promotion of Frank Jaynes to the position of general superintendent of the Pacific coast division. The Western Union has planned to have four grand divisions instead of three as heretofore. The western division which now embraces all of the company's lines west of Pittsburg, is to be divided into two jurisdictions, Clowry's successor, with headquarters in Chicago, taking charge of the eastern end of the division, which will be known as the western division, and Jaynes taking charge of the Pacific coast division with the title of general superintendent of the coast division. His headquarters will continue to be located in San Francisco.

THOSE BOERS SURRENDER.

London, June 14.—Lord Kitchener today reported to the war office that 1817 Boers surrendered yesterday in the Transvaal, Orange River and Cape Colonies.

SUFFRAGISTS REJOICE

Women Who Want to Vote Are Greatly Pleased At the Progress of Their Cause In Various Localities.

New York, June 14.—National officers of the Women's Suffrage association, who have been holding a business session at the home of the president, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, at Bensonhurst, L. I., to plan for the work of the coming year, have adopted resolutions expressive of rejoicing over the progress made recently in the legal rights of women in different parts of the world. Referring to the fact that the national suffrage has just been granted to the 765,407 women in Australia by a practically unanimous vote of both houses of the federal parliament, the official board added: "We believe the women of America are not inferior to those of Australia in intelligence and patriotism, and we call upon American men to emulate the legislators of Australia in justice and chivalry."

Further occasion for jubilation was found in the action of Massachusetts in making mothers equal guardians of their minor children with fathers; of Maryland, in admitting women to the bar, and in the recent passage by many other states of laws enlarging the personal and property rights of women.

Among those who attended the meeting were: Susan B. Anthony, Laura Clay, of Kentucky; Mrs. H. T. Upton, of Ohio; Mate M. Gordon, of Louisville, and Rev. Anna Shaw, of Pennsylvania.

WILL USE FOREIGN BIRDS

New York, June 14.—In accordance with the anti-plumage crusade of the Illinois Audubon society now being carried on in Chicago, it is learned that the Millinery Merchants' Protective association of this city is in accord with the law and will not handle North American birds or foreign birds of the same species, but the association asserts that no state can legislate for the protection of birds of foreign countries not of the same species as the birds of America, and that the collection of duties thereon will be construed as a license to sell such merchandise until the courts decree otherwise.

DANGER IN HANDLING MONEY

Chicago, June 14.—Erysipelas, contracted by handling money in which the disease germ was lurking, has nearly caused the death of Thomas J. Noonan, treasurer of the Illinois theater. Dr. Theodore C. Koessel says the young man's affliction was caused by a baccilus erysipelas, which made its way from a piece of money to Noonan's finger, and later found lodgment in the victim's nostrils, where a slight abrasion gave it a field for operation. The young man lay at the point of death for several hours, but has passed the crisis and probably will recover.

KID LAVIGNE IS "BUGHOUSE"

Stockton, Cal., June 14.—"Kid" Lavigne, the well known pugilist, is at the detention hospital suffering from mental aberration. Physicians are doubtful of his recovery. In his recent fight with Britt, Lavigne injured his arm, which, a few months previously had been broken, and this, it is thought, may in part be responsible for his condition.

DROWNED WHILE SWIMMING

Parker, S. D., June 14.—Fred Klopfleisch was drowned last night at 7:30 while swimming in the river southwest of the Milwaukee railroad bridge. He, in company with Carl Christiansen and Nels Peterson, were in swimming when Klopfleisch was taken with cramps, and Peterson, who could not swim, and Christiansen were unable to get him out. He was in the water thirty minutes. Mr. Klopfleisch came here from Wisconsin and was at one time engaged in the hardware business. Shortly before his death he was employed in the harness shop of Simon Bogeman.

PELL A PROFESSIONAL.

Has Been So Declared By Iowa Association.

Des Moines, June 14.—Charles Pell, of Drake university, conceded to be the best all-round athlete in Iowa, winner of the hammer throw at the Western inter-collegiate athletic meet at Chicago last month, has been declared a professional by the games' committee of the Iowa Collegiate Athletic association, and the fourteen points won by him at the recent state meet thrown out. He once participated in an "open" race, though there was no stake and only amateurs started.

GLASS WORKS TO SHUT DOWN.

Pittsburg, June 14.—The Pittsburg Plate Glass company's works at Tarentum, Pa., and Creighton, and the Allegheny companies' plant at Hite, Pa., will close down on July 1 for a month. It is said all the combined glass plants have agreed on this shut down on account of having large stocks on hand.

COL. LYNCH ARRAIGNED

Investigation Into Charge of High Treason Held At Bow Street Court and the Prisoner Remanded to June 21.

London, June 14.—Bow street police court was crowded this morning when the investigation into the charge of high treason brought against Col. Arthur Lynch, formerly of the Boer army, was begun. Lynch, who was elected member of parliament for Galway in November last, was arrested at New Haven Wednesday upon landing from France. Mrs. Lynch and other friends of the accused were present. The solicitor general, Sir Edward Carson, in opening for the prosecution, alluded briefly to Col. Lynch's Australian birth, his residence in Paris and his departure thence to the Transvaal in January, 1900. "The case for the prosecution," said Sir Edward, "will be that on arriving in South Africa, Lynch took service with the Transvaal government, raised a regiment of which he acted as commander to fight in behalf of the Boers and actively fought against Gen. Buller's operations.

"Lynch was in Pretoria, Jan. 15, 1900," the solicitor general continued, "and wrote to the Transvaal authorities notifying them of his desire to take up arms. Jan. 18 he signed a field cornet's certificate declaring himself as an Irishman, a British subject and born in Australia, but declaring his willingness to fight for the South African republic in order to maintain and defend its independence. Lynch also took the oath of allegiance as a full burgher, the certificate enabling him to do so as well as to accept a commission from the Transvaal. Lynch then raised the so-called Irish brigade, joined the invading army in Natal and issued an appeal signed 'Arthur Lynch, colonel, Irish brigade,' inviting Irishmen to assist the two republics."

The Hon. Charles Russell, second son of the late lord chief justice, Baron Russell of Killowen, in behalf of the defendant, said that Lynch had faced the proceedings like a man. What he had done had been done openly and he desired to facilitate the inquiry as much as possible.

After the police had furnished evidence of the prisoner's arrest, he was remanded to June 21. During the course of this evidence Detective Inspector Walsh testified to finding in Col. Lynch's socket a visiting card of Hamilton Holt, "introducing Col. Lynch of the Boer army to three Americans, A. S. Hardin, United States minister at Berne, Switzerland; Herbert W. Bowen, United States minister to Teheran (now minister to Venezuela), and Professor Richardson, of the American school at Athens," and some testimony had been presented regarding Col. Lynch's presence "on commando" in Natal.

BIG ENGINE TIPS OVER

New York, June 14.—In making what was expected to be a record run to a fire in Lower First avenue, a fire engine was overturned at Great Jones street and the Bowery, and Edward D. Murphy, the driver, who was strapped to his seat, probably fatally injured. Capt. John Walker and Gerhardt E. Webber, engineer, who were riding on the step at the back, were hurled ten or fifteen feet and painfully hurt. The engine is one of the largest and finest in the department. It weighs five tons. It was raining and the roadway was slippery when the engine made a short turn out of Great Jones street, where the department is situated.

As the off horse of the three drawing the apparatus reached the tracks of the Fourth avenue car line he slipped and fell, carrying the others with him. The engine careened and then tumbled over on its side.

Murphy had no chance to escape. One of the straps which held him to the seat broke, but as he was carried over by the falling engine he became partially pinned under one of the front wheels. It was with much difficulty that the wheel was jacked up and the driver released.

Cars on the Fourth avenue line were blocked for hours because the engine lay across the tracks.

ITALIAN MEETS FOUL PLAY

New York, June 14.—An Italian who was known here as Carlo Cattapani, Marquis de Cordova, disappeared from his boarding house in this city last Saturday night. He was found early today tied to the tracks of the New York Central railroad at One Hundred and Fifteenth street and the North river. H ewas taken to a hospital, where he made a statement. A hospital doctor said he believed the man had been poisone.

When he came here Cattapani said he was searching for papers which would prove his right to a valuable estate in Spain. Last Saturday he told the proprietress of his boarding house that he was going to meet a man who would five him the papers needed in return for a reward of $100.

WHY IS

DR. MITCHELL

The Greatest Healer in the World.

Because He Is a Natural Born Healer.

Come to this wonderful man and find help: he has helped others, why not you? Healers are born, not made. Dr. Mitchell is not a healer by choice, but a healer because fate has so decreed it; he comes from a family of healers, for his ancestors, who were all powerful healers, have for generations handed him down their combined knowledge and power to accurately locate the disease and weakened tissues and restore you to health, so he received the rich inheritance of the golden experience and knoweldge of generations. And by his years of work among the sick with his magnetic power has originated and perfected a thorough system of treatment for every known disease. How well he has succeeded is only too well known by the many thousands he has restored to health that had been given up as incurable. His treatment is commended and approved by suffering man and woman everywhere and is most praised by those who have tested it. It has made famous the name of Dr. Mitchell; the world over his treatment is an aid to nature and supplies those things that nature needs; it enables the healthful to retain their health. By taking Dr. Mitchell's treatment the strong remain strong and the weak recover their power; it guards against ills in time, and does not allow you to become deathly sick before it makes you well; it is humane, sympathetic, scientific; it spares you the physician's coldness and the surgeon's heartlessness; it does not dismiss you with a curt word and a cold nod and leave you alone to struggle with your distress; it is so identified with the routine of your daily life that the unconscious observance of its directions become a matter of habit and you find the treatment a pleasure rather than an ordeal, and then one day you find you are so much better, brighter and stronger that you are amazed and wonder how it all happened. The doctor has patients from all over the world; a gentleman from Norway arrived here last week who had been suffering from paralysis on one side for three years and had tried everything and given up all hope until his brother wrote him about Dr. Mitchell, telling him of a man by the name of Mr. Carl Scott, of Deer River, who was perfectly helpless with paralysis, and about the wonderful work Dr. Mitchell had done for him, and the many others he had seen; after taking three treatments he felt an improvement and expected to be well in a little while. The next one seen by the reporter was a man who came here from Canada blind; after taking one month's treatment is seeing so he can get around without being led; this man had spent thousands of dollars without getting relief. A lady from West Duluth the doctor treated for cataracts over three years ago, was getting blind, says: "Dr. Mitchell removed them from my eyes and I can see without glasses and I recomend his treatment very highly." The name of this lady can be had at the office."

This grand treatment certainly must have in it the elements of unusual strength to hear of a man in this century being able to make the deaf hear, the blind see and the lame walk.

Dr. Mitchell has an office at 17 East Superior street. By bringing this advertisement with you, it will entitle you to consultation free.

A CANDIDATE.

Capt. Randall Would Be Representative In Fiftieth District.

Capt. J. R. Randall, of 1717 Piedmont avenue west, today announced his candidacy for the lower house of the state legislature on the Republican ticket. The captain is the first candidate for representative to come forward in the Fiftieth. During the past two terms the district has been represented in the house by T. M. Pugh, who has filed his certificate as a candidate for the senate from the same district, and Andrew Miller, who, it is understood, will not run again.

No other names have been mentioned of late in this connection, and it is understood that some have held back until the captain had made up his mind what answer to give the friends that have urged him to become a candidate.

Capt. Randall was a member of the board of fire commissioners several years ago.

CHILDREN ENTERTAIN.

Raise Some Money For the Children's Home.

The little children in the neighborhood of Seventh avenue east and First street gave a performance, Friday afternoon, at the "Sky Parlor theater," for the benefit of the Children's Home of Duluth, and the sum of $7 was realized, which was given to the matron of the home. The play, "The Fairies' Lesson," which delighted the large audience present, was in three acts, and the manner in which the little ones staged the piece without help, and carried their several parts through, deserves great credit. The praiseworthy and charitable object of their labor is highly commendable. Those taking part in the cast were: Miss Gladys Tyler, Miss Aline Peachey, Miss Lucila Adams, Miss Marion Fitger, Miss Lillian Rouchleau Miss Marie Clark, Miss Alice Stewart, Miss Catherine Conklin, and Master Call Spencer.

NEED NOT HAVE PAID

Forty or Fifty Duluth Butchers Paid Unnecessary Fines.

Were Prosecuted For Using Preservatives In Their Meats.

Supreme Court Decision Just Reported Interesting to Them.

Minnesota has no law to prevent the use of preservatives in meat.

This announcement in the telegraph dispatches last evening was interesting news to some forty or fifty Duluth butchers that paid fines in police court last winter for using borax in their sausage.

The supreme court yesterday decided that the state was without a law barring the use of meat preservatives.

The state food commission has been prosecuting butchers throughout the state under the act of 1899, which prohibits the use of preservatives in dairy products.

J. N. Rumberg, a St. Paul butcher, was arrested under this law some time ago for having borax in sausage, and he carried the case up to the supreme court. C. F. Wagenhals, a Minneapolis meat man, accused of using sulphates for the same purpose, also carried his case to the supreme court.

The decision of the supreme court is that the law only applies to dairy products, and therefore the use of preservatives in meat is not prohibited.

The act of 1899, chapter 250, prohibited the use of preservatives in milk, cream, cheese and butter, except salt in butter. This is clearly expressed in the title.

An amendatory act, passed in 1901, provided that the prohibition should apply to "all food products whatsoever." But the title simply stated that it was an act to amend chapter 257 of the laws of 1899.

The title in the original act, in which the four articles at first mentioned was not changed, so it is held that "all food products" were not brought within the purview of the original act.

The supreme court holds that the law must be sufficiently definite to include meats, or no offense is committed in the use of preservatives.

It is also held to be within the scope of the legislature to frame legislation prohibiting the use of preservatives deleterious to health, but the act should be so framed as to clearly express its intent.

A Noiseless Typewriter.

Scientists claim that the exercise necessary to operate an ordinary typewriter, together with its noise, tend to injure the health and cause nervousness. A German inventor has therefore perfected a machine which is operated by air pressure on the keyboard, and does away with the noise and much of the labor. Its adoption may be one way of preserving health and preventing nervousness, but there is a better and less expensive way, and that is by using Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. All people of sedentary occupation need this wonderful medicine to aid digestion and to keep the bowels regular. It will also cure dyspepsia, biliousness, insomnia and nervousness. Don't be deceived into taking something "just as good." There is no medicine equal to the Bitters.

Entrance Examinations.

College entrance examinations will be held at the Duluth high school next Monday morning at 8:30 o'clock at room 206. There are a number of young people who expect to go to college next year who will avail themselves of this opportunity of taking the examinations. All colleges with the exception of Harvard and Yale academic acept them.

Finnish Organization.

By-laws of the "Duluth Workman Association Ystava" were filed this morning in the office of the register of deeds. The association is to "work in the city of Duluth for the Finnish working man's religious and material redeement with all moral manners that are not against the laws of this country and state;" also to "work against the immorals of life." One of the other objects of the association is "that more eagerness should be given to the knowledge of their country, language and constitution, that more value be given to naturalization and the taking part in political and civic work." Ellas Sampson is president, and K. L. Osterberg is secertary of the society.

A BELGIAN TREATY.

Washington, June 14.—Secretary Hay and Baron Moncheur, the Belgian minister, today exchanged the final ratifications of the new Belgian extradition treaty. ANOTHER SET

More Heirs Turn Up In the Johann Mueller Case.

Another set of brothers and sisters of the late Johann Mueller has shown up, and wants to get into the Kosmeri case, which will be taken up before Judge Cant in district court Monday.

They live in Austria, and they have lately been located. They have retained the firm of Mitchell & Reynolds as their attorneys, and this afternoon they were asking the district court to make them parties defendant in the case.

The new parties are Katherine Simon, Adele B. Mueller and Alois Mueller, who claim that Mueller was their brother, and who, therefore, want to get a share of his property, which is now claimed by about twenty-five people, represented by twenty-two attorneys.

An order was issued yesterday for the other parties to show cause in special term of district court today why these new members of the large Mueller family should not be made parties. The matter was to have come up this morning, but was put over to this afternoon.

MAKE A SHORT VISIT.

Messrs. Lowry and Munn Spends Morning Here.

Thomas Lowry and M. D. Munn came to town this morning from Minneapolis and St. Paul, respectively. They took a ride over the parts of the street railway, and spent a good part of the forenoon in Superior. Both Mr. Lowry and Mr. Munn said that there was no matter of news interest connected with their visit.

"The reports we receive from along the Soo road," said Mr. Lowry, who is president of that company, "are of a most flattering character regarding the prospects for the growing wheat crop. The plant is looking splendid at all points along our road, and the people are happy and prosperous."

Mr. Lowry and Mr. Munn left on the Lake Superior limited this noon for home.

Somerset Y. Dance.

The Somerset Y will give a private dance at the Oatka beach auditorium Thursday evening, June 26. The proceeds will be used by the young ladies in fitting up a room in the new St. Luke's hospital. The room will be dedicated to Miss Elsie Prescott, who was one of the founders of the Somerset Y, and it will be kept up by the society free of charge to deserving patients. The young married women will be the patronesses at the dance next week.

Log Salvage Contract.

The contract for the salvage of logs in this district for the Duluth Log Salvage association has been taken for the season by Crotto & Ackley. The logs belonging to the members of the association that are lost from rafts on the bay shore or along the north sore as far north as Split Rock and as for on the south shore as the mouth of Iron river will be picked up by the tug Annie L. Smith and towed to the Peyton, Kimball & Barber mill in West Superior. The logs belonging to the association have been sawed for the past several seasons at this mill.

APPRAISERS

Named to Fix the Value of the Wrecked Hadley.

Capt. Alex Sinclair, Albert Gibbs and Charles M. Davis have been appointed by Judge Lochren as appraisers in the matter of the libel of William P. Rend to limit his liability as owner of the steamer George G. Hadley. The order making the appointment was filed in United States court today. The appraisers will appraise not only the hull, engines, boilers, boats, etc., of the sunken steamer, but also her pending cargo, or the value of the vessel in her damaged condition if raised and towed into port, less the cost of raising her. The appointments have been approved by the representatives of the libellant and of the Pittsburg Steamship company.

CUBAN RECIPROCITY.

Washington, June 14.—The committee on relations with Cuba, of the senate, will meet on Tuesday and it is the intention to report a reciprocity bill. There probably will be a conference of all the Republican senators on that or the succeeding day, to consider the reciprocity matter.

RATE ON LUMBER

Demand For Boats For Ore Trade Helping Lumber Trade.

It begins to look as if the break in the lake lumber freight market was only a temporary affair. There seems to be no question among shippers but that the tow referred to during the past few days was placed at a figure below the rate agreed upon by the Lumber Carriers' association, though technically the charter may have been at $2.50. It is claimed that while the freight named in the charter and bill of lading was probably $2.50, there was undoubtedly some arrangement for a rebate of one or two shillings when the freight is paid.

However, the outlook is firmer. There is said to be such an active demand for vessels of the lumber-carrying tonnage to load ore that all the boats that can be spared from the lumber trade can easily be placed for ore. It is said, indeed, that ore shippers are paying a premium over not only the season, but the wild rate in order to attract them into ore-carrying just now. The season rate is 70 cents, and the wild rate has been 75 to 80 cents per ton. Ore shippers are said to be paying 90 cents for lumber carriers of 1000 to 1500 tons capacity, because vessels of that size can be used to great advantage just now.

One great factor in this is the ability of these vessels to get around in the narrow channels in lower lake ports to better advantage without tugs than the big fellows that ordinarily are the king bees in the ore trade. Another factor in the demand for smaller vessels is the low water this season, which has made the channels leading to some of the furnaces at lake ports very shallow and keeps out the large vessels of deep draught.

Some of the lumber carriers have been placed in the grain trade out of Chicago, which affords further relief for one trip at least. It is said that if a considerable part of the lumber tonnage is taken off the market for one trip, conditions will improve by the time it gets back to the upper lakes sufficiently so that the market can be maintained more easily.

FARE 50c ROUND TRIP

THE RAVENNA

Son of the Captain Tells of Loss of Boat.

St. Paul, June 14.—A special to the Dispatch from Stillwater, Minn., says: Ernest Hoy, son of Capt. Hoy, who lost his life in the steamer Ravenna disaster, arrived home this morning. He says that his father and Byron Trask, the clerk, were both in the cabin when the boat turned over and that Ernest Walker, of La Crosse, the mate, was at the wheel and lost his life. The boat was but twenty-five feet from the Iowa short when she capsized. The dead bodies were not found when Ernest Hoy left. United States Inspector John D. Sloan and the government boat General Woodruff were at the scene. Eforts were being made to right the Ravenna and recover the bodies. Owing to the fact that Mrs. Hoy is in a precarious condition because of her husband's death and lives close to Aurora park, the game or base ball scheduled for there will not be played tomorrow afternoon.

YALE

New York, June 24.—College baseball men thronged the polo grounds today to witness the final struggle for supremacy between clubs from Princeton and Yale universalties. Each team has a victory to its credit this season and the winning of today's game will decide the championship of 1902. Princeton was the favorite in the betting, as good as 2 to 1 being freely offered on the wearers of the orange and black. There was plenty of Yale money in sight and the partisans of Princeton had no difficulty in finding takers for the odds offered.

Yale defeated Princeton by a score of 5 to 4. It was a well-played game throughout, although it took two hours and fifty minutes to finish the nine innings. Five thousand people saw the game and there were many women in the grand stand. College men from New Haven and Princeton were out in force and rooted for their respective teams and sang songs during the game. Score:

DULUTH GETS IT

Duluth Delegation at the Minneapolis Meeting Lands It.

Duluth Will Be Glad ot Again Entertain the Travelers.

Several telegrams were received in the city this afternoon announcing that the delegation of Duluth commercial travelers who are now in attendance at the state meeting of the United Commercial Travelers at Minneapolis has been successful in landing the next state convention for Duluth.

The association will therefore hold its convention a year from this time in the Zenith City.

Although no word further than that the convention was secured for Duluth has been received, it is anticipated that the handsome manner in which the travelers were entertained at their meeting here two years ago by their Duluth brethren and the city generally made it a comparatively easy matter to persuade them to come again.

Duluth people will gladly welcome the association again. It was freely stated at the time of last meeting here that Duluth had never entertained any body of men who were more valuable arch for Port Huron, where they will to the city than the travelers. They put in from three to four days in the city having the best kind of a time they were able to find, and when they left they advertised Duluth in a most complete and hearty manner.

The entertainment of the association necessitates much effort on the part of the local organization, but the way will undoubtedly be much easier for it this time, for not only is their body stronger, but the people of the city will probably second their efforts more heartily, knowing just what the convention will bring to the city.

A MYSTERY.

Bodies of Young Man and Woman Found In Bay.

New York, June 14.—The body of Clarence Foster, who has been missing since Monday night, was found in Shinnecock bay, L. I., today. The head and face were battered and there were marks of violence, which were regarded as indicating that he was murdered and his body thrown into the bay.

Later in the day the body of Miss Sarah Lawrence, in whose company Foster was last seen, was found in Shinnecock bay, near where Foster's was found. A coroner took charge of the bodies and has started an investigation.

Foster was married, and he and his wife went from this city to Good Ground, L. I., for an outing. Miss Lawrence left the hotel Monday night and walked towards Shinnecock bay, where she is said to have met Foster. Several persons are said to have seen them eating at a hotel on the bay, and that a young man friend of Miss Lawrence was with them. This young man left Good Ground the next day and has not been seen since.

RHODES AT ORIEL.

An Oxford correspondent of the London Daily Mail gives in Mr. Rhodes' own words the story of how he became a commoner of Oriel. Mr. Rhodes related the incident in Oriel common room on the occasion of his last visit to Oxford:

"The morning I arrived here first from South Africa I turned my steps not to Oriel, but to University college. I had a letter of introduction to the master of the university. I was shown into his study, and he read my letter. Then he looked at me and said. 'Well, Mr. Rhodes, you have come a long way.'

"'Yes, sir,' said I.

"'And you want to become a member of this university?'

"'Well, sir, I shouldn't have come all the way from South Africa if I hadn't.'

"The master's answer to that was: 'We are very particular about the men we take. We only take men who seem capable of getting honors in the schools.'"

The upshot was that Rhodes was set down in a corner of the master's study and told to do a piece of Latin prose and an English essay, and then return in the afternoon for the verdict. He returned, and the master informed him that his Latin prose was not up to the required standard.

To continue in Mr. Rhodes' own words:

"'Well, sir,' I said, 'your Latin prose would be shaky if you had spent the last few years as I have done.' The master continued: 'Your essay is not without merits. I regret we cannot take you ourselves, but I will give you an introduction to the provost of Oriel.'

"So I found myself out in the High street. Suddenly I remembered the Oxford name, Jowett.

"So I stopped a passerby and said: 'Who is this Jowett one hears of outside Oxford so much?'

"'Oh, you mean the Balliol man,' said he. 'Yes, that's the man.' Well, he put me on the way to Balliol, and as I went along I looked up and saw Oriel lane.' And I said to myself, 'Now, which is it to be. I'll toss up.'

"And toss up I did. A man who was watching me grinned, but it came down for Oriel, and I turned down Oriel lane.

"When I got before the provost he read my letter, then he said, 'Pff,' twice, very contemptuously. 'So the master of university sends me his leavings.' I broke out at this. 'I don't know anything about that,' I said. 'All I know is that I have come all this way to become a member of Oxford university. And in the first day I am told that my Latin prose is bad and that I am "leavings."'

"He looked at me hard for a few minutes; then he said more gently: 'Well, Mr. Rhodes, I think you will do. The master says that your English essay is not without points.' And that settled it."

THE LAW TOO CRUEL.

A brave, bonny little Scotch woman whose life efforts have been spent in teaching God's truths in the heart-stiffling fields of Syria, is dying in the Long Island College hospital because official red tape is keeping her from the dry, healing and invigorating atmosphere of her brother's home in Santa Clara, Cal., says the New York Tribune.

This sweet-faced, fragile woman is suffering from tuberculosis, and only the strenuous protests of the hospital physicians are keeping the immigration officials from immediately deporting her to New Zealand.

Wasting away day by day in the hospital, the sufferer smiles to lighten the grief of her frantic brother, who is hopelessly struggling to obtain mercy from the immigration officials and take his sister into the sunshine and dry air of his California home.

Miss McCullom was once wealthy, and while the greater share of her fortune was spent in the alleviation of the misery of others, she still has ample means to take every sanitary precaution against infection during her trip to California.

Official red tape unwinds slowly, and day by day the brother has seen his sister growing weaker and has been unable to help her.

The order of release must come from Washington, but by that time the release will be probably a burial permit, as it is known she cannot survive long if left in the hospital.

Two young women are exerting themselves to rescue Miss McCullom. They are Miss Lillian Swift, daughter of Assemblyman Swift, of Binghampton, N. Y., and Miss Willard, of Brooklyn.

Miss Swift a few years ago put out a fire which threatened Cornell university, where she was a student. She came from Naples to New York on the steamship Aller with Miss McCullom.

When the suffering woman was hurried away to the Long Island hospital to await deportation, Miss Swift at once threw aside all personal engagements and went to Miss McCullom's rescue.

With her former classmate, Miss Willard, she brought both the missionary's brothers to this city, one coming from California, and the other from Streator, Ill.

The two young women persuaded Dr. Tappan, of the Long Island hospital, to make a brave stand against the execution of a law which, in this instance, means sure death.

At the hospital Dr. Tappan said:

"We are saving the unfortunate missionary from deportation only by declaring that to deport her will cause her death. They cannot take her from us when we assume this position, but since she came here there has been no way open to alow her to reach the healthful atmosphere of California. Could she accompany her brother home she would be able to regain her strength."

Another Passing Graft.

Minneapolis Tribune: The Pullman conductors are asking for a raise. They can't live on their salaries and the tips have fallen off sadly of late. It took the traveling public a long time to arrive at the conclusion that the Pullman company was fully able to pay its own employes, but this action of the conductors would seem to indicate that that conclusion had been reached by a good many people.

JULIUS LIESKE,

HON. T. F. MADDEN

Former Mayor of St. Ignace Michigan.

Relates An Experience Which He Says Taught Him a Valuable Lesson.

"I have had an experience which taught me a valuable lesson," said the Hon. Thomas F. Madden, former mayor of St. Ignace, Mich., to a reporter the other day.

"It was while crossing the Gulf of Mexico," he continued, "in an attempt to recover my health, that the suggestion came to me. For twenty years I had been a sufferer from indigestion. It tortured me. I could not eat a hearty meal, and even the lightest food distressed me. I doctored with possibly eight different physicians, but grew worse all the time.

"This chronic indigestion brought on a whole train of other troubles. I became nervous, suffered from violent headaches and billiousness, and I think I would have given every cent I possessed to find relief. But I became more miserable and finally in despair I determined to take a southern trip.

"On the steamer bound for Galveston I chanced to see an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and the argument struck me forcibly that a medicine which made good blood must be a cure for stomach trouble. As soon as we landed I purchased a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and they gave me almost instantaneous relief. If it had not been for them I think I should have starved to death. I grew constantly better and in a short time I was cured.

"It is now over a year since these pills cured me. My stomach is sound and my digestion is perfect. I can eat heartily of the richest food, my nerves are quiet, my blood good and I feel well and strong. I have been made a well man by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

The Hon. Mr. Madden's address is St. Ignace, Mich., and he is willing to corroborate the statement given above. The power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in the vast number of diseases due to impure blood or to derangement of the system, has been demonstrated in thousands of instances as remarkable as his. No one who is suffering in this way rightfully neglect this way to restore health.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are sold by all dealers, or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, (they are never sold in bulk or by the hundred) by addressing Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Shenectady, N. Y.

BRINGS A THOUSAND

Great Northern Excursion From Evansville Arrives.

Great Number of Those In Party Are From Alexandria.

A very large proportion of Senator Knute Nelson's fellow townsmen from Alexandria, Minn., as well as a great many people from other towns between Evansville and Duluth, arrived in Duluth this afternoon. They brought with them the Alexandria band of fifteen pieces. They are paying their own way and enjoying themselves after their own fashion.

The Great Northern on its first special excursion train of the summer brought fully 1,000 people. The special, hauled by one of the Great Northern's immense ten-wheel passenger engines from one of the esser divisions, pulled into the Union station about 2 o'clock. It consisted of thirteen coaches and a baggage car, all packed to the doors and with people standing up in the baggage car.

The Alexandria band, clad in neat scarlet uniforms, hurried out of the cars and struck up a lively air as the excursionists came up the platform on their way out of the trainshed. The depot and streets in the vicinity of the depot were black with people for nearly half an hour. Unlike the Northern Pacific, which brought its party in two sections yesterday, the Great Northern crowd came all on one train, and so made a relatively larger showing, there being probably a third more people than came on yesterday's excursions.

No set program has been provided for these excursionists. It has not even been arranged to illuminate the welcome arch at Fifth avenue west, a fact that arouses comment on the action or lack of it by the city and commercial bodies.

The visitors will find plenty of excursions on the lake and bay to entertain them. Afternoon and evening excursions on the lake are being given today on both the steamers Iroquois and America. The Newsboy is also taking many people up the St. Louis river and around the bay afternoon and evening.

MANSFIELD.

Something of the Enormous Production That He Carries.

Richard Mansfield's representative, Paul Wilstach, reached Duluth this morning and made final arrangements for the appearance of the great actor at the Lyceum theater on Monday evening, June 23.

"This will be Mr. Mansfield's first appearance in Duluth in seven years, I believe," said Mr. Wilstach. "You see after three months' run in New York, and additional runs in Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago each winter, with a few of the other larger cities sprinkled in, it is a matter of some difficulty to secure time for any others. Indeed, this year, for the first time in seven years, has Mr. Mansfield been over 200 miles west of Chicago. He stops in Duluth on his way East from a Pacific coast tour. Though he visited in six cities up to April 1, and comparatively few since, the itinerary was last week figured for me by a railroad man at 16,500 miles. His season closes July 4, at Montreal.

"At what time will he arrive? Well, truly, that is very hard to say. You see Mr. Mansfield's entire tour is made by special train. This train has the right-of-way over all lines on one hour's notice. As soon as the last curtain falls the work of packing begins. Mr. Mansfield retires to his private car, the company retire to their sleepers. As soon as the baggage cars are packed the journey begins. The start governs the arrival in the next city. In a vague way, I should judge Mr. Mansfield would arrive about 8 o'clock Monday morning, June 23.

"The train? Eight cars. They are Mr. Mansfield's private cars, two sleepers for the sixty gentlemen and ladies of the company, and five baggage coaches for the scenery, furniture, costume trunks to the number of eighty, hangings, eighteenth century coach, the horses and other contributives to the pictorial environment of 'Beaucaire.' Everything will be taken off the stage for Mr. Mansfield's two nights and stored in adjacent buildings, for every foot of space will be needed.

"Yes, he will be seen here as Monsieur Beaucaire in 'Beaucaire,' from Booth Tarkington's charming story. He produced this play Oct. 7 in Philadelphia, and played it all winter in New York. I need not assure you that the entire company will accompany Mr. Mansfield, or that the entire environment of scenery and furniture will decorate the pictures here as in New York. That, you will agree, is one of the pillars of Mr. Mansfield's reputation as an artist.

"Mr. Mansfield today? In Spokane. He did not play yesterday. No, not because it was Friday, the 13th. That was an accident.

"From Duluth Mr. Mansfield goes East by the South Shore to Detroit, and thence to Montreal to close his season July 4.

"He sails from Montreal July 5 to join Mrs. Mansfield and their son in England. They have taken a house for a period extending to the beginning of the next season. Mrs. Mansfield will witness the coronation festivities, but Mr. Mansfield's long season prevents his going over in time."

Mr. Wilstach arranged for many changes on the stage of the theater for Mr. Mansfield's evenings. A special dressing room will have to be built for the celebrated artist, and work will be begun on Monday next.

A departure in the matter of the advance sale will be made for the Mansfield engagement. Instead of only one day in advance, the Mansfield sale will open six days in advance. The tickets for Mansfield will go on sale next Wednesday morning. The railroads are arranging rates into Duluth, and a large out-of-town attendance is expected.

TO BE SEARLE

He May Be Congressional Candidate After All.

The rumor to the effect that Senator F. B. Daugherty has practically decided not to consider the question of entering the field for the congressional nomination, referred to in the political column in this issue, has been in general circulation today. It is said that this decision has been reached regardless of any considerations whatever, except the imperative orders of Mr. Daugherty's physician, who insists that he shall not undertake the excitement and stress of a political campaign.

The rumor could not be verified in an authentic way, for the reason that Mr. Daugherty is still at Chisago lake, where he went on a fishing trip some days ago, for the purpose, it is said now, of escaping the importunities of his friends and many prominent Republicans that he consent to enter the race.

On the other hand, it is said that F. E. Searle is reconsidering his decision not to make the race for the nomination, and if Mr. Daugherty announces his decision not to run for congress will engage J. Adam Bede in mortal political combat for the honor on the Republican ticket.

A well known Republican, who prefers simply to be known as a friend of Judge Morris, although disclaiming to speak for more than some of the judge's friends, said this morning that if Mr. Searle went into the field he would do so without their support and against their wishes. In other words, it was declared that Mr. Searle was not a Morris or Willcuts' candidate.

WOODMEN, ATTENTION!

All members of Imperial camp No. 2206 and visiting Neighbors are requested to meet at Elks' hall at 7 p. m. sharp, Sunday evening, June 15, to attend memorial service at the English Lutheran church, corner Lake avenue and Third street.

NEW LINES.

Reported Object of Visit of Telegraph Officials to Duluth.

It is understood that the occasion for the visit of the Western Union and Northern Pacific telegraph line officials yesterday was to look over the ground preparatory to the erection of additional telegraph lines between St. Paul and Duluth.

It is said that the Northern Pacific desires to put in a wire that can be used not only for telegraphic purposes, but which will serve also for a telephone circuit. The latter is wished to provide direct verbal communication between the general offices in St. Paul and Superintendent Vanderlee's office in this city. An additional circuit is needed by the train dispatcher's force now stationed at St. Paul, which is the old force of the St. Paul & Duluth, will be removed to Duluth and concentrated here.

STRUCK A PILE.

An Accident to the Pennsylvania Boat Crew.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 14.—The crew of the Pennsylvania first four met with an accident today. They had gone out for practice and got too close to the west shore. The shell struck a submerged pile and was split from bow to cockpit. Two of the men swam to shore and walked two miles on the railroad, while the others paddled the boat back to the boat house. The boat will be repaired Monday.

SAME AS TEXAS.

Plan Presented for the Admission of Cuba.

Washington, June 14.—Senator Elkins, speaking of the resolution introduced today for the annexation of Cuba, said that Texas was admitted under precisely the same terms as this resolution for Cuba. He said he preferred the admission of Cuba in preference to granting $6,000,000 a year to her on account of the revenues, without knowing where it would go. By providing for the admission of Cuba there would be no differences in the Republican party on the subject of tariff relations with the island.

DOUBLE MURDER.

Muskogee, I. T., June 14.—Ana Dyer and her 12-year-old daughter have been found hanging from the ceiling of their home in Okfugee in the heart of the Creek nation, dead. It is believed from information furnished the marshal's office here, that Mrs. Dyer was killed by a man whom she had known intimately and that her daughter was killed to cover the first crime. Okfugee is off the railroad and without wire communication.

QUIET AT PAWTUCKET.

Street Railways Will Soon Be In Operation.

Pawtucket R. I., June 14.—It was expected today, in view of the withdrawal of the deputy sheriffs yesterday and the proclamation by the mayor asking the citizens to conduct themselves in an orderly manner, that the railway systems would be in operation throughout the city before night. Should the regular police show themselves able to cope with the situation, the militia will be gradually withdrawn.

PRINCE REVIEWS BOYS.

London, June 14.—The prince of Wales held a unique coronation review on the Horse Guards' parade this afternoon, of 13,000 boys gathered from all parts of the kingdom, belonging to the boys' brigades connected with the various churches.

SENATE AGREES

To the House Amendments of the Irrigration Bill.

This Passes Measure and Sends It to President.

Consideration of the Isthmian Canal Bill Is Resumed.

Washington, June 14.—When the senate met today Mr. Elkins (W. Va.) introduced a joint resolution providing for the annexation of Cuba and its admission as a state of the Union. The resolution was not referred to a committee, but was at Mr. Elkins' suggestion, allowed to lie on the table.

A joint resolution was offered by Mr. Scott (W. Va.) providing for the detail of an engineer officer of the army to direct a survey upon the isthmus of Darien to verify surveys already made for an inter-oceanic canal "at the narrowest part of the isthmus." The measure was ordered to lie on the table.

On motion of Mr. Allison, at the suggestion of Mr. Morgan, the senate decided to meet at 11 o'clock a. m. on next Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Consideration then was begun of the District of Columbia appropriation bill. The measure carries appropriations aggregating $9,848,673.

The senate agreed to the house amendments to the irrigation bill. This passes the measure and sends the bill to the president.

The senate also passed the District of Columbia appropriation bill. It includes a provision for a personal tax to be levied in the district.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, June 14.—The chaplain of the house in his invocation today made a reference to flag day.

A bill was passed to validate certain acts of the territorial legislature of New Mexico relative to the issuance of bonds.

As a matter of privilege, Mr. Hay (Va.) then called up a resolution which had been referred to the committee on insular affairs, but not acted upon within the period prescribed by the rules, calling upon the secretary of war for a statement showing the "amount of money expended by the United States since May 1, 1898, for the cost of the army serving in the Philippines; for the maintainence of both the military and civil government of said islands; for the transport service to the islands, for the maintainance of the insular bureau of the war department and for any other purpose connected with the occupation and possession of the Philippine islands of the United States."

Mr. Crumpacker (Ind.), moved to lay the resolution on the table. The rising vote resulted 58 to 57. Thereupon Mr. Hay demanded the ayes and noes and the roll was called. The resolution was laid upon the table, 90 to 67.

Mr. Cannon from the committee on appropriations, reported the general deficiency bill and gave notice that an early day next week he would call it up.

TERRIFIC STORM

Visits Lancaster, Ohio, Flooding Part of City.

Lancaster, Ohio, June 14.—This city was visited by a terrific storm early this morning, accompanied by heavy lightning. There is four feet of water in many houses and the inhabitants were taken from the upper rooms in boats. The Hocking valley road had severe washouts and one of their trains was lost eight hours owing to missing culverts and wires that were down.

ROYALTY AT ALDERSHOT.

London, June 14.—King Edward, Queen Alexandra, the prince and princess of Wales, the duke and duchess of Connaught, Lord Roberts, the commander-in-chief of the forces, and their respective suites arrived today at Aldershot, where the king will review 20,000 troops on Monday.

SOLD TO N. P.

The Washburn Road Becomes Part of Its System.

St. Paul, June 14.—A Washburn, Wis., special to the Dispatch says: The Washburn, Bayfield & Iron River railroad was sold to the Northern Pacific railroad today by Receiver A. C. Frost. The road connects with the Northern Pacific at Iron River and it will now become a part of the Northern Pacific system. The road has been the source of an endless amount of litigation and an attempt was made early in the winter to tear it up under an order issued by the federal court. Restraining orders were secured in the state courts and a conflict of authority resulted. Contempt proceedings against a number of citizens resulted in fines of $250 each in the United States court while the district attorney and sheriff were sentenced to sixty days each in the Dane county jail. The contempt cases have gone to the court of appeals. One hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars was the price paid for the main line of the road. The Northern Pacific will build new docks and perhaps elevators and sheds here. The citizens raised $10,000 as a bonus to the Northern Pacific.

MINERS RETURN TO WORK.

Huntington, W. Va., June 14.—The strikers lost more ground in the coal fields along the Norfolk & Western today. In both the Flat Top and the Tug River fields several hundred miners returned to work. The agitators concede their losses and will hold meetings tomorrow.

REV. JOHN SPURGEON DEAD.

London, June 14.—The Rev. John Spurgeon, a retired Congregational minister, and the father of the Spurgeon family of preachers, died today at South Norwood. He was born July 15, 1810.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, June 14.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $300,126,176; gold, $100,626,159; silver, $23,597,247.

ON THE TRACK

Suburban Handicap at New York and Derby at St. Louis.

New York, June 14.—The Suburban handicap was run today, the opening day of the Coney Island Jockey club at Sheepshead Bay. The heavy rain of last night did not do any substantial harm to the track and the sunshine of the early morning aided in solidifying the surface. The weather early in the day was partly cloudy and there was a possibility of showers.

The race was run about 4 o'clock and the twelve announced candidates for the $5000 prize, were as follows:

Starters.	Weight.	Jockeys.	Handicap.	Odds
Advance Guard,	119,	Bullman,	100	4
Contend,	99,	Cochran,	98	15
Pentecost,	97,	Redfern,	97	10
Monograph,	106,	Shea,	97	15
Goldheels,	124,	Wonderly,	96	3
Herbert,	121,	Odom,	96	5
Blues,	124,	Shaw,	94	6
Sadie S,	98,	L. Smith,	93	3
Reina,	114,	O'Connor,	90	25
Water Cure,	111,	Daggett,	90	12
Trigger,	112,	Buchanan,	85	40
Arden,	97,	Blank,	80	200

The Suburban this year is regarded as so open that any one of half a dozen of the candidates has a chance to win. Advance Guard, Pentecost, Gold Heels, Sou-tend, each have a large following today, which expects victory with Advance Guard the leading favorite, if there is one candidate, who, more than the others, is looked on with favor by the public.

St. Louis, June 14.—The second most valuable racing event in the West, the St. Louis Derby, worth $15,000, was run this afternoon, under most favorable auspices. The day was an ideal one from a racing standpoint. The weather is hot and the tract fast and between 25,000 and 30,000 persons were out to see the great race. Following is a list of the Derby candidates with their weights and jockeys:

A. Cahn's Terra Firma, 119, Dominick.
John W. Schorr & Co.'s Flora Pomona, 117, J. Woods.
Burns & Waterhouse's Corrigan, 119, J. Ransch.
B. Schrieber's Otis, 119, Singleton.
G. C. Bennet & Co.'s Aladdin, 119, Coburn.
G. C. Bennet & Co.'s Little Scout, 119, Helgerson.
S. W. Street's Sambo, 102, Dale.
E. & B. Holman's Lefiare, 102, Bell.
Turner Bros.' Glenwater, 107, J. Matthews.

GARDNER SENTENCED.

Minneapolis Officer Given Six Years In Prison.

Minneapolis, June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Irwin A. Gardner, the special police officer in Minneapolis, convicted of bribery, was this noon brought before Judge Harrison and sentenced to six years at hard labor. A stay was granted, and it is expected that the required $10,000 bonds will be furnished and Gardner soon released, pending a motion for a new trial.

SNOWING IN AFRICA.

Cape Town, June 14.—Unprecedented snow storms have swept over the midlands. Trains are blocked by a six-foot deep snow drift at Maraisport. The telegraph wires are down.

BRUIN TAKES A RIDE.

As soon as the first snow fell and the hunters began to bring in the deer, Harry Grant, a student at Boston university, came to Maine for big game. On his third day here near nightfall he came upon a big buck, about four miles from camp. He shot the buck and prepared to drag it in, writes the Katahdin, Me., correspondent of the Chicago Inter Ocean. The snow was deep and soft and before he had gone a mile he was tired, and wished he had shot a smaller deer. The more he thought it over the more he was convinced that his venison would keep until morning. Then he came upon an opening in the side of a hill, large enough to hold the body of his deer. Into this he thrust the carcass, and, hastily covering it with brush and snow, went to camp for a late supper.

During his meal Bill Gerrish, an old hunter, came in and sat beside the student, who told all about the hunt.

"Yes," said Gerrish, "I reckon I've got some same down Moose mountain way, too, though I guess 'taint dead, yet. He's got a trap onto him, though, that'll fetch me where he is so long as the snow holds."

He then told Grant about a bear he had been trying to trap all fall. The animal was cunning, however, and would not look at any kind of bait so long as the snow stayed away, preferring spiced nuts and fat grubs in safety to beef and honey where there was a chance of danger.

After the storm the bear became more reasonable. On two nights he had sprung the trap and eaten the bait by digging below the spread jaws and jarring the trencher from below. The third night he attempted the same maneuver, but was caught by the jaw, because Gerrish had taken the precaution to set the trap bottom side up.

Gerrish had followed the wide mark left by the trap all day, and was going out to take up the trail the first thing in the morning. As Grant's deer was cached near by, they agreed to go together with the horse and sled which Grant had hired.

They arranged to pull the deer from its hiding place and put it on the sled, after which they could hitch the horse to a tree, cover it with a blanket and take their time in looking up the bear.

Grant had no trouble in locating the deer's legs among the brush. He pulled on them several times, and when both men could not start the body, they tied a stout line to the rear of the sled and hauled it forth with horse power.

As the horse and sled went down the hill the men saw something big and black and shaggy emerge from the mountain, something that grunted and growled and bit at the brush as if it were alive.

"By gosh!" cried Gerrish, "I thought you told me you had a dead deer, and, darn me, if you haven't a live bear." He glanced at the hind leg of the animal, and seeing there was a trap attached, continued: "It's my bear, too, for that's my trap. What's caught in my trap is mine."

"Shoot him!" yelled Grant, fumbling with the magazine of his rifle, which was half filled with snow. "Kill him first and find out who he belongs to later. I've hired that horse, and if anything happens I'll have to foot the bills. Shoot, I say!"

He had freed his rifle from snow and was bringing it to his shoulder when Gerrish broke in with:

"Don't shoot, you blamed fool! You'll sure kill the horse and then the hull camp will laugh at us. It may be all right for you who are going away soon, but I live here, and will never hear the last of it!"

While the men were debating the bear had gained his feet and, looking about for the cause of the trouble, saw the horse and made haste to seek reprisals for injuries. The animal leaped to the floor of the sled and was about to assault the horse from behind when the wooden toggle in a ring of the chain attached to the trap brought up on the hind runner.

The bear could just reach the horse by stretching out his foreclaws. Before he had made the second grab the horse had concluded that anywhere else was safer than there, and was off for the camp at a three-minute gait, leaving the hunters to finish their debate at leisure.

Fifteen minutes or so later a frantic and badly blown horse dashed up in front of the camp, bringing in a live and very ugly bear on the sled. As no hunter was along to explain the mystery, it was inferred that the bear had killed both men and then ridden to camp to make a report.

As soon as bruin had been killed and the horse had received treatment for his wounds and been put into the stable the full force in camp was sent out to search for the bodies of the men.

Two miles out from camp they were found, sound in body, but much distressed in mind. Slung from a pole carried between them were the head and forequarters of Grant's deer, the bear having eaten the hindquarters for supper after crawling into the hole late at night.

THE THIRD IN CAMP

Time of the Soldiers Taken Up By Inspection.

Private Cutter Is Improving Rapidly at the Hospital.

St. Paul, June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—A special to the Dispatch from Lake City, Minn., says: Today dawned hot and sultry. Everything is quiet, owing to the inspection which is taking the time of the officers and men. The reception and hop tendered the officers of the Third regiment by the citizens of Lake City in the city hall last night was a marked success. Governor Van Sant was in attendance. The assembly hall was beautifully decorated in national emblems and bunting. Music was furnished by the Peerless orchestra, and refreshments were served. It was one of the prettiest formal parties given for many years.

Col. Joseph Bobieter of the Second regiment is a guest of Con. Van Duzee today. Among the other visitors are Maj. Whitney and Capt. Milliken of the Second regiment of Faribault; Maj. Williams, military storekeeper from Wisconsin National Guard. Capt. Nordely has finished his work with the Third, having them fully equipped.

Private Cutter, who was shot in the leg yesterday, is improving under the excellent care he is receiving in the hospital.

Capt. Wiley has installed a new telephone system at the range. Instead of the customary one phone, he now has one on each wing of the pit, thus saving a great deal of time and making returns more rapid. The work on the 500-yard range is completed, and those qualifying are working on the 1,000-yard skirmish.

Capt. Hagenson was officer of the day this morning; Lieut. Whittier and Lieut. Barnum officers of the guard. Capt. Nelson goes on duty as officer of the day at noon, with Lieut. Howard and Lieut. Andres officers of the guard.

Company E will give a pink tea this evening. Gen. Libby will give a launch party and dinner this afternoon in celebration of his birthday. All the officers will be in attendance. A very fine burlesque guard mount, Corporal Newhart, Company E, acting as adjutant, was given for the benefit of the governor and staff last evening. It is the first tobe given and Capt. Matson says it was the finest mock mount ever given in the history of the Third regiment. At the close Gov. Van Sant gave a patriotic talk, which received hearty applause.

HER FEE OF $75,000.

For winning a single case, Fanny Carpenter, a New York woman lawyer, has just received a fee half again as large as the yearly salary of the president of the United States, says the Philadelphia North American.

Seventy-five thousand dollars was the sum, and it is the largest fee ever paid to a woman attorney. Indeed, the greatest corporation lawyers seldom realize such a reward from one case.

The fact that a case of such magnitude was trusted to a woman, and that she succeeded in winning it, proves with what certain step the female disciples of Blackstone are taking their place before the bar of justice.

Mrs. Carpenter is a middle-aged, sensible, hard-headed, shrewd business woman. Her hair is gray, and a serious illness a few years ago compelled her to have it cut very short. She is five feet tall, and slight in proportion.

So hard did she work in preparation for and during the trial of her big case that she lost a great deal of weight, and is today in consequence much thinner and more fragile than she usually is.

Mrs. Carpenter is a native of New England, and was brought up in the tenets of a strict New England religion.

When she was about 16 years old her parents went to California to live, and she took a course at Mills college, at Alameda.

"That was the greatest thing in my life," said Mrs. Carpenter the other day in her spacious apartments at the Waldorf-Astoria. "The training that I got there, the discipline which was maintained and the lecturers who taught there gave me an experience and knowledge which I firmly believe I could never have acquired elsewhere in the same length of time.

"After my college course was completed my family moved to Hawaii and I went with them. It was there I met Mr. Carpenter. He was practicing law, but shortly after our marriage we came to New York to live.

"That was twelve years ago. I belong to and am a firm believer in women's clubs, and those of which I was a member, together with some charities in which I was interested, were my principal time destroyers the first few years that we lived here.

"In 1896, however, I made up my mind that it was a good thing for a woman to study a profession, and I therefore determined to take a course in law. I chose law principally, I think, because it was Mr. Carpenter's profession.

"I entered the law school of New York university and was admitted to the bar in 1897, and have been practicing more or less assiduously ever since. There is one point over which I have been tremendously annoyed time and time again.

"There are but eighteen women in New York who are members of the bar, but there are possibly 100, or even 150, who, because they have taken a course of law lectures at some college or other, feel that they have a right to call themselves lawyers.

"The eighteen women in New York who have really been admitted to the bar have formed a club, of which I have the honor to be president."

"To what do you consider you owe your great success, principally, Mrs. Carpenter"

"To nothing so much as hard work. It is the only method by which one can achieve success in anything. My practice has all come to me voluntarily, for I have never sought a single case."

"There has again arisen the disquieting question whether or not the criminals who are 'electrocuted' are really killed in the chair, or if it is the physicians who kill them while performing the autopsy," said an amateur electrician to the Galveston News. "I once received a fearful shock from a 1500-volt alternator, and although I am told that for a while I was apparently dead, I fully recovered, as anyone may see. Not long ago an electrician living in New York wrote to the Electrical World and Engineer, stating that 2000 volts had passed through his body, that he lost consciousness for several hours, but suffered no serious or permanent injury. This electrician contends the doctors of the state of New York are the real executioners. The journal to which he communicated his opinions violently disagrees with him. It is admitted that very few accidental shocks prove fatal, but it explains this by saying that 'when a man receives an accidental shock, the muscular condition usually tends to throw him away from the contact.' Moreover, the resistance through the accidental path in his body is unusually high. The current he receives is, therefore, under ordinary circumstances, neither powerful nor prolonged. Under the conditions of electrocution the current application is relatively both powerful and prolonged. In an accident the current is always brief and unsteady, and consequently it is difficult to tell how many volts pass through the body. During the past two years I have seen at least six persons who were injured in a power house. Only one was fatally hurt, and the doctors in attendance declared his neck was broken by falling against a brick wall after being shocked. I remember an incident which happened in Vicksburg, several years ago, that made me regret hanging had been abolished in New York, for it convinced me beyond all peradventure that electricity, no matter how directed, does not always kill. A small boy sought to 'slip in' to a minstrel performance and climbed a post which led up to one of the theater windows. Upon reaching the top with his hands he unknowingly grasped a live wire. He had to be torn from the wire, so firm was his hold. His hair was burned, as was a part of his clothing, and several of his fingers. The superintendent of the electric light plant told me 2000 volts had passed through the boy's body. For a week he lived between life and death, but finally recovered and is as sound today as he ever was."

Not long ago a French explorer, M. Charles Melissen, in traveling through Siam observed a species of small gray ants which were new to him. These ants were much engaged in traveling; they lived in a damp place and went in troops, says the St. James Gazette. To his surprise, he noticed among them from time to time an occasional ant which was much larger than the others and moved at much swifter pace, and each of these larger ants, M. Meissen saw, always carried one of the gray ants on its back. This discovery led him to watch their movements closely. He soon saw that while the main body of gray ants was always on foot, they were accompanied by at least one of their own sort mounted on one of these larger ants. He mounted and detached himself now and then from the line, rode rapidly to the head, came swiftly back to the rear, and seemed to be the commander of the expedition. The explorer was satisfied from his observation that this species of ant employs a larger ant—possibly a drone of the same species, though he had no means of proving this—as we employ horses to ride upon, though scarcely more than one ant in each colony seems to be provided with a mount.

BISHOP FARLEY, PROBABLE SUCCESSOR OF THE LATE ARCHBISHOP CORRIGAN.

Bishop John M. Farley, the present administrator of the diocese of New York, is said to be the choice of the bishops and clergy for the archbishopric made vacant by the recent death of Mgr. Corrigan. All the names suggested have of course been sent to Rome for final action, but Bishop Farley's recent selection as dignissimus is generally regarded as practically settling the matter.

HER FATE A MYSTERY

No Trace of a St. Paul High School Senior Girl.

Miss Inez Evans Disappears and Police Without Clues.

Her Failure to Graduate Thought to Be the Cause.

St. Paul, June 14.—"Inez, come home: mamma wants you." This pathetic message has been inserted in the personal columns of the St. Paul newspapers by the family of Miss Inez Evans, 809 Marshall avenue, who left home early Wednesday morning and who has not been seen or heard from since.

In spite of the efforts of parents and police, there is no clue to the missing girl, and telegrams sent to relatives and friends to whom she might have gone have failed to find her.

It developed that Miss Evans is the adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Evans, having been legally adopted by them when she was only seven months old. Her mother died in Madison, Wis., where she was born. Mrs. Evans happened to be visiting there at the time and took the little girl home with her. Her former name was Inez Jones.

As far as known by the Evans family, the young girl never knew that she was not their own daughter unless told by some one outside of the family. She was always treated as a daughter of the house and loved by every member of the family. She always displayed the greatest affection for them, and was especially obedient and devoted toward her adopted father and mother.

Mrs. Evans is almost prostrated with grief over the girl's disappearance, and has not been able to sleep since she went away. Her father and the other members of the family are overcome with anxiety, and are bearing up under the ordeal with the greatest difficulty.

Mrs. Evans' sister, Mrs. William Roberts, of Minneapolis, when seen, stated that she might have just learned of her parentage, and left because of not having been told before, and that this may have influenced her, but the family still believe the only motive was the girl's failure to graduate, and that she wished to go away until graduation week was over.

"She always had a generous allowance," said Mrs. Roberts, "and only a few weeks ago had taken her money which amounted to quite a neat sum, to the bank. She also received as a birthday present, a short time ago, a check. Neither had been touched, and a purse belonging to her with some loose change in it was found in her room after she had gone."

Special detectives are working on the case and making a tour of the various manufacturing concerns and other places where girls are employed in the hope that Miss Evans may have taken a position for a few days or until she decided to return to her home.

Inquiry has also been made at the various St. Paul and Minneapolis hospitals in vain.

ARBITRATE.

England and Germany Are Willing to Accept Japan's Proposition.

Tokio, May 26, via San Francisco, June 14.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—It is announced here that Sir Claude McDonald, British minister, and Count Von Arco-Valley, the German minister, have notified the Japanese government that their respective governments have accepted Japan's offer of arbitration of the house tax portion of the treaty property question, while urging submission thereto of all the remaining points in the revised treaties which are in doubt.

Japan, however, is said to be firm in declining to extend the scope of arbitration. England, Germany and France are now included in the foreign parties to arbitration. America not being included. The Netherlands government has signified its intention of not joining in arbitration, but of abiding by its decision. The question which foreigners here desire settled is the right of the Japanese to tax treaty property, i. e., property exempt from taxation by special treaty. They are not likely to have the whole question settled at this time, but consider that a decided victory has been scored by securing arbitration on a portion of the vexed question. The Japanese Bar association has decided that the house tax is rightly levied on foreigners residing in the treaty reservations.

AT THE HOTELS

J. E. Davidson, a merchant of Morris, Minn., who came to Duluth yesterday on the Northern Pacific excursion, talks enthusiastically about the prospect for a bumper crop in his part of the state. Mr. Davidson is at the McKay.

"If the present very favorable conditions continue," said Mr. Davidson, "until the crop matures, the farmers in our part of the country won't know what to do with all their money. The spring rains with us came at just the right time. The frost was late in leaving the ground, and softened it up just enough to work nicely. Then after the seed was in, it germinated nicely, and the rains came at just the right time to make it stool out well. I never saw better stooling than is to be seen in our part of the state. In some instances, seven or eight stools have sprouted from a single kernel of wheat. That means an exceptionally heavy and luxuriant growth of the plant, and a much larger yield per acre of land sown than is usual."

ABANDONED.

Bethel Will Not Use East End Property For Rescue Home.

A report has become current to the effect that the Bethel society would use the property recently purchased on Seventeenth avenue east for a refuge home, regardless of a recent announcement that the project had been abandoned.

President H. H. Hanford of the Bethel said this morning:

"There is really nothing new to say about the matter. We had no idea, in buying the property for that purpose, that we would be arousing antagonism. As soon as we learned this, we announced that the project would be abandoned, as far as that location is concerned. This has been said once, and there is nothing to add to it. The property is worth more than we paid for it as an investment."

It is said that the directors of the Bethel are at a loss to look for another location. One director said today that he had offered to rent a building opposite his own home for the purpose at $5 a month more than the building could be rented to anybody else for.

"That shows that I'm not afraid of the proximity of such an institution," said he. "Moreover, several directors of the Bethel live in the vicinity of the proposed Seventeenth avenue east location, and the presence of such an institution in the community did not seem a menace to them. It seems strange that there should be such fear of such an institution here, when they occupy the best communities in larger cities. I don't see anything to be feared from the presence of a reformed woman in the community, any more than I can see danger in the presence of a reformed man, nor as much, for that matter. The strangest thing about it, too, is that the large-hearted women you would most readily suspect of extending a helping hand to a woman, and who are eager to help a man in the same position, are among the first to treat a woman charily when she becomes penitent. Still, we have abandoned the idea of starting the home at the East End, and thus far have been unable to find any location for it."

It is understood that considerable feeling was aroused by the proposition to locate the home on Seventeenth avenue, and indignation meetings were held by women resident in the community.

A director of the Bethel says that the board will never do anything that it feels will arouse antagonism, and is sorry that feeling has been prolonged by false reports.

OSTEOPATHY

Cures Rheumatism With the Aid of Electricity.

The Branch Minneapolis Institute of Osteopathy, located in the Torrey building, this city, is having wonderful success in treatment of rheumatism. The doctors are prepared to give electric vapor baths, which in connection with their osteopathic treatment cures rheumatism, neuralgia, paralysis, etc. You don't need to go to West Baden or Hot Springs, when you can get more successful treatment at home.

W. C. RICHARDSON.

The handsome new freighter, W. C. Richardson, trim and elegant and up-to-date in every detail, steamed into port last night, and today she is unloading her cargo of 5100 tons of coal at Northwestern coal dock No. 1.

The new steamer is owned by Capt. W. C. Richardson, of Cleveland, a large vessel owner, prominently identified with the lake marine interests, who has many friends in Duluth. This is her maiden trip, and she was launched at Cleveland late in April, and has been fitting out ever since. In all respects she is a model. She is one of the swift cargo carriers, capable of holding a large cargo and putting it through with dispatch, and one of the notable features about her are her appointments. Capt. Richardson himself has looked after every detail personally, and the result is that the berth of almost any employe aboard of her is one to be envied.

The appointments are the most complete of any vessel on the lakes. She is lighted by electricity, and the most modern improvements in every respect cause her to vie with a modern apartment house for comfort and elegance. The owner has quarters aboard, with parlors, sleeping rooms, bath rooms, etc., all in oak and furnished handsomely. The master's quarters are also furnished in the same way and equipped with every convenience imaginable. The dining room and the cook's galley are equal to any first-class hotels, and indeed no one connected with the crew has been slighted, as fine rooms have been prepared for all of them. The electric light plant is said to be the best on the lakes, and at night the vessel is lighted fully as well as in the day time. In short, there are few private residences that could be compared with the appointments of this modern steel freight steamer.

The vessel cost $250,000, and she was built at the Globe works of the American Shipbuilding company in Cleveland. She is 374 feet over all, and her keel is 354 feet long. Her beam is 48 feet and her depth 28 feet. She has triple-expansion engines of 20,33½ and 55 inch inch cyclinder diameters, with a common stroke of 40 inches. She has two Scotch boilers, 14 by 12 feet in size, and she is built for a working pressure of 170 pounds.

Her owner, Capt. W. C. Richardson, is interested in about forty vessels, including such well known vessels as the Wade, Devereaux, Roumania, Crete and others.

The Richardson's master is Capt. Thomas Wilford, one of the best known vessel captains on the lakes. He has been with Capt. Richardson for over twenty years, and has sailed the Devereaux, Wade and Samuel Mitchell, all of which he brought out. Last year he was in the Mitchell and his present chief engineer, James Falconer, was with him in that vessel. He has sailed the lakes for many years, and is one of the most successful and reliable masters in the fresh water marine.

Capt. Thomas Jones, of Cleveland, came up on the initial trip of the Richardson as a guest of Capt. Richardson and Capt. Wilford. He has not been sailing for the past three years, having become interested in a number of vessels as stockholder, though he has sailed the lakes since the surrender of Lee, when he left the navy and came to the lakes. He has sailed them ever since, and he made his first visit to Duluth in the early '70's, when he was offered the site of the Spalding hotel for $500.

The Richardson will be here until Monday or Tuesday.

GIRL DISAPPEARS.

Thought to Have Eloped With a Pugilist.

Chicago, June 11.—Miss Lillian Saindon, the 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Saindon, 920 West Sixty-second street, has disappeared from her home and the possibility that she has eloped with James Kaleen, a young pugilist, has been so strongly impressed upon Mrs. Saindon that the police have been instructed to look for and detain the young people until the parents can be notified.

Miss Saindon left her home Wednesday night, while the house was filled with guests. Her absence was discovered early yesterday morning by her sister, and a search revealed the fact that the young woman had taken all of her clothing with her.

For several months the parents of Miss Saindon have been objecting to the attentions paid to her by young Kaleen. Recently he was forbidden entrance to the house. It is said the young people met clandestinely and planned an elopement, but the young man denied to the police yesterday that he knew the whereabouts of Miss Saindon. Kaleen is 22 years old and lives with his parents at 6132 Halsted street.

CLAIMS PLOT.

Witness Said to Have Testified Before Jury Never There.

Napoleon, Ohio, June 14.—The Henry county judge, grand jury and prosecutor are entangled in what promises to be a far-reaching eruption in legal circles of this part of the state, as the result of the last step in the case of C. F. Clement, of this city, who was arrested last winter for alleged embezzlement. The case was continued until the next term of court, but Judge Donnelly abruptly revoked his former decision and then refused to have anything further to do with the matter.

On the heels of this Clement sprung a sensation that has stupified the court. He claims that the whole case is a deliberate plot, and says that he can produce proof that two of the counts brought against him by the grand jury were based on utter fabrications, and that the two principal prosecuting witnesses, Henry Shirling and William Maerksch, who it was alleged testified against him to the jury, had never been near the court house.

The foreman of the grand jury in his report said that both men had been given testimony, and Clement claims that he can produce the affidavits of both to the effect that they had never been before the jury and had not spoken a word concerning the case.

Clements said when interviewed: "I know that it is a serious thing to say, but I am prepared to back it up to the very bottom. The whole matter is a deliberate plat, and I have proof that will expose the motives in securing my indictment. The matter will be brought into court and sifted to its full extent."

C. F. Clement had for a number of years been a well-known resident of this city. For several years he was the editor and proprietor of the German Damokrat, of this city. He has been a practicing attorney here for some time, and has taken an active part in politics. He was the Democratic candidate for county recorder last fall, but was defeated.

Shortly after the election he was arrested for alleged embezzlement. It was claimed that the amount for which he was responsible would be in the neighborhood of $2000. The principal loser was the People's bank, of Wauseon, Ohio, it was alleged that the lawyer had been given various sums of money by his clients to remit to the bank, and that they had never reached their destination. There were five accusations in all brought against him, and the grand jury of the March term of court returned five indictments.

It is not known whether or not Clement will allege that men claiming to be Shirling and Maerksch were before the grand jury. His further statement is anxiously awaited.

MRS. MANICE

New York, June 14.—In the final match today for the women's metropolitan golf championship at the Essex County Country club, West Orange, N. J., Miss Helen Hernandez, of Orange, played Mrs. E. A. Manice, of New York. Miss Hernandez reached the finals through the easier side of the tournament, though she had no sinecure in defeating in succession Mrs. H. Clark, Miss Grace Ellis and Mrs. William Shippen. Mrs. Manice first beat Miss Goffe, who won the low score medal in the qualifying round; then Mrs. N. P. Rogers, who is a strong, careful player, and last Miss Genevieve Hecker, who, to her prestige as champion had added the credit of making the phenomenally low card of 77. Mrs. Manie thus fairly earned her position in the final.

A final match also was played today for the consolation cup by Mrs. William E. Morgan, of Short Hills, N. J., and Miss Hester Kyle, of Orange. Mrs. Manice defeated Miss Hernandez by seven up and six to play, thus winning the women's metropolitan championship.

AT WEST DULUTH

There will be a meeting this evening of all the committees who have in charge the annual banquet of the West Duluth Republican club, which will be held in the Great Eastern hall next Wednesday evening. This will probably be the last meeting before the banquet, and an effort will be made to have every member present, as there yet remain a number of important details to be attended to.

It is pretty certain now that all of the speakers listed will be present at the banquet. The only thing that can come up to disappoint the local Republicans will be an absence of the distinguished guests on account of sickness. The music has been engaged and the supper planned. There has been a surprising demand for tickets from out of town Republicans, and a few have been sent out, but the idea is to care for the local Republicans first. The tickets have found a ready sale, and only a few remain unsold. Covers will be laid for 300 guests.

Services will be held at the usual hour at nearly all of the West Duluth churches. The announcements are as follows:

The annual children's day exercises of the West Duluth Baptist Sunday school will be held Sunday evening, at 8 o'clock. At the morning service the pastor, Rev. Arthur T. Hoag, will preach a sermon prepared especially for the boys and girls of the Sunday school. The subject will be, "Shammua, Son of Zaccur, One of the Cowards."

Preaching service at 10:30 o'clock at the Asbury M. E. church of West Duluth, Sunday. After the sermon the sacrament of Our Lord's supper will be administered by the pastor, Rev. W. E. Loomis. It is desired that all communicants will be present, especially the young members. Sunday school at 11:45 a. m., Epworth league at 7 p. m., and preaching at 8 o'clock.

At the Westminster Presbyterian church the Rev. Virgil Scott, assistant pastor of the First church, will preach at 10:30 a. m. Elder John Wilson will conduct the evening service at 8 o'clock. The Rev. W. J. Lawrie will begin his pastorate Sunday morning, June 22. Children's day will be observed June 29.

At the Plymouth Congregational church, corner of Fifty-fourth avenue west and Bristol street, Rev. James Earl, the pastor, will preach the morning sermon at 10:45 o'clock, subject, "Praise." Sunday school at 12 o'clock, and Young ePople's meeting at 7 p. m. Rev. Alexander Milne, of the Pilgrim Congregational church, will preach at 8 o'clock. Special music.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

There was an enthusiastic meeting of the Commercial club last evening and a general discussion was had over matters of interest to West Duluth. It is not likely that any special meetings of the club will be held this month unless matters of importance come up that require immediate attention.

There was a small fire in the dwelling of R. McDonald, near the Newton sawmill, in Oneota, last evening. The house and contents were practically destroyed. The fire is supposed to have been caused by a defective chimney.

A sad case of destitution has been discovered at 101 Fifty-ninth avenue west, where Mrs. Olson resides with her five little children. The charitable officers have been notified of the case.

While attempting to get over a fence yesterday, Mrs. Hagenson, of Sixty-sixth avenue west, fell and fractured one of her limbs, just below the knee. She was taken to the Red Cross hospital, where the fracture was reduced.

The annual ball of the Ladies of the Maccabees, in the Great Eastern hall, last evening, was a great success socially and financially. The hall was handsomely decorated with the colors of the order and festoons of green trimming.

The foundations have been completed for the new St. James church, and work on the superstructure will begin shortly. The building, completed, will cost about $20,000.

James Medley notified his friends this morning that he would start for Birch this evening to catch for them a week's supply of fish. He expects to be gone over Sunday.

E. H. Hagen has purchased a home on Sixtieth avenue west.

The decorating committee for the Fourth of July celebration has held a meeting and made the preliminary arrangements for decorating this part of the city.

Frank Wade left today for a visit at St. Louis. He was accompanied by his mother.

S. C. Murphy has gone to Staples to help in the initiation of candidates for the Woodmen order.

RUMORED

That the Government Will Abandon the Merger Fight.

New York, June 14.—It is rumored in Wall street that a decision favorable to the company in the Northern Securities case now pending in the United States circuit court of Minnnesota is likely to be handed down almost any day and, that suffering a reverse in this court, the government will withdraw its suit, thus ending the whole affair.

The improvement of the stock market this week has been largely on these rumors. It is an obvious speculative proposition that a decision favorable to the Northern Securities company at this stage of the proceedings would be more potent for good than a reverse decision would be for ill. If the decision should be adverse to the Northern Securities company, Wall street would accept it philosophically, as it has accepted a great many other disappointments within the past twelve months, whereas a favorable decision would be accepted as marking the end of the controversy.

Although the discussion of the Northern Pacific-Great Northern-Burlington merger has lost some of its earliest zest, Wall street has not lost sight of the fact that to have the legality of this principle of community of interest established at law will be to open up a long vista of similar possibilities in the way of railroad mergers, consolidation, etc., and that therefore a decision favorable to corporate interest would be a bullish influence of considerable importance.

It is a matter of common knowledge that the scheme of unifying the Gould properties into one Missouri Pacific-Wabash transcontinental system is held in abeyance pending the outcome of the Northern Securities litigation, and that if the Northern Securities company stands the test of law a holding committee of similar character will be formed by the Goulds. This explains why the suggestion of a favorable decision in the supreme court of Minnesota has reawakened bullish interest in the Gould stocks, especially in Missouri Pacific.

SOUTHERN GIRL

Refuses to Sing "Marching Through Georgia."

Louisville, Ky., June 14.—Laura Talbott Galt, 13 years old, and a member of the eighth grade of the Eighth ward school, has created a sensation by her action in refusing to join the class in the singing of "Marching Through Georgia" and by writing a defense of the action of Admiral Semmes in escaping in a yacht from the Alabama after he had surrendered that ship to the Kearsarge.

When the song was announced in the class room Miss Galt not only refused to sing the song, but put her fingers in her ears that she might not hear the others sing it. Mrs. Laura Talbott Ross, the girl's grandmother, is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution and of the Albert Sidney Johnston chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy. She said:

"I visited the school and expressed to Professor Taylor and Superintendent Mark my mortification over the whole incident. I told Professor Mark the treatment of the child was uncalled for. If she is not recommended for the high school I will take the whole matter to the school board."

Miss Allen, the teacher, said: "We are studying civil war history, and when any national or Southern air comes up that the children want to sing I let them sing it. When Miss Galt not only refused to sing, but put her fingers in her ears, I reprimanded her privately at recess and the next morning received a note from her grandmother, who is an unreconstructed rebel. I paid no attention to the note."

AMERICANS IN LONDON

Are Enjoying a Profusion of Entertainments At Present.

They Are Also Entertaining On a Liberal Scale.

Bradley-Martins Are to Give a Wonderful Dinner.

London, June 14.—Seldom has London seen such profusion of American entertainments as occurred this week. The greatest interest and social event of the season was the dinner of Joseph H. Choate, the United States ambassador, and Mrs. Choate to King Edward and Queen Alexandra on Wednesday, and since the arrival of the United States special ambassador to the coronation, Whitelaw Reid, all officialdom has been busy leaving cards at the residence of America's special envoy.

Mrs. Crocker and her two stepdaughters, the Misses' Rutherford, have been entertaining at Carlsuge. Gen. John W. Clous has been hobnobbing with Lord Roberts and other English army dignitaries, and Gen. Joseph Wheeler, United States Consul General H. Clay Evans, the members of the American polo team and their supporters, notably James R. Keene are frequently seen at social gatherings. President Roosevelt's two sisters, Mrs. W. Sheffield Cowles and Mrs. Douglas Robinson, have been overwhelmed with invitations, and have arranged various entertainments at the house they have taken in Grosvenor Crescent. The Mackays, Bradley-Martins, Wards, Marlboroughs and almost every one of London's well-known Americans, are nightly seen at the opera, afterwards flitting from one ball to another.

June 2 will be a gala night for the American colony. The Bradley-Martins will give a very elaborate dinner at their house, in Chesterfield Gardens, which is likely to outrival in luxuriance the famous Bradley-Martin ball. The same night Mrs. John W. Mackay's Carlton House Terrace mansion will be the scene of a big dinner, while also the same night, Reginald Ward will give a dinner of eighty covers. On the following night, the Ogilvy Hays will entertain.

The very bad weather now marking the close of Ascot week, threatens to mar somewhat the many house parties previously arranged. If the rain will only cease and June become itself again, the gaiety which has taken hold of the nation doubtless will have a superb outlet at the fashionable race meeting, in which many Americans have planned to participate. The distinguished Americans who accompany Whitelaw Reid are at present scattered all over the West End, but June 23 they will go to the Buckingham Palace hotel as guests of the nation, with the exception of Mr. Reid, who, of course, will remain at Brook house. Gen. James H. Wilson, representing the army of the United States at the coronation, and his two daughters are now at Claridges, but they expect to pay a flying visit to Paris. Rear Admiral John Watson, representing the United States navy at the coronation, and his son, Lieut. E. H. Watson, U. S. N., have taken temporary rooms, while the British naval officials are flocking to pay their respects. Commander W. Sheffield Cowles, the former naval attachee of the United States here, with his wife and sister-in-law, are occupying a house in Grosvenor Place. Col. John Biddle, U. S. A., Gen. Wilson's aide, is already at the Buckingham Palace hotel.

All the visitors tell the representatives of the Associated Press that they are glad of the chance to visit England under such auspicious circumstances. They are all delighted at the courtesy exhibited but they are all rather mixed up regarding future arrangements and are rather aghast at the avalanche of invitations which they have received. Within a few days order doubtless will come out of the present chaos.

IN MICHIGAN.

Body of Joseph Bushnen Found In Water By Boys.

Marquette—Joseph Bushmen, a Frenchman and a well-known character about the city, was drowned in the lake near "Gaines Rock" at the mouth of Whetstone creek sometime during Wednesday night. His body was found floating in the water near the rocks in that vicinity by two boys. The officers were notified and the body was recovered and taken to Johnason & Tonela's morgue. Just how Bushmen came to meet his end in the lake and in what manner is not known but it is the supposition that he was intoxicated and while in that condition fell in and was drowned. Samuel Longtine a Marquette boy, and a companion from Ishpeming, went to the mouth of the creek to fish and it was they who discovered the body and informed Officer Hogan, who went to the place and throwing a rope around the body tied it to the rocks, where it was later procured by Marshal Maney and taken to the city. Bushmen was quite well advanced in years.

Ontonagon—William Wessing and his two sons have been drowned in Lake Superior near here. The boys were bathing in the lake with their father and got too far out and were caught by the undertow. The father was drowned in trying to rescue them. The boys were 9 and 12 years old.

Negaunee—The Cliffs shaft, the sinking of which through quicksand is one of the greatest mining feats ever performed in the Lake Superior district, has reached a depth of 130 feet at the Maas mine of the Cleveland Cliffs company. From surface to the ledge of rock overlying the ore deposit 170 feet of sand must be passed through, and a net gain of six inches per day is being made. Fifteen hundred gallons of water per minute are being pumped out with such a proportion of sand that the work of ten men is constantly required to shovel it from the launder. The timbers of the shaft are being installed on surface, one set being placed and firmly fastened on top of the other, as the whole structure, weighted down with several hundred tons of pig iron, is slowly forced downward into the sand, the bottom timbers being equipped with wedge shaped steel shoes. Such a flow of water has been encountered that the men at work at the bottom are almost in constant danger and flee to the ladders whenever the bubbling up process increases and cause fears of a deluge. Once the ledge is reached, a distance of forty feet, the shaft will be bottomed on gold rock and the sinking will then be prosecuted as is generally the case.

NEW YORK BOOTBLACKS

Form Labor Union With Eight Hundred Members.

New York, June 14.—Absolutely the newest thing in organized labor is "Greater New York Shoe Polishers' union No. 1," which has just been formed with a membership of 800. The new unionists gave their pledge to post conspicuously cards announcing fees of 5 cents for a "shine" and 10 for a "polish." Resolutions were passed calling on the city council to have all stands closed at 2 p. m. on Sunday and recommending the establishment of a training school for rising bootblacks.

WISCONSIN CREWS

Leave For the East to Enter Poughkeepsie Races.

Madison, Wis., June 14.—The Wisconsin 'varsity and freshmen crews left for the East this morning, to take part in the races at Poughkeepsie next Saturday. The crews probably will row in the following order:

'Varsity—Bow, Moffett; 2, Steers; 3, Palmer; 4, Stevenson; 5, Mather; 6, Jordan; 7, Capt. Gaflin; stroke, McComb; coxswain, Sawyer. Gibson and Lyman are taken along as substitutes.

The freshmen taken on the trip were: Bow, Schumaker; 2, Stack; 3, Orbert; 4, Loudsay; 5, Sinclair; 6, Bartlett; 7, Miller, stroke, Reed; coxswain, Morris. Haley and Bartlett were taken along as substitutes.

MORRIS WITHDRAWS.

Horses Will Not Run In American Derby.

New York, June 14.—Green B. Morris has declared his horses Homestead and Old England out of the American derby to be run at Washington park, Chicago, a week from today. This announcement came as a surprise to turfmen generally, as it had been expected that at least one of the horses named would carry the Morris colors in the Western classic.

"I decided not to send the colts to Chicago," said Mr. Morris, "because I am afraid the track will be muddy, and they would take the trip for nothing, as neither likes the mud. Then they have valuable stake engagements at Sheepshead Bay next week and I thought it better to run them here than to take a chance by going West."

Homestead and Old England are in the $20,000 Tidal stakes, to be run at Sheepshead the same day the American derby will be decided.

PASTOR TO LEAVE

Rev. K. S. Lundin, of the First Swedish Baptist Church Resigns.

Has Accepted Call From Church At Iron Mountain, Mich.

Church Under His Seven Years' Pastorate Has Prospered.

Rev. K. A. Lundin, for many years pastor of the First Swedish Baptist church of this city, has resigned and accepted a call from Iron Mountain, Mich., to become pastor of the Swedish Baptist church at that place.

Rev. Mr. Lundin has the honor of having served the longest number of years in the history of the First Swedish Baptist church of any pastor since its organization in 1884, and is considered one of the most successful ministers the church has ever had. It is nearly seven years since he took charge of the church. During his period here ith as advanced materially in both numbers and in financial directions also. Through his untiring efforts the large debt resting on the church property when he assumed charge as pastor has been entirely wiped out, with the assistance of the church finance committee and the cooperation of the congregation.

Before he accepted the call to the First Swedish Baptist church in this city he was district missionary in the state of Minnesota. He is a graduate of the Theological seminary in Morgan park, which is a part of the Chicago university. He expects to leave for his new field by the latter part of this month.

NUMEROUS

Last evening W. W. Rich, of New Brighton, Ramsey county, a member of the last legislature and a candidate to succeed himself, arrived at the St. Louis from St. Paul. He was met by George R. Claybourne, G. J. Mallory and T. M. Pugh, all Duluth members of the legislature, and after Mr. Rich had snatched a few minutes for supper they posted to his room in the hotel, where they remained during the evening. Whether this was simply a little reunion or whether there was something in the wind the members of the party would not divulge, though they intimated on the quiet that they were simply fighting last winter's battles over again. All four were members of the section of the house that killed the tax bill last winter during the special session, and it is understood that they enjoyed themselves just night stamping on the mangled remains.

This did not exhaust the list of officials. Representative W. H. Noyes, of Barnum, who is a candidate for the senate in the Fifty-second district, composed of Itasca, Carlton and Cass counties, arrived in the afternoon and went home on the night train.

Senator McCuslck, of Pine City, was also here, and he remained until today. Representative Thomas E. Burg, of Two Harbors, was in the city during the afternoon.

J. G. Miller, member of the board of railroad and warehouse commissioners, was also in the city. While they did not gather at the St. Louis last evening, Senator Baldwin, Representative Alford and Representative Miller were all in the city.

The most surprising thing about the gathering was that everybody said it was just accidental.

Next to this the most interesting feature was the attitude of Mr. Rich on the state auditorship contest. In the legislature sessions he was an opponent of Jacobson's almost all along the line. They represented totally dissimilar elements of the house, and it was seldom that they were found voting together on the same bill.

Last night, however, Mr. Rich was talking Jacobson for state auditor very strongly. He did not admit that he was an advocate of Jake, but he told how he is cutting into Iverson's own territory and taking away his home county of Freeborn, how he is going to get a third of the Hennepin county delegation to the state convention, and how he is going to dip into Ramsey county too.

Also, he intimated that Jacobson might pay a visit to this city in the course of his campaign for the nomination.

When accused of being an advance agent of Jacobson, he would not admit the impeachment, but he continued to talk of Jacobson's gains and strength.

ACCIDENTAL.

Richard Hall Shoots Himself While Playing With a Revolver.

Richard Hall, of Minneapolis, accidentally shot himself last night in the New York lodging house, 217 West Superior street.

He is in a very critical condition at St. Mary's hospital and may not live through the day.

Hall and a boy named John Daley, of Springfield, Mo., occupants of the same lodging house, were retiring when the shooting occurred.

Daley says that Hall took a revolver from his pocket while undressing and placed the weapon under his pillow. A few moments later Hall made an examination of the revolver. It was accidentally discharged and the bullet passed entirely through the abdomen. It is visible underneath the skin in the back.

Daley was taken in custody but Hall sufficiently recovered during the night to make a statement removing all suspicion from his room mate.

He said the gun was held in his own hands when it was accidentally discharged. He got this far with his story when he collapsed and begged the nurses to give him something to put him to sleep, so he would not feel the pain.

The man shot is deaf and dumb. He is compelled to write out his story and has barely strength enough to lift a pencil. The nurses say that so far they have learned that he is an orphan and that formerly he lived on Walnut street in Minneapolis.

Daley says he knows nothing about Hall, having met him for the first time in the lodging house just before the accident. They were assigned the same sleeping quarters.

The man that was shot has been in Duluth several days and acted rather strangely. Wednesday and Thursday nights he slept at the Scandia hotel.

TALL MAN SHORT.

J. C. Spence of Installment Company Missing.

The local manager of the United States Installment Realty company is missing.

It is said he is nearly six feet tall and nearly $600 short. His name is J. C. Spence and when last seen he was purchasing tickets for Los Angeles.

R. C. Hamilton, secretary of the company, is in Duluth arranging for a new local manager, and says that the loss sustained will be born entirely by the company which he represents.

Memorial Next Friday.

The supreme court of the state of Minnesota has fixed next Friday afternoon as the time when the State Bar association is to hold memorial exercises and present an address to the court in memory of the late Judge Daniel A. Dickinson, of Duluth, who was formerly a member of the supreme court.

Remarks will also be made by members of the bar, and it is anticipated that Duluth attorneys will be among those who will pay tribute to the memory of the dead jurist.

A Wrong Impression.

P. A. Smith, of Rat Portage, denies that he said in an interview with The Herald that he had seen William Randolph under the influence of liquor. He was quoted as saying that he had never seen anything wrong with him except that he occasionally got under the influence of liquor.

"What I did say was that One-Armed Sullivan was an ugly man when he was drunk, and I did not intend to be understood as saying that Mr. Randolph drinks to excess. I never saw him under the influence of liquor in my life. Probably the reporter misunderstood my references to Sullivan's drinking proclivities."

HUNT ABANDONED.

Portland, Ore., June 14.—The hunt for Tracy and Merrill, the escaped convicts, has been abandoned and the state troops have been sent home. Governor Greer has doubled the reward for the capture of the fugitives, dead or alive, making it now $5000.

THE DAKOTAS.

Postmaster at Portal Must Serve Term In Prison.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—John E. MacNamara, who has been on trial before the United States district court here on the charge of embezzling government funds, was convicted. MacNamara was formerly postmaster at Portal, N. D. On July 8, 1901, one of Col. Kimball's inspectors reported a shortage of $1800 in the money order funds of the Portal postoffice, a shortage which the postmaster was unable to explain. The matter was subsequently placed in the hands of the United States district attorney of North Dakota. Hearing of this MacNamara suddenly left Portal for parts unknown. An indictment on the charge of embezzlement was found against him and he was finally arrested at Helena, Mont., and brought to Fargo for trial. MacNamara was sentenced to a fine of $1800 and nine months' imprisonment in the North Dakota penitentiary.

Jamestown—Elmer Smith, night car checker in the Northern Pacific depot here, was assaulted by thugs while going to his home. He was struck a vicious blow and was unconscious for several minutes. It is supposed to have been the work of tramps, and a gang of them were run out of the city by the chief of police.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Lead—Two masked men attempted to hold up two barbers of this city named Westfall and Schieke, as they were returning home from their shops late at night. The barbers made a fight and the hold-ups fled. One of the masked men drew a revolver and fired twice at Westfall, but the gun did not go off. There is no clue to the hold-ups, who have escaped.

Aberdeen—Sheriff Thompson has returned to the city with the two horse-thieves wanted in Sargent county. They are Harry Cockburn and Earl Calkins, who were working for O. H. Moore, and they took the horses and saddles with the intention of riding them to the cattle range to become cowboys. They are only 18 and 19 years old, and are sorry they made the break.

Yankton—Helena McGregor, daughter of Alex McGregor, living near Volin, this county, was thrown from a horse yesterday afternoon and is in a critical condition. Several ribs were broken, the ends being driven into her lungs.

Sioux Falls—What will probably prove to be the most unique convention ever held in this portion of the country will meet in Sioux Falls on July 13 to 16. It will be a convention of pupils and graduates of the South Dakota school for the deaf and dumb, located in this city. The entire arrangements for the convention are in the hands of pupils and graduates. Students and graduates of the institution are expected from all ports of South Dakota and adjoining states.

Deadwood—The crop of berries and all kinds of small fruit, both tame and wild, throughout the Black Hills, will be the largest ever gathered. Every gulch is full of wild fruit, and the gardeners in Spearfish and other valleys are preparing for a big harvest of strawberries, raspberries and other small berries. One Spearfish man expects 10,000 quarts of strawberries.

Cuts, Bruises and Burns Quickly Healed.

Chamberlain's Pain Balm is an antiseptic liniment, and when applied to cuts, bruises and burns, causes them to heal without maturation and much more quickly than by the usual treatment. For sale at Boyce's drug store.

GOLF TOURNAMENT.

Conditions of Amateur Championship Meet.

New York, June 14.—An announcement of the national amateur golf championship conditions has been made by Maturin Ballou, secretary of the United States Golf association. The tournament will be played at the links of the Glen View Golf club, near Chicago, from July 15 to 19, and entries must be received by the secretary not later than 6 p. m. on Tuesday, July 8. The championship cup, valued at $1000, and four medals are the prizes offered.

PENSION GRANTED.

Washington, June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—An original pension of $12 per month has been granted to Joseph Schaaf, of Ramey, Minn.

The First 20-hour Train of the Pennsylvania Lines, Chicago to New York.

COMMODORE NICHOLSON OF OUR NAVY.

Recommends Pe-ru-na---Other Prominent Men Testify.

COMMODORE NICHOLSON

Commodore Somerville Nicholson, of the United States navy, in a letter from 1837 R street, Northwest, Washington, D. C., says:

"Your Peruna has been and is now used by so many of my friends and acquaintances as a sure cure for catarrh that I am convinced of its curative qualities and I unhesitatingly recommend it to all persons suffering from that complaint." S. NICHOLSON.

Dr. W. Godfrey Hunter, United States minister from Guatemala, ex-member of congress from Kentucky, in a letter from Washington, D. C., writes: "I am fully satisfied that your Peruna is an efficacious remedy for catarrh, as I and many of my friends have been benefited by its use. "W. G. HUNTER, M. D."

Hon. G. R. Brown, Martinville, Va., ex-member of congress, Fifth district, Fiftieth congress, writes: "I cheerfully give my endorsement to your Peruna as a cure for catarrh. Its beneficial results have been so fully demonstrated that its use is essential to all persons suffering from that disease. "HON. G. R. BROWN."

Frank W. Colbath, 15 School street, Auburn, Maine, writes: "Having read so much about Peruna in the papers I decided to try it for catarrh in the head which I have had for twenty years or more. I have taken two bottles and am entirely cured.

"FRANK W. COLBATH."

Mr. J. C. Hoffman, Ren, Mo., writes: "About a year ago I was suffering with catarrh and I wrote to Dr. Hartman of my symptoms and he promptly gave me advice. I used Peruna faithfully and I feel better than I have for five years, and all praise is due Peruna. I have a good appetite and all the symptoms of catarrh are gone. I believe that I am cured and Peruna cured me. I think Peruna is all that is claimed for it.

"J. C. HOFFMAN."

The day was when men of prominence hesitated to give their testimonials to proprietary medicines for publication. This remains true today of most proprietary medicines. But Peruna has become so justly famous, its merits are known to so many people of high and low stations, that no one hesitates to see his name in print recommending Peruna.

The highest men in our nation have given Peruna a strong endorsement. Men representing all classes and stations are equally represented.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

GREEN FARMER WON.

Why Expert From Indiana Stopped Playing Poker.

There were five of them. They were seated in the office of a second-rate downtown hotel, silently contemplating a soft coal fire burning in one corner of the room, and drawing lazily at the ends of the best 5-cent cigars an accommodating landlord kept under lock and key in a dinky little case perched high up on a counter beside the thumb-marked register, says the Chicago Tribune.

Those five uncommunicative strangers were traveling men and the expression on their faces indicated that they were not wholly in sympathy with the surroundings. The oppressive silence was at last broken by the landlord.

"Bad night," he said, as he came through the street door, rubbing his hands together.

"Worse than that," grunted the shoe salesman. "Still snowing?"

"Like the old Harry," replied the landlord, grabbing a heavy iron poker, with which he executed a spirited attack on the unwilling heater.

This aroused the dry goods drummer from his meditative stupor. He looked at his watch.

"Eight o'clock; too early to go to bed; can't we get up alittle game?" he asked, addressing no one in particular, but casting his eyes over the crowd.

"Game of what?" spoke up the shoe salesman.

"Oh, any old thing. How about a quiet little session of poker?"

"Suits me, how about you?" said the shoe salesman, addressing a man lounging low in his chair with his hat drawn down over his eyes. He was a grocery drummer.

"I'm in. Anything to forget this town and the weather," the mustard seller replied.

"Well, that's four," spoke up the dry goods salesman, counting on his fingers. "Will you join us?"

The man addressed was the fifth member of the party. He was reading the patent inside of a country weekly and looked up in a dazed, uninterested way when aware that he was the one toward whom the question was directed.

"Sorry; don't play. Used to be a poker fiend, but was cured," the stranger retorted, abruptly. "Like to hear how I was cured?"

"Indeed we would. Never heard of a sure cure for poker before," the dry goods drummer replied. "How was it?"

"Well, first of all, I must tell you that I came from Indianapolis, where—"

"As I said, I came from Indiana, where they play poker for keeps. I used to live in a small town—so small that it never got on the map—but we had some great poker games. Used to play on the quiet, you know, and I was the luckiest Indian you ever saw. Didn't know what it was to lose. The fact of the matter is I got swelled on my luck and thought I couldn't be beat. But I was beat, and beat hard, in one of the worst plays I ever saw, and that is why I quit poker.

"We had a crowd of fellows who played together all the time. Strangers seldom broke into the game, but one night, Sammons, who owned the law office, brought in a green country lad and introduced him all around, so we had to give him a hand. I don't think that kid had played half a dozen games of poker in his life. Everybody sort of pitied him, so we didn't churn him hard.

"Finally the boy got excited and pulled out a roll of money and spread the bills under his stack of checks—we were playing table stakes, you know. Everybody kidded him, and I asked him with some show of sarcasm if he expected to break the game. He just chewed his gum and smiled a sickly smile that I never can forget. Well, to get down to the story, I was lucky, as usual, and before two hours had passed was sitting behind the checks on the table. We played along sort of easy—you know how those games go—until along some time after midnight I was a good $200 winner.

"I had just finished counting my checks and was thinking about cashing in to go home and get ready for church, when I picked up my cards and found a beautiful spade flush, king, then a queen. The deal was just ahead of the farmer boy and he opened the pot for $1. Hawkins and Garnish staid before the play got around to me. I modestly boosted the pot $2—couldn't do anything else on that spade flush, king high, could I?

"That $2 raise almost caused a death from heart disease. My young friend across the table came near fainting. He looked at his checks and then at his cards, and then scratched his head. His hands trembled like a leaf in a Kansas wind storm and he was so excited he could not open his mouth. Some wildly insane impulse evidently prompted him to stay, for he ran his checks up and down with his fingers and then doubtfully shoved in a gaub. Garnish and Hawkins dropped out, leaving me to fight it out with the boy.

"I laughed to myself—was almost afraid to play against him, for fear the marshal would come in and arrest me for stealing money. But I had a sad finish, and the worst of it is that to this day I haven't been able to figure out that play. You see, the kid was ahead of the dealer. When it came time to draw cards he just gulped down a lump in his throat, threw his rand into the middle of the table and excitedly said "Five." I had a notion to let him draw out his money and call it off, but I didn't. When the dealer looked at me and said 'Cards?' I just tapped the table and looked wise.

"The minute that boy got a peek at his hand I knew he had something, for the blood left his face and he was as white as a ghost. You could have seen his hands tremble. He finally mustered up strength enough to check the bet, and I bit off $5 worth of blues and shoved them at him. I thought the play would kill him, but I'm hanged if he didn't see me and go up with another $5 boost. Then we went at it. I raised and he raised, until all of his checks and the pile of bills in front of him were decorating the center, and I didn't have buttons enough left to flag a bread wagon.

"Finally I called, because that was the only thing to do. The minute the words were out of my mouth I got a hunch that I was up against something. Don't know why, but just sort of felt that way, you know.

"'What you got?' I asked the kid.

"'A flush,' he answered almost in a whisper.

"'Flush here,' I retorted boldly, 'King high.'

"I will never forget the expression on that youngster's face when he heard that word 'king.' He jumped half out of his chair and shouted, 'I got ace up.' Then he began to rake in the money.

"And he did have an ace up, with four more ugly diamonds. It took the wind out of me for a minute. When I recovered I just pushed my chair away from the table and got up.

"'Never again,' I said to the crowd. 'No more poker in mine.' That is why I don't play.

"'Don't blame you,' said the shoe salesman, sympathetically.

"'And do you know, the more I think about that phenomenal draw the more I am convinced it wasn't on the square. Do you think it was?'

The Dialects in the Philippines.

There is doubtless a sufficient justification for making English the language of the courts and official intercourse in the Philippines. It is absolutely necessary that there should be a unification of the languages. The term, 'the language,' of the Philippines is self-contradictory. There are three distinct races, the Negrito, with twenty-one tribes; the Indonesian, with sixteen tribes, and the Malayan, with forty-seven tribes, making a total of eighty-four different tribes. Thus we can get an idea of the numerous different dialects spoken, which frequently differ so widely as to be practically foreign languages. Of course, in certain sections, two or three of these may have expressions in common, due to the fact of long-time intercourse between the tribes. Hence the Ilocanos, Tagalogs and Macabebes, all living in adjoining territory, and others similarly situated, can make themselves understood in conversation. This signifies little, however, the language is so rudimentary, with inflections and signs playing their part, that making one's self understood is not such a difficult matter under those circumstances. Take, on the contrary, tribes separated from each other—the Macabebe and the Moro, the Ilocano and Cebuanian, or the Tagalo and the Paraguan, and see whether they can converse readily. Can one depreciate the plan of common language under these conditions, particularly when these dialects are practically barren of literature, the furnishing of which should be one of the greatest justifications for introducing English?

Great Naval Drill is Ordered.

The naval officers of the country are not pleased with the order of the president for a large fleet of war vessels to assemble off the Gulf of Mexico next winter for fleet drills and maneuvers. Many of them fail to see the practical usefulness of the scheme, alleging that the plan of sailing and fighting with huge battleships on preconcerted lines of squadron exercise has more poetry about it than value. The idea, like many others in our service, is copied from the English navy, where, by the way, many terrible disasters have occurred, the collision between the Camperdown and Victoria being a noticeable illustration. Many navy men scout the notion that a modern fleet will go into battle nowadays with all the majesty and pomp of fleet formation, for with submarine and torpedo boats dancing all round them very little attention will be paid to signals after the first once to "engage the enemy" has been displayed from the flagship. There was no fleet drill at Santiago. But others claim it will be of some benefit to the navy, as our officers will get actual experience in handling their commands under varying conditions. It will certainly give the torpedo boats a chance, as so far they have had scarcely an opportunity to show what they are capable of. In the operations off Cuba they were used mainly as messenger or dispatch boats. Admiral Higginson will be the senior admiral, according to present arrangements, and he will enjoy the unusual honor of having two other admirals, Sumner on the Iowa and Crowninshield on the Illinois under him, an event which rarely happens in our small naval establishment. The real reason, however, for the opposition of the naval men to this scheme is that the assembling of a large and handsome fleet at one time would have an effect on members of congress who think the navy is large enough at present and would use this grand assemblage as an illustration of the strength of the country in the naval line. In spite of all the opposition the drill will probably take place as the president has set his mind upon it and he is not in the habit of changing it, except for some excellent reason.

DULUTH'S UPBUILDING.

One of the most encouraging signs of the times is the announcement that there is to be considerable building of homes in the suburbs of this city during the current season. The announcement bears twofold significance, first, because it indicates the necessity of such improvements, as well as the ability of the prospective owners to afford them, and, secondly, because it proves the faith in Duluth of the Eastern interests that furnish the money so these houses may be built on the easy-payment plan.

We are told that the people of the same city who made loans or bought property during the boom times in a city not far distant from Duluth have a grievance against the city that enlisted their quondam interest and incidentally their coin of the realm. They were not treated right by the men into whose hands they entrusted their resources. On the other hand, Duluth stands right in the East. For the most part, investors and lenders of money during the boom days, when there was more faith than fact, were treated with honesty and as near justice as the crucial after-times would permit.

There is another cause for gratification in the improved outlook for housebuilding in this city. Duluth needs more homes for its social wellbeing. It needs more houses to rent for the purpose of sheltering the people that have not for months been able to rent dwellings. Both, it now seems likely, are soon to be built in considerable number. Some flat buildings, some brick rows and some detached or double dwellings for rent are now being designed by architects, and it is quite probable that others will follow before the summer is over. These houses will be sorely needed by autumn-moving time, and it is a relief to know that preparation is being made to meet these needs.

Meanwhile the large and heavy building operations that were planned before the beginning of the spring season go forward unabated, and there is reason to nail along the line for Duluthians to contemplate the progress and solidity of their city with pride and hope.

THE DOOLEY LETTERS.

Many inquiries have been made during the past two months in regard to the absence of one of the attractive features of the Saturday edition of The Herald—the famous Dooley letters, written by F. P. Dunne. The Herald takes pleasure in announcing that this feature will again appear next Saturday. Mr. Dunne has been abroad, taking a much-needed rest, and he has returned with fresh ideas for a new series of Dooley letters. The first of the series will be published next Saturday.

CUBAN RECIPROCITY.

President Roosevelt has fulfilled the predictions recently made that he would send a special message to congress on the subject of Cuban reciprocity. In his message of last December the president urged the vital need of providing for a substantial reduction in the tariff duties on Cuban imports in the United States. It was held by those favoring this policy, and who had studied the question very thoroughly, that a reduction of 50 per cent at least of the Dingley tariff duties should be made in favor of Cuba, in order that the people of the island might be benefited and placed in a position to purchase American products in return. The bill introduced in the house provided for a reduction of only 20 per cent, and then the beet sugar men started an agitation against any reduction whatever in the duty on sugar, by which Cuba would be benefited to the greatest extent. Finally the bill was passed, with an amendment reducing the differencial on refined sugar. In this form the measure went to the senate, and there it has remained, with the Republican senators apparently hopelessly divided on it.

A caucus of anti-reciprocity senators on Thursday resolved to hold out against the policy advocated by the majority of the party, but it is announced that this had no effect on the sending of the president's message to congress. He had resolved on this course before the decision of the anti-reciprocity senators was made known, and their attitude did not cause any hesitation on his part. If congress refuses to adopt the policy he urges, then upon the Republican majority in congress must rest the responsibility. With this message the president's efforts to secure just and honorable treatment will cease. He has fully performed his duty, and should congress refuse to carry out his policy, he has the satisfaction of knowing that he did all within the constitutional limitations of his office to have the honor of the American people upheld and the new republic treated with the fairness that it deserves.

The Herald has fully agreed with the president's policy towards Cuba, and it still believes that he is right, and the members of congress who have taken the opposite position have adopted an unwise and dishonorabe course that does not meet the approval of the great majority of the American people. It has been represented at Washington that the people of the West and Northwest are opposed to the Cuban reciprocity plan advocated by the president, but this claim is without foundation. Within the field throughout which The Herald circulates, the popular sentiment favors Cuban reciprocity and condemns the action of those congressmen who have placed obstacles in the way of establishing closer trade relations between the United States and Cuba, and enabling the Cubans to revive their shattered industries. It has reason to believe that this sentiment is quite general throughout the West, and that those senators and representatives who fail to uphold the president's policy misrepresent the views of their constituents.

A NOVEL PROTEST.

A novelty has turned up in this era of watering stocks in order to make railroad and industrial combinations—or of combining in order to water stocks, just as you please. And probably either way of expressing it is quite as true as the other.

The novelty comes in the form of a protest from the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern railway or its smaller stockholders against absorption into the Rock Island system on a basis of 6 per cent rental on their stock or the exchange dollar for dollar of their B., C. R. & N. stock for Rock Island stock. They claim that, as the organization stands at present, the company is capitalized at a very low rate, while the earnings are very high. Indeed, they claim their stock is earning them 12 per cent on its face value.

Inasmuch as the protest comes after we are officially informed that the smaller road has been formally swallowed up by the parent system, it seems that the protest has been a little tardy. It is the tardiness of it—or rather the making of it at all—that is astounding at a time like this, when the absorbers or combiners are so free to grant almost any concessions desired in order to smooth things over for the successful consummation of their schemes. Just how this deal ever went through without the doubling up or tripling up of the stock values of one corporation or both is quite beyond the ken of a man that occupies an ignorant position on the outside. It is all the more mysterious when it is recalled that the Moores, the pioneers of combination-makers, whose fame began with the first unsuccessful attempt to form the Diamond Match company monopoly, own a controlling interest in Rock Island, which was the absorber in this instance.

Can it be that our financial giants are growing conservtive, or is it because the Rock Island owns only a strong minority and not an actual majority of the Burlington stock, that we do not hear of the latted stock going in on a basis of one or two shares of the consolidation?

MERRIAM'S JASK.

While every clerk who took a position in the census bureau realized at the time that the position was but temporary, there is not one of them remaining but wants to get into the classified list of government employes, as provided by the permanent census law. Director Merriam is going through a distressing ordeal in the task of selecting from among his numerous staff those who are to remain in the permanent bureau, and so be eligible to transfer to any other department. To be selected now means a life position in the classified service. No wonder the pressure is tremendous.

No clerk consents to take his "walking-ticket" till he has exhausted every resource of influence, and this process of exhaustion is quite literally applied. Mr. Merriam has apportioned the places out to the senators and representatives, including both majority and minority members. This plan, his friends assert, is exceedingly helpful in getting appropriations; the permanent establishment, they say, would not have started forth with such liberal provisions for its maintenance but for the direct interest which the lawmakers have in the personnel of its clerks. This is doubtless true. Every spoils bureau has a certain strength that no merit system could ever give. It is a little hard, however, on the clerks who have worked faithfully and have made a record of efficiency in some particular to see that all go down before the plain recommendation of a senator or representative, based upon the supposed political value at home of its subject, or his friends.

The tales of poverty and other sympathetic stories that are told by those likely to be crowded out are most surprising in these days of prosperity, but they are heard nevertheless. The situation is a peculiar one, and in which the "pull" of the employe is the main feature.

BUILDING AT NAVY YARDS.

There is some queer maneuvering on the part of the house and senate in connection with that part of the naval bill which provides for the building of ships at the navy yards. There seems to be a desire on the part of the members of both houses to placate the labor interests which demand this action, while at the same time each body is desirous that the other prevent any definite legislation on the matter. The senate passed the naval appropriation bill, and followed the lead of Senator Hale's committee in striking out the provision of the house by which three warships were to be built at the navy yards. In place of this, the senate adopted a substitute, which is intended to deceive those who are not familiar with past naval legislation. The senate amendment says that if the secretary of the navy is unable to get "reasonable" bids from private builders for the construction of the new ships, they shall be built in the navy yards. Thus it is made to appear that the navy yards will build one or all of the new ships unless the private firms enter into a out-throat competition for the contracts. As a matter of fact, however, nearly every naval appropriation bill of the past five or six years has carried a similar provision. Last year's act did not contain this clause, for the reason that act did not provide for any new ships.

It has been customary to put in this saving clause, and also to stipulate that the requirements of the act of 1886, relating to the purchase of American materials and machinery for the new ships, should apply also. These are details that evade the eye of the ordinary senator and representative, but this year they served Senator Hale's purpose of making his colleagues think that some concession was being made to the advocates of the proposition to divide the building of warships between the plants of the government and of private corporations. A new point has arisen to hamper the friends of the navy yards. That is that the time in which to make the fight is very limited. It is necessary that the navy act become a law before June 30, because it appropriates money for the maintenance of the navy for the new year, beginning July 1. Should that date find congress in a deadlock over the bill, work at the navy yards would be stopped and the employes would lose wages as long as the struggle lasted.

As a matter of fact a majority of both houses realize that to build ships at the navy yards would be an expensive procedure, but they have not the stamina to come out boldly and oppose those advocating it. With the knowledge they have of the situation the should not hesitate to act for the best interests of the country irrespective of influence. Let the members of congress act as men and their work will be more appreciated.

People who have been dreaming of the possibility of getting an automobile for $150 in consequence of Mr. Edison's storage battery invention may as well wake up. An automobile manufacturer says: "The wheels and tires of a good runabout automobile cost alone more than $150 to produce. Now, when the cost of a first-class gear, body and upholstering is added, the cost of some would reach $500; to this must be added the cost of the motor complete, also volt meter and ammeter lamps, wiring and sundries, which will make the smallest runabout of good manufacture cost over $900 to make."

The Hague tribunal of arbitration, which has had not business up to date, may soon have a case if the United States and Mexico carry out their present purpose carry out their present purpose of submitting to that court a dispute regarding damages for certain church property in California, which probably has been in controversy ever since the Mexican war. Pretty soon the other powers may get to disposing of their unimportant disputes the same way, just as business men throw small litigation or bad debts in the hands of the struggling young lawyer.

So much destruction among the fish on the Scottish coast is wrought by cormorants, shags and other predatory birds that a movement was started among proprietors and tenants to combine and destroy them. Thereupon the English society for the prevention of cruelty to animals points out that this is contrary to the wild birds protection act. This is very nice for the birds, but have the fish no feelings?

The bells of St. Paul's will be rung on coronation day by James Haworth, who rang them for Edward's accession, as he did for the accession of the late queen, the birth of all her children and her two jubilees. He was in his 17th year when William IV died and Victoria succeeded him; he is now 81, but good for an occasion or two yet.

Gustave Dirks, a newspaper illustrator, shot and killed himself in his studio in New York, Tuesday. Dirks was the man who has been drawing the bug family for the funny pages of the papers for the past few months. It is no wonder that he committed suicide. The only wonder is that some of the people who saw his pictures were not driven to the same end.

Kansas City is convinced that there is literal as well as figurative truth in the old saw, "Even the walls have ears." A broker who was thought to have underground his exchange quotations obtained them over a delicate telephone hidden in the ball of the board of trade.

The state supreme court has held that it is not illegal for butchers to use borax in meats as a preservative. Even if it is not illegal, no butcher who uses borax in meats should receive the patronage of the public.

Eminent French physicians claim to have discovered a way to entirely neutralize the nicotine in tobacco and cigars without destroying the flavor or aroma. There ought to be millions in such a discovery.

Senators will now have a chance to show whether they are with the president or against him. And members of the house may have a similar opportunity.

St. Pierre, Martinique, is evidently destined to go down in history with the ancient buried cities of Herculaneum and Pompeii. It would be folly to rebuild the city.

The inspection of the baggage of steamship passengers from Europe is hereafter to be less "strenuous," thanks largely to certain intervening dissatisfied women.

The Oklahoma man who is reported as living in one-half of a one-room house can get some idea, says the Boston Globe, of how visitors to the London will be domiciled during coronation week.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Too many cooks in one month spoil the broth.

There is no doubt that mosquitoes, however fastidious their taste, lack modesty.

A woman's idea of really being loved is to have you tell her so a different way every time.

About the time a bachelor finds he can live alone very comfortably he discovers some woman who can't.

The modern way of taming a shrew is to buy her everything she wants and promise her what she doesn't want.

Grover as a Clean Shaver.

Brooklyn Eagle: "My friends," President Cleveland used to say to undesirable office-seekers whom he knew he should turn down, "you must find the rewards of party victory through my election in the happiness which will come to you from the vindication of your principles." As a safety razor, warranted neither to leave a hair nor cut the skin that was nice and sharp.

Revolution Tradition Recalled.

Chicago News: It is well, for many reasons, that the history of revolutionary days, with the traditions and principles then embraced, should be called vividly to mind. In welcoming the French envoys we are greeting the one nation which was friendly to us in our time of desperate need—the one great European power which, like the United States, stands for liberty and democracy.

Floating Batteries of Peace.

Philadelphia Record: While the formidable battleship Illinois was crossing the Atlantic on her maiden trip to attend King Edward's coronation ceremonies, the great French man-of-war Gaulois was speeding westward with a delegation of French army and navy officers to participate in the unveiling of the Rochambeau monument at Washington. The lovers of "peace on earth and good will toward men" will find satisfaction in these international courtesies. When costly battleships are used in carrying about the envoys of peace and good understanding they are profitably employed. In so doing they may secure advantages that with all their guns they could not compel.

Kansas City Journal: The Boer farms are to be restocked with American cattle. Gadzooks! And only $15,000,000 allowed for the purpose!

Glorifying June Days.

New York Tribune: The longest days in the year are the most agreeable when June is gracious. Life in the open air is the life best worth living, and this is the month in which to get the choicest experiences of such life—a month without peer. As James Russell Lowell wrote, "Then, if ever, come perfect days."

Good Head to Honor.

Portland Oregonian: At last a woman's head is to adorn a United States postage stamp. Very properly this will be the head of Martha Washington, the first mistress of the "republican court." Upon the new 8-cent stamp soon to be issued will appear in profile the benign features of this grand colonial dame—the wife of Washington.

No Danger of Oversleeping.

The Army and the Water Cure

By William H. Taft, Governor of the Philippines.

It is without doubt true that there has been cruelty in the Philippines, but that it typifies the conduct of the whole army I do not believe. I was not on the ground myself, but from what I know personally I feel positive that the American army, on the yhole, is very humane and considerate under conditions of war. But war is very severe. In order not to justify or defend the cruelties, but to understand why the commanders were not responsible, it is necessary to comprehend that this war was a guerrilla conflict.

Responsibility was divided and rested on first and second lieutenants, captains and sergeants. An army has its weak and brutal men.

There Filipinos would often catch the friendly soldiers on the outside of the town and kill and then mutilate their bodies.

It is not strange that young officers, weak and brutal, perhaps, in their tendencies, should resort to every legitimate means to find out where the guerrillas buried their guns, nor is it remarkable that they sometimes resorted to the tortures used by the Filipinos on the Filipinos, the water cure, for instance, as practiced by the Spanish on the Filipinos, although reports of this water cure have justly stirred up the American people. You are bound to accept the statements of the leaders like Gen. MacArthur, who is in command and who says it is a humane war. Now the insurrection is over, and if anyone has been guilty of brutality he ought to be condemned.

God and the St. Pierre Disaster

By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory of Chicago.

Since 1875 the world has learned something.

When Lisbon sank, they said it was "a visitation of Providence." When St. Pierre is wiped out, men call it "a seimic disaster."

And now a word about the religion in the case. If there is anything in the Martinque horror or in the Lisbon earthquake or in any similar disaster to weaken our faith in the idea that there is a governing head to the universe and that that head is attending strictly to business? There is not.

Let us admit that the swift and sudden destruction of St. Pierre was a fearful affair, but let us also admit that, fearful as it was, it was not so bad as it would have been had all humanity been destroyed. And what is it that preserves humanity and that keeps the whole universe in order? Natural law, the very thing that is responsible for the seismic disaster we are talking about.

It is logical to believe that, as Alexander Pope well put it, "God works not by partial, but by general laws," and that it is better that such should be the case. As things now are, the balance is unquestionably on the side of order, harmony and happiness, but were the laws interfered with it is as certain as can be that the balance would be on the other side—one the side of chaos and hell.

Putting this and that together, then, I see no reason why we should lose our trust in infinite wisdom and love because of the St. Pierre catastrophe. The laws of nature in this case hurt a good many people, it is true, but a great many more would be hurt if the laws of nature did not keep right along about their business.

Senators Should Be Elected by Popular Vote

By Senator William E. Mason of Illinois.

I am opposed to the election of United States senators by the legislatures of the several states, and I am of the opinion that some legislation looking to their election by the vote of the people should be enacted at this session of congress.

I am anxious to see the resolution introduced in the senate to submit to the people the idea of electing United States senators by popular vote receive favorable action.

In my opinion, the members of the United States senate should be elected by direct popular vote, the same as the members of the house of representatives.

Last Relic of an Ancient Custom

By Carrie Chapman Catt, Pres. of National Women's Suffrage Association.

The very same objection which for many centuries denied women property or right of wages, which offered neither opportunity nor encouragement to the education of women, which persecuted the first women physicians and opposed the opening of each new industry to the woman wage earner is still objecting to giving women the ballot.

And what is this objection? An instinctive fear that individual liberty for women will disarrange that time-honored scheme once thought divine and defined by Blackstone:

To maintain this oneness of husband and wife he once administered her property, collected her wages and spent her money for her. Time has destroyed the old time oneness, and now the wife manages her own affairs and does her own thinking; but, as a last relic of ancient custom, the husband voes for her.

He does not do this because he or any one else supposes for a moment that he really represents her. He votes his own opinions, while hers go unrecorded. Man is usually quick and willing to admit that this condition is neither logical nor just, but the average man who still opposes giving the suffrage to women stands frightened before this act of simple justice. He is like a distinguished congressman who admitted the other day that he was convinced the arguments for woman suffrage could not be answered, yet confessed that he quaked in his shoes in dread of the necessity of rearranging his ideals when once it should come.

It is man, liberty loving, progressive, fearless, who advocates woman suffrage. It is man, creed and tradition bound, timid, frightened, who opposes it.

Great Britain and the Boers

By Lord Salisbury, Premier of Great Britain.

Great Britain has had a great and serious war, but, admitting that misery and suffering have been caused, it must be recognied that the power, prestige, influence and magic effect of our great empire are more potent, more efficient, more admirable than ever before.

Great Britain has not receded one inch from her former position. As to rights we claim and the policy we intend to pursue, we are exactly where we were. The country cannot afford to submit to the suggestion that affairs should be allowed to slide back into a position where we would be in the power of the enemy when the opportunity suited him to renew the issues for which this country has fought during the last three years.

When the conflict is over, all possible will be done to mold our present opponents so that they can take up their position in the empire which has conferred many blessings on the human race, but it must be thoroughly understood that the whole government of the country is to be of such a character that it will be impossible for the struggle to be renewed.

It is important that this should be made clear, for some people think the empire might become tired.

I do not wish to convey the idea that there is any feeling of bitterness toward the Boers, for there is nothing the government more earnestly desires than that they should enjoy the privileges conferred on their brother nations by the colonial system.

BETTER STREETS

West Enders Begin Movement Directed Toward Getting Them.

Condition At Present Declared to Be Injurious to Business.

Probability of Getting Electrical Power Is Reported On.

The Business Men's club of the West End is taking an active interest in the matter of better roads between the West End and the main part of the city. At the meeting of the club held last evening the condition of West Superior and West Michigan streets from Eighth avenue west through the West End came in for a general discussion and there were but few members that did not express themselves emphatically that the condition of the streets is an outrage and a detriment in every way to the city.

Particular attention was paid to that portion of the street between Eighth and Thirteenth avenue west.

Secretary Haven explained to the club the situation that confronts the city council and prevents any improvement in the way of new paving between the avenues mentioned. In order to order a new pavement the council must receive a petition signed by 25 per cent of the owners of 25 per cent of the property along the street, but in the case of that portion between Eighth and Thirteenth avenues west a large part of the adjoining property is owned by the railroad companies and it has been found impossible to get the required petition.

Secretary Haven says that the city officials have been endeavoring for a long time to figure out some way whereby the improvement can be made without violating the provisions of the city charter, and it has been decided that there is practically no remedy except by amending the charter. He told of the patchwork that has been done out of the maintainence fund and the difficulty encountered in having access to this fund.

Attention was called by members to the bad condition of the roadway at the rockcut. It is claimed that the only good road has been constructed between the street railway tracks and that as that portion is bound to be used by teamsters, sooner or later there will be accidents reported in that locality.

Ways and means of getting some kind of a roadway that will be an improvement over the present one were discussed at some length, but no definite action was taken. The business men claim that they really have but one roadway to the main part of the city and that it is a crying shame that it is allowed to get in such almost impassable condition with no means under the charter of preventing it.

The club considers the matter of a good road of vital interest to the West End people and the subject will not be permitted to rest, but will come up at the next meeting.

Secretary Taven, who was instructed to investigate the possibility of getting electrical power at the West End for small industries. He reported that he has had a conference with officials of the Duluth General Electric company, and that while it was not then in a position to give the details, promised that electrical power will be furnished west of Garfield avenue as soon as there is a demand for it, and at a reasonable rate.

The names of O. A. Berg, C. Sundby, Charles Lavick, A. J. Jentoft, Dr. McKay, Charles Schnell and Fred W. Erickson were added to the charter membership and it was voted to hold the charter open until July 1. During the intervening time a strong effort will be made to bring the membership up to 100. The list of members includes at the present time about thirty of the business and professional men of the West End.

In view of the proposed removal of National iron works from Garfield avenue to West Duluth, it was urged that the club correspond with some other industry with a view of locating in the plant to be left vacated by the iron works. At the present time the conditions are not advantageous to operations there, on account of the high water caused by the filling in of the swamp on the south side of the Northern Pacific tracks, but sewer connections will soon be made that will obviate all trouble and make the property a valuable one for some industry.

There is a movement on foot among the Scandinavian churches at the West End for a new hospital and the first money for a hospital fund was raised by a lecture in the Mission church Thursday evening. The project was a new one to most members of the club and it was thought best to await further developments and then find out how the club could assist in getting the hospital and having it located in the West End.

Attention was called to the filthy condition of the streets in the West End, caused by the wood wagons that take large loads of wook and strew it along the street on the way up-town. Complaint was made that West Superior street is not sprinkled often enough and that it should be cleaned oftener than once a week.

BRYAN

Has No Ambition to Be Gubernatorial Candidate.

Lincoln, Neb., June 14.—William J. Bryan has made public a letter written to Senator Allen, Populist leader, reiterating his firm determination not to accept the gubernatorial nomination. He adds:

"I have no personal ambition to serve; there is no office to which I aspire. I am not only content to do the work which I am now doing, but I believe that in this way I can accomplish more to my state and for the United States. My candidacy is not necessary to defeat the reorganizers. While I expect to do all that is within my power to aid those who are determined to prevent the Clevelandizing of the Democratic party, yet the success of that effort does not depend upon me nor upon any influence that I may be able to exert, but upon a multitude of earnest, honest and loyal Democrats who will spare no pains to protect the party from another such humiliation and disgrace."

Indianapolis labor men have discovered that thousands of copies of the speech delivered by Senator Beveridge in opening the Republican convention there, and which were printed in a non-union shop, are being sent out over the state by the Republican state committee.

EQUINE BALLET.

An equine ballet militant—this is what Ringling Bros.' new horse spectacle has been called, but no mere title can give an adequate conception of the imposing beauty and thrilling magnitude of this great act. One naturally expects to see fine horses in the circus, but these horses are the absolute perfection of breeding and selection. In the equine ballet there are three divisions, the first composed of Barbary horses, black and glossy as shining ebony; the second, of purest white Arabian, and the third comprising a troupe of creamy yellow American horses, with silvery mane and white, flaring tail. Each of these horses has a skilled rider, whose costume is in harmony with the gorgeous trappings of the superb animal kept so perfectly under control. These costumes and trappings, indeed, add immeasurably to the beauty of the picture. The color scheme for the proudly stepping, blooded Barbary horses and their riders is black and red—brilliant black plush and silk, with nodding plumes of richest red, touched here and there with dazzling gold—a combination as beautiful as an artist's dream. Blended with the pure white of the Arabians, whose arched necks and fiery eyes and sensitive nostrils betray the blue blood of their desert lineage, is the most delicate blue and white, flecked with red gold—a sunset tint on a background of snow. For the cream horses, and the famous horsemen and horsewomen who ride them, the costuming and trappings is a symphony of sea green and old gold. So much for the harmony of color. The performance itself is even more kaleidoscopic in its harmony. Fifty trumpeters take their positions on the elevated stages, and as they sound a crashing fanfare, the curtains part and the platoons of black, white and yellow horses appear, directed by their skilled and gorgeously-costumed riders—plumes nodding, ribbons flying—all keeping time to the exhilarating music of the trumpeters. The music changes, the color divisions separate into the several rings, and the only "equine ballet company" on earth faces the fascinated audience. Again the music changes, and in accurate time and step the horses move in harmonious measure through all the intricate figures and poses of an elaborately arranged ballet. To the right, to the left, pirouetting, waltzing, marching, now forming noble statues and again circling in swiftest dance step like whirling streams of rainbow-color, they constitute a spectacle so thrilling, so classically harmonious, that the senses seem intoxicated with a new sense of beauty. A striking climax is reached when the entire company of horses advance to the center of the rings, and kneeling, allow their riders to dismount. The horses then simultaneously lie down. A moment later they rise to sitting position, the riders remount, pages and equerries enter and supply each rider with a garland of flowers, and, as the music changes once more, they enter upon a series of graceful figures in which the garlands, used as floral arches, are cleverly utilized to form the most effective and beautiful pictures—the whole culminating in one vast equine tableau vivant—the most gorgeously effective arenic spectacle that human eyes have ever looked upon. This great production will be seen with hundreds of other great features when Ringling Bros.' famous big circus exhibits in Duluth Monday, June 23.

ORDERED FROM CHURCH.

Indignation Over Action of a Catholic Priest.

East Islip, L. I., June 14.—The residents of this section are very indignant over the action of Rev. Father Edward J. Duffy, of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, in ordering two ladies to leave the church a day or so ago for not wearing their hats. The ladies were Mrs. Holleran, of New York, and her mother. They had stepped across the street from their hotel to attend a funeral in the church, and were fashionably attired, but had failed to don their bonnets. Father Duffy ordered them to leave, saying: "This is no theater."

GIRLS WANT HUGGING.

Strenuously Object to the Prohibitory Order.

Elizabeth, N. J., June 14.—A recent edict of the Y. M. C. A., prohibiting hugging on the occasion of the annual moonlight excursion on Friday evening of next week, has raised a storm which seems to endanger the outing.

The committee having the excursion in charge recently appointed twenty men to police the boat and prevent the philandering of which these trips have been noted in the past.

Now the young women are up in arms and have notified the association that if hugging is prohibited they will not be a part of the excursion.

The Whirl Of Politics

To be or not to be a candidate for congress.

That is the question that is supposed to be occupying Senator F. B. Daugherty this week. As a matter of fact, he has been down at his pet lake in Chisago county fishing, and probably a more live and pertinent question with him has been why the bass did not bite more frequently, and whether there was anything wrong with the kind of bait he has been using.

As stated during the latter part of the week, Senator Daugherty before going away gave in to his friends so far as to consent to run for congress if they brought forth the right sort of indorsement for him. So those who are particularly anxious to have a candidate for congress who is living here at this time have been out for several days with petitions asking him to kindly run for congress. He was expected back today, when the petitions were to be presented to him, when he would have a chance to look over the signatures and see whether they were strong enough to warrant him in coming out.

• • •

The latest bit of political gossip comes pretty straight, and it is somewhat dizzying in its nature. It is this:

F. B. Daugherty will not run for congress, and Frank E. Searle will be the candidate.

The report goes more into details. It says that Senator Daugherty has been informed by his physician that he cannot afford to become a candidate for congress, for he has not yet sufficiently recovered to enter a contest requiring the effort that that would imply. This throws it back to Mr. Searle, and the same report says that he will still be found holding up the lightning rod waiting for the stroke.

• • •

Meanwhile Mr. Bede has been getting assurances from many St. Louis county men that he is perfectly satisfactory to them, and that they have no desire to force any man into the field against his wishes simply to have another candidate, even one from St. Louis county. Mr. Bede stated yesterday afternoon that he did not believe Senator Daugherty would come out after all.

• • •

"J. Adam Bede has the outside counties coopered," said Senator L. H. McKusick, of Pine county, who was in the city yesterday, "and it is too late in the day for a Duluth man, however strong, to come out and win the nomination. I believed that before I came here, and now that I have seen how strong Mr. Bede is among the citizens of Duluth, I believe it much more firmly.

"Odin Halden has many friends down our way, too, and he will undoubtedly get most if not all of our county delegation."

• • •

William C. Sargent filed his certificate of candidacy for the Republican nomination for sheriff today, thus finally disposing of the reports set afloat that he would not be a candidate. Mr. Sargent is rapidly recovering his health, and it is expected that he will shortly be in physical condition to make a vigorous canvass. He is still staying close to his lodge on Park Point in order to fully recover his strength before returning to his office duties, but he was up town briefly yesterday for a while, and while he was still somewhat weak, he was looking better than he had been for a long time.

• • •

W. W. Butchart also filed his certificate during the week, making, with Mr. Sargent's and T. M. Pugh's documents, three certificates in all that are on file. The campaign is opening up.

• • •

State affairs will begin to assume definite shape the latter part of next week. Next Thursday evening the Democratic primaries will be held, and on Saturday will be the Democratic county convention and the Republican primaries. Following these comes the Republican county convention Tuesday, June 24, and then comes the state convention Wednesday, June 25. Six days later, July 1, the Republican state convention will be held, and that will be all of that nature until the primary elections are held Sept. 16.

• • •

The gentlemen that seem very likely to represent the Republican party in the election for members of the legislature from the Pine-Chisago-Kanabec county district are Hon. L. H. McKusick, of Pine City, for senator, and John L. Olson, of North Branch, and W. F. Rowe, editor of the Lindstrom News, for the house. Senator McKusick is from Pine county and the other two are from Chisago county. It is not now believed that Representative J. C. Pope, of Mora, will be a candidate for senator.

• • •

Representative W. H. Noyes, of Barnum, who is a candidate for the senate from the Fifty-second district, has a scheme on which the St. Paul Globe says he is going to make his canvass. However, Mr. Noyes is such a confirmed practical joker that it is sometimes difficult to tell whether he is serious or just getting off another on the boys. However, here is the scheme, according to the Globe:

"He says the meat trust's operations are so severely felt in his community that the residents have laid in extra fishing supplies and are hurrying the lakes and streams for food. He purposes to execute a flanking movement on the trust by opening a co-operative butchering establishment in Barnum.

"His plan contemplates the erection of a modern cold storage plant, small but complete, and an up-to-date meat market. Its patrons will be subscribers to the co-operative scheme. They will employ an expert meat buyer and butcher, and monthly settle for the meats consumed at just what it costs at first hand. Noyes figures that the average price will be about 10 cents per pound, which will be just about half the trust's price for the most inferior grades. If he can work out his scheme he should have no difficulty in securing the solid vote of his own town, anyhow."

With Governor Van Sant, J. Adam Bede, Dar Reese and Ray W. Jones on the program, the second annual banquet of the West Duluth Republican club, which will be held Wednesday evening at Great Eastern hall, promises to be a great success. George J. Mallory said yesterday afternoon that the only real difficulty was going to be to take care of all the people that are coming. The banquet will begin promptly at 8 o'clock, in order to have the program finished in time to let the uptown people get home on the midnight car.

Says the St. Paul Globe: "W. E. McEwen, of Duluth, is prominently mentioned as Democratic candidate for state auditor. He is the secretary-treasurer of the State Federation of Labor and the editor of the Labor World. As a candidate to the Duluth council he was elected by the largest majority ever given a candidate for that office in the Zenith City. He is thoroughly familiar with and has been a deep student of tax matters and an indefatigable worker in the cause of equalization of the taxes of St. Louis county."

• • •

The Globe also hands a well-regarded Duluthian this little bunch of pansies:

"Joseph W. Reynolds, of Duluth, is mentioned as the Democratic candidate for congress in the Eighth district. Mr. Reynolds has resided in Duluth about ten years, and has won a place of prominence at the St. Louis county bar. He presided at the farewell banquet tendered Senator Towne in such a signally distinguished manner that he at once became a marked figure in the state Democracy."

• • •

The meeting of the executive committee of the Democratic State Central committee in St. Paul Wednesday was attended by several prominent Populists, indicating that there will be some co-operation at least between the Democrats and Populists, even if there is not downright fusion.

• • •

Jesse L. Jellison, of Cohasset, refuses to accept the commiseration and pity of The Herald, and protests that he is getting along swimmingly in his canvas. The Herald's remarks on his candidacy were made with the kindliest possible feeling for Mr. Jellison, and in the hope that some of his friends might get together and carry him back to Cohasset, where he could save his money. It is very plain that he has been led into becoming a candidate either by jokers or those who knew that he had money and wanted to get it. It is no longer a joke, if it ever was, and those who encourage him by taking seriously or even by making fun of him—for he considers that as favorable as the warmest support—lay themselves open to the charge of belonging to the latter class.

"Odin Halden, of Duluth, has favored us with a statement of the position he has occupied in the matter of the assessment of the iron mines, during his long term of service as county auditor of St. Louis county, by way of justification of his claim for the Republican nomination for the state auditorship. Mr. Halden is certainly all right in that respect, and we have never doubted that he would make a very efficient state auditor, should he be nominated and elected to that position. In fact it is hard to choose between Messrs. Iverson, Jacobson and Halden and the Republican state convention can hardly go wrong in making this nomination, no matter which way it turns. The advantage of long experience in the office and familiarity with every detail of its many duties lies with Mr. Iverson."

"Those who are disposed to connect Odin Halden's name with the steel trust, except in opposition to it, would be thoroughly convinced, could they read the circular letter recently issued by that gentleman, in which he conclusively proves by public records and the public statement of State Auditor Dunn himself that he (Halden) has not only refused to favor the immense iron interests of St. Louis county, but that he has by his official acts as auditor of that county sought in every legitimate way to compel the mine owners to pay their share of the taxes. In this he has been eminently successful, and his record and efforts in this and other matters will be accepted by the people as a guarantee that, should they see fit to promote him to the position of state auditor, the state, and more especially St. Louis county, will have the benefit of his experience. The Times, for many reasons heretofore stated, is an ardent supporter of Hon. J. F. Jacobson for state auditor, but cheerfully concedes that the claims of Mr. Halden are entitled to the candid and fair consideration of all good Republicans."

• • •

Editor Dowling, of the Eveleth Star, in the use of the editorial "we" in the subjoined clipping from his paper, refers to a well-known Eveleth candidate for member of the legislature from the Forty-ninth district:

"To us it is mighty immaterial whether we go to the Minnesota legislature or not. But on the question of adequate representation, the fair and equitable distribution of political offices, it must not be forgotten that West Duluth is at this time, as well as in the past, pretty well taken care of. With two members of the legislature, a deputy marshal at a good salary, a register of deeds, a dairy inspector, an overseer of highways and soon to have an elevator inspector, West Duluth has very little kick coming, even though it does not get the two representatives to the legislature. The Mesaba range has how many?"

• • •

The Virginia Enterprise says:

"Hon. Neil McInnis, county commissioner, was in from Eveleth on Friday last. Neil is looking after his political fences these days, on the side, and it is likely a renomination will fall to his lot with graceful ease. No prospective opponent has thus far been mentioned, to our knowledge."

• • •

"The Star of Eveleth predicts that 'the iron ranges will roll up a much larger Republican vote this year than the city of Duluth.' The profundity of the thought is apt to be borne out by the facts; but even that would avail naught to an iron range candidate without a solid and united range support. If such can be assured, the ranges will elect a complete county ticket."

• • •

Says the Wadena Pioneer-Journal:

"Editor J. S. Vandiver, of the St. Peter Journal, has vouched for Dar Reese. Now, if someone can be found who will vouch for Vandiver, all will be well."

• • •

"One of the good things that O. Halden did as auditor of St. Louis county was to raise the mine assessments so that the amount of taxes jumped from $15,000 a year to $125,000. Another point in his favor for state auditor."

"If the anti-Bede element in Duluth want to stand a show of electing their man they will push C. O. Baldwin into the Democratic nomination."

• • •

The contest for the Republican nomination for state senator in the Fifty-second district has become three-cornered. The St. Paul Globe says:

"O. N. Mausten, of Aitkin, yesterday filed his certificate of candidacy for the Republican senatorial nomination in the Fifty-second district. Aitkin had already one Republican candidate for Senator McCarthy's seat in the person of Col. Warren Potter. If W. H. Noyes, of Barnum, can manage to get one or two more Aitkin men in the race, the nomination will be soft for him."

• • •

N. F. Hugo has filed for the Republican nomination for member of the legislature in the Fifty-first district. His friends say that before he took this step he secured very strong pledges of support.

• • •

"From present appearances the legislative district, composed of Aitkin, Cass, Carlton and Itasca counties will have as Republican candidates Col. Warren Potter for senator and A. L. Cole and J. E. Lynds for representatives. It is a good ticket and will be one hard to beat."

The town of Gavers, near East Liverpool, Ohio, has the first and only association in the United States formed by farm hands for mutual benefit and protection. They have not yet formulated a wage scale, but they have declared that ten hours shall constitute a day's work. Extra pay is demanded for all overtime.

Men's Diseases

Scientifically and Successfully Treated.

The longest established, most successful and reliable specialist in diseases of men, as medical diplomas, licenses and newspaper records will show.

After an experience of fifteen years devoted to the treatment of men's diseases exclusively, I feel fully justified in making the assertion that no other specialist has attained an equal degree of success in overcoming these most perplexing of all human ailments. I early recognized as inaccurate and unscientific the methods commonly employed in treating men's diseases, and through careful research and broad experience I have acquired the knowledge and ability that has placed me foremost among specialists in this branch of medical practice. I have laid aside those ancient and unscientific theories and processes to which others still cling, and have founded all my methods of treatment upon absolute knowledge concerning these diseases. I accept no case for treatment unless I have full confidence in my ability to effect a complete and permanent cure, and in years I have not treated unsuccessfully in a single instance. I invite free consultation.

"WEAKNESS"

That disorder commonly known as "weakness," has for years and generations baffled the efforts of physicians, yet to this very day a majority of doctors are attempting to overcome it by methods that have been in constant use and that have constantly failed for half a century. They dose the system with powerful stimulants and tonics calculated to restore nervous forces or strength that is not and never has been lacking, with a result that the functions are temporarily excited to the positive detriment of the patient. Weakness, we will call it such for convenience just now, is only a symptom resulting from a chronically swollen and inflamed prostate gland, and is curable by local treatment only. Either early dissipation or some improperly treated contracted disease is responsible for the inflammation in most instances, though accidental injury, strain, etc., may produce the same result. I have permanently cured thousands of cases of prematureness, loss of power, which demonstrates the absolute accuracy of my understanding and treatment of the disorder. In years I have not met with a single failure, and I have entire confidence in my ability to cure all cases that come to me for treatment other than that which I have perfected can completely and permanently restore strength and vigor.

VARICOCELE

Many men afflicted with varicocele are endangering their general health, their manly power and even life itself by allowing the disorder to remain uncured. Varicocele results from partial paralysis of the delicate nerve fibres that have a part in controlling local circulation of the blood. The muscular coating of the veins being deprived of nervous communication and control, become inactive, weaken and relax. The blood vessels expand from the pressure within, the circulation in the parts become sluggish, and frequently stagnant pools form in little nooks and pockets that constantly enlarge as the relaxation continues. The possibility exists that clots may form in these stagnant pools and then pass out into the general circulation. Should one find lodgment in the valve of the heart the result might be instant death, or should it be carried to the brain, general paralysis will follow.

I guarantee to cure varicocele in one week by a method that involves no cutting or ligature, or caustic. No other physician employs a like method, and so thorough is my work that there need not be the slightest fear of a relapse into the old condition. Those who have been long afflicted with varicocele will never realize the injury it has caused until they feel the vim, energy and buoyancy of spirits that a complete cure will bring.

CONTRACTED DISORDERS

To but partially cure a contracted disease is almost as dangerous as to allow it to go untreated. Unless every particle of infection and inflammation is removed, the probability exists that the disease will gradually work its way into the general system. All greater is the danger of the prostate gland becoming chronically inflammed, which always brings partial or complete loss of power. Perhaps 25 per cent of the cases of so-called "weakness" are a direct result of some improperly treated disease. During the past five years I have treated over 6500 cases of contracted disorders and have effected an absolutely thorough and safe cure in each instance. There have been no relapses or undesirable developments whatever and my patients have been cured in less time than other and less thorough forms of treatment require in producing even doubtful results.

STRICTURE

My treatment for stricture removes the necessity for surgical operations, even in severe cases of long stanuing. I do no cutting or dilating. No other physician employs my methous of overcoming this disorder, so the service I offer you is original and distinctive. Do not give up hope because others have failed. I will cure you and the cure will be a prompt and painless one. My treatment dissolves the stricture and permanently removes every obstruction from the urinary passage, subdues all inflammation, relieves all irritation or congestion that may exist in the kidneys or bladder, reduces enlargement of the prostate gland and restores to health and tone all organs affected by the disease.

SPECIFIC BLOOD POISON

I permanently cure this most hideous of all blood diseases. I employ harmless, blood cleansing remedies that positively drive the very last taint of virus from the system, and every symptom vanishes to appear no more.

We charge nothing for private counsel and give to each patient a LEGAL CONTRACT to hold for our promises. Is it not worth your while to investigate a cure that has made the anew to multitudes of men?

If you cannot call at our office, write your symptoms fully. Our home treatment by correspondence is always successful.

Frederick the Great Versus Rochambeau

By Michael Lagrave, French Commissioner to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition.

There is as much raison d'etre for a statue of Frederick the Great in the United States as there is for one of Attila or Charles V. I suppose that the sultan of Morocco will offer a bust of Hannibal to you next week.

A hundred bronze Fredericks could not convey to the American people what one Rochambeau statue can.

The Rochambeau statue recalls something. Yorktown is fraught with more meaning to Americans than the Seven Years' war, and the offer to counter-balance the one by the other is incongruous.

GET YOUR COAL IN.

Hanna Company Man Says Strike Will Continue.

Toledo, Ohio, June 14.—All the leading manufacturing plants here and in other northern Ohio towns and cities are preparing to close down. The information, from a secret conference of coal men is that hard coal brings a big premium. It is thought that the Ohio miners will soon be out with their Pennsylvania and West Virginia brethren. The situation here is desperate and coal cannot be had for love nor money. Joseph Mitchelltree, of the M. A. Hanna company, said:

"Consumers should do all they can to get in out of the wet and I guess they have been doing so for some time. Some of our customers who ordinarily use but one carload of coal in a month have ordered six or seven cars, so as to provide against a shortage. We refused one order for 300 cars today. The Michigan field is closed, the West Virginia men are coming out and Ohio doesn't look promising. I believe that this strike will continue until October."

At a concert given recently by the High School Alumni association of Waltham, Mass., Miss Bessie Bailey, of Minneapolis, formery of Duluth, who is in Boston studying voice culture, sang in German a spring song and "Shumeswinde" ("Howling Storm Winds"), by Rubensteln. The critics state that Miss Bailey's voice is of good quality and very powerful, and her whole energy becomes absorbed in the subject matter of her song and its presentation to her hearers. She is gifted in more ways than one, for she possesses abilities as a pianist as well as a vocalist. Her Duluth friends are looking forward to hearing her in the near future.

A very pretty wedding occurred Tuesday evening at the home of Dr. A. C. Taylor, of 1115 East Third street, when Miss Lulu Blanche Davis was united in marriage to Dr. Clarence Wilbur Taylor. At 7 o'clock the bridal party entered the parlor to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by an orchestra, and took their places in front of Dr. S. P. Long, of the First M. E. church, who performed the ceremony. The bride was given away by her brother-in-law, Austin C. Randall, of Minneapolis. Little Miss Ruth Randall, a niece of the bride, carried the ring. Only the immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties were present at the ceremony.

The bride was very tastefully attired in a gown of white silk mull over white silk, and carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas. The house decorations were beautiful. The library, in which stood the receiving party, was banked with ferns and large bowls of lilacs. The parlors were in green and white effect, with festoons of ground pine and a shower of white carnations, under which the bridal party stood. The dining room was decorated with ferns, evergreens and American Beauties. A large reception followed and about 200 guests were present.

The bride has been for several years a teacher in the Jefferson school and is a graduate of the Duluth high school and St. Cloud normal school. The groom is a promising young physician, who graduated from the Duluth Central high school, and later from the Northwestern Medical college.

The wedding of Miss Anna Robinson and Caryl W. Wilson was solemnized Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, 512 Third avenue east. The wedding was a quiet but pretty one, only the relatives and intimate friends being present. The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Robinson and has been a teacher in the schools here for some time past. The ceremony was performed by Dr. S. P. Long of the First M. E. church. Miss Alberta Stevens was bridesmaid and J. A. Stuart was best man. The bride and her bridesmaids were attractively gowned and the house was handsomely decorated. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, for the present, will take apartments on East Fifth street.

HARRY PARSONS, POOR ARTIST, AND MABEL HANNA, MILLIONAIRE SENATOR'S DAUGHTER, WHOM HE WILL WED.

The marriage of Harry Parsons, formerly a struggling newspaper artist, to Mabel Hanna, daughter of the senator from Ohio, will mark the culmination of a romance which reads like a chapter from a novel. Miss Hanna at an exhibition saw and admired one of Mr. Parsons' pictures. The young man was invited to call at the Hanna home, and when regard ripened into love the shrewd girl secured the appointment of Mr. Parsons as her father's private secretary. Things went along in that manner for a year and the erstwhile artist had become well nigh indispensable to Senator Hanna when he asked the latter for the hand of his daughter. Senator Hanna refused to treat the request seriously, but when Miss Mabel added her entreties he yielded, and the marriage, which is to be solemnized at the handsome Cleveland home of the bride June 16, is the outcome.

GONE FIVE YEARS.

It is hard to make people understand that coffee really will do business for them if they stick to it long enough. It is almost a certainty that some little symptom of disease, stomach trouble, or kidney or heart trouble, caused by coffee drinking will ultimately develop into some fixed organic disease unless the cause of the disturbance is removed. An illustration may not be amiss.

A lady in Kearney, Neb., says: "I used coffee a great many years. Gradually my health broke down. I had dyspepsia and was extremely nervous. I passed many sleepless nights but, like many others, did not know what was the cause of my invalidism.

Finally the trouble centered into a fatty tumor just over the stomach and in the region of the heart, causing acute pain in the stomach and a spasmodic action of the heart. A surgical operation was deemed necessary, but after all the preparations were made a good, old, honest doctor suggested that I take treatment a little longer and leave off coffee and take Postum and some Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food.

I began on Postum and had it made properly by long boiling and found it delicious and drank two cups the first morning. After two weeks I discovered a marked change for the better. In five months my supposed tumor had disappeared, my headaches were gone and digestion wholly restored. My heart only gave me trouble a few times. That was five years ago. I have been a steady user of Postum ever since and am a new creature today. Am in strong and vigorous health and know exactly how to account for it.

The ignorance of people on the subject of coffee is a constant wonder to me, although, at one time, of course, I was just as much in the dark as any one could be, going along year after year putting into my body the poison that was killing me and never knowing it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

A SLIGHT DECLINE

Wheat Started Lower and Held Within Narrow Range.

Duluth Shippers Worked Six or Eight Loads For Export.

Trading Was Light Here ---Chicago Market Much Weaker.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 14.—The wheat market was weaker today but the price changes were within a narrow range. The local market was stronger than that at Chicago. The cables brought no response to yesterday's advance in the American markets. Rain was reported to have fallen in Central Western and Northwestern states and showers in the Southwest, but this factor was offset by the indications of clearing weather.

The Liverpool market closed quiet and unchanged, London 1/4@1/2d lower and Paris 3/4c lower to unchanged.

Clearances of wheat and flour were 622,000 bus.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 217 cars and at Chicago 22, a total of 239 cars, against 251 last week and 492 last year.

Corn in the Chicago market advanced 1/4@1/2c and oats declined 1/8c. Clearances were 28,000 bus.

Duluth shippers worked about six or eight loads of wheat for export today, which is somewhat better than has been done for some time.

Trading was light on the Duluth board and the market slightly weaker with the range of fluctuations narrow. Minneapolis and Duluth were relatively the same strength, the former declining 1/4@1/2c and the latter 1@c. Chicago was very weak, falling 3/4@1c.

The market opened here with July 1/4c off at 73@c, sold at 73@c at 9:52, fell to 73@c at 11, rallied to 73@c at 11:40 and closed at 73@c, a decline of 1/4c.

Cash sales were very light. Prices continued at 1c over July for No. 1 northern 1/2c under for No. 2 and 3c under for No. 3.

There was practically no trading in flax. September and October declined 3/4c and cash was up 5c. September oats fell 3/4c, and September rye the same.

Following are the closing prices on the Duluth board:

Wheat—Cash No. 1 hard, 76@c; No. 1 northern, 75@c; No. 2 northern, 72@c; No. 3 spring, 70@c. To arrive—No. 1 hard, 77@c; No. 1 northern, 76@c; July, 73@c; September, 73@c. Manitoba—No. 1 northern, cash, 72@c; No. 2 northern, 72@c. Oats—September, 29@c. Rye—85@c; September, 58@c. Flax—Cash, $1.70; to arrive, $1.70; on track $1.70; June, $1.69; September, $1.41@; October, $1.39@; cash No. 1 Northwestern, $1.6.

quiet and easier. Showery conditions still prevail throughout the West, but clear weather was predicted in Kansas and Oklahoma for the next twenty-four hours. Outside trade is small and the whole tone of the market was sluggish and indifferent. Northwest stocks show less decrease than last week and a moderate decrease in the visible is expected on Monday.

Corn—Primary receipts 589,000 bus, last year 653,000 bus. Shipments, 264,000 bus, against 541,000 bus. The market is extremely dull and steady. While there is no great country offerings in any direction yet the aggregate primary receipts are making something of a bearish feature as against the light receipts of a year ago. Local conditions and excessive rains throughout the corn belt are preventing much speculative selling pressure at the moment.

Oats—The market is quiet and fairly steady. There is perhaps some increase in outside buying orders induced by the excessive rains throughout the West. This does not yet, however, amount to any important feature.

Chicago Record Herald: The wheat speculator everywhere in this country and the cash wheat man have their eyes now fixed on the sky and are trying to divine whether the next four weeks are to be favorable for harvesting and movement or unfavorable. The speculator who could guess that would make all the money, and if the cash wheat man could decide it it would add greatly to his comfort. Every sign indicates the new crop will be ready to move ten days in advance of the average year. With fine weather there is a prospect that receipts at Chicago of new red wheat will be large the first fortnight in July. But a week or more of rain between June 20 and July 10 would spoil this whole outlook. The man who could tell as to the weather during this critical period could, among other things, give excellent advice as to the July premium, and just as good advice as to that other important point, the cash wheat premiums.

Bradstreet's report a decrease in corn exports of 150,326,000 bus from July 1 to date.

• • •

Chicago Record-Herald: There are about forty days left to the close of July. With 800 cars of corn received here each one of those business days, there would be about 20,000,000 bus corn at this market. If a third of these receipts graded a very high percentage, there would be received here between now and the close of July about 10,000,000 bus contract corn. No one believes the corn bulls, whose line is held through Harris-Gates, have less than 15,000,000 bus bought for July; some people think they have 20,000,000 bus. Probably no one would expect over 10,000,000 bus contract corn here during the next forty days; no one would estimate that over one-third the receipts would grade, and no one probably would put the average daily receipts of all grades at over 800 cars daily. On this basis, with a 20,000,000 bus line bought, the corn bulls would have a short interest of 10,000,000 bus; and with a 15,000,000-bus line bought they would have a short interest of 5,000,000 bus. "If the Harris-Gates line is 20,000,000 bus," said a leading corn man, "there will be no such thing as the shorts getting away. If the July line is only 15,000,000 bus, I would not give much for the profits."

MARKET REPORT.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, 507 Board of Trade, Duluth, Minn.

Chicago, June 14.—Lower cables from Europe, dull and unprofitable trade, favorable crop reports from Europe generally, together with prospects of more favorable weather in this country, caused the wheat market to rule weak. Longs sold freely and the close was heavy. Liverpool reported their market as quiet, prices unchanged from yesterday. London was lower. Continental markets also lower, especially Paris. There was a moderate demand for cash wheat but the seaboard reported very little demand there for export. Trade was fairly large all day but mostly of a professional character. The future course of the market will depend largely upon the weather. Estimated receipts for Monday, 20 cars.

There was a very light trade in corn today and the market ruled quiet within a narrow range. Country offerings were very light, but cash demand was very quiet. There was no special feature to the market. Foreign markets were weak, Liverpool closed 5@d lower than last night. Weather generally favorable for the growing crop. Estimated receipts for Monday, 375 cars.

There was a fairly large trade in oats today and the market, after ruling weak early, later eased off in sympathy with the weakness in wheat. Cash receipts were very light; cash demand continues good. Track prices were practically the same as yesterday. A good many complaints are coming in regarding too much wet weather, but predictions are for more favorable conditions. Estimated receipts for Monday, 130 cars.

Provisions opened very dull and a trifle easier on lower hogs, but soon became active with heavy selling of the list by professionals and forced liquidation by holders of pork. Closing was firmer. We look for broader market with better trade, and don't hesitate now to advise selling anything or everything on the rallies. Estimated receipts for Monday 42,000 hogs, and for next week 170,000 hogs.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 14.—The cotton market opened quiet with prices 2 to 4 points lower, in response to generally unfavorable Liverpool cables. Spot cotton was quiet and 1-32d lower on sales of only 600 bales. Moreover, there was no foreign buying orders in hand to speak of. Yet the weather forecast indicated no relief from the drouth. The whole list worked up to last night's prices with October at one time 8.06 bid. Then came gradual reaction under selling for profits by conservative scalpers and light Wall street bear pressure, under which prices eased off to the opening figures. The Herald's crop weather summary of the week South was regarded as bullish, but few traders were satisfied that actual damage has as yet been sustained by the crop as a result of the dry weather. Estimated receipts of cotton at the ports today, 3000 bales, against 3322 actual last week, and 7984 actual last year. For the week, 20,000 bales, against 27,984 actual last week, and 50,084 actual last year. Today's receipts at New Orleans were 1728 bales, against 3276 last year, and at Houston, 365 bales against 1577 bales last year.

Cotton spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 9 7-16; middling gulf, 9 11-16; sales, 7215 bales. Futures closed steady and quiet; June, 9.02; July, 8.75; August, 8.48; September, 8.12; October, 7.99; November, 7.93; December, 7.92; January, 7.92; February, 7.92; March, 9.74.

WILL GO OVER

The Probable Fate of the Department of Commerce Bill.

Washington, June 14.—Representative Hepburn, chairman of the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce, together with the members of the sub-committee of that committee appointed to confer with the president in regard to the new department of commerce bill, now before the committee, conferred with the president today. The president told him he had not given the matter sufficient attention to warrant him in expressing an opinion as to what bureaus should be included in the new department and itw as directed that he should recommend to the several cabinet officers the selection by them of some one in each department competent to confer with the committee as to what bureaus should be detached from the several departments and included in the new department.

After the conference Mr. Hepburn stated that there would not be time for this contemplated action at the present session of congress and that it was practically settled that the measure would go over until the next session.

ADVANCE IN STOCKS

Missouri Pacific and St. Paul Rose a Point Over Friday.

Market Became Heavy On Publication of Bank Statement.

Hardened Afterwards and Closing Was Dull and Steady.

New York, June 14.—There was moderate activity in the opening dealings, but the price changes were very small. Most of the recent prominent stocks showed no change whatever from last night's prices. General Electric rose a point and Norfolk & Western, 1/2, while Reading ran off 3/8.

Steady buying of Missouri Pacific advanced it above 105 and there were fractional improvements in other standard stocks, especially St. Paul, New York Central and Reading. Norfolk & Western exceptionally rose 1. Trading was very light. General Electric reacted 2 and there were losses of a point each in Westinghouse Electric and Long Island. Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg gained 1 1/2.

The market became heavy on the publication of the bank statement and hardened again afterwards. Missouri Pacific and St. Paul rose a point over last night. Fuller Construction gained 1 and Brooklyn Union Gas, 1 1/2. International Silver pfd lost 1 1/2. The closing was dull and steady.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Falk to Paine, Webber & Co.—The market today was not active but the tone was strong and the selling was not urgent. The bank statement was better than was generally expected, showing a gain in cash of over $2,000,000 with a decrease in loans exceeding $3,000,000. Money is in good supply and promises to remain fairly easy. Steel stocks were firmer and there is more of a tendency on the part of the speculative public to look on both issues of this stock with favor. The railway list was firm and the closing prices were at the highest of the day. St. Paul was a feature and the buying was for strong interests.

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.—One of the characteristics of a bull market was noted yesterday. The shorts waiting to cover, the public waiting to buy and the traders who — buy taking quick profits. I don't mean we are going to get a runaway bull market but rather slow gradual upward trend. In my judgment prices will be considerably higher all around before July 4. When the usual bull talk of "enormous July disbursements" is heard on every side the insiders will begin to "distribute" and the stocks may be a sale. The markets are likely to be higher next week and I do not see any use in taking profits before Monday. Brooklyn Rapid Transit and Union Pacific look good at current levels.

Waldorf to Edwards, Wood & Co.: Cheap money, encouraging crop advices and increasing confidence is held by the larger operators to explain the strength of the market. There is no public speculation. The investors and substantial interests continue to pick up securities in the confident belief that with heavy disbursements for dividends, interest and pension payments impending prices are sure to harden. Furthermore, apprehension as to the monetary situation, but lately a restrictive influence, is much lessened by the increased receipts of currency from the interior, the latter having been so large, that, in spite of a loss of over $2,000,000 their treasury operations, the banks have actually gained cash on the week. Hence the impression that the decline in the rates of call money, which went today as low as 2% per cent, is indicative of a much better bank statement than that of a week ago. It is considered significant that advices regarding the labor situation are more cheerful, the weakening of striking bituminous miners in West Virginia and the reasonable certainty that the railroad men on anthracite roads will not go out on Mr. Mitchell's call, being regarded as the first signs of an early peace in the coal regions. All this accounts for the improvement in the Reading shares and commission houses continue advising the purchase of them specifically the common and raise of lower priced soft coal shares, preference being given to C. & O. on all recessions.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.—The copper share market during the past week and up to today's closing transactions was extremely dull. The pressure to sell was not urgent and there was no evident disposition on the part of investors or speculators to buy. Under existing circumstances the roads will not go out on Mr. Mitchell's call, being regarded as the first signs of an early peace in the coal regions. All this accounts for the improvement in the Reading shares and commission houses continue advising the purchase of them specifically the common and raise of lower priced soft coal shares, preference being given to C. & O. on all recessions.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.—The copper share market during the past week and up to today's closing transactions was extremely dull. The pressure to sell was not urgent and there was no evident disposition on the part of investors or speculators to buy. Under existing circumstances the roads will not change whatever from last night's prices. General Electric rose a point and Norfolk & Western, 1/2, while Reading ran off 3/8.

Steady buying of Missouri Pacific advanced it above 105 and there were fractional improvements in other standard stocks, especially St. Paul, New York Central and Reading. Norfolk & Western exceptionally rose, 1. Trading was very light. General Electric reacted 2 and there were losses of a point each in Westinghouse Electric and Long Island. Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg gained 1 1/2.

The market became heavy on the publication of the bank statement and hardened again afterwards. Missouri Pacific and St. Paul rose a point over last night. Fuller Construction gained 1 and Brooklyn Union Gas, 1 1/2. International Silver pfd lost 1 1/2. The closing was dull and steady.

THE WEEK IN THE REALTY MARKET

Healthy Condition Continues and Trade Is Good---One Firm Advising Clients to Hold Rather Than Sell Now.

Considered from all points of view, the real estate trade the past week has been very fair. A good deal of old business has been closed up, or rounded up. On the other hand, taken as a whole, there has been less new business than during the week before, when there was a sudden rvival of interest in real property. Still, the market continues in a very healthy condition. According to the belief of a good many dealers, it is this condition of absolute health that prevents the market from assuming the aspect of boom-day proclivities. It is declared by these authorities that it is proof positive none of the recent marked activity in real property has been due to speculation, else there would be more report turns made. However, it is known that the larger part of the transactions are made because of a legitimate need of the property bought by the purchaser himself. Interest continues well maintained in a general way. The chief manifestation remains in residence property, and for the most part in improved residence property. One large deal in business property announced during the week has caused inquiry to turn in that direction somewhat, though it is well distributed still.

One very prominent real estate dealing firm is advising its clients, if asked for its opinion about selling at present prices, to hold off for a while. "We were asked by one of our clients this week," said a member of the firm, "if an offer he had received for a piece of his property here was worth accepting. We advised him that it was several hundred dollars below the market. It transpired that he had already accepted the figure he had quoted. It doen't seem right to us that people who have hung onto property here during the hard times and carried the taxes on it should sell on the basis of most offers that are made at present, especially if they are able to carry it. We are all looking for better values here, and people who can buy at prevailing prices are making mighty good bargains."

* * *

One of the most important transfe s that were made public during the week—though this one was consummated about ten days ago—was the sale of the brown stone building known as the Hunter block, at First avenue west and Superior street, for $47,500. Two transfers are filed, one running from the Penn Mutual Life Insurance company to Henry L. Jones and J. Lloyd, and the second from Lloyd to Richard M. Bradley and Henry B. Cabot, of Boston, and Arthur Lyman, of Waltham, Mass., as trustees under an agreement between them for purchasing real estate in Duluth. The property has twenty-five feet frontage on Superior street, and is very close to the heart of the retail mercantile district.

Judge J. D. Ensign has sold to Henry Levin through J. R. Carey lot 327, East Superior street, for $3,500. The lot is improved with a frame building erected thirty-ono years ago, and which at one time was occupied by some of the county offices. The price is equivalent to $140 a front foot, which in the light of recent transfers on the lower or opposite side of East Superior street is of considerable interest.

* * *

The Inter-State company reports the sale of the flats at 36 East Fourth street to Thomas Dojan for $5,000; the sale of fourteen lots in block 153, Third division, on Tenth street and Lake avenue, to William M. Wright, of Nebraska, for $3,200; and a lot in the Second division, on West First street, to J. H. Ledingham, for $1,250.

* * *

Whitney Wall reports the sale of the Woodberry house on Twenty-first avenue east to Richard M. Sellwood for $6,100. The residence has been occupied for several years by John P. Morrow.

* * *

Mr. Wall has sold a lot on East First street for immediate improvement with a brick dwelling.

* * *

M. J. Lyons, with Prindle & Co., announces the following sales as among those he has made the past week:

Lot 14, block 42, Endion, from J. Loper to J. F. Twohy, for $4200. The lot is improved with a modern frame dwelling.

Lot on East Second street, between Eighteenth and Nineteenth avenues, $1400.

Lot on West Third street, between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth avenues, $1450.

John J. Wangenstein reports a very active outlook for building operations. He will submit to contractors next week for figures plans for two additional stories for the Silberstein & Bondy store building, on West Superior street, near Lake avenue. These plans call for a front of pressed brick and ornamental terra cotta, and the general style of architecture of the present front will be followed. The ground dimensions of the building are 50 by 140, and the two additional stories will almost double the available show space of the store, adding 14,000 square feet of floor space. The addition will be erected in six weeks' time.

Mr. Wangenstein also has plans ready for a brick church building at Third street and Twentieth avenue west, to cost $15,000. It will be built by the Swedish Lutheran denomination.

He is also working on plans for one block of brick flats, a row of five brick houses and two frame residences. Others are in course of development.

* * *

Radcliffe & Hill will put out for figures next week plans for the new St. James Catholic church, at West Duluth. The foundation is already under contract. The church will cost in the neighborhood of $10,000. This firm is working on several other designs that cannot be made public just yet.

* * *

Austin Terryberry has finished plans during the week for a $6000 brick church building, to be built by a Methodist congregation at Princeton. Work has begun on E. A. Tyler's new residence, at Nineteenth avenue east and Second street.

* * *

Palmer, Hall & Hunt announce that their business warrants the prediction that the rest of the season will be somewhat notable for house-building. The outlook, Mr. Palmer says, is quite promising.

* * *

H. C. Hendricks will erect a modern residence at West Duluth.

* * *

It has been decided that the new Frerker building, plans for which are being prepared by Architect John de Haard, will be six stories high, on Michigan street, and five stories on Superior street. The two upper stories will be used by the Spalding hotel as an addition to its lodging facilities.

* * *

The John F. McLaren homestead, at Third street and Second avenue east, has been sold to Roswell H. Palmer for $9000. It is understood that Mr. McLaren is negotiating for the purchase of a home in the East End.

* * *

The Lakeside Land company states that it has in hand prospect plans for the building of a dozen modern dwellings on lots owned by it at Lester Park and Lakeside. Three lots have been sold during the week for immediate improvement, two at Lester Park and one at Lakeside. This company has decided upon an aggressive policy regarding its Lakeside property. It will furnish the purchaser money to build on easy payments, and expects large developments in its part of the city before the summer is over. Arrangements will be made for extending water and sewerage service to property not now provided.

CURIOUS

Are Some of the Customs of the Peons.

Have Live Stock Blessed But Still Offer Sacrifices.

The Mexican peon has insured all his live stock, pet birds and children. Now he is ready for earthquakes or volcanoes, positive that no damage will come to his possessions, writes the City of Mexico correspondent of the Los Angeles Times. In this confidence he is ready to go ahead and do any kind of business you want for the rest of the year. But it is not with any American company that the peon has insured his belongings. He wouldn't know one of their policies if he saw it and he wouldn't want it, anyway. His insurance is in the great bank of Faith, of which there is a local agent in every village priest. Usually the work of insuring all this property is done earlier in the year than this—soon after the new year, in fact. But this year the priests were in no hurry. So the insuring act was not performed until the reports of the earthquake in the state of Guerrero aroused both to the danger they were incurring.

This annual insuring of the health of the live stock and children—the blessing of them it is called—is one of the strangest customs which the Roman Catholic church tolerates on the demand of its Indian adherents. The priests are bitterly opposed to many of the strange services they are called upon to perform. They savor of idolatry and fetichism, say the priests, and they have appealed to the church authorities to issue an order forbidding them. But the more experienced fathers of the church know that such an order would be bitterly resented by the peons and the Indians and that if enforced the moral strength of the church would be greatly lessened. So they explain to the protesting priests and grant to the Indians the performance of the objectionable service.

This insuring or blessing of the live stock is one of these odd services. On the day it takes place the parish church is filled with game cocks, chickens, parrots, pigeons, sheep, dogs and all sorts of small four-footed beasts. Outside, jammed as close to the church door as they can be brought, are cows, horses, mules and animals too big to get within the sacred building. Crowded around the altar are mothers with their pets. From long before daylight the crowd has been gathering, and some of the peons were on the road with their stock all night, so that they might arrive at the church in time. But even with their best efforts it is usually noon before all is ready. Then the priests appear and begin reciting the special prayers for the occasion. They call down blessings upon all the animals and children in the church. They ask for them health, strength and freedom from sickness and accident. As the priest recites the prayers his voice is usually half drowned by the babel of barnyard sounds which arise from all parts of the church. In one corner a couple of worthless dogs may be snarling and snapping at each other, while the children who brought them vainly try to keep them quiet. In another, a couple of game cocks which have come to church under the arms of their owners, may be having a little quiet enjoyment with their spurs. Pigs squeak and geese cackle, but the priest goes on with his prayer. When it is ended he takes a basin of holy water and goes from one human group to another, sprinkling, as he does so, all the live stock they have brought into the church.

When the work inside the church has been finished he turns to bigger animals, which have been unable to gain admittance. Over them he says the same prayers that he repeated in the church. Then another basin of holy water is secured and they are all given a few drops of each. The whole service usually takes up the greater part of the day. When it is over oncre is generally just about time for the peons to attend vespers and then start back for their homes.

That the priests should disapprove of such a service does not seem at all strange. But the peon feels that he would be very badly treated should it be refused him. To his mind his cow and his horse, his game cock and all his live stock are fully as important as the human members of his family. They are members of it, for most of them sleep in the same house with him, and the mere fact that they cannot talk does not take from them the right to be regarded as such. So he thinks they should be given some of the blessings of the church, and once a year he insists that the service be held. The peon, too, believes that the prayers said over the animals and the holy water sprinkled upon them practically insure them against sickness or serious accident during the year. So, besides improving their moral welfare the service is a sort of insurance which is of practical benefit. Until this belief of the peon is overcome by education there is little chance that the complaints of the priests against the service will be listened to and their wish to abolish it granted.

But this insuring of the cattle is far from being the only objectionable service which the Indian has managed to force the priest to perform. The Indian and the peon are good Catholics, in a way. They have adopted the teachings of the church, and they do pretty much as the priests want them to do. But their Catholicism is more or less a surface religion. Their ancestors adopted it because they had to and the present day descendants cling to it because their ancestors adopted it. But both of them, ancestor and present-day Indian, wear their religion as a cloak in which they have wrapped their old beliefs. They embraced Christianity but they didn't give up their old religion when they did so, and as a consequence the old worship is continually cropping up in many ways. It is this which bothers the priests, for the Indians in many ways insist on worshiping Christ and the Virgin Mary with many of the old ceremonies which they had for their heathen divinities. The priests have tried to eradicate all remembrances of these old savage rituals, but they have been unsuccessful. The Indian figures out that if the new religion is good it is no proof that the old one was bad. So he combines the two in a way that is picturesque even if no excuse for it can be found in the rules of the church.

One of his favorite methods of worship and one to which the priests, for some reason, are especially opposed, is the dance. But though the priests may protest the Indian is stubborn. Once a year at least, and oftener if they can manage it, the Indians are bound to have their way. Then the whole village turns out and the dance is given.

There is little of the dance about it. Led by the elders of the village, the men and then the women and children wind in a long line. First the old men and then the younger ones, strike up a crude chant in the Aztec tongue. The women gradually take up the refrain, bending and swaying their bodies in time to the music. Then the old men, crouching — and stamping heavily on the ground as they move, begin to crawl forward in a circle. Half a dozen times or so they turn about. Then they retire and give place to the younger men, who repeat the performance. They, in turn, are followed by the women and children. During all is performance, which is held close in front of the church, the monotonous chant is continued.

At last the out-door part of the exercises is completed, but the chant still goes on. Forming into a line as they had been at first the old men led by the way into the church, still singing their Aztec song, bent nearly double and shuffling along in a peculiar gait which is imitated by all. Just inside the door they circle about again a few times and then approach the altar. There they stop their singing long enough to cross themselves and kneel and say a prayer. But after this chant is renewed, and with the same crouching, half-wriggling walk, they leave the church. Once outside they dance again and the service is ended. Sometimes they insist on having music with this service. Then it is of the crudest kind. It is far different from anything they ordinarily have and seems to be a survival of their old heathen worship. None of the Indians attaches any special meaning to the dance. To them it is simply a form by which they formerly worshipped and to one which they cling. But why they do it none of them seems able to tell.

An instance which shows how the peons will have their own way in spite of the priests is on record in the cathedral in Guadalajara. There is probably no city in the world where lightning does so much damage as in the "Pearl of the Occident." Tempests are frequent and they often seem a veritable rain of fire. At times, in the midst of calm weather and with a serene sky, there falls what is called a "dry flash" and which not uncommonly kills a man or wrecks a building.

For years the people had no protection against the lightning save in prayer, in penitence, and in devotion to San Clemente, who is the especial mediator in the case of electrical disturbances. This saint had them, and still has, a chapel in the cathedral, and one of the big bells, named after him, is supposed to possess the power to repel lightning. No sooner would the clouds gather and the thunder begin to roll than the priests began praying to San Clemente and the bell ringers to ring the anxious bell which was to calm the tempest. But something seemed to be wrong with San Clemente or the bell, for the storm did not usually cease until great damage had been done. In one case it happened that three of the bell ringers were struck dead as they tugged at the ropes.

It was evident to priests and people that San Clementine was offended. But how to propitiate him was the question. The priests wanted to do it by prayer, but this did not suit the peons, in whom the old pagan instincts had been aroused. They wanted to do it by sacrifice, and they brought chickens and lambs which they had slaughtered in front of the church and whose entrails they wanted the priests to burn on the altar. The priests refused and the angry peons erected an altar in front of the cathedral, and performed their sacrifice there. This was not successful and expiatory bullfights were organized. During one of them a storm came up, the cathedral was again struck, the image of the Virgin was hurled from the altar and the great crucilix was destroyed.

The peons were nearly crazy. They insisted the storms were due to the refusal of the priests to make the animal burnt offering on the altar. The priests persisted in their refusal. Another storm cost several lives in the city and the peons increased their demands. They insisted that the sacrifice be offered in the cathedral jointly to the Virgin Mary, San Clemente and the ancient Aztec god of fire. The priests stood aghast at this sacrilegious proposal. The peons said if what they wanted was not done they would believe that the priests wished to sacrifice them to the lightning and they would leave the church and go back to their old religion and seek protection from their old gods.

The trouble was serious and matters were at a crisis. Then a priest saved the day. He had the church secretly well insulated with lightning rods. Then the cathedral authorities notified the peons that they had found the cause of San Clemente's anger and they believed they had succeeded in turning away his wrath. They asked that nothing be done until after the next storm. This was agreed to.

In a few days the tempest came. It was a severe one and lightning seemed to rain down upon the city. But the bell of San Clemente rang out clearly, and when the storm was over the cathedral was found to be unharmed. The peons returned to their allegiance and the tremble was at an end. But how it would have been if Padre Rivera—such was the name of the resourceful priest—had not bought the lightning rods is a question.

PRESIDENT KNEW HER.

The dashing soubrette blew into the bank like a radiant flock of sunbeams and shone upon the cashier, says the New York Telegram.

"Oh, how do you do?" she gushed. "We closed last night! I'm awfully glad; I'm off to Europe and shan't come back until fall. Lovely! And I want to get my money; it's $20 and—

"What name?" he interrupted.

"Charme Dutelle," she replied with icy resentment of his ignorance.

He ran his finger over the ledger.

"Nothing here for you," he announced.

"What! My, you know me. I'm the hit of the Balmy Breezes company!"

"Nothing here."

"Why, you little bald-headed rascal!" she gasped with mingled alarm and anger, "you think you can work that on me? I left my book in this bank last week and you're the very gazooks I lost it to. Perceive?"

"I have looked for the book," he mumbled.

"Yeh?" she sneered. "I'll bet you figure to cop that twenty for yourself; maybe the children are due for a pair of shoes apiece or some installment house has got you going! Yeh? You are a cheap-looking proposition; and I'll tell you another thing—it's lucky you've locked this gate before your face or I'd reach in and pull the whiskers out of your chin by the yard!"

At this moment the president of the bank left his desk to peep into the weather.

"What is the matter?" he demanded.

She pointed a desperate finger.

"That monkey is trying to do me out of my twenty!"

"Eh?"

"But I'll kill his part for him all right. I want that twenty because it's mine, and I want it good and quick."

The president thought he detected something familiar in the general climate. He turned to the cashier.

"Isn't there some mistake? I have seen this young lady before."

"I guess yes!" she exclaimed. "Every girl in the Balmy Breezes knows you like her father. You carry a pair of those pocket glasses—and many's the time!"

The benevolent countenance curdled.

"What is your name?" he mumbled.

"Charme," she replied coquettishly. "Don't you remember?"

"No doubt—no doubt," he stammered in haste. "Really—"

"My society name is Lizzie Baumschmidt," she volunteered.

"Here is a book for Baumschmidt," blurted the cashier. "Sign it there, please."

The soubrette affixed her name and counted her money. Then she turned to renew the exchange of pleasantries with the president, but he had bolted for shelter.

"Well! I'm lucky to get my money, anyhow!" she loudly declared to the line of customers behind her. "A pappy bunch of workmen like this bank has would try to spil the candy from a helpless child."

CHESS DRIVES MEN MAD.

Study of Game Sends Many to Asylum.

Dead at the chess table, Francis C. Lariviere was loser in the last game of his life. Dispatches from Melrose, Mass., relate that the old gentleman, though past 71, was still keen at the game, and that, having played chess all his life, he was at length a victim of its fascination. He was playing a game with his wife when he died, says the New York Mail and Express. Physicians say that his death was due to apoplexy, caused by mental concentration so intense that the blood rushed to the head in a flow too large for the brain's capacity.

The news of this sacrifice to the ancient and honorable game did not interrupt for long the silent battles at the Manhattan Chess club, when the tidings were carried there by one who was curious to know something about the fatalities of this imperial pastime. Nothing but death or illness can interrupt these games until the checkmate comes.

"Dead at the chess table? Well, that was a good way to die," said one who stood watching a player put a red knight into a position of great peril while he let his fingers get burned by the twenty-eighth match he had used on that one pipe of tobacco. Profound stillness brooded over the room where a score of men, most of them past the middle age, puffed fitful, blue-gray fumes of the herb o' grace, and for hours and hours said not a word. They were beneath the spell—the same spell that has these thousands of years held in still abstraction Hindu princes, Medan priests, Chinese statesmen, Roman soldiers, French philosophers and many a common man, from fire worshipper to Broadway merchant, while their beards grew long, and empires rose and fell, and civilization piled high its monuments around them. A man may honorably take off his hat to the centuries-saturated pawns and immemorial kings and queens that can so engage the attention of a man that even death finds him indifferent.

It was Edgar Allan Poe who, perhaps, characterized in a few terse sentences that mental quality of the chess player, which sometimes develops into insanity and makes possible such singular deaths as that of the old gentleman in Melrose. "The game of chess," wrote Poe in that irresistible, grewsome tale, "The Murders of the Rue Morgue," "is greatly misunderstood in its effects on mental character. * * * The higher powers of the reflective intellect are more decidedly and more usefully tasked by the unostentatious game of draughts than by all the elaborate frivolity of chess. In this latter * * * the attention is called powerfully into play. If it flag for an instant an oversight is committed resulting in injury or defeat. * * * In nine cases out of ten it is the more concentrative rather than the more acute player who conquers. * * * The best chess player in Christendom may be little more than the best player of chess; but proficiency in whist implies capacity for success in those more important undertakings where mind struggles with mind."

All of this the veteran chess player generally will admit, with serene content, to be true. Also he looks with complacency upon the chance he runs of getting into a game and starving to death from sheer forgetfulness, or sitting sanely down to the checkered table and arising from it a fantastic lunatic. The game's the thing, after all.

"I never heard of a case just like that," said E. W. Dahl, who is one of the most indefatigable players at the Manhattan Chess club. "Still it's easy to believe that death could be caused by too close application. Intense thinking, long maintained draws the blood into the brain, and there is perhaps no concentration so deep as that of the successful chess player. The game gets away with some men, just as religion or perpetual motion hurries others into an asylum or the grave. Now and then the mind turns on the man who drives it too hard; something breaks, and the whole machine goes to pieces or moves lamely and incompetently to the end of its course.

"There was Steinitz. When he lost his great contest with Lasker in Moscow he showed the first sign of aberration by declaring he was going to send a wireless message to President Cleveland. In his room there was a telephone which was not connected with the system. Steinitz talked his message into the receiver and said he would have an answer in twenty-four hours. The next day, no answer having come, he opened a window and shouted the message into the air. That was enough for his friends, and he was taken to an asylum. A peculiar feature of his madness was that in his rambling talk he never dealt in the terms of chess, but raved continually about electricity. He conceived that he was surrounded by a maze of electric currents, and he warned all who came near him not to come into contact with these, lest they suffer injury. Steinitz was brought to America, and died insane at Ward's Island.

"Look at that picture there," Mr. Dahl said, pointing to a painting on the wall of the clubhouse. It was the portrait of a youthful looking man, with a fine, clignified face and deep-set, solemn eyes.

That is a good likeness of Morphy, the greatest chess player of them all. He, too, went insane through too close application to the infinite instricacies of the game. In his disjointed talk he could be got to say nothing about chess, but babbled constantly of erratic things. His father had been a lawyer, and he himself had a fine legal mind and a good training in technical law and controversy. But chess got him and he died in a New Orleans asylum. You will find other instances —e these—all variations upon the one theme."

Mr. Dahl became contemplative, and his steadfast and cold gray eyes swept over the tables and the books containing the chess lore of centuries upon centuries. Opening a ponderous tome he pointed to a printed page filled with columns of letters and figures in queer combinations that looked like cabalistic keys to some treasure or mystery of the ages. There were 600 such pages in the volume.

"These are merely the recorded variations of the first move," he went on. "A lifetime of work is there for a man who would learn all these combinations. A vast literature has been built up around the game, which Steinitz used to say is too much a science to be a game, and too much a game to be a science. He took it so seriously that he advocated the establishment of chairs in universities to teach the intricate secrets of the game.

"The danger to men is that the fascination of it becomes irresistible, and even though it should not kill or madden all of us it unfits many a man for other vocations and avocations of life. It actually grows into a bad habit like any of the other small and pleasant vices of which Shakespeare says the gods make instruments to scourge us. Blackburn, the Englishman, will not permit his son to learn the game for the reason, he declares, that a chess player, even though he may not lose his mind, comes to be good for little else but chess. It absorbs more and more of the devotee's attention til he is at last rapt in contemplation of the red and white pieces and does not know or care what the world is doing around him. When this gets to be a habit, his case is settled."

Mr. Dahl smiled happily, as if to leave no doubt that such a golden-chained servitude was a very positive kind of happiness, as it surely may be. In the playing room the smoke still curled from pipes and cigars into inconsequential fabrics; an occasional crackling of a match told of another stage in rumination; the stillness lay heavier and heavier upon the bent, bare heads. Apoplexy? Insanity? Who should worry?

A SOCIAL STRUGGLE

Said to Be Responsible For the Wood-Rathbone War.

Story Reported to Have Been Inspired By Senator Hanna.

Contest Between Two Women For Social Procedure In Cuba.

New York, June 14.—The New Yorker, under the caption, "Light on a Remarkable Intrigue," publishes a story that is said to have been inspired by those close to Senator Hanna. The article is as follows:

A curious and important senate insists on poking its nose into the financial branch of Gen. Wood's Cuban administration. The inquiry has hardly started, and may be smothered before it progresses far, but enough has come to light to show that the redoubtable colonel of Roosevelt's Rough Riders has been indulging wholesale in many of the extravagances he and his clique so relentlessly persecuted Maj. E. G. Rathbone for committing in a minor way. The impending exposé threatens to remove the halo many people have been building around the head of the lucky 'sawbones' who, thanks to his hypnotic influence over two presidents, will in due course of promotion be at the head of the American army. It does not conduce to the comfort and pacee of mind of the Wood outfit to know that Senator Hanna is the instigator-in-chief of the investigation, having been moved thereto by the rank rank and merciless attempt by the Gen. Wood machinery to railroad Rathbone into the penitentiary.

Since Senator Hanna came into the open and vouched for Rathbone's honesty, and at the same time took a series of falls out of the major's persecutors, the public begins to look through different colored spectacles at the whole affair. Senator Hanna's indorsement of a man's character carries great weight, and when he stands for a person earnestly and insistently, the popular mind is visibly influenced. The public is also awakened by the demonstration to inquire how it is possible in this age of advanced civilization for an innocent man to be held by the throat with worse than Cossack barbarity for a period of two or three years.

I am not championing Maj. Rathbone, but I am in a position to say that when the story of the conspiracy to connect him with the Cuban postal frauds is told, if it ever should be, the recital will be a startling and sensational revelation of high political and social intrigue, petty in its origin and unspeakably malignant from start to finish—a story that will tel of cowardly friends, organized and venomous officials, social and personal misrepresentation and disreputable advantage taken of circumstances excusable in themselves, but capable of distortion into the semblance of crime—the whole constituting a devilish plot to ruin a gentleman, blight his life, blast his reputation and destroy his family—and all for a woman—no, two women.

The women in the case were the wives of Gen. Wood and Maj. Rathbone. Out in Ohio Mrs. Rathbone had cut something of a social swath. She was a niece of former Governor "Jim" Campbell and a conspicuous D. A. R. The Rathbones had a moderate fortune, which was lost in a Hamilton waterworks scheme. The Maj. had given valuable assistance to Mr. Hanna when the president maker was up for election to the senate, and when he went on the financial shoals the senator secured his appointment as director of the posts in Cuba. It was the most conspicuous civil position in Cuba after the American occupation. The Rathbones moved into the "palace" and entertained lavishly. The pace was too swift, but Mrs. Rathbone liked the experience so well she would not let go. Neely, the government fiscal agent, told Rathbone about the money-making enterprises he was in and how he was amassing riches fabulously. Rathbone knew his as a plunger in the states, and when Neely offered to "help him out" he assented. That was where he made the mistake of his life, for the money he borrowed of Neely proved later to have been stolen from the government. That Rathbone had guilty knowledge of the origin of the money or even a suspicion of the truth is not believed by those best acquainted with the man. He had used the borrowed money in paying the expenses of the social game, however, even going so far as to organize a campaign for appointment to the position of governor general of Cuba, to which Gen. Wood aspired. This move was taken at the instance of the madame.

When the Woods reached Havana they outranked the Rathbones officially, and Mrs. Wood immediately and peremptorily insisted on social precedence as well. The two ladies locked horns on the first proposition, and at once engaged in a rivalry of short duration, but intense bitterness. The men got mixed up in the fight, and when the postal frauds were exposed soon thereafter the governor general showed no quarter, pursuing every advantage and pressing every point against his unhorsed family foe with the relentless ferocity of an Apache Indian. He kept it up to the very end, going to the extreme ultimately, of dictating a conviction, in the face of a total and admitted failure of proof of guilt and against the almost unanimous sentiment of the people of Havana, who understood the "true inwardness" of the situation.

That last act was too much for the good temper of Senator Hanna, who had been Rathbone's strongest friend and kept him from starving to death during the years of enforced idleness in Havana, and he forthwith stationed himself on the dome of the national capitol and yelled bloody murder. He called the attention of the populace to the atrocity of the performance and raised such a frightful commotion that Gen. Wood's sponsor, the president, was forced to open a gate for a vindication. Now Rathbone is freed by the amnesty act of the new republic, but neither he nor his friends are satisfied with the impotent conclusion, and as the beginning of a war of retaliation they propose turning the light on what they describe as "Wood's profligate administration and scandalous waste of public money." Rathbone's manliness has kept his tongue tied as to the real motive of the war upon him and his family, but others are beginning to talk for him. Let the entertainment proceed.

HUSBANDS

Claim Wife's Property, Each Insisting He Is Only Heir.

Louisville, Ky., June 14.—The curious feature of a case developed in court here is that two men appear to be the husband and therefore heir to a woman who left $2500.

In the case of the Louisville Trust company, administrator of the estate of Elizabeth Mitchess, deceased, against Edith Watkins, C. C. Mitchell, Thomas Stuart, suit has been filed. He sets up his claim to having been husband to the dead woman.

The suit was filed to settle the estate of a woman who committed suicide in a room at Eighth and Market streets, in January, 1901, and who was variously known as Pearl Crawford, Lizzie Crawford, Pearl Mitchell, Elizabeth Mitchell and Lizzie Stuart. Her chief claim to public attention was her connection with Lieut. C. Calhoun Mitchell, an honorably discharged regular army officer and son of Dr. Mitchell, superintendent of the state insane asylum of Mississippi.

Her estate consisted of $2451.52 in the Lexington City National bank and a quantity of jewelry. Evidence at the coroner's inquest tended to show that the decedent had been married to Lieut. Mitchell in San Francisco, and had committed suicide when despondent over her chance of admittance to her husband's funeral.

Stuart, the other man who claims to be the woman's husband, says in his answer that he was married to her in St. Louis, May 14, 1898, and that the marriage certificate is filed in another case in the Jefferson circuit court. He denies that C. C. Mitchell was the woman's legal husband, and says he is entitled to one half of her surplus personalty.

Edith Watkins, who claims to be the dead woman's mother, and C. C. Mitchell have neither of them set up their claims to inheriting her estate.

The action referred to in Stuart's answer as containing a record of his marriage to the woman is a suit for divorce, styled Lizzie Stuart against Thomas Stuart, filed Oct. 2, 1899, in which the plaintiff charges defendant with abandonment, drunkenness and failure to provide. A marriage license, signed by a St. Louis justice of the peace is filed with it. The record of the case shows that J. Bruce Kremer was appointed warning order attorney, and that Stuart was not located. The case must have been dismissed, however, as the record contains no judgment for divorce.

ATTENTION, K. OF P.

MEMORIAL COMMITTEE.

ARCH

To the Confederate Dead Dedicated at Columbus, Ohio.

Columbus, Ohio, June 14.—The unveiling and dedication of a memorial arch to 2,250 Confederate dead attracted 5,000 people from all parts of the country to this city today. The arch was the gift of William Harrison, of Cincinnati, a former citizen of Columbus. The dead soldiers were prisoners at Camp Chase, west of Columbus, during the war and died in prison. For many years the little cemetery was neglected. Former President Hayes paid a farmer to keep the burial place free from weeds. Former Governor Foraker had the government enclose the spot with a stone wall. Several years ago Col. W. H. Knauss, a Federal veteran, instituted a yearly custom of decorating the graves. Mr. Harrison was not a soldier in either army, but was influenced in making his gift by sentiment. There were many ex-Confederates present from all parts of the South, and there were many floral offerings from Confederate camps. Among the speakers were Gov. Nash and Gen. John B. Gordon. The graves wre decorated by the ladies of the G. A. R. and the Daughters of the Confederacy.

FREAKS OF ELECTRICTY.

Peculiar Paths Taken By the Mysterious Current.

The growing use of electricity for domestic purposes renders the question of the fatal influence of shocks one of very general importance, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Is every person susceptible to an electric shock? Does the physiological condition you are in at the time you receive a shock make any difference? Does the pain which the current makes through the body?

Does the question of contact made, and whether burning takes place or not have any effect as regards the shock being fatal? "Does the physiological condition a person is in at the time a shock is received make any difference?"

Let the following cases answer for themselves: A workman who had been doing some very heavy work which made him perspire freely, to rest himself, sat down on a transformer, which was earthed. He received a 2,000-volt shock. At the time he was wearing a thick flannel shirt which was wet with perspiration. He received a most severe shock, a hole being burned in his trousers, and the back of his head and body severely burned. This man should have been killed, but was not even insensible. This seems to show that the perspiration shunted the current, thus saving his life, although the burning probably protected him.

Another question is: "Would a man when drunk be less liable to be fatally injured?" An answer to this seems to be given by the following case: A laborer working at a transformer station touched an inner terminal with one hand and an outer with the other, there being a potential difference of 2,000 volts. The man was a heavy drinker, being under the influence of drink when he received the shock, which did not even make him insensible. A factor in the case may have been that his hands were severely burned. The man received a shock sufficiently strong to kill him, but his inebriated condition counteracted it.

The next question is: "Are persons liable to be killed when they are asleep?" Here is an illustrative case: Some workmen were at work on a night job. One of the men was an exceedingly sleepy fellow. The other man gave him a shock as a joke while he was asleep. It was from a magneto machine capable of ringing through 30,000 ohms, but, although they tried all they could he could not be awakened.

Another case was that of a man stationed to watch a cable, under test charged with 5,000 volts, and who, going to sleep, fell upon it. Although most severely burned about the hands he was not killed.

Of course, with so few cases it is impossible to make any general reductions, but the results are of profound interest, both to the electrical and medical professions.

Now: "Does the path which the current takes through the body have any effect as regards the shock proving fatal?"

To illustrate the different paths the current can take, here are a few cases which have come under recent observation and also what the victim felt most:

Hand in hand, blow in chest; right hand to right foot, nothing; right hand to left foot, nothing; right hand to both feet, nothing; left hand to left foot, blow in back of neck; left hand to right foot, blow in back; left hand to head, blow on top of head; head to buttocks, could not ascertain if anything was felt.

Of course it cannot be said why they should feel differently, but these facts are brought forward, as perhaps the doctors can give an explanation. However, it proves that different organs of the body are affected. Dealing with this from actual cases:

A workman was oiling an alternator, and touched his inner brush accidentally with his elbow; his right foot was on the earthed frame of the machine, and his left foot insulated. The pressurewas 2,200 volts, and although he gave the cry, and was sensible till the circuit was broken, he could not get away. He remembered them running to shut the machine down, but became insensible when this was done, and was treated for forty minutes by artificial respiration before he showed any signs of life. One would have expected this man to be killed, but he was badly burned on the elbow and the foot.

Another was adjusting an arc lamp. He had his left foot earthed, and with his left hand touched the carbons. It was impossible to ascertain the number of volts he received, but he was killed. There was only a slight discoloration visible, and he was not burned.

These cases prove almost conclusively that the path the current takes is a most important factor.

"Does the question of area of contact made and whether burning takes place or not have any effect upon a person's chance of being killed?"

That which is quite safe on alternating is utterly useless on direct current circuits. From the above cause it is possible for a man to be severely burned on continuous current, and therefore all cases of exceptionally severe burning, if they occur on a low tension supply, should be thoroughly investigated to prove whether death occurred from shock due to burns or an electric shock.

The only conclusion come to is that if death occurs from an electric shock, both are equally responsible. If on the other hand in another case a man receives a shock this is equally true, and though it might be safe under ordinary conditions to work with even a high voltage, yet if he really did his best to kill himself he could most probably manage it with even a small voltage, provided he had a sufficient area of contact.

Even the man who says he don't read advertisements goes to a well-advertised store and calls for an advertised article. To "soak in' ads should appear often in The Herald.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE SALE.—

Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage which was duly executed and delivered by Charles J. Frederickson and Clara M. Frederickson his wife, J. F. (or John F.) Fredin and Anna Fredin, his wife, and C. W. Wilson and Augusta Wilson, his wife, mortgagors, to Frank L. Murray, mortgagee, bearing date April fifth (5th), 1894, and which was duly recorded in the register of deeds' office for St. Louis County, Minnesota, on April tenth (10th), 1894, at 1:30 o'clock p. m., in Book eighty (80) of mortgages, on page four hundred eighty-four (484); such default consisting in the non-payment of the principal sum thereby secured, with interest thereon from April 5th, 1894, and also in the non-payment of taxes upon the premises described in said mortgage for the year 1894 and subsequent years, which said mortgagors had covenanted to pay in said mortgage, but which became delinquent, and which said mortgagee was compelled to pay, and did pay, as follows: On April 25th, 1899, the sum of $21.96; on May 31st, 1899, the sum of $8.79; on May 31st 1900, the sum of $7.78, and on May 31st, 1901, the sum of $8.25; no part of which principal, taxes, or interest thereon has ever been paid.

And whereas, there is therefore claimed to be due, and there is actually due, at the date of this notice, upon said mortgage debt, the sum of two thousand seventy-nine and 10-100 ($2079.10) dollars, principal, taxes paid and interest.

And whereas, said mortgage contains a power of sale in due form which has become operative by reason of the defaults above mentioned; and no action or proceeding, at law or otherwise, has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described therein, situate in St. Louis County, Minnesota, described as follows, to-wit: Lot numbered forty-nine (49), in block fifty-seven (57), in Duluth Proper, Third Division, according to the recorded plat thereof; also lots numbered seven (7) and eight (8), in block six (6), in Martin's Division of Duluth, according to the recorded plat thereof, in the register of deed's office for St. Louis County, Minnesota; which premises will be sold by the sheriff of St. Louis County, Minnesota, at the front door of the court house in the city of Duluth, in said county and state, on the 11th day of June, A. D. 1902, at ten (10) o'clock a. m., at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest, and said taxes and interest thereon, and seventy-five dollars attorney's fees, stipulated for in said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated March 20th, 1902.

FRANK L. MURRAY,
Mortgagee.

FRANCIS W. SULLIVAN,
Attorney for Mortgagee.
Duluth Evening Herald, April-23-May-5-12-19-26-June-2-1902.

The above sale was opened by me at the time and place specified in the above notice, and then and there publicly adjourned to July 9th, A. D. 1902, at the same hour and place specified in said notice, when said property will be sold as therein stated.

Dated June 11th, 1902.

SATURDAY, JUNE 14, 1902.

Old Glory's Birthday

For exactly a century and a quarter the starry emblem of America has floated over Uncle Sam's possessions on land and sea. Exactly 125 years ago on the 14th of this June, a date now celebrated as Flag day all over the states, Old Glory sprang into being.

This is then, indeed, an important anniversary of the birthday of our flag, for 125 years is an unusually long period for colors to float unchanged, over a land. Although America is an infant among the veteran nations of the world, our standard is one of the oldest haunted by any of the powers of the world.

The history of the American standard, the emblem of the leading republic of the world, which for a century and a quarter commanded the homage of nations over the entire globe, and which demands respect on every water, is full of romantic interest.

The first stars and stripes was made by a demure, sweet-faced Quakeress, Betsy Ross, in her quaint little home, 239 Arch street, Philadelphia. The old building is still standing, and will be purchased by the Betsy Ross Memorial association, which organization has its headquarters in the dwelling, known as the flaghouse. The money for the purchase of the house and land is being raised by a subscription fund, to which every citizen of the United States can contribute.

The memorial association has an option on the flaghouse property, with the right to purchase within five years for the sum of $25,000. As the place is of national interest, every state, city and township in the Union is given an equal opportunity to share in the work of raising the $25,000. No one person can contribute more than 10 cents, and for this dime he receives a certificate, which proclaims him a part owner of the historic place. The sum required has nearly been raised, each state taking an active part in the work.

The historic association of the dwelling makes its safety a subject of anxiety in every quarter of the United States. There every quarter of the United States. There and guards as its flag and the place of its birth is also an historical relic of importance.

The house is a small 2-story building and remains today the same as when Betsy Ross fashioned there the first American flag. The flag room is a square apartment. The flooring, dark with age and well seasoned, is the same as that which was placed there when William Penn supervised the building of the house. A corner cupboard, with upper and lower closets, is built into the wall at the southeast corner of the room. At the north end is an old-fashioned open fireplace set about with tiles.

It takes now but a slight effort of the imagination to picture Betsy Ross in her high-back chair beside the old fireplace, examining the plan for the first United States flag, which Gen. Washington, in company with Robert Morris and Col. Ross, Betsy's uncle, brought for her inspection.

Betsy Ross' maiden name was Griscom. She married John Ross, an upholsterer of great skill, and lived in the little house on Arch street some time before the revolution, conducting a dressmaking and millinery establishment.

It has been gathered from authoritative sources that she earned the title of being the finest needle worker in America. She embroidered ruffles for Washington's shirts and in this way the general came to know Mrs. Ross and feel a confidence in her skill with the needle which led him to seek her out when the first American flag was to be made.

The first American flag as made by Betsy Ross was very different from the later banners.

One hundred and twenty-five years ago this June 14 the American congress, in session at Philadelphia, resolved "that the flag of the United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; the union to be thirteen stars, white, on a blue field, representing a new constellation, the stars to be arranged in a circle.

It has often been asked what suggested the design for our star-spangled banner. There are many traditions afloat concerning the origin of the design, but the one in which there is undoubtedly the most truth is that which credits the design to Washington.

The general found in the coat of arms of his own family a hint from which he drew the design for the flag.

The coat of arms of the Washington family has two red bars on a white ground, and three gilt stars above the top bar. The American flag, once decided upon, was rushed through in a hurry, for the army was badly in need of a standard.

A committee had been appointed a few days before June 14, when the stars and stripes were adopted, who were to consider the subject and report on a general standard for all the troops of the colonies. The committee consisted of Gen. Washington, Robert Morris and Col. Ross. It was at the suggestion of Col. Ross that the committee decided to call upon the niece of the colonel, Mrs. Betsy Ross, and ask her assistance in the making of the first national emblem.

Betsy Ross enthusiastically undertook the work, and in a few days a beautiful star-spangled banner was ready to be unfurled. She had made one alteration in the design submitted by Washington. The general had made his stars six pointed, as they were on his coat of arms. Betsy Ross made hers with five points, and five points have been used ever since. For several years, Mrs. Ross made the flags for the government. The prices she received for the flags varied—it was all contract work.

The first using of the stars and stripes in military service was at Fort Stanwix, renamed Fort Schuyler, now Rome, New York, in 1777. Aug. 2 of that year the fort was besieged by the English and Indians; the brave garrison were without a flag, but one was made in the fort. The red stripes were of a petticoat furnished by a woman, the white stripes and stars were supplied by an officer who gave his shirt for that purpose, and the blue was a piece of Col. Peter Gansevoort's military cloak. Three women worked on the flag, and it was raised to victory, when on the 22nd of August the redmen and the English were defeated at the fort.

The next record of the using of the stars and stripes is on the first anniversary of American independence, which was celebrated at Philadelphia, Charleston, S. C., and other places, July 4, 1777.

The banner was used at the battle of Brandywine, Sept. 17, 1777, at Germantown, Oct. 4 of the same year, and it also floated over the surrender of Burgoyne.

This flag cheered the patriots of Valley Forge the next winter; it waved at Yorktown and shared in the rejoicings at the close of the war. As long as the states remained thirteen in number, the original design of the circle of stars was all right, but when, in 1791, Vermont, and in 1792 Kentucky were taken into the Union, it was decided to arrange the stars in the form of one huge constellation.

In 1795 it was decided to add a stripe, as well as a star, for each state which came into the Union; consequently, in that year Vermont and Kentucky were marked on the flag, one by a white and the other by a red stripe.

Some wise prophet, looking ahead some twenty years or more, saw that this plan of adding a stripe, as well as a star, for each state added to the Union, would mean a constant changing of the flag and, as a great growth of the country was foreseen, it was soon appreciated that by this plan the flag would in a few years become so large and ungainly that its beauty would be lost.

A committee was elected in 1812 by congress, to decide upon a permanent design for the flag, and the result was that the original thirteen stripes were again used, the stars arranged on the blue field in the form of a square, with one constellation for each new state.

In 1818 this plan was formally adopted by congress, and the flag, with its thirteen stripes and stars, corresponding in number to the states in the Union, became the established emblem of the Union.

Mrs. Reid, wife of the famous sea captain, made the first flag of the new design on July 4, 1818, the number of stars being twenty, Illinois having been admitted that year.

This design, adopted in 1818, is our flag of today, with the addition of twenty-seven stars—forty-seven states, where, 125 years ago, there were but thirteen, and those fighting a hard battle for liberty and right to progress.

Fables By George Ade

The Modern Fable of the Young Napoleon Who Went Back to the Store on Monday Morning.

(Copyright, 1902, by R. H. Russell.)

Once there was a feverish Sure-Thinger who started for the Track with a Roll about the size of a Lady's Pencil. He wanted to parlee a $2 Silver Certificate and bring home enough to pay the National Debt.

When he stayed at home and marked the Card and made Mind Bets he could beat five out of six. He estimated that he was losing a Thousand a Month by fooling around the Store when he might be out at the Merry-Go-Round showing the Ikeys how to take a Joke.

And now Saturday Afternoon had come and Percy M. Piker was hanging on the rear end of the Choo-Choo with $7 sewed up in the inside Pocket of his Vest while in his Hand there fluttered a batch of Clippings, written by the Smoke Brothers, showing which ones were sure to win unless something happened.

Mr. Piker, the amateur Gam, closed his Eyes and saw himself buying a real Panama and a dozen or so George H. Primrose Shirts. He had a Vision of riding in a Machine called the Pink Demon with Claire at his side and an imported Chiffonier working the Jugger and mowing down the Common People.

Percy had two or three Good Things that were guaranteed to go through. They had been slipped to him by a Cigar Salesman, who knew an Owner. They looked to be the real Candy.

When he arrived at the Track he gave up for a Badge and a Dope-Sheet and a couple of Perfectos and this left him with 5 and a little something on the side for Red Hots. He fought his way to the Black-Board and demanded $2 worth of SAW BRIGHT EYES DOING A SOLO.

Bright Eyes at 9 to 1. While he was struggling to get to the Fence he heard someone say that Appendicitis was right and would win by a City Block. A Low Moan escaped him. He climbed over a large mass of Colored People so as to get $3 down on Appendicitis. The Odds were 7 to 5. He got balled up in his Arithmetic and while he was waiting for the Figures to shift so that he could butt in with his 3, a Bell rang and the Mob tore for the Fresh Air. He climbed a Pole and saw Bright Eyes doing a Solo. He let go and fell in a Faint. Bright Eyes had beat the Gate and spreadeagled his Field. It was a Case of winning on the Chin Strap. Mr. Piker was first in the Line, shaking like a Corn-Starch Pudding. He wanted to cash before the Book failed.

A few Moments later he went out behind the Grand Stand and counted up and found that he had $23. He had the Panama and one Shirt. The still, small Voice said, "Duck!" but he thought of Claire and his coming Vacation. There grew within him a high resolve to clean up the Betting Ring and quit the Mercantile Life.

In the Second Race there was a Brown Mare by High Low-Dreamy Eyes at 97 with Fogarty up, whatever that meant. He heard a Hickey in a Striped Sweater tell a red-headed Man that Josie Jinks would roll in. Accordingly he gnawed his way up to the Workman with the Pencil and laid Twenty at 3½ to 1. Then he wished that he hadn't for he met a Friend who whispered "Sassafras" to him. Also he heard someone say that Josie Jinks was three-legged and a bad Actress. After which he went and put Cold Water on his Head and died several Deaths.

Josie Jinks carried on her Back something just out of the Cradle that had number 3 marked on it. Mr. Piker had his Chin over the Fence and was wondering if any one would gather up his Body and put it on the Train. His Pulse was up to 189 and he couldn't hear the Band play.

He saw them come past the first time. Sassafras had a piece of Daylight between himself and the Bunch. The Boy was going along under Double Wraps with a lot up his Sleeve. Away back in the Pocket there was something with a 3 on it. Percy clung to the Fence and he felt the Chill come up his Legs. Sassafras had them smothered. He heard the Roar behind him and knew that an Awful Thing was being pulled off, but he did not have the Heart to look. As they pounded up the Stretch he lifted a dying Gaze and saw a figure 3 move out of the horrible Mix-Up and it was all over but the Cashing.

A bug-eyed Maniac with his Collar to the bad was found wandering hither and thither with $90 in his Left Hand. The Tout had to shake him a couple of times before he came to. The Tout had some Goods of a very superior Quality. In the next Race there was a Collie that had enough Hop in him to convert a Selling Platter into a Reina. It was like making Change with a Blind Man. Rinkaboo was the Name. Breathe it softly, as very few were Next.

The Tout said to play it across the Board, forward and back, up and down. He said that Rinkaboo would breeze in, that he would win on the Bit, doing Buck and Wing Steps, that all the others would seem to be Hitched.

So, Mr. Piker allower the Tout to take him by the Hand, for he was too weak to resist, and together they wandered off into Dreamland. Piece by Piece, the $3 happy Samoleans went up, Rinkaboo was played in all the Books, straight, place and to peep. Mr. Piker found himself up in the Grand Stand holding his Head with one Hand while in the other Hand was a Pinochle Deck, suitable for framing. If Rinkaboo finished at all, Mr. Piker was a Wealthy Person. If he happened in toward the head of the Procession, Mr. Piker would have to send for a Furniture Van. If he came First, it would be a case of Hoboken for every Book inside of the Fence.

After it was all over and Mr. Percy M. Piker was riding homeward with his Head out of a Trolley Window, he recalled dimly that a large number of long-legged Ponies came out on the Track. One of them was the color of an Old Glove and was doing a Two-Step. There was about twenty minutes of Fussing around at the Bend in the Track and then they all kited away like a flight of Swallows and there was one Horse in front and Mr. Piker had a Convulsion and frothed at the mouth. Presently the Tonic seemed to die away and something Blew and Rinkaboo fell down and stepped on his Lip. He came in about the time they were blowing the Horn for the next Race.

And now Mr. Piker can take Callus up to his Room and tell him how he stood to win $1340.

Panama Hat Craze

Some of Them Cost Hundreds of Dollars Each—They Do Not Come From Panama, Neither Are They Woven Under Water.

New York, June 14.—Five hundred dollars for a straw hat! Think of it! Enough with which to take a three months' holiday in Europe; enough to keep your son a year at college; enough to buy a small farm. And yet so astute a financier as Lyman Gage, ex-secretary of the treasury, recently paid that much for an extra fine Panama and reckoned, moreover, that he had made a good bargain. King Edward VII also cheerfully paid a Bond street merchant $160 to secure him "the finest Panama in London," while Jean de Reszke, the noted tenor, has paid the top-notch price—something under $800—to procure a similar object in America. Ex-Mayor Van Wyck, of New York, is chuckling over his success in securing a Panama which dealers have told him is superior in quality to either King ——ward's or —— one owned by Jean de Reszke. He paid $250. Droves of men are wearing straw hats each costing the price of a suit of clothes.

These instances of extravagance are not mentioned as a reflection upon the perpetrators, but merely to illustrate to what extent has spread "the Panama hat craze," one of the most expensive fashions ever adopted by men. Expensive because a Panama of even medium quality may not be had for less than $25, and if you aim to have one that may be tucked away in a vest pocket like a lead pencil or slipped through a finger ring the price is, to most persons, prohibitive. In spite of this costliness, however, Panama hats are being dispatched from South America absolutely in ship loads and about half the population of Ecuador are engaged in supplying hat luxuries for the men of Yankeedom.

"The craze" began last year and appeared only to be transient, but the enterprising merchants of our big cities foretold that this summer would find a demand far greater than the supply and they accordingly put in their orders about six months ago. Since then the Panama hat industry has become more lucrative than any other in that part of South America adjoining the isthmus and with the prospects of making a fortune in a few years many planters have abandoned the raising of coffee and rice. The mountain passes of the Andes from Chimborazo northward teem, day and night, with long columns of pack mules and ox-carts bearing their precious burden to Panama, which is the clearing house for hats. The streets of Panama itself are thanked with the establishments of hat brokers and half the city is engaged one way or other in helping to further this American "craze."

In our time it has been the exclusive privilege of women to spend large sums of money on hats. The fad of wearing real lace that is affected today is also a costly one. A smartly dressed woman will oftentimes wear two or three yards of Irish point lace that costs perhaps $80 a yard. It is this sort of thing that gives a father or husband "heart disease," a tragedy that has been so useful to joke writers and knockabout comedians.

But the tables now are reversed, and humorists, to be up-to-date, must regild one of their stock commodities. It is the women now who gasp with astonishment when the head of the house comes home with a little wisp of straw which he cheerfully proclaims has cost him $40. Not only that but he has the effrontery to boast of the purchase and goes strutting about because Brown or Jones has a Panama hat that is woven in two pieces, while his, proud man, has never a seam.

Among the false notions regarding Panama hats, and there are prevalent a great many, is that of its origin. The name, in the first place, would lead one to think that the fabric is manufactured in Panama whereas the fact is that Ecuador, Colombia and Guayaquil produce two-thirds of all the Panamas in the market. The city of Panama is merely a shipping port for these hats brought from other places.

Another illusion that prevails generally is that the natives weave these precious hats under water, but this is incorrect. The rumor probably started from the method of soaking the raw material in water prior to their being woven. There is nothing extraordinary about this, the object being merely to soften the "straw" so that it will be pliable and easy to handle.

To call the Panama a straw hat is, by the way, an anomaly, for it is not made of straw. The material used in its manufacture is either the stem of the palm leaves or a rare sort of grass that grows in South America. The natives are very deft in curling and weaving both of these products. The palm they tear in shreds with their teeth until it spreads out fan shape. After a long soaking the palm stem is taken out of the water and pulled on a rough-looking block at which the workman sits for weeks at a time carefully putting in place shred after shred. It is this length of time and tediousness in labor that accounts for the high price placed on Panama hats.

There is one distinction in Panamas of the utmost importance, a distinction that, if noticed, stamps the wearer as a real "swell" or on the other hand a pretender. Your genuine, high priced Panama is made in one piece and has no lining, while the inferior style of hat, made for the most part in Antioquia, Colombia, is woven in two pieces and has a lining. That style is regarded with contempt by the South Americans, though it oftentimes passes in the United States for the "real thing" and is priced accordingly.

The perfect Panamas are woven by the women of Ecuador, and those that live in the two provinces of Tollima and Suaez, Colombia. The men can rarely be induced to work, no matter how considerably the pay, and contractors have nearly ceased trying to galvanize them with energy.

The value of a hat depends entirely upon its texture and pliability. One that costs $500, for example, would be so closely woven as to appear practically smooth to the naked eye. It is, of course, made in one piece, and if the owner has not been cheated he should be able to squeeze his hat through a finger ring. But a hat capable of this treatment is about as rare as blue diamonds.

There is no telling where the Panama hat "craze" will end or the amount of money that will be spent thereon this season. The masculine population seem to have gone quite mad over it and dealers are taking advantage of the moment to reap a harvest. "In other years," said a Broadway hatter, "I would have sold several thousand stiff brimmed Macknaws in the first part of the season, but this season I have sold less than a hundred. Only Panamas are wanted. Women, too, have caught the infection and you will find that before the summer is half over fashion will decree that to be up-to-date a woman must own a Panama hat."

Enlisted By Congress

A North Dakota Boy, Who Was Permitted to Fight, But Was Too Young To Be Enrolled.

Washington, June 14.—After a vigorous fight, Representative Marshall has at last had passed in the house the bill correcting the military record of Paul Crum, of Fargo, N. D. There is an interesting story connected with young Crum and his service as one of Uncle Sam's boys in the Philippines. He was too young to enlist, but he followed his city's regiment to the islands and fought bravely.

The circumstances in the case are most unusual—in fact, they have no precedent, and the fight made against the bill, as introduced by Representative Marshall, was based on the theory that it would weaken military discipline. The bill provides that Crum shall be enrolled as a member of the First North Dakota, which saw active service in the islands. Crum tried to enlist in this regiment, but was refused on account of his age. He was not yet 18 in July, 1898.

Crum until 1895 lived with his grandfather in Santa Cruz, Cal. In December of that year he left California and went to live with his father in Fargo, N. D. Here he attended school until the opening of the war with Spain.

He would have passed with the First North Dakota boys had not one of the examiners known his age. That night Crum secretly left home and put off for Santa Cruz. Here he remained with his grandfather for a few days and in July, 1898, he went to San Francisco and shipped as an ordinary seaman on the bark Andrew Welch, bound for Honolulu, his object being to reach Manila by the same the First Dakota arrived.

The Andrew Welch reached Honolulu in August, about the same time that the New York volunteer infantry recruits for the Eighteenth infantry, Tenth Pennsylvania infantry and other troops took up their camp at Warkakee, outside of Honolulu. Crum made himself known to the officers and endeavored to enlist in the volunteer engineers, but was again refused on account of his youth. He then endeavored to enlist in provisional Company

As Viewed By Gath

Congress and the President—Feeling That Congress Is a Desultory, Demagogue-Ridden, Loot-Stalled Body—Equestrian and Other Statuary.

Washington, June 14.—While congress, including the senate, is querying the president's popularity, everybody is querying congress as an usurpation.

A feeling is abroad that that congress is a desultory, demagogue-ridden, loot-stalled body. It has the all-current disease of too much money for individuality, appropriations excelling thought.

I have heard sincere expressions of regret that prosperity kept up so long. Most of the fameful acts of men are performed upon a light stomach. Given a society with a surplus in every pocket and no ideal intents, and all go to the gambling house, which is the center of all other vices. I observe at Long Branch, where public gambling is palatial, that the soulless trade class gets down to gambling every night. Money earned without its compensating sacrifice has produced the dearth of pride, of class, of conversation, of habits.

Congress has a billion dollars or more upon the gaming table; it is a congress of gamesters. The accession of a member of congress to the presidency took up to that dispensing fountain all the affluence of congress with the public money. A big senator was "slated" for the next presidency.

One man was too much in the way, the new president. He asked his party to adhere to some public spirit, to practice broad equanimity, to have an international character. "Who is he? He shan't have a second term! Gods! are we senators to be kept out in the lobby among the people? We, who were pulled into the late president's inner office and whispered to, and given the beautitude gingerbread? Rather perish the party than the man who treats us as other citizens."

I sat down at a public place when congress had taken its close of the week run to New York and discussed the molding of events with a veteran national campaigner, a man not afraid to speak, perhaps, because he felt protected in honor.

Said I: "Is everybody happy?"

"Hardly. A vagueness is in the air. Things go on without men to shape them. The political future is without interest. There is neither an opposition of any force, nor persons of any newness in the Republican party. It seems past hog-killing time when nothing in the pen squeals and the pork is cornered. Show me a new quantity! We have a feeble foreign policy. Mutual bounty and protection, reciprocal robbery; we rather hate our foreign extensions. The Republican party has shoved out Cuba; the Democratic party is hating the Philippines. It looks as if we wanted nothing but to glut the home country!"

"Is Roosevelt to be renominated?"

"Where else is the candidate? When a party leaves out its head, its tail will soon wriggle out. No party has quitted its legitimate head without ruin since John Adams was abandoned by the Federalists, Tyler by the Whigs, Polk by the Democrats, Arthur by the Republicans. See where the Democracy has arrived by throwing out the known for the unknown? They are in two camps, swearing no man out of either shall be run. Roosevelt has to contend against the gushing pathos of McKinley's popularity, when almonry replaced all strict administration. But Roosevelt is the highest type of Young America ever seen in this country; and the more he is compared to the senatorial and speakertorial body the better he looks. Absolutely without nepotism, free from that stigma upon McKinley and Grant, he is equally impersonal as to interests. There never was an administration with so little thin of it. He buys no Washington real estate. He argues no cases at law. He is in no New York clique, they got rid of him there because he would not combine. All the jobbers and wharf rats know him. The old senatorial clique is not tickled with him. The senate, indeed, is full of back numbers. There is nothing more of Allison and there never was much. Joe Hawley is gone, top and root. Platt shuffles along. Quay has ceased to contend for himself. Hanna is playing senator. Indiana has nobody. Illinois has one strong man in Robert Hutt, but Illinois does not know it. Think of the state of Lincoln and Douglas coming to the present complexion of Illinois! Now farther out West beyond Iowa, where the anti-Roosevelt senators, etc., are trying to break up the president, the voters are about all for him. New York is more for Roosevelt than ever; that is plain from Dave Hill's gibe at him. Hill knows his master."

"Perhaps Roosevelt disturbed the old corruptionist senators?"

"Certainly he did. They were ready for Dolliver of Iowa, or somebody who would keep the McKinley ball of yarn running. It was the McKinley-Hanna-Allison influence which put Henderson in as speaker and ran out Tom Reed. Ever since McKinley's death congress has been against Roosevelt. The fulsome adulations of McKinley never break out at Roosevelt's name in congress. The jackals perceived the mastiff and knew those white teeth. As Roosevelt was nominated at Philadelphia in spite of Hanna, Allison, everybody, by a popular pressure, so the idea is to restore the party's perquisites by putting him down. He is the one quantity not in the woodpile. The old senate is on its last legs. The next congress may be motley opposition, but that will dispose of the speaker's clique. Can you name me a rising man in that senate? They are all sinking men."

"Is the house any better?"

"It has twice whipped the speaker and his small trio. Henderson & Co. opposed Roosevelt till they had to come in or risk a fight with him. By that time the indecision of Henderson had trained a Republican minority to break his wand. But the issue only shows a want of principle; Democrats voting for more agricultural protection; Republicans voting to smash the committee on rules. However, the next senators will come out of the house."

"Do you know Littlefield?"

"He is a scatterer and an orator. He is like Senator Spooner, who requires to make a speech to ascertain his own position.

"Is Blaine ever to have a monument?"

"I don't know. His widow, who is probably 75 years old, is weak now in the head. She has all to do with the subject, and is perhaps to old to take it up. She was, however, a stout specimen of the Puritan dame. The way she warmed Ben Bristow and Ben Harrison to their faces was a caution."

"I forget about the Harrison warming."

"She wanted her son-in-law, Coppinger, listed higher in the regular army, and went to see Harrison about it. He paraded himself to show that he couldn't do it. She ridiculed his 'couldn't,' told him it was his heart and not the law which operated against a courtesy he owed Mr. Blaine. Blaine said that Harrison was legally right. But Cleveland did the very thing Mrs. Blaine asked afterward and Harrison continued his stinginess of conscience."

"What did Blaine's estate foot up?"

"Above $600,000, of which over $300,000 was for coal lands descended from his wife's father at the spot where he was born. The two Washington residences of Blaine sold for $220,000. He had also a house at Bar Harbor and one in Augusta. Although Blaine was a bright public man his public life injured his estate. He would have become a very rich man but for politics. Running for the presidency about ruined him."

"Blaine then left a better estate than Conkling?"

"I think so. Conkling went to the head of the Maine delegation the night before Garfield was nominated, and asked for a private interview, which was accorded by Joseph Manley. Conkling said that it was well known that he was opposed to Blaine. 'But,' said he, 'this convention wants either Blaine or Grant and not some man who is nobody's leader. I am in favor of Blaine as against any such lax quantity, and his friends ought to adhere to him.' Conkling said he would take the stump for Blaine. But Manley knew Conkling's design. It was to keep Blaine solid, so Grant could be nominated next morning, and it failed. The Blaine men nominated Garfield."

"Was that not a mistake?"

"No. Things have to cure themselves. Blaine nominated, would have been defeated by Grant. Grant nominated would have been defeated, too. Blaine's men nominated both Garfield and Harrison."

"Is the prohibition law popular in Maine?"

"It stands well. And yet a large proportion of Maine's delegation needs the Maine law. The state has had an unusual complement of wine bibbers."

The St. Louis exhibition affords a strange view of congressional corruption. A parcel of senators and members of both parties voted $5,000,000 to it, and then lost their seats. McKinley appointed about all of them commissioners to the exhibition at $5000 a year, led by Tom. Carter. The exhibition is now postponed at least till 1904. Meantime the commissioners will draw $20,000 salary apiece and big money expenses. Let us weep some more!

Statuary is attracting attention as a convenient occasion to resent their subjects. Freddy the Great is discovered to have been a king. So were Rochambeau and Lafayette counts and marquises. Everybody was something. Let us declare for nobody, which is ourself. If we cannot contribute to statuary let us deface it.

At the Smithsonian institute is a Mr. Secretary Langley, the high muck-a-muck who prepares catch questions for banquet occasions. At one recently he asked: "How many equestian statues are in the world." He answered himself, some eighty. At the table was Samuel Kauffman, who had for twenty years been visiting, collecting the pictures of and editing equestrian statuary. He corrected the professor, and said there were about 300 equestrian statues in the world, and that forty or more were in America; but Germany, animated by the war of 1870, had the most.

I asked him where the forty American statues were, as I had counted some thirty. He said that in New England were Washington and Israel Putnam, the latter at Brooklyn, Conn. In New York were Washington and Bolivar, and in Brooklyn Grant and soon to be Gen. Slocum. In Philadelphia were six, Washington, Grant, McClellan, Reynolds, Meade, Joan of Arc. At Gettysburg were Meade, Slocum, Hancock, Reynolds. Jackson was in Washington, Nashville and New Orleans. In Richmond were Washington and Lee. In Chicago were Grant and Logan. One was in Alleghany City, a Washington. In Washington City were, besides the Jackson, equestrian statues of Washington, Scott, McPherson, Logan, Greene, Hancock, Thomas; and soon to be Sherman, Sheridan, Grant, McClellan. In Iowa were six, four around a war monument, two in smaller towns. Here were forty-one.

Had the statues in the Library of Congress been paraded before the court if individual opinion, each of them would have caused a fight. Over Gibbon the clergy would have howled. By the dictum of two men, Mr. Spotford, the liberal librarian, and Gen. Casey of the engineers, we received without the interference of congress, but by the economy over general appropriation, such civil figures as Herodotus, Shakespeare, Fulton, Professor Henry, Beethoven, St. Paul, Homer, Michael Angelo, and busts of Hawthorne, Macaulay, Gothe, Franklin. The statuary of the capitol is becoming important. We require a national gallery of art.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT

New York World: The pope's desire to "close his eyes on universal peace" offers an affecting contrast to the popular conception of a "strenuous life."

Portland Oregonian: It is said the Presbyterian general assembly had great provocation to put into its new creed an additional clause on the future punishment of overcoat, hat and umbrella thieves.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: It is believed that the Presbyterians have finally succeeded in reforming their articles of faith to a point where they are satisfactory alike to the liberals and conservatives.

Brooklyn Eagle: Presbyterian babies now know that they will not be damned—the general assembly has said so. The little tootsie wootsies of other denominations must get along the best they can, for, poor things, they have no general assembly. Still they have plenty of milk they may weather the want of creeds. Let us hope so.

Chicago Chronicle: We are once more confronted with a question of the greatest difficulty and of the highest importance. Here is Rev. Mr. Figg, of Papillion, Neb., claiming that he is the reincarnation of the Prophet Elijah and that all others are base imitators. Yet, as everyone knows, our distinguished and eloquent fellow citizen, Rev. Mr. Dowie, maintains that he alone is Elijah I, and that anyone who disputes it is anthema marantha. In such a case what can the prudent person do? Is it not a situation which justifies a departure for the woods with all speed possible?

Springfield Republican: Certain clergymen have been drawing portentious morals in their sermons from the St. Pierre disaster, some of which seem curiously out of date in the twentieth century. The moral that is most quickly accepted and heeded nowadays is the opportunity for prompt and liberal help. The strong points of civilization never appear to better advantage than in the speed and efficiency with which relief can be sent to a population stricken with such a disaster as this or the Galveston storm. And if the world forgets the sufferer quickly, in the urgent clamor of new responsibilities, it at least responds generously while its sympathies are acutely touched.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Alexander City, Ala., a place of 1,500 inhabitants, was wiped away by fire, the loss reaching at least $750,000, which the insurance will not begin to cover. The flames began in the foundry and machine works, and the long period of hot, dry weather had well prepared the buildings of the little city for the rapid spread of the flames.

Gen. Leonard Wood and his staff were given a dinner at the Hotel Somerset, Boston, Thursday evening by about forty of Boston's representative citizens. The tables were arranged in the form of the letter "H," in recognition of the fact that Gen. Wood is a Harvard man, President Eliot, of Harvard, presided.

The street cars at Sheboygan are again in motion, the force of motormen and conductors returning to work Thursday at a slight advance in wages. The strikers gained nothing, but the company did not treat with them except as individuals. Two-thirds of them were re-instated.

Jockey Donegan was killed in the first race at the fair grounds, St. Louis, Friday, his skull being crushed in a collision between his mount and another horse. The horses Pettijohn and Balzac collided, throwing their jockeys, Donegan and B. Matthews. Pettijohn's hoof struck Donegan's skull, crushing it. The jockey died soon after being taken from the track. Matthews was badly hurt.

You Will Be Happy If You Are Well.

Paine's Celery Compound

Bestows That Health and Vigor That Makes Living a Pleasure.

If you are sick and out-of-sorts in June, it is in your power to make yourself healthy, strong, and happy.

There is not the slightest reason why you should go through the hot summer weather feeling sickly, miserable, languid, and melancholic. To be well and strong, means happiness and joy, and this is the season when you should be bright, hearty, and gladsome.

If you are sleepless, rheumatic, neuralgic, dyspeptic, or have the shadows of disease hovering over you; if you are not as bright, energetic, and strong as you were some weeks ago, the use of Paine's Celery Compound will tone up and fortify your whole system, cleanse the blood, correct digestion, sharpen the appetite, and conduce to restful sleep. Thousands once in a half dead condition owe their present good health to the use of Paine's Celery Compound. Mr. William S. Gibson, of Pleasureville, Ky., who, through sickness and suffering, was brought near the dark grave, writes as follows, regarding his marvelous coure:

"I have been broken down in health and strength, nervous system shattered, kidneys out of order, had nervous and trembling spells off and on for the last ten years. I have taken three bottles of your Paine's Celery Compound and all of the above-mentioned troubles have left me, and I can now do a good day's work. I go about by business all day long and it don't worry me, and I now feel better than I have in ten years. I have a good appetite, and can eat and get around on foot as active as when I was a boy. My age is 65 years."

CONSPIRACY

Charged Against Irish Leaders In Tenant Troubles.

Dublin, June 14.—At the instance of Lord De Freyne a writ has been issued against a large number of members of the Irish parliamentary party on the charge of conspiracy in connection with the tenant troubles on the De Freyne estate, Roscommon county. Among the defendants are John Redmond, John Dillon, W. J. O'Brien, J. G. Swift, MacNeill, Connor O'Kelly, and the members of the standing committee of the United Irish league, which includes Michael Davitt and a number of the former members of parliament.

The Freemans' Journal is also a defendant.

Lord De Freyne seeks an injunction and damages.

Forty farms on Lord De Freyne's estate were sold by the sheriff Feb. 19 of the present year, the tenants having refused to pay rents. A large number of other "clearance sales" were then pending as the result of the "no rent campaign" at that time being carried on by the United Irish league and it was said that many hundreds of other tenants were to be proceeded against.

John Redmond at that time said the country thereabouts was alive with police, and that fifteen representative men of the district had been imprisoned merely for taking part in the meetings of a peaceable nature. He attributed all the trouble to the government's refusal to permit legislation giving power to the government to buy out the Irish landlords and thus restore the land to the Irish people.

Altogether thirty writs have been issued in the De Freyne action. The action is really taken by the landlords association, and it is the beginning of a struggle of the organized landlords against the United Irish league which is feared to be severe and far reaching as the landlords have ample backing.

John Redmond, in an interview in the house of commons last night, frankly admitted that as the biggest move the landlords ,with the support of Dublin castle, had yet undertaken against the Irish national government. He said he regarded the De Freyne action as evidence of recognition of the fact that the attempt of Mr. Wyndham, the chief secretary of Ireland, to suppress the United Irish league, had failed and that in his mind there was no doubt that Dublin castle was an active ally in the prosecution. Mr. Redmond was equally confident of the issue. He said:

"The Irish leaders may be imprisoned for indefinite periods and their property may be attached, yet ultimately the Irish cause will triumph."

Col. Saunderson, a Conservative member of the house of commons, and lord lieutenant of county Calvin, in an interview on the subject, said:

"Yes, an organized attack must be met by organized action, and the Irish landlords have taken such action. The came course will be followed wherever they are attacked by the league. I am happy to say that there are sufficient funds behind the landlords to fight any battles which may arise."

William Redmond, James O'Kelly, Patrick O'Brien, John Hayden, Sir Thomas Esmonde, Patrick McHugh and some of the best known priests in Ireland are also among the defendants in the action of Lord De Freyne.

Next Sunday, June 15, Will Be the First Time.

The Pennsylvania special will leave Chicago 12 noon, going through to Pittsburg, 10:20 p. m., 468 miles, without stopping for passengers, reaching Philadelphia 6:56 a. m., New York, Twenty-third street station, 9 a. m., Eastern time. The annual convention of the State Federation of Labor, just clased at Rochester, was certainly one of the most successful in the history of the union labor movement in this state.

Eighty-two unions were represented. There were 162 delegates. Rochester entertained the convention in a manner that would do credit to a much larger city.

Duluth was very much in evidence in this banner convention. W. E. McEwen, of this city, was re-elected secretary and treasurer. William Tunnell was assistant secretary of the convention, and there was at least one Duluth delegate on every committee appointed during the session.

The Duluth delegation also swung the next convention over to Little Falls.

President M. E. Neary, in his annual address, said:

"Until the past two or three years the work of the federation, outside of looking out for legislation, was confined to organizing the wage eaners of three or four of the principal cities of the state. But our experience taught us that to be successful we must gather under our banner every wage earner in the state. With the motto, 'Toilers Organize,' as our battle cry, we have progressed without interruption, surmounting obstacles of capitalism, adverse legislation and prejudice, sounding no call of retreat, but marching on with a solid front for the accomplishment of our aims. We are today represented in no less than eighteen towns and cities, comprising 200 unions, with a membership of over 25,000."

Professor W. P. Schilling, of Scranton, Pa., formerly a prominent musician of Duluth, will tomorrow conduct a public concert in Scranton for the benefit of the striking coal miners of that district.

* * *

The brickmakers of Galesburg, Ill., have settled their trouble with the Purvington Manufacturing company. The union recently asked local unions to use influence against having any of the Galesburg vitrified brick put down on Duluth streets during the trouble.

* * *

Six new unions are being organized over in West Superior by the hustlers of the Trades and Labor assembly.

* * *

The Superior central organization has devised a new method of getting delegates to attend to their duties more regularly. It was decided recently to publish the names of all delegates absent from meetings without sufficient excuse.

* * *

A widespread movement to consolidate the marine labor interests of the great lakes will be stared in Chicago tomorrow, when a marine labor council will be formed. The new council will include over 2000 workers at Chicago and South Chicago. Grand President D. J. Keefe of the International Longshoremen's union of America, prominent in promotion of the new mvement, is expected from New York to preside at tomorrow's meeting.

The new movement means a marine council in every port of importance on the lakes, the whole to include fully 25,000 men.

The state convention pledged its moral support to an effort that is being made to establish a home for servant girls in Minneapolis.

* * *

The quarrymen of Minnesota will shortly be organized under the auspices of the state federation.

* * *

A special meeting of the Building Trades' council will be held at 31 West Superior street tomorrow afternoon.

* * *

A local lumber company discharged three of its teamsters this week because they joined the Teamsters' union. J. W. Richardson, of the Federated Trades' assembly, talked the matter over with the mill officers and the men were reinstated.

* * *

Messrs. McKelvey and A. J. McCumber attended the meeting of the assembly last evening as delegates from the Cooks' and Waiters' union.

* * *

The new delegates from the assembly to the Building Trades' council are: Leo Ewald, of the Machinists' union, and Tim O'Flaherty, of the Typographical union.

* * *

Arthur A. Fider, of the Bookbinders' union, formally resigned his position as financial secretary of the Trades' assembly last evening. The vacancy will be filled at the next meeting.

LABOR NOTES.

San Francisco paper box makers organized.

Cincinnati structural iron workers struck last week.

Canadian unionists are making a strong fight for postal savings banks.

San Francisco contractors and carpenters are seeking a means of settlement.

Birmingham (Ala.) building trades may amalgamate into a central organization.

Samuel Gompers decided in the Cincinnati brewery strike that each craft should adhere to its own union.

The Sperry Flour company of Los Angeles, Cal., increased its laborers' salaries 20 per cent. It means $8,000 more in wages.

Typographical union No. 6, of New York, will hold memorial services in honor of the late Congressman Amos J. Cummings on June 22.

The Edgar Thompson Steel works, at Braddock, Pa., broke its own best world's record last month, by turning out the enormous aggregate of 51,480 tons of finished steel rails.

The Eight-Hour league of America will hold an important national convention in Menneapolis Sept. 22 to 26. Employes and employers both have been invited to attend the meetings.

W. Mulock, ministr of labor, has introduced a bill to prevent strikes on the Canadian railways. The measure provides for settlement by arbitration. The law applies to electric as well as to steam railways.

The brickmakers' and carpenters' strike at Kalamazoo, Mich., has been settled. The men win on an eight-hour day at the old scale of 45 cents an hour for nine hours. They asked for eight hours at 50 cents an hour.

Cigarmakers at Toledo, Ohio, have struck for an increase in wages. The demand is for an increase of $1 per thousand on clear and seed mold work, and the same amount of advance on clear Havana work. They are winning.

After a conference between the striking carpenters at Youngstown, Ohio, and the Builders' exchange, the strike was declared off. Under the settlement outside carpenters will work eight hours a day at $2.75, and shopmen will work nine hours at $3 a day.

The strike of the union iron molders at Spokane, Wash., all of whom walked out, has been settled, and the men returned to work. The employers conceded the demand for a nine-hour day, with wages at $3.50, the same as previously paid for ten hours.

Judge Mackey, of Zanesville, Ohio, recently gave a decision of interest to union men. The decision permits strikers to persuade, to assemble and to picket, but none of these or other acts of the strikers must partake of the nature of violence or intimidation.

A committee has been chosen to look into the mater of organizing a new party to be supported by organized labor. The idea originated with President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor. Gompers suggests the idea of abandoning the two old parties, but makes no recommendations.

The employes of the Southern railroad shops sent a request to General Manager Murphy of the road, in which they ask that their wages be increased, or rather, the 15 per cent cut which was made by the company five years ago be restored. A 5 per cent increase was granted by the company, but this is unsatisfactory to the employes.

Employes of the Chicago City railway affiliated with the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes are preparing to ask the company for an agreement similar to that entered into by President John M. Roach and employes of the Union Traction company.

Mayor Hayes of Baltimore has signed the ordinance requiring that only competent and first-class workmen shall be employed on city contract work. The pen which he used to affix his name to the bill was sent to James H. Sullivan, business agent of the Baltimore Federation of Building Trades.

The joint grievance committee of the conductors and trainmen on the Grand Canadian Trunk system concluded their conference with Manager McGuigan. The company has consented to advance the wages of the men. In some cases the advance is as high as 50 per cent. The schedule will not be announced until the committee reports the result of the conference to their unions.

The committee appointed by Kings county, N. Y., district of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners to appeal to the organized members of the craft for subscriptions to vindicate the general secretary-treasurer of the craft, P. J. McGuire, before the delegates to the coming biennial convention of the trade in Atlanta, report that the appeal is meeting with satisfactory success.

The Western Labor union, which was organized on sectional lines, has changed its name and will hence .orbe known as the American Labor union. The change in the name is significant, for the Western body now comes out openly for political action on socialistic lines, and as an open enemy of the American Federation of Labor. The radical change taken a few days ago by the convention in Denver is due in a large measure to the action of Eugene V. Debs. Mr. Debt attended the convention, not as a delegate, but as a visitor, and was granted the privilege of the iloor to address the delegates. He made one of his eloquent speeches in which he bitterly attacked the American Federation of Labor and its officers and charged that they had sold out to the Republican party. He said that the recent so-called peace conference in New York was held in the interests of Senator Hanna, and charged that Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and other national leaders were betraying the interests of labor to curry favor with capitalists.

It was decided at the convention to send organizers through the Eastern country to induce unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor to desert and join the new organization with the comprehensive title. While there can be no correct comparison between the American Labor union and the American Federation of Labor, the printed statements of each furnish some idea of their relative importance in the labor world. The income of the Western Labor union for the past year was $4800 for per capita tax. This tax amounts to 10 cents per member per month, which, averaged for the year, shows a membership of 4000. Allowing that the membership has increased largely during the past few months, it cannot have over 10,000 members today, or it would not have had any a year ago, according to its published statement. The entire yearly income of the Western Labor union from all sources was $12,000. The income of the American Federation of Labor for a like period was $131,000, and the amount of per capita tax paid into that body from national and international unions is but one-third of a cent per member per month. At the end of last April 1,100,000 members were paying per capita tax into the American Federation of Labor, and it is estimated that at least 20 per cent more might be added from the fact that many unions do not pay on their full membership. In addition there are 370 city central bodies affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and as most of them have unattached unions it can be seen that the membership of the American Federation of Labor is much larger than is shown in the amount of per capita tax paid. Although it was generally supposed that the Western Federation of Miners was a part of the Western Labor union. Mr. Kidd says that from the information he received while in Denver the miners are not affiliated, although working in harmony and in sympathy with the other organizations. President Daniel McDonald of the American Labor union is said to be a member in good standing of the Iron Molders' union, which is a part of the American Federation of Labor, and Roady Kenehan, a member of the executive board of the American Labor union, is a member of the Horseshoers' union, also affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

EASY TO GET A MAN

But to Keep Him Is a More Difficult Problem.

Matrimonial Philosophy of a Woman Four Times Married.

Three of Her Husbands Were In Millionaire Class.

New York, June 13.—"To get a man is easy, but to keep him you have to be not one woman in a hundred, but a hundred women in one, especially if the man has money.

"The only way to manage a man is by flattery. Flattery can do anything.

"A woman can marry practically any man she chooses. That is, if she cares to marry. If I had my life to live over again I would not marry again.

"If a woman attracts men, a husband is not necessary to her. He is rather a detriment than otherwise. A husband is a good thing for an ugly woman because she generally knows how to manage him, for an ugly woman is generally clever. She has to be.

"Still, if a woman wants to marry a man, she can do it. To accomplish this she must flatter him. Even if he is the homeliest, most insignificant creature in the world, she must say to him: 'You are the sweetest, grandest, handsomest man I ever met.' She cannot lay it on too thick. They always come back for more.

"Of course, she must not show her hand. She must not let him know that she is in love with him. A woman can appreciate you all the more for not being in love with you. Her judgment is less blased."

Thus Mrs. Juliet Letitia Chilton Tuttle-Wright-Clarke epigrammatically sums her matrimonial experiences.

She has had four husbands and three have been millionaires. Her latest, A. W. Clarke, has strayed or been stolen. She was married to him last March. When he vanished she found a note from him saying that he had another wife in England.

Mrs. Clarke says that, as her husband is not a man of temperate habits, she does not know whether or not to accept his story of domestic complications. If it be true, of course, she wishes to have her marriage annulled, but she prefers to believe that Mr. Clarke is mentally unsound, in which event, she says, she will take him back and care for him.

To her first husband, President Tuttle of the First National bank of Pittsburg, she was married when she was 16.

"It was about this marriage that I hesitated least," says Mrs. Clarke. "My people married me to Mr. Tuttle. They did not give me time to think whether I wanted him or not."

The second husband was Robert C. Wright, of Philadelphia, a millionaire and the wealthiest of the four.

"I was in love with Bob," she frankly said. "I have only loved two men in my life."

Mrs. Clarke is 30.

"I met him in Newport. He was very young, and had just come into his money. It was the kind of a man that money ruins. If he could have been kept on an allowance all his life I might probably have been happy with him to this day. But he had so much money he could not spend it himself, and his friends helped him. They got him interested in a hundred schemes and—well, I didn't put up with much in those days.

"My third husband was John W. Havens. I don't know exactly why I married him. Perhaps for sentimental reasons. He was a school boy lover of mine. I was not at all in love with him at the time I married him, though. After two years I got a divorce from him. Sometimes I wonder if I have ever been to blame in these things.

"Then I met Mr. Clarke. He was handsome, but the black sheep of his family, a vey good family in Belfast, Ireland. I picked him up out of the gutter, and from doing so much for him, I suppose, grew to love him. We were married, and I bought him a partnership in a New York firm. Now he has gone his way.

"Men value women as thev do race horses, by what they cost them. If a man has a race horse that cost him a hundred thousand dollars, you may be pretty sure that horse gets the best oats, the best hay, the softest bed, and his master does not think anything of the price because the horse cost him a hundred thousand. It's the same with women. Men do not love a woman because she is sweet, or good, or because she is a lady.

"If I had only been as wise years ago as I am now I might have been a wealthy woman. Of course, I have some money now, but my second husband, Mr. Wright, was many times a millionaire. I had the misfortune to be in love with him, and so did not ask him to make over his property to me before the ceremony. A woman should always do that, because usually a man will do what she likes then. If he will not, he is not worth having. After marriage he always finds some excuse not to do as she wishes."

Mrs. Clarke was in her beautifully furnished apartment at No. 126 West Thirty-sixth street, when talking to the Post-Dispatch representative.

"I moved here on account of Mr. Clarke's peculiarities. He was very intemperate. When I lived on Fifth avenue he got into a disturbance with the elevator boy nearly every night and sometimes he roused the house. Here he had to climb four pairs of stairs, and it sobered him up a little.

"I suppose," she added pensively, "after all this notoriety he has brought upon me, proposals of marriage will begin to shower in as they did after each one of my divorces. Sometimes I have received as many as a hundred a day.

"They don't all ask me to marry them outright. They begin by saying how much they sympathize with me in my troubles, and assure me that no one with my face could have to front adversity long.

"Most of them finish by saying that there is at least one person in the world that appreciates me. And the name follows.

"If I divorce Mr. Clarke, will I marry again? How do I know? I won't say no, for I might change my mind. But I have no particular man in mind at present."

"Is there a waiting list?"

Mrs. Clarke laughed heartily. "Well, no, not exactly."

Then she added more seriously: "I think if I were to marry now I would be less exacting than in my earlier married life. Then I was like most other women. I thought it was only necessary to manage, to cajole a man until I married him. Afterward it seemed to be too much bother.

"But if a woman wants to hold a man nowadays, she has to take infinite pains, have infinite patience. Especially if he has money and lives in New York. As I said before, she must be not one woman in a hundred—for that isn't adequate—but a hundred women in one.

"And these one hundred women must all be pretty and amiable and clever.

"Do I believe in love? So much that I don't think it would be possible to live without, but I don't believe loving or being loved makes people happy. Generally, you know, one either feels too little or too much. The last is the most painful. To an excitable nature it means the keenest misery."

DARK DAYS IN DULUTH'S HISTORY

Judge J. R. Carey Recounts the City's Struggle Against Bankruptcy and Its Subsequent Regeneration.

In response to a request for information received through A. R. Macfarlane, Judge John R. Carey has compiled an interesting statement of the manner in which the city of Duluth, in its darkest days, made an adjustment of its financial difficulties that was unique. Judge Carey, as an old resident and student of history, is especially qualified to tell the tale, and his story will be read with great interest. It is as follows:

"In 1870 the city of Duluth was granted a city charter by the legislature of the state. In August of that year the first railroad, the Lake Superior & Mississippi railroad, was completed from St. Paul to Duluth. For about four years the city flourished and the population increased. After 1873, for a period of about eight years, the reverse of prosperous conditions prevailed. In the meantime, up to 1877, the bonded and floating debt of the city increased far beyond the ability of the people to meet the current running expenses, let alone even the interest on its bonds. City and even county orders brought less than 50 per cent of their face value, and the city had to default in the payment of interest on its bonded debt.

"The outlook was dark and discouraging for the people of the city. The opinion was unanimous (even many of its bondholders concurring) that the city could not hope to pay its debts. It was believed by all that if a compromise could be effected with its bondholders, it would save the people of the city great humiliation and the city as a corporation from practical bankruptcy.

"In 1877 the total indebtedness of the city was over $597,000, and the total assessed valuation of the real and personal property in the city was only $529,000. A majority of the bondholders and other creditors of the city were aware of its financial condition, and many of them were willing to make a liberal compromise with the city and scale down their claims and take new bonds, if all would or could be induced to do the same. So a scheme was matured whereby those willing to compromise could do so legally, and where those not so willing might be mildly induced to do so.

"The best of the legal talent of the city devised a scheme to meet the emergency. It was known that one or two other cities of the United States in like circumstances had by legislative acts effected reasonable compromises with their creditors. Two acts were framed and passed by our legislature and approved by the governor in February, 1877, as special acts and known as chapter 235 and chapter 28 of the special laws of 1877. Under chapter 235 the basic business and resident parts of the city were cut out and incorporated as a village, with rights and powers as provided in the act. Under chapter 28 what remained of the fractured city was remodeled and incorporated into a new city of Duluth, with limited powers and privileges.

"During the subsequent eight or ten years the city practically existed only in name. When any city election was held none of the city officers elected qualified or took office except the city clerk and assessor.

"Periodically under the village act, during the succeeding eight years, city bonds and other evidences of indebtedness against the city were voluntarily surrendered, and new village bonds were issued under the supervision of Hon. O. P. Stearns, who was then judge of our district court, as provided in said act.

"As each batch of bonds and other evidences of indebtedness were surrendered and village bonds issued, a slice or section of the dead city was detached therefrom and added to the village under a decree of the court.

"In 1885 there was yet outstanding of the city bonds and other evidences of indebtedness which existed at the time of the passage of the village act the sum of $105,444, and at that time and of that amount the sum of $73,207 of the old city indebtedness was surrendered and village bonds issued. This left $32,136 of the old city indebtedness outstanding, and in October of that year the then remaining part of the old city was added to the village by the last decree of the court.

"The village of Duulth then continued as the governing body of call of the territory embraced in the old city, until our new city charter was given us by act of legislature of March, 1887.

"According to the records and files in our district court there was surrendered and cancelled up to October, 1885, indebtedness of the city under the village act to the total sum of $564,991, and I am informed by our present city treasurer that the total of the village bonds issued in the refunding of the old city debt was $138,250.

"That scheme was the salvation of the city. Many of its creditors aided in maturing and carrying out the plan. Some of them were not so lenient and well-disposed, suits were threatened, but it was soon found that the plan was feasible, valid and constitutional, and thus we succeeded, through the voluntary and unremunerated efforts of Judge Stearns, Judge Ensign, L. Mendenhall and others of the legal talent of our city, in escaping financial ruin.

"The suggestion was made by many of the citizens that if there was no other way out of our trouble we would all move our portable property and dwellings out side of the then corporate limits of the city, say to Oneota and where West Duluth is located, and let our creditors take what was left. But the success of the scheme infused new life into the people of the city, and into its friends outside, so that in 1880 the city, or rather then the village, started out with renewed vigor and prosperity.

C of the recruits for the First Nebraska volunteer infantry, but was informed by the commander of that company, Capt. Julian N. Killian, that he did not have the authority to enlist him, but would allow him to go with his company to Manila, where, he said, he would try to enlist him in the regiment. Crum worked in the company kitchen of Company C during the time the company remained at Honolulu, and won the respect of the officers and the friendship of the men. During the month of November, 1898, the United States transport Hancock returned to Honolulu and the recruits embarked for Manila. Crum joined the troops and thus arrived in Manila about Dec. 1, 1898. Upon his arrival at Manila Crum determinde to enlist in Company B, First North Dakota volunteer infantry, as that company was from his home town, Fargo.

He was informed by Capt. E. C. Geary, Jr., that he would try to enlist him as soon as there was a vacancy, which he thought would soon occur. In the meantime he found employment at Manila until hostilities opened, on the night of Feb. 4, 1899, whereupon he attached himself to Company B, First North Dakota, was furnished equipments by Capt. Geary and was allowed to do all the duties of a soldier during the entire time he remained with the company. He participated in every battle in which the regiment took part and made a splendid record, winning high praise from his officials.

When there was a lull in the engagements Crum again applied for admission to Company B. Capt. Geary gave him a letter, in which he commended his excellent work on the battlefield and spoke in high terms of his courage. This he presented to the mustering officer of the First division, but again his youth was against him—the officer refused to enlist him.

Crum then wrote to his grandfather, in California, for consent to his enlistment. On March 28, 1899, he determined to join the First Nebraska regiment, which was then in Gen. Hale's brigade, on the north line, and turned in all of his equipments to Quartermaster Sergt. Foster of Company B, obtained a pass to Manila and traveled as far as he could on the train, and then walked to the position occupied by the First Nebraska regiment, near Marilao, and attached himself to Company E. On the morning of March 29 he obtained equipment from a member of the company, Bert Gillom, who was sick. The second lieutenant, Sherman A. White, commanding Company E, allowed him to do duty, and he remained with the company and participated creditably in all engagements.

In April, 1899, while the Nebraska regiment was camped near Malolos, P. L., Lieut. White took Crum to the headquarters of Gen. MacArthur and endeavored to have him enlisted, but was informed that no more enlistments were to be received for the volunteers. Shortly after this Crum received permission from his grandfather to enlist, but it came too late for use.

When Company E of the Nebraska regiment was ordered to San Pedro Macati, Crum went, but was taken ill and had to return to barracks, where he remained until the regiment was ordered back to Manila. Crum went with the company to Manila, and they were shortly mustered out and embarked on the United States transport Hancock for California.

They left Manila about July 1, 1899, arriving at San Francisco early in August. Just one year had Crum served his country and served it well, although he was not authorized by the government to carry arms of wear the uniform of Uncle Sam.

Gen. Wood Says Expenditure For Cuba Was Justified.

Boston, June 14.—During his visit to this city Gen. Leonard Wood, former governor general of Cuba, expressed himself in no uncertain terms regarding the alleged irregularity in the expenditure of Cuban government funds in the interest of reciprocity. He declared that, acting as trustee for the island, he had spent the money to good purposes, and had done simply what any good administrator would do in like circumstances.

Of the situation in Cuba, Gen. Wood said: "There is nothing in connection with my administration of Cuban affairs that I wish to cover up. Talk of investigation is welcome to me. Every expenditure that was made was free and above board.

"So far as I can see there was nothing new brought out by the testimony of Mr. Thurber. It perhaps accentuated a little the needs of Cuba as regards reciprocity with this country.

"I was acting as a trustee for Cuba. I simply used Mr. Thurber's mailing list as the best means of distributing the literature on reciprocity.

"I took it upon myself to place the facts before the people of the United States as I saw them. There seemed to be no one else to undertake the task.

"What I did I considered best for the industrial salvation of the island. I dealt with Mr. Thurber simply as a bureau of information, and through him I distributed the information I wanted to place before the American people.

"My position was identical with that of the trustee of an estate who finds it incumbent to refute unjust claims upon the estate upon which he is called to administer. Any man would be false to his trust who did not do all in his power to contest such claims, and that is all I did."

LORE OF FISH BAIT

A Subject of Deep Interest To the Angler —Caprices of the Fishes and Their Appetites.

Anybody can catch fish when they are biting. The power of the true-born angler is shown in his ability to catch them —some of them—whether they are biting or not, says the New York Sun.

To do this he must know the characteristics of the fish, the characteristics of the stream and the weather and the characteristics of bait. To know bait, which carries with it the knowledge of how and when to use bait, almost makes the angler.

Nobody ever gets any nearer to an understanding of the whims of fish than to know that the whims exist. It is within the experience of every rodman that on one day bass will break their necks for minnows and on the next day the same bass in the same pools will not look at minnows, but there never lived an ichthyologist wise enough to do more than guess why this is so.

The true-born angler demonstrates his skill by keeping his mouth shut, finding out what the fish want and raking them in, while imitation anglers above and below him are perspiring, swearing and getting nothing. And let no fellow imbue his mind with the brown stained pages of Walton and imagine that fishing is all calm philosophy, contemplation and absorption of the beauties of animate and inanimate nature. There is a lot of hard work and swearing in it—almost as much swearing as in golf.

The true-born angler will know, for instance, that there are certain seasons in which certain baits are the best; he will know that there are certain seasons in which certain baits are of no use at all. Past years have taught him that it is along in the heat of August, when the fish are lying deep, that the frog is most fatal to the bass; that early in spring single worms will often prove effective when all else is worthless, that the minnow which swims a yard or two deep is of finer flesh and better flavor and more vivacity and vigor than the up-swimming minnow and therefore a better lure; but when he has learned these things he is only completing his apprenticeship.

The true-born angler appreciates and understands these baits and knows how and where to get them, but he must also know baits which it is wise to substitute for them; he must be able in a manner to create or invent baits.

Often he evolves something which proves killing when every known lure fails. Of this order was the first man who thought to use a strip of white bacon fat simulating a minnow.

Doubtless on that day everything had failed him; doubtless he reasoned that as bacon fat was white it might be made to look like a small fish when traveling through the water, doubtless he reasoned that as deer would go for miles through the woods to lick salty earth, fish also sometimes need, or would like, a taste of salt. The result of this reasoning was a full basket of green or black beauties and information generously transmitted to his rivals.

Of this order, too, was the inventor of the metal spoon, which whirls through the water and decoys swimmers to their ruin. Doubtless he began with a piece of tin, and a thousand artificial lures have grown out of his experiment.

For it is established that there are days when bass will not look at any sort of food whatever and will strike only at deceiving metal. They will even disdain the metal is a bit of genuine food be attached to it.

Putting aside all the manufactured deceptions with which fish are taken, there are some men who know natural baits thoroughly, and these men know more than is between the covers of any book or ever will be, because there are a great variety of living things which bass and trout like, and to be acquainted with these things is to have wide learnings of insects and small creatures which live in and out of the water.

A man may put in two months of a year in acquiring mastery of the great division of grasshoppers and as the end be far from complete. Many people go upon the streams with expensive tackle who have no knowledge of how valuable the grasshoppers are, much less of how and where to catch them, what kinds to catch and how to impale them.

Green frogs are said to be better than brown, which is probably pure faddism, but it is certain that brown grasshoppers are better than green and the reason of it is that green grasshoppers when they flutter upon the water do not attract it took much like leaves and so are little apt to attract the fish unless it be close enough to distinguish the legs and wings.

Above price is the fat grasshopper an inch and a half long which has a dull brown back and yellowish belly, with reddish spots showing when its wings open. More than once the credit of fame of the true-born angler has been rescued from peril by two or three of these goodsends casting under the straw hut after a breathless chase in a nearby meadow.

They were hooked securely just back of the wings and let down gently from some bluff above a dark pool, the angler meanwhile securely hidden, and as they touched the water and their pinions buzzed there came a savage upward rush from far below and the cleft water foamed and the loud reel sang its saga of war. In late July, when the heat plunges downward shafts and the cicada drones on the bark, in those two first golden weeks of August, the month which the French Republicans called Fricidor, the grasshopper's the thing.

There is the field mouse now. On days when all is lost save honor the field mouse will decoy the oldest, biggest and wisest of bass or trout because it is delicious, attracts the eyes of every denizen of the pool from the turtle under the decayed log on the bottom to the little one now swimming close to the bank, and is easily overtaken.

Not many field mice fall to the lot of bass or trout and they value them accordingly. This little animal may be found any captured by him who knows how and values it according to its merit.

It lives close by a fence, or near the roots of some old tree. In going down the corn rows, if the grass be specially thick and tangled by a stalk, it will be well to examine it.

When the mouse is started it will show much less activity than the house mouse, will run only a little way and may stop in the open. Its small faculties seem to be paralyzed by fright and it may be picked up with the hand.

If the hook be put lightly through the skin of the back and it be dropped gently upon the water it will swim desperately for shore, making slow progress, however, and the tiny circles from its struggles will go all over the surface.

There never was a field mouse yet on any sort of day which safely made the passage of a trout pool and invariably the fish which takes the hook will be one of the largest and most savage of its kind. This fish seems to say to its smaller fellows: "Stand back! Minnows and frogs are good enough for you when I am not hungry, but this titbit is mine."

There are men, fat and gray, who when they hear the call of the locund woods leave their sons and sons-in-law to run the business and go after the fishes from early May until late October. These are the men who find out things about natural baits and sometimes keep them secret until they are betrayed by accident.

Fat and gray as they are, they have been known on fruitless days in nascent June to climb tall trees and risk their necks far out on limbs exploring squirrel nests. The two-inch squirrel is almost as good as the field mouse. All fish which see it know it has no business in the water, and believe it has fallen in through mischance and will get out unless stopped.

A light dipnet with a five foot cane handle is just as good a butterfly net as ever was made and the true-born angler knows how to use it. Many butterflies and moths are attractive both to trout and bass and will cause them to strike when coarse fools will not tempt them.

The dipnet is good for grasshoppers and it is also good for the small green tree frog, which will some times act well when the water frogs are worthless.

There are certain stones along the banks under which one may find helgramites without fault and others which have nothing under them. The helgramite is an old stanuby, but is not so good as some other forms.

There are flat stones, too, which lie half in and half out of the water, and they are lurking places for crayfish. The appetite of the bass for crayfish is fluctuating. For two weeks they will refuse to take the crayfish and then there will come a day when they are eager for nothing else.

It is not good practice to detach the claws of the crayfish or to use only the tail. The bass is used to seeing the miniature lobster and to catching and eating it when it has all its members, and is in nowise afraid of the claws or horny body.

The crayfish is seized tail first, its habit of darting backward facilitating this operation, and it should be hooked so that the tail may be attached without hindrance from the line.

Larvae, white grubs from rotting logs, cocoons from leaves and tree trunks, large flies, musquito hawks, mussels and various kinds of fish flesh have their uses. Each is good in a certain water at a certain time.

Dead trunks in the pine slashings contain white horn-billed grubs called sawyers, and often bass and trout will take them when earth worms are nosed contemptuously aside.

In most of the lakes of the north is a small slender perch like an immature bass in build, which has scarlet fins. If the two rear ventral fins be taken off, leaving a strip of white skin two inches long attached to them, they will prove a killing bait for bass on some afternoons when nothing else seems to avail.

Occasions are rare when fish will bite at nothing at all. It is the province of the angler to keep trying them with all of the things within his knowledge, and if he has the learning and patience and industry, the chances are that he will fill his creel while other men go lishless to bed.

Even in the manner of attaching natural baits there is a distinct art. Almost as much depends upon this as upon the manner of casting or still fishing.

The bait should in all instances be fastened so that it will present a natural appearance in the water, and its appearance in water is often the reverse of its appearance in air. Things which swim, such as minnows and frogs, should be permitted to swim, and for this purpose should be so far as is possible, left unhampered. There are men who hook frogs through the legs and minnows through the tail, but the act is a confession of their lack of skill.

Old boys remember that when they were young boys they were exceedingly careful in the manner of fastening their earth-worms. They took one worm and strung it upon the hook covering the hook from point to eyelet, being cautious not to expose a speck of the metal else the charm was broken. Then they spat upon the lure and lowered it into the brook.

They want to know why this is not done now. The answer is that it is done—by small boys with trousers rolled up and legs brown to the knees, just as it used to be done. The boys who have grown up and got grizzled, with hair upon their temples thinned from much rubbing with the world, when they use angleworms at all, use them in bunches, string half a dozen of them on the hook, leaving point and barb exposed, not spitting at all, and so catching trout and bass sometimes when pretty lure and lly in the box has proved worthless.

Indeed, when all is said and done, the greatest of all baits, the steadiest, the one which is responsible for most fish yeur in and out, fish of all kinds, sizes and tempers is the humble worm which as Darwin has said, is good for more things than to add to the self-esteem of the early bird.

DUN'S REVIEW

Labor Controversies Have No Apparent Effect On Business.

New York, June 14.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says:

No diminution in business is apparent from labor controversies owing to the prosperous condition of the agricultural sections and the bright outlook for this year's crop. Retail distribution of lightweight wearing apparel has felt the stimulus of higher temperature.

Railway earnings in May were 8.7 per cent larger than last year and 21.7 per cent above those of 1900.

There continues to be a wide discrepancy between the amount of business offered and the contracts closed in many branches of the iron and steel industry owing to inability of producers to assure delivery at a specified time. Contracts running well into next year indicate that the end of activity is not near. Pressure is still most conspicuous for railway and structural supplies and agricultural implement works are crowded with orders.

Sales of Bessemer pig iron at Pittsburg for delivery next year were recently made at $16.50 while immediate shipments command about $5 more.

Limited stocks are still the cause of steadiness in all branches of textiles. Holders are not urging sales and buyers show a disposition to wait.

Purchasers of cotton goods are influenced by the prospects of cheaper raw material after the new crop begins to move. Cotton rose slightly on a few unfavorable weather reports, but the outlook is very bright in many states. Tardy deliveries of sample pieces by the woolen mills has caused complaint among the clothing manufacturers and fall orders are not placed freely.

Wool sells more freely at leading Eastern markets and quotations are steady.

No chance of importance has appeared in leather. Hides are again strong with Texas steers leading the market and foreign dry hides do not yield to lower bids.

Failures for the week numbered 162 in the United States against 179 last year, and 20 in Canada, compared with 23 a year ago.

FEW women get sufficient rest. The care of young children, the duties of their homes and in many cases the demands made upon them by modern society keep them awake hours after they should be in bed. This constant straining of the nerves is killing hundreds of thousands of women. One of the first results is that the delicate menstrual function is upset. This terrible drain is sapping their lives—wearing away the nerve tissues that sleep cannot replace.

Mrs. Lillian M. LaCamp, No. 215 East Fourteenth Street, Kansas City, Mo., is the secretary and treasurer of the Kansas City lodge of the Order of Eastern Star, which is composed of the wives and daughters of Masons. Her position is one of great trust, for in her keeping are the secrets of the order and the money which the members pay for its support. Her word carries great weight with everyone who knows her. In writing this testimonial she is in line with her daily duties—helping those who are in need. When she can tell them of a great remedy like Wine of Cardui, who have a better claim on her time and consideration than the hundreds of thousands of her suffering sisters? Mrs. LaCamp says this for Wine of Cardui:

"McElree's Wine of Cardui is certainly a boon to worn out and tired women. I have never known a medicine that would so quickly and permanently restore a woman suffering with the many diseases peculiar to her sex. I have tried it myself and know whereof I speak and I have recommended it to dozens of mothers, suffering with scanty, profuse and painful menstruation, kidney or liver trouble, and I have yet to know of a case which was not greatly improved by its use. Because of this I am pleased to endorse it, feeling assured that it will not disappoint any."

Mrs. LaCamp is positive that Wine of Cardui will give relief to weak and suffering women and she does not hesitate to say so in strong terms of commendation. And she hopes that thousands of women will take Wine of Cardui because she has brought it to their attention today. It is a fact that a woman cannot attend to the exacting duties imposed on her without taking some medicine to regulate the menstrual periods. Irregularities of the menses grow worse unless properly treated. The flow may become scanty or profuse. In the former case the entire system is poisoned by the refuse which cannot escape. Profuse menses or flooding drain the body of its strength.

Wine of Cardui when taken by a woman whose health is injured by the strain of too much work, will strengthen her for her tasks. It will stop the weakening discharges which waste the vitality and undermine the constitution. This is an important message to every suffering woman. It shows how she can secure relief in the privacy of her home.

If advice is needed for your case write a letter to the Ladies' Advisory Department, The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn., and advice will be given you free of charge.

CRIPPLE CREEK MINES.

Reduction Company Dividend ...Stratton's Investment.

Colorado Springs, Col., June 14.—The United States Reduction and Refining company, of New York, operating five of the largest chlorination plants in this state, declared dividends this week amounting to $12,000, being $60,000 on the preferred stock and $60,000 on the common stock. The mills in question are engaged in handling nothing but Cripple Creek ores.

W. S. Stratton, the multi-millionaire, is still investing in Cripple Creek mines, after having sunk $7,000,000 during the past three years in undeveloped properties of the district. His agents this week purchased the Snowbird claim, on Bull Hill, paying therefor $7500. This is to form the nucleuus of a number of adjoining properties which he is now acquiring by the expenditure of $500,000. The two groups of mines, one located on Bull Hill and the other on Globe Hill, which he acquired during the past three years at a cost of $4,500,000, are already returning handsome profits to him in the immense ore bodies which have been discovered. The faith of this millionaire is one of the strongest indications of the future of Cripple Creek.

The irony of time was never more clearly shown forth than it was this week in a decision rendered by the Colorado supreme court over the ownership of the once celebrated Bonnie Bell mine of Pitkin county. This mine, fifteen years ago, was one of the richest producers of silver in the state, which resulted in a fierce legal struggle being started between J. J. Hagerman and R. J. Boles, of Mollie Gibson fame, and the Bonnie Bell company. Hagerman and Bolles claimed the property on a contract to sell to them from the original owners, but the Bonnie Bell company held possession of the mine during the fifteen years of litigation nearly all the principals of the original suit have died, the Hagerman contract has been destroyed, and worse than all, the Bonnie Bell mine has become exhausted. Hagerman and Bolles lost the mine by the decision, which is of no value however, to the Bonnie Bell company, because the property is worked out. No one has profited by the early riches of this mine, as everything was eaten up by the expense of litigation.

Every effort is being made to have a re-survey of the Cripple Creek district undertaken the coming summer, under the direction of the United States geological survey. Promises have been made that the government will make one next summer, but the local mine owners are willing to advance the money to defray the expenses of the government expert until such time as the department of the interior can reimburse them.

The United Gold Mines company, the new $5,000,000 merger of the Woods Investment company, paid its first dividend, amounting to $39,947, on the 9th instant. This is at the rate of 1 cent a share on the issued capital stock of 3,994,769 shares. The dividend will be a regular monthly feature.

An important strike has just been made in the 1000-foot level of the Granite mine, owned by Charles L. Tutt and Spencer Penrose, of the United States Reduction and Refining company. The strike is reported to be one of the best made at that depth in the Cripple Creek district for years.

Wireless Telegraphy.

When wireless telegraphy has been perfected, and the transportation facilities of the country are, universally, on a par with those now furnished by "The Milwaukee" line, it can scarcely be imagined how anything further in those things can be desired. The Pioneer Limited, which runs daily between Minneapolis, St. Paul and Chicago, is now the famous train of the world, and train No. 2 which leaves Minneapolis at 5:25 p. m., St. Paul 6:00 p. m., and arives Chicago 7:00 o'clock next morning is fast becoming equally celebrated. The equipment of these trains, sleepers, buffet cars (on Pioneer Limited), coaches and dining cars, represent the highest standard yet attained.

Another Improvement.

CHICAGO, BOSTON AND NEW YORK TRAVEL.

On and after June 15th, the Erie railroad will still further improve their Boston and New York service by offering to the public a handsome limited train to leave Chicago from Dearborn station every day at 10:30 a. m., arriving New York next afternoon at 3:30, and Boston at 9 o'clock.

There is no doubt that this service will be highly patronized, as this new train will land the traveler in New York city in ample time to permit him to proceed leisurely to his hotel or home, rest, dress, dine and spend the evening in whatever manner may appeal to him most.

This every-day morning train will consist of standard Pullman drawing-room and sleeping cars. All meals en route served by the famous Erie dining cars. No extra fare charged on this train.

FEMININE HEADWEAR

The Flirtations Hat For the Midsummer Season.

The Feature of Many Summer Hats Th at Does Not Pall Is the Ribbon Bow At the Back.

New York, June 11.—The woman who said that, if she had a hat, she could do without a gown, is repeating her assertion.

With new hats and plenty of them, one can be very independent.

If asked to go to a garden party one can put on one's sprigged muslin and sally forth resplendent in waving plumes, colored satin straw, Neapolitan buckles, chiffon choux and flying ribbons.

If invited to the theater, for theaters have a way of offering one attraction or another all the year around, one can put on a very small turban toque looped at the back with a satin bow. In front the little affair dips and each side is turned high. Around the brim there are big, round straw ornaments, through which a ribbon is laced. At the back this same ribbon forms a bow on top of the hat, with ends so arranged that they fall upon the hair.

That is a feature of so many summer hats, the ribbon bow at the back. And it is a feature which does not pall. It is common, yet novel, pretty and becoming, easily constructed and universally worn.

The big bow at the back is treated in so many ways that one hardly knows which to specify as the most fashionable.

For the moment the ribbon which trims the brim or the crown is the one that is used for the bow at the back. It is tied on top and the ends and loops fall low, sometimes almost to the nape of the neck, covering the back of the head and entirely concealing the coiffure.

Then the veil streamers, too, are worn, and, oh, so pretty they are. A great veil draped like the Hading, long and full, is brought up at the back and caught with a pin. The ends fall long and low. Again, it is the simple chiffon scarf which is treated thus, and it is put on over the hat trimmings as though it were a veil. At the back there is a big soft bow and the ends are trimmed or are plain, according to individual fancy.

For several seasons past the milliners have been trying to give their patrons this big bow. Streamers have been introduced every spring, and were among the Easter novelties. But they disappeared and were not perpetuated, beyond the Eastertide. The few who bought them were glad to rip off the trailing ends, and in a few weeks Dame Fashion had gone back to her streamless mode.

But this spring the streamers and the ribbon bow showed that they had come to stay. They appeared upon the back of three hats out of five, and those that did not have them offered, at least, a place for them. Now the mode is so common that it attracts no attention beyond a glance of admiration for its prettiness, and almost any hat can be trimmed in this way.

The sailor hat which comes in every summer has so many rivals this year that one would think it might grow discouraged and hide its diminished shape behind some of the broader and newer styles.

But not so. The sailor hat, although obscured by the tri-cornered shapes, and put out of sight by the natty dish

This handsome effect is made in white serge with brass buttons, and blue collar and cuffs, which are stitched in white blue soutache braid, which follows the sides of the gores, is used for the trimming of the skirt.

rose garden at one side, while around the hat there is a crush of rose silk. This is very becoming. And they are facing these sailors with the tiniest little pink roses, button roses, put on to make a little lining for the brim, like a solid facing.

And then they turn up the sailor hats, plumb in the middle of the back, and fasten them with a big, wide silk bow, of the "made" type, with the silk cut on the bias and with wide slanting ends. The front has no trimming if one can except a rather severe band of silk folded well.

Sailor hats, trimmed with straw, are particularly pretty. To make one, first get your sailor hat and let it be large enough in the head. Sailors that tilt and tip are exasperatingly unbecoming. They look as though they would be so pretty if they would only stay put. But they will not, and one is divided in one's efforts jerking it to the right and to the left. With the low-crowned sailors of the year it is not a question of keeping the hat on straight, but of keeping it on at all.

With the sailor plenty large enough, go you, now, to the straw goods counter and select several large wheels of straw, open in the middle and as fancy and the wonderful English walking hats, is certainly here again and one sees it, like an old friend, with its band of white or blue ribbon and its square little crown and rigidly becoming brim.

There are those who ought to wear a summer sailor. These are the little women, those of small stature and sweet face, with good complexions and smooth hair. Upon this style of girl the sailor hat sets most attractively and for some reason, not to be explained, it seems to frame them, as in a summer halo, and to give them a St. Cecelia sweetness not to be caught by any other type of hat.

By all means, little girl, if you are five feet nothing and sweet in face, wear a sailor hat. Trim it with a plain flat band of very lustrous Liberty and at one side set a small Liberty chou. Perhaps, if you be a little mountain maid you can wear the long feather which is stiff and brown, and is pulled through the crown—not the brim—in such a way that the quill end sticks out and also the feather end, with a great space between.

The trim the sailors quite a little—the imported sailors—for those women who like trimming. At the back there can be a bow with the ends and the loop hanging over and the same ribbon can thread the crown in big, loose ribbon stitches.

That is one way. Another is to pile a as possible. Now get a yard and a half of black satin ribbon, three inches wide. Sew the straw wheels around the crown of the hat; thread the ribbon through them; tie it at the back in a splashing bow and your hat is done.

There is a perfect craze this year for the hat, which, for lack of a better name, is called the dish hat. It is like a sailor hat, only a little more so. Its crown is lower, or a great deal higher, and its brim is always wider. It is trimmed in simple fashion by draping a quantity of material around the crown and by stitching a few quills in the trimming.

The rain-drop satins and the rain-drop silks are the ones that are used for trimming these hats. Perhaps you would call them the polkadots. The material must be wide and there must be plenty of it, enough to go around the hat, in big, loose folds and look as though it were not skimped in any way. Then the quills are stuck in, rather straight, and the material is again brought into play, so as to fully drape the top.

It is an easy trimming and one that though not novel is employed again and again in the summer modes.

The hat that is called the rough and ready, and the hat which is styled the ready to wear, are very similar. The rough and ready is the one that will stand all usage; and, if it be of the right type, it is a hat that will bear rain and summer snows, if snows there be, and will positively not show the dust and dirt.

To be thus immune against the worst enemies of the season the rough and ready must excel in durable colors. The khaki felts are—admirable and very pretty, too, and beauty and durability do not often travel together. When found hand-in-hand, one should not forget them.

Not quite as smart as khaki is our rough rider brown, but it is every whit as becoming. Really it is more so, for the color is warmer, and, upon light people, this is greatly valued.

It is found in felt and in very coarse straw, trimmed with Cuban grass straw that is rough and durable.

Really women in general do not trust their milliners sufficiently. One has an abiding faith that one's milliner is trying to sell the hat, and so one loses confience.

This is not right, nor is it reasonable.

The milliner is a woman, or a man, who intends to sell the hat and who hopes to sell you another one some day. Therefore it is a good plan to put one's faith in a milliner's taste and to say, "Select for me!"

Hats that point at the front are coming in. One notices that many of the new straws show this peculiarity. But let the woman of long, straight features beware. The hat that comes to a dip in front is delightful upon the tilted nose, the pug and the turn up, but it makes a long, thin nose positively ugly. The classic type should choose some other style.

They are taking the straw shapes and turning them up at both sides, like the English walking hats, but in such a way that there is a point in front. Around the brim there are laid folds of silk and the quills stand high at one side.

The plainest of straws look dressy treated to the sharply pointed front and one can really fit one's self out nicely at the cost of a few cents.

Small pieces of dress goods are used for hat trimmings and they have all the approval of the fashionable world.

A gown of blue etamine over blue silk, the blue an ultramarine, was made for Lady Curzon. With this gown, which was really only a shopping suit, there was a white straw hat, trimmed with a twist of etamine, with two blue quills drawn through the etamines.

The shirt waist hats are very decorative with their folds of cheviot or cotton batiste or mull or lawn to match the shirt waist; and it is a wise girl who takes care to secure a hat to match each waist.

Between the ready-to-wear hat and the dress hat there is a great gulf fixed. One of them is as severe as the other is fanciful.

It would take a puzzle expert to unravel the mysteries of the trimming of a French hat and a milliner to explain the matter after it had been unraveled.

The clever woman who performs that modern miracle known as making her own hats will find herself with a task before her this year of uncommon seriousness. Better by far to buy the hat and save on some other part of the wardrobe.

PARIS HAT GOSSIP.

Lace Continues to Grow In Popular Favor.

Paris, June 1.—Lace in all of its dainty forms and beautiful combinations continues to grow in popular favor. While each succeeding season brings some new suggestion or some old idea modernized in dress and decoration, there has, as yet, been nothing shown that will not bear the softening touch of a bit of handsome lace, each month heralding some new designs and more varied uses for this favorite of all embellishments of the feminine form. The new medallions, lounges, circles and other fanciful designs of lace which so greatly enhance many costumes are gradually taking the place of the more conventional insertions. One of the most tempting forms in which lace appears to us for the moment is in the quaint pelerine, the well-fitting band of net or crinoline about the shoulders, bearing any quantity of lace frills, continuing down the front in sash ends of either lace trimmed, net or entirely of lace. For my part, I greatly admired a pereline made of net cut in a point at the back, showing a floral design of lace in a corresponding shape, let in. The lower edge is finished in a double frill of fine guipure lace, while round the top appeared a full ruching of similar lace, the frills joining in the front to form entire lace sashes falling to the hem of the gown. A pretty pelerine made of muslin was beautifully embroidered and edged with a plaited frill of chiffon, the muslin ends falling to the base of the gown, embroidered to match the pelerine and finished with a similar frill. One of the prettiest of the new large hats made of pale blue tulle had the crown decorated with numerous lozenges of ecru lace, while the wide brim was almost covered with pale pink hyacinths.

A pretty novelty in buckles is made of enamel, to resemble straw, and one of these pretty buckles attracted the admiration of more than one busy shopper as it caught up a draping of white Chantilly lace on to the crown of a white Yeddo straw hat whose broad brim was lined with white Liberty satin. A pretty toque made of emerald green tulle mingling with white lace displayed a handsome black osprey held by one of the pretty new buckles. A matinee hat in cream gauze had its brim entirely covered with tiny pink rosebuds and foliage.

While the fashionable form is assuming more and more a slender appearance, the hat continues to grow larger and is by far the most pretentious article of milady's toilet. One of these large hats in a becoming shape was made of Tuscan straw, the wide brim in the front shaped to suit the face, turning up on the left with a large bunch of yellow roses with its buds and foliage. The crown was gracefully draped with some of the new reversable ribbon in black and white, a bunch of yellow roses at the back holding the ends of white reversible ribbon which fell over the narrow brim.

A dainty hat in white lace straw displayed pale pink tulle drawn through its interstices, while a wreath of pale pink button roses decorated the brim. A very becoming toque for a woman of middle-age (if such there be) was made entirely of black tulle, artistically draped and caught up here and there with diamond buckles. Quite a pretty toque in white tulle had the crown made entirely of the soft velvety moss now so popular. Veils of black or of white lace are made long to tie in a bow at the back of the hat, the short ends falling onto the hair.

OUR WORKING GIRLS.

Help and Health for Those Who Now Cry, "Oh! Dear. I am Really Not Well Enough to Work, But I am Obliged To."

How often these significant words are spoken in our great mills, shops, and factories by the poor girl who has worked herself to the point where nature can endure no more and demands a rest! The poor sufferer, broken in health must stand aside and make room for another.

The foreman says, "If you are not well enough to work you must leave, for we must put some one in your place."

Standing all day, week in and week out, or sitting in cramped positions, the poor girl has slowly contracted some deranged condition of her organic system, which calls a halt in her progress and demands restoration to health before she can be of use to herself or any one else.

To this class of women and girls Mrs. Pinkham proffers both sympathy and aid. When these distressing weaknesses and derangements assail you, remember that there is a remedy for them all. We have on record thousands of such cases that have been absolutely and permanently cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, restoring to vigorous health and lives of usefulness those who have been previously sorely distressed. Read the following letter.

Here is the Story of Thousands of Young Women who are Helped to Health by Mrs. Pinkham.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am troubled very much with the whites, and a bearing down of the womb. My back aches so that I am hardly able to work. Will you kindly inform me what to do as I am suffering most terribly." —MISS MAY BUECHNER, Middle Village P.O., Long Island, N.Y. (Mar. 17, 1900.)

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I write to thank you for the good your remedies have done me.

"I wrote to you describing my troubles and followed your directions. I had doctored a great deal but nothing seemed to help. After using six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and four packages of Sanative Wash I am again strong and healthy. The Sanative Wash cured me of the leucorrhœa (whites). I would recommend your remedies to all suffering women who need them."—MISS MAY BUECHNER, Middle Village P. O., Long Island, N.Y.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health more than a million women, you cannot well say without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." If you are ill, do not hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice. It is free and helpful. Write to-day, delay may mean death.

$5000 REWARD Owing to the fact that some skeptical people have from time to time questioned the genuineness of the testimonial letters we are constantly publishing we have deposited with the National City Bank, of Lynn, Mass., $5,000, which will be paid to any person who will show that the above testimonial is not genuine, or was published before obtaining the writer's special permission.—Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass.

PRANKS OF PET GOOSE.

"There's lots of trouble in the little village of Brookdale, and it's all on account of the disorderly conduct of a wild goose owned by the Widow Simpson, writes the Susquehanna correspondent of the Chicago Inter-Ocean. The widow bought the fowl from a hunter when it was a yearling, and has since been trying to make a pet of it, with very disastrous results. There's one thing that the people of Brookdale pride themselves on, and that is the well-kept lawns in front of their homes. Widow Simpson's goose has a taste for tender grass, and, after destroying the pretty plot at her own cottage, made predatory raids on the neighbors' lots. This started the trouble, and the Widow Simpson, from being one of the best-liked women in the community, became the most hated.

The goose seemed to realize that it was heartily hated by its owner's neighbors, and that a demand had been made for its death, with which the widow refused to comply. The fowl then began a persistent series of attacks upon the people who wanted it put out of the way. It bit and seriously injured a 4-year-old girl, upset a 40-gallon can of milk, tore down the family washings and dragged the clean clothes in the mud, and made raids on poultry yards, killing off the young chickens by the score. It became such a terror that the people of Brookdale organized themselves into a vigilance committee and started out to kill it. Volley after volley was fired at the goose, but it seemed to bear a charmed life and escaped unhurt, flying out of range of the buckshot fired at it, and screaching defiance to the men and boys who sought to kill it.

One result of the vigilance committee's raid was the killing of a calf by one of the men who shot at the goose. The owner of the calf presented a bill for $17, which the unlucky goose hunter had to pay.

About a quarter of a mile from the Widow Simpson's home is the village school, preside over by a young woman teacher, who has some thirty little boys and girls under her charge. Last Monday morning the goose flew in at the front door of the school house and began to make things lively. Knowing the evil nature of the fowl, the teacher and her pupils were badly frightened at its appearance. It began operations by grabbing a book out of a child's hands and tearing it to pieces. The teacher, armed with a broom, and some of the bolder of the pupils, with rulers, made a combined attack on the intruder, but it scared them off and inflicted a number of severe injuries on them, including a bad cut on the teacher's face, made with a stroke of its powerful wings. Finally, seeing they were no match for the belligerent goose, teachers and pupils fled, leaving it in possession of the room.

Help was summoned, but when it arrived the goose, with a loud squawk, flew out of the doorway and winged its way to the woods, since which it has not been seen. The interior of the school house presented a scene of wild wreckage. The floor was strewn with torn books, desks were upset, ink bottles spilled and a number of panes of glass broken. It cost nearly $20 to repair the damage, and the school trustees talk of suing the Widow Simpson for the amount if the goose comes back.

BECOMING A MOTHER Is an ordeal which all women approach with indescribable fear, for nothing compares with the pain and horror of child-birth. The thought of the suffering and danger in store for her, robs the expectant mother of all pleasant anticipations of the coming event, and casts over her a shadow of gloom which cannot be shaken off. Thousands of women have found that the use of Mother's Friend during pregnancy robs confinement of all pain and danger, and insures safety to life of mother and child. This scientific liniment is a god-send to all women at the time of their most critical trial. Not only does Mother's Friend carry women safely through the perils of child-birth, but its use gently prepares the system for the coming event, prevents "morning sickness," and other discomforts of this period. Sold by all druggists at $1.00 per bottle. Book containing valuable information free.

GOSSIP OF THE STAGE

How the Comedians Are of Aid To the Singers In "A Chinese Honeymoon" and "The Chaperons."

New York, June 14.—The whistling habit has settled upon audiences in New York almost as firmly as in Philadelphia, but far more recently. In the two summer musical shows produced last week the persistency of this new diversion was evident. No assemblage at the Knickerbocker fails to whistle "Nancy Brown" after Marie Cahill has sung it several times, and the applause continues so that the orchestra will accompany the whistlers. "King Dodo" has "The Tale of the Bumblebee" and "The Show Girl" has "Psyche." To save any trouble in selecting the most popular tune on the first night of "A Chinese Honeymoon," such members of the orchestra as did not have to use their mouths in playing their instruments whistled the air of "Mr. Dooley" to encourage the people to pucker. But that simply accentuated a weakness, almost the only weakness, in "A Chinese Honeymoon." The music throughout is pleasant, but not one tune is worth remembering, or, indeed, striking enough to enable one to memorize it. On the other hand, many are agreeable enough to aid the words they accompany, and in every case the singers are so much better than their songs that hardly a number is not distinctively successful. Katie Barry has three ditties so characteristically cockney that they seem almost like parodies on the real thing. Could anything more truly suggest the London 'alls than this?

"The twiddle bits 'e used to play when all alone with me.
Lopping around whenever 'e found an opportunitee.
Oh, those twiddle bits 'e used to play, they almost gave me fits,
Me 'eart 'e won and the deed was done.
With 'is dear little twiddle bits."

It isn't necessary to go to the Casino to hear the tune of that. There could be only one. Miss Barry is grotesquely funny in the verses about the music teacher who thus won her heart, and, when she had paid twenty-five years in advance, quitted her on their proposed wedding day. Later, at the very end of the play, she again sings of a piano tragedy. This is about a musical family who went to a seaside boarding house and took their musical instruments.

Martha spanked the grand pianner,
popper beat the drum,
Mother in a soulful manner blew the bootle-tum.
Charlie swung the concertina, Bob went fiddle-dee.
But I'm a brick for I waggled the stick with a one, two, three.

Tom Seabrooke adds to the gayety of this number by beating wildly on a big bass drum. Perhaps in no other portion of the show does the good humored quality in Mr. Seabrooke's fun comes out so strongly. There is something about his foolery that not only makes us laugh, but also creates a friendly feeling. He is unfortunate in having no extra good song. Much as "Mr. Dooley" is helped by its whistling chorus, it is only Mr. Seabrooke's personal drollery that carries it. He should, and probably will, be better supplied in a few weeks. Good as "A Chinese Honeymoon" is, some new numbers should be put in.

The third cockney song that Miss Barry sings is about a girl who wants to be "a loidy and with the loidies' rank." Among her ambitions is to peroxide her hair the fashionable shade so that "folks will stare and say 'there's 'air, she's a loidy bred and born.'" Among the humorous songs is "The a la Girl," principally because Adele Ritchie makes it so. She is only mildly amusing as the English maid who "buys her frocks in Brixton, but they're fashioned a la Jay's," and as the French girl "a la Folies-Bergere." But she becomes uproariously funny as the Yankee girl who does "the thing in swagger form a la the Hotel Cec." The Brother Jonathan accent and American brashness that Miss Ritchie puts into this verse are delightful, because usually in these songs about girls of all nations every one is made ridiculous, excepting the American girl.

Applause must settle the value of everything in musical farce, and judging in that way, Aimee Angeles has made the biggest success in "A Chinese Honeymoon" with her imitations. She is an excellent mimic, not so sure in her reproductions as Cissie Loftus or Fay Templeton, but quite likely that is due to her newness. Where she has the advantage over them is in her skill as a dancer. After each of her imitations she dances, and reproduces with amusing effect the awkwardness of women whose fame does not rest on their agility. Her shy manner saves her from seeming impertinent. The women's awkwardness is differentiated as neatly as their voices. Minnie Ashley is not very clumsy in dancing after "Rhoda and her Pagoda," but her machine-like movements become comic when shown by Miss Angeles. In Fay Templeton's steps after "Rosie" we see the clever woman who knows her limitations and therefore tries to attract attention from her feet by making her hands conspicuous, or her facial expression the center of interest—anything to keep all eyes from feet that are small, yet seem a bit heavy when Bonnie Maginn is on one side and Aimee Angeles on the other. The awkwardness of Anna Held and Adele Ritchie, as compared to a trained dancer, is brought out as positively and individually. Ethel Barrymore is to be next. Miss Angeles is preparing an imitation of her at the end of the second act of "Capt. Jinks of the Horse Marines" when she dances though her heart is breaking.

The song that the first night audience at "The Chaperones" selected to whistle was called "Blooming Lize." It was a sextet, sung by Harry Conor, Walter Jones, Joseph Miyon, Lou Middleton, Trixie Friganza and May Boley. The verses explained that Lize was so like the fresh, blooming flowers that every one called her "Blooming Lize," the point that later sprang forth being that "she told those blooming lies." Why this was so catchy that it was immediately taken up by the listeners. In most of the cases, however, the words beat the tunes, but better than either of these were the same lines in the play. Whether they were written by Frederic Rankin or not is not known and does not matter to the person out for entertainment. Anyway, they are all in two characters, although others have as much or more to do with the plot. The roles that Harry Conor plays and the one built up by Marie Cahill are too witty ones. The others are sometimes amusing, but never clever. As the head of the chaperons talks exactly as Miss Cahill does in "The Wild Rose," and as no one else does, the author of the lines seems obvious. But original humorists cannot be copied closely enough to make parts fitted to them suit any one else. Who ever saw any one fill May Irwin's place, or could any actor step into a role fashioned to fit Frank Daniels and succeed in it without fundamentally altering it? Mr. Conor's part in "The Chaperons" was at first taken by Dingby Bell, but the first-named comedian has had it long enough to suit it to himself. He even weeps when the prima donna sings a sentimental ballad, just as he did in the old Hoyt days, but he is still funny enough in doing it to make an audience rock with laughter.

What might be called the prima donna role is played by a Lederer find, Nellie Follis was in the chorus when Mr. Lederer joined "The Chaperons" to enliven it. He taught her as he did Edna May, step by step, when to look up and when to glance demurely down. She is a very pretty girl with a sweet although rather light voice. New charms should be accentuated by a background of familiar ones. Edna May had Ada Dare, Eylvia Thorne, Marie George and a stage full of familiar Casino women to set off her novel demureness. Miss Follis is one of many new ones. Even Trixie Friganza seems new as leading actress. And Miss Follis has not a "Follow On," not to mention "The Ornamental Purity Brigade," which Miss May also sang in "The Belle of New York." She has two attractive ballads though, one about the "maiden who could not say no," sung with amusing incidental comments by Walter Jones. Then in the second act she sings about a man who confused her by the expression of his eyes. In this she is helped by a frisky chorus. This snap and go is what carries a negro ditty "Sambo," sung with violent success by Eva Tanguay.

Two graduates from the chorus come to the extreme front in "The Chaperons." They are Trixie Friganza, who smacks of May Irwin, and Eva Tanguay, about as jolly a little stage tough as we have had. Miss Tanguay's violence may shock some persons, but it is comic, its vulgarity is not indecent, and she may be set down as the most popular single thing in the show.

THE FLINTS COMING.

Will Be at the Lyceum All Next Week.

ad DRAMATIC ft.6..1ISS?htlf(m

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Flint, the hypnotists, and their company, will be at the Lyceum next week, presenting their entertainment, that is filled with fun and much that is mystifying. Of all the hypnotists now upon the American stage, Herbert L. Flint stands confessedly at the head. His native abilities in this direction are wonderful, and show that he possesses occult powers of the high type. He takes a class of twenty from the audience, and in a very few moments he has them under perfect control, ready to obey his slightest wish. They will see things which he suggests with the reality of perfect vision as if they stood before the object. All sorts of hallucinations are experienced and all kinds of vagaries are exhibited, but the whole entertainment, while exhibiting all of the phenomena of hypnotism, is done without the slightest detriment to the subjects. They go through the most surprising feats and then awaken and enjoy the entertainment and laugh at their comrades who are executing some ridiculuos feat in their turn.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO.

Mrs. "Jack" Bloodgood Married And May Retire.

New York, June 14.—Last week broke all records for summer theatrical activity. "A Chinese Honeymoon" and Miss Viola Allen in "The Hunchback" made their bows on Monday evening, and on Thursday we had "The Chaperons" and Miss Grace George in "Pron-Pron." It was a source of much regret that Miss Allen was obliged to cut her stay in this city so short. Despite the hot weather the Garrick was packed to the doors at each performance and the play could readily have had a run of considerable length. Miss George, too, is with us but for three nights, although it is possible that she will repeat this production next season.

The marriage of Mrs. Clara Bloodgood to William Laimbeer, broker and stock exchange member, attracted much attention among theatrical folks. When Mrs. Laimbeer was the wife of John Bloodgood, Jr., she made her stage debut at the Empire in "The Conquerors," hoping thereby to contribute to the support of her husband, broken both in health and fortune. Her theatrical comrades looked upon her coming with much misgiving, but she displayed considerable talent and was withal so companionable that she speedily developed lasting friendships on every hand. From the Empire she went to Amelia Bingham and later to Elsie de Wolfe, with whom she appeared in "The Way of the World." She had signed a contract with Charles Frohman to appear in a new Clyde Fitch play next season, but, Cupid having interfered, Frohman, I understand, has released her from his service.

According to E. J. Ratcliffe, who returned to broadway this week, Theresa Vaughn is to blossom forth as a star next fall, after her long retirement in a sanitarium at Worcester. Mr. Ratcliffe, who saw her only a few days ago, says that she is in much better health than she has been for years, her mind is strong and apparently normal and she is filled with ambition to return to the stage. Ratcliffe denies that there is any trace of white hairs which, it was reported, were the result of her long illness. She drives about a great deal and is exceedingly anxious to leave her present quarters.

There was much excitement on Broadway one afternoon last week. A couple of automobiles shied and three runaways were reported by the police of the Tenderloin precinct, all because Corse Payton journeyed over from Brooklyn in a new suit of clothes. He is going to England in a few weeks, and expects to startle the English populace. If he does half as well as he did on this side of the bridge there is no telling what kind of international complications may arise.

Lulu Glaser has a double at West Point, that is so far as figure is concerned, and she is coming forward with much interest to meeting the unknown cadet next week. The graduating class of the military academy went to witness "Dolly Varden" in a body Thursday evening. Mr. Whitney, in Miss Glaser's behalf, wrote to the commandant at West Point to say that if he would supply Miss Glaser with a cadet uniform she would appear in it as a special tribute to Uncle Sam's soldier lads. No one yet knows whether or not Miss Glaser sent her official measurements up the river, but it is said that the uniform sent her fitted—well, as nearly like wall paper as possible.

A. H. Chamberlyn, the Boston theatrical wonder, blushed coyly when asked if his unknown and certainly munificent angel is none other than Thomas Lawson, who has been rapidly spending the money he made in copper on yachts and other expensive trifles. Mr. Chamberlyn would not reveal his secret, but pointed to the name he had given to his largest production, "The Defender." He also hinted that Broadway will be given a chance to admire his work of art before months are over.

James K. Hackett will open his season in New York at Wallack's theater early in November, when he will present his dramatization of Winston Churchill's novel, "The Crisis." His company will be practically the same as that which appeared in the play during its recent spring tour. The company includes Miss Charlotte Walker, Joseph Brennan, Thomas A. Hall, Brigham Royce, Edward Donnelly, James Scott, Frank Patton, John Mackin, Wayne Graym, Charles Howerd, Harry Miller, Joseph Mackin, Miss Deronda Mayo, Miss Lottye Hicks, Miss Isabelle Donnelly, Miss Georgianna Pitcher, Miss Grace Barber, Miss Isabel Richards and Miss Mary Marble. Mr. Hackett will spend his summer in Europe. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Hackett, Miss Mary Mannering.

• • •

Robert Hunter, or "Bob," as he is better known all over town and outside of it, has forsaken the department of publicity for the more attractive role of leading man. Bob has spent the past season looking after the interests of Kyrle Bellew, but the task of promoting pink teas and violet matinees wore so heavily on his soul that he left the employ of Liebler & Co. and bought an interest in the stock company with Walter Bradford, at Worcester, Mass. They have opened their season with "The Wife," with Hunter in the leading part.

• • •

Henry B. Harris has engaged for the companies to be under his direction next season Frank E. Aiken and Miss Maude Granger. Miss Granger will support Miss Fay Haswell in "A Royal Family," and Mr. Aiken will join Robert Edeson's company in "Soldiers of Fortune."

• • •

Digby Bell will be seen as Sam Weller when DeWolf Hopper produces "Pickwick" next season. Mrs. Laura Joyce Bell and George Chatman, the baritone, will also be in the company.

Harlem had another theater added to its places of amusement last night—on paper, of course. Henry Greenwall, of New Orleans, has arrived here after what he declared to be one of the most successful Southern tours he has had since he was interested in that circuit. He said that, in addition to the two theater buildings he controls in this city and Brooklyn, he proposes to construct a third somewhere in Harlem, preferably on One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street. With the two he already has, he says, it will be comparatively small additional cost to operate a third with the same scenery and stock company.

Weber and Fields spent a few days after their return to this city in casting up accounts for their recent trip out of town. They found that their box office receipts reached the exceedingly comfortable figure of $131,000. This meant playing to an average of nearly $3000 a performance, and they were exceedingly well satisfied,

It is courting danger to stand under icy eaves. Not a few have learned this to their cost. Every winter injury and even death are reported as the result of this carelessness. But there is a far more popular way of courting danger. Every man or woman who neglects a cough is inviting sickness, and many a fatal sickness has its beginning in a slight cough.

The timely use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure the cough. Even when the cough is obstinate and there is hemorrhage with emaciation and weakness, "Golden Medical Discovery" always helps and almost always cures.

"I was troubled with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs and left me with a miserable cough," writes Mr. Joseph D. Burns, of 318 Huestis Street, Ithaca, New York. "I used two bottles of your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' after which my cough disappeared entirely. I cannot recommend your medicine too highly."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood, and lungs. Substitution means a little more profit to the dealer but a loss to you.

so much so that the rumor is current, if a backing can be obtained for William Collier, the stock company will be started on its travels some months earlier next season, and a much wider territory will be covered. Incidentally, there is considerable doubt along the Rialto whether Collier will resume the "White" when he appears this fall.

Messrs. Robinson and Temple recently assigned Percy Willing as leading baritone for their summer opera company at the New Star theater. Mr. Willing is the youngest son of Chief of Police Watlington, of New York, and made his first appearance in opera under the direction of Sbriglio in Paris in the fall of 1898. He will open in "Boccaccio" June 9.

Tyrone Powers will go abroad for the summer, returning in the autumn to a prominent place in the company of Mrs. Fiske. While in London he will appear with Sir Henry Irving as Bassanio in "The Merchant of Venice."

Catherine Linyard is to star in a farce comedy next season with Willard Simms. They played together for the first time in "An American Beauty" at the Casino, and since that time have been separated, Mr. Simms devoted his talent chiefly to vaudeville. Their new play will be entitled "Picklngs From Puck" and the management will consist of Ollie Mack and Joseph M. Gaites.

The Earl of Rosslyn has signed a contract with Charles Frohman and will appear at the Garrick in September as the hero in Capt. Marshall's new comedy. Under his agreement with the manager the earl is to permit his title to be emblazoned upon the program, instead of the stage name of James Erskine, which he has been using in England.

A striking novelty in chorus work has been introduced in "The Chaperons." The curtain rises upon fourteen pretty girls, each playing a real mandolin. The girls were picked out first and then placed under an instructor, who, in a couple of weeks, managed to put them into such shape that the orchestra could take a rest. The play, as produced here, is the result largely of George Ade's work. He revised it on the road and agreeably whipped it into shape before presenting it in New York. The indications are that it will run all summer at the New York.

Active preparations are already under way at the Academy of Music for Frank McKee's production at that house on Oct. 6 of Ramsey Morris' new play, "Ninety-and-Nine," which takes its title from Evangelist Sankey's world famous hymn of the same name. The present stage at the academy is being demolished and a new one, as complicated with traps as a Chinese puzzle, will take its place. This change is made necessary by a sensational mechanical effect which will be presented in the third act. The scenery will be completed by the 17th inst. and a full scenic rehearsal will be had two days later. Miss Katherine Grey has been engaged for the leading female role. The principal part will be played by Edwin Arden.

The following story is undoubtedly true, as it is vouched for by a press agent who is willing to take an affidavit if necessary: "A stuffed kangaroo was the present received by Miss Elizabeth Kennedy in a box that had come all the way from Australia. It now adorns the porch of Miss Kennedy's home in Remsenhurst. At night it looks like a big mastiff sitting upright to guard the premises and serves the purpose of burglar-scaring-away admirably. Miss Kennedy next season will play the part of Mme. Trentoni in "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines."

"Yours Merrily" John R. Rogers, exhusband of Minnie Palmer and all-around theatrical man, is taking life easy at a sanitarium at Riverhead, in Jersey, nearly opposite this city, which he is using as his summer resort. When he was examined on a charge of supposed lunacy by the doctors in Bellevue hospital they recommended that he rest for a while, and he selected Riverhead as the place to lay off. His friends contributed means to pay for his board and other expenses and he is now enjoying himself hugely and at perfect liberty to come back to Broadway whenever he sees fit. A friend who seems to be familiar with his case says: "John is no crazier than he has ever been. He has always been willful and eccentric and while angered at what he considered unfair treatment by the theatrical syndicate he sat down and indited a letter to Abe Erlanger, one of the members of the syndicate, which was to say the least, injudicious, and could be distorted into a threat. He never intended killing Erlanger as was presumed. He merely thought to frighten him into giving one of his stars and plays time over his theatrical circuit. Erlanger became alarmed and invoked the law to his assistance. John has all he can eat, drink and smoke, paid for by his friends, and is at liberty to return to Broadway and active life whenever he considers that he has sufficiently rested. There are hundreds of men in New York who would be glad to be as well taken care of as is Rogers today."

Miss Viola Allen closed her spring season in "The Hunchback" here the other day, and shortly after sailed for Liverpool on the Celtic. Arriving at Liverpool, Miss Allen will be met by Hall Caine and his wife, and from there they will journey to Rome in quest of atmosphere for Miss Allen's forthcoming American production of "The Eternal City," a dramatization of Manx author's latest novel.

Col. George F. Hinton as ambassador from John Philip Sousa to the recorder of St. James is now on the ocean blue with a magnificently illuminated copy of Sousa's latest march, "Imperial Edward." In the coronation rush on the other side it is fairly possible that the ceremonies attending the reception of this gem by England's sovereign may be cut somewhat short, but the American people can rest assured that Hinton will get it into Buckingham palace in proper shape.

Alfred Hirschfeld, known to the vaudeville stage as Alfred Fields, of the team of Fields & Ward, has been granted a divorce by Justice O'Gorman of the supreme court here, from his wife Isabella, known in vaudeville as Belle Stewart. The plaintiff named as co-respondents such well-known variety performers as George Crawford, Edward Lattell and George B. Reno. The plaintiff offered evidence to prove that his wife had been too friendly with these as well as other co-respondents named, and on this testimony he was granted a divorce. The couple were married by a justice of the peace in St. Louis in 1887.

Clarence Frohman, by cable received from London, announces that he has re-engaged Miss Jessie Millward, the English actress, to return to this country next season to create the leading female role in a new comedy by Capt. Marshall, author of "His Excellency, the Governor," for a period of at least fifteen weeks. This means that Miss Millward will abandon her intention of presenting "In the Palace of the King" in London until after her American engagement. The leading male role in the new play to be brought out at the Garrick in New York will be assumed by the earl of Roslyn, a titled Britisher, who will come over to capture the applause of some Americans who are dazzled by a title.

When Dan McAvoy returned from his brief and somewhat hurried honeymoon in Boston he entertained some of his friends with a few remarks about his plans for next season. "I've had all sorts of offers," he said, "even one from George Edwardes in London. It may be that I will decide to cross the water, but I have not made up my mind as yet. I haven't signed a contract to star under Henry B. Sire's management, although he has made me a very attractive offer. Then there is a new burlesque to go on at the New York soon, and I can have the leading part in it if I wish. I am not worrying a bit about next year this trip."

Harrison Gray Fiske announces that the new comedy by George C. Hazleton, which will be produced at the Manhattan theater next season is entitled "Captain Molly." Although its period and several characters, notably that of Molly Pitcher, are of the revolution, it is not, strictly speaking, an historical play. Moreover, there is not a single red coat in it. The production will be under the supervision of Mrs. Fiske, although she will not appear in the cast. The leading role will be entrusted to Elizabeth Tyree, and Max Figman will direct the rehearsals.

FOOTLIGHT FLASHES.

Lole Fuller is to dance in America next season.

Sunday is the only matinee day in Buenos Ayres.

William Bonelli and Rose Stahl will star in "Janice Meredith."

Minnie Dupree will star next season in "Rose o' Plymouth."

W. B. Curtis is to star in "The Greenhorn from Breslau."

Whitney is to produce "When Johnnie Comes Marching Home."

Robert Drouet has written a play, entitled "The Captain's Interference."

Julia Marlowe, E. S. Willard, Ferdinand Gottschalk and Adelaide Herrmann sailed last week for Europe.

Mrs. Langtry will make a tour of the United States next October, with "Mademoiselle Mars" and "The Degenerates."

"Looping the Loop" is announced from America, and may be expected at the Aquirium next time in June.—London Letter in Clipper.

Mason Mitchell has been appointed United States consul at Zanzibar. Mr. Mitchell announces that he has retired from the stage for all time.

Eddie Foy has signed a two years' contract with Klaw & Erlanger to appear in extravaganza. He will be in the cast of "Bluebeard" next season.

Zelie de Lussan is to return to this country next winter for a concert tour under the management of Loudon Charlton. She has been abroad for a year.

David Warfield was taken ill last week in New York, and was operated on for appendicitis. The operation was successful, and Mr. Warfield is recovering.

Camille D'Arville will be starred by Frank L. Perley and George W. Lederer, at the head of a new opera organization. The tour will begin either next season or the following one.

Gustave Salvini, one of the sons of the Italian tragedian, will be Mary Mannering's leading man next season in her new Clyde Fitch play. Mr. Salvini has recently been in the support of Eleanor Duse.

Klaw & Erlanger's production of Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn" will receive its premier in Hartford, Conn., next November. Lee Arthur is at work on the stage version. Arthur Dunn will play the title role.

Rose Melville was granted a decree of divorce at Cincinnati, O., on Thursday, June 5, and was permitted to resume her maiden name, if she so desired. She sued as Rose Hardy, wife of Harry Hardy.

Henry E. Dixey and Amelia Summerville have arranged to combine for a short summer tour in the best vaudeville theaters, where they will present an act that will revive pleasant memories of Adonis days.

John A. Rogers is particularly anxious to have his friends know that there is nothing wrong with his mental condition. He was recently sent to Bellevue hospital to be examined as to his sanity, but was discharged.

"The Defender," which is classified as a "yachtical extravaganza," book by Allen Lowe and music by Charles Dennie, was first produced by A. H. Chamberlyn at the Castle Square, Boston, Mass., on June 5. It was well received.

Now plays current in Chicago include "The Storks," "Ping Pong," "The Suburbans" and "The Wizard of Oz," the latter a musical extravaganza, based on Frank Baum's fairy tale of the same name, will be launched at the Grand Opera house June 16.

The new comedy by George C. Hazleton, which Harrison Grey Fiske will produce next season, is entiled "Captain Molly." The play will be produced under the supervision of Mrs. Fiske, although she will not appear in it. The leading part will be played by Elizabeth Tyree.

A Greek opera company at Constantinople wishes to perform "La Boheme," by Puccini, but the censor stopped the performance on the ground that in the first act some money bearing the effigy of a King is thrown on the stage. This indignity to royalty scandalized the Turkish censor as being derogatory to the dignity of King Louis Philippe, the monarch of the period.

The earl of Rosslyn has signed a contract with Charles Frohman to open at the Garrick theater, New York, on Sept. 5, in Capt. Marshall's new comedy. Up to the present time the earl has always appeared on the stage here under the name of James Erskine, but it is provided in Mr. Frohman's contract that in the United States he will be billed as the earl of Rosslyn.

THE HOME AND ITS MISTRESS

By Emma Irene McLagan.

There is a great deal of quite unnecessary philosophizing and moralizing nowadays over the duties that naturally fall to the mistress of a home. It appears that the philosopher finds food for wise saws as to accepting one's lot with resignation, because of the mutability of all things, and therefore the uselessness of bothering about anything; while the moralist can spin you sermons by the yard on the beauty of your life, the good that will eventually come from your seeking to learn the true inwardness of it, and so on and on ad nauseum as well as ad infinitum. Now, as a matter of fact, there is really no calling a woman can adopt, if we may use the expression—accept, perhaps, is better—where she may find such scope for her individuality and be so sure of lasting results, far beyond her own day and time, as the one of wife, mother and mistress of her home; and this without the need of any sort of resignation, any martyr's crown, or any search for occult reasons as to the whys and wherefores. Indeed, common sense, in its fullest and broadest significance, is the very best and wisest of mentors. Were I asked to define common sense I could think of but one answer—to be able to see matters as they really are, free of mawkish sentiment, without prejudice and without expecting too much of poor humanity. Would not this appear to be a common sense course?

Sentiment is very fine; this world would be poor indeed without it, but there is a time and place for its use, and it is very often abused, beautiful attribute of human nature though it be. Take, for example, the story told of the young wife who met her husband upon his return from his business with an outburst of tears and smiles, and, throwing herself into his arms, exclaimed: "Oh, John, dear, I've just been reading over the letters you wrote me before we were married! How desperately you loved me, didn't you?" "Yes," replied John; "I believe I did. Is dinner ready? I am nearly famished." Sentiment had taken the place of common sense in that young wife's understanding, yet I've no doubt the story would have ended in her either retiring mortally offended, deeply wounded or convinced that a man is an unsympathetic, unsentimental brute.

The sentiment that weeps over imaginary trials and troubles is exasperating to a matter-of-fact companion; it is the same that causes its possessor to brood over fancied slights, magnifying them into injuries; the same that demands constant apologies for omissions and commissions of which we are both innocent and ignorant.

You do not need to go far in any direction, dear mistress, to find the thing you need most of all in your daily life. You need not study psychology or philosophy; you need not probe for motives within your own soul, nor, indeed, anyone's; you need, according to divine law, not stopping to weigh each individual action ping to weigh cacha individual action and to dig down for any atom of wrong purpose you might find in weak human nature, your own included. Never mind the philosophers and the moralists; never mind the various cults that come before your mental vision. I am afraid you would find upon thorough investigation that said cults are phantasms—creations airy and without any reason for their existence other than the egoism of their creators.

If you pursue the even tenor of your way, making the beloved of your heart happy by sweet, cheerful companionship, marking each little soul God has given you to rear with strong and indelible traits of sobriety, honor, truthfulness, charity and all manner of kindly attributes, following the golden rule with all your heart and soul and mind; if you do all this and look well after the ways of your household, studying economy and using wisely what is yours, be it much or little, believe me there will be no time for you to do any other thing; no time for occult research and consequent restlessness of thought. And it will work out so beautifully, like a problem in mathematics, that is so easy after it is proven, and to which there is always a key. You are the key my dear; it is your words and speech, your manner and action that work out the problem of your own domestic life, with no difficulty in the doing if you are quite straight-forward, simple and natural, and if you cultivate common sense.

You must not forget that flies breed disease; they carry infection, and to them may be traced outbreaks of various diseases in widely separated localities. See that they do not crawl over the food that is to be served, as it is in this way they convey infection.

Try the following recipes for the slight ailments summer heat usually brings to the little ones of the household. There is really no occasion for alarm or even for a physician if the mother knows what to do for the bowel trouble or the nausea to which children are subject in hot weather.

For the first give toast water instead of plain water as a drink for a day or two. Simply pour boiling water over toasted bread; let stand an hour or two, strain and use either with or without sugar. See that the toast is dry and not burned. Or parch rice in the oven until a rich, even brown; throw into boiling, salted water, and boil until perfectly tender; strain and use the water when quite cold; both of these are good for the bowels.

For nausea, which is only an effort of the stomach to rid itself of something repellant give a little lime water in milk, in the proportion of one teaspoonful to three of milk; the addition of pounded ice makes this a pleasant and efficacious, while absolutely harmless, remedy.

A fine cauliflower served whole is an ornamental dish and you may easily preserve its beauty by tying it in a square of cheesecloth before boiling; then it can be lifted by the tied corners and opened on the platter, which must be always very hot. A nice drawn butter sauce, which is simply melted butter with a very little boiling water and some minced parsley is just as savory, and not so troublesome as the usual cream sauce.

If you are practicing economy, either from choice or through necessity, gaze from afar on the various tempting preparations offered under the general name of salads. You will find shrimp, crab, lobster, every variety of shell fish salads on exhibition for your buying, but they are simply atrocities, and you should neither buy them nor eat them. All shell fish must be absolutely fresh when eaten; otherwise they are a menace; canned food of that sort may possibly be used in winter, but beware of it during hot weather. There can be many deaths traced to this free partaking of these things in summer time.

Other fish, such as fresh salmon, broiled mackerel and sardines, when of good brands, may be used safely, and really make, with the addition of home-made mayonnaise and crisp lettuce, a wholesome and satisfying meal. But if you cannot buy the best from a responsible grocer and of a first-class name, do without. Inferior canned goods are never healthful food.

When once liberated within your system, it produces a most wonderful effect. It's worth one's last dollar to feel the pleasure of life that comes by taking Rocky Mountain Tea. Ask your druggist.

GOSSIP OF THE STAGE

New York, June 14.—The whistling habit has settled upon audiences in New York almost as firmly as in Philadelphia, but far more recently. In the two summer musical shows produced last week the persistency of this new diversion was evident. No assemblage at the Knickerbocker fails to whistle "Nancy Brown" after Marie Cahill has sung it several times, and the applause continues so that the orchestra will accompany the whistlers. "King Dodo" has "The Tale of the Bumblebee" and "The Show Girl" has "Psyche." To save any trouble in selecting the most popular tune on the first night of "A Chinese Honeymoon," such members of the orchestra as did not have to use their mouths in playing their instruments whistled the air of "Mr. Dooley" to encourage the people to pucker. But that simply accentuated a weakness, almost the only weakness, in "A Chinese Honeymoon." The music throughout is pleasant, but not one tune is worth remembering, or, indeed, striking enough to enable one to memorize it. On the other hand, many are agreeable enough to aid the words they accompany, and in every case the singers are so much better than their songs that hardly a number is not distinctively successful. Katie Barry has three ditties so characteristically cockney that they seem almost like parodies on the real thing. Could anything more truly suggest the London 'alls than this?

"The twiddle bits 'e used to play when all alone with me.
Lopping around whenever 'e found an opportunitee.
Oh, those twiddle bits 'e used to play, they almost gave me fits,
Me 'eart 'e won and the deed was done.
With 'is dear little twiddle bits."

It isn't necessary to go to the Casino to hear the tune of that. There could be only one. Miss Barry is grotesquely funny in the verses about the music teacher who thus won her heart, and, when she had paid twenty-five yearns in advance, quitted her on their proposed wedding day. Later, at the very end of the play, she again sings of a piano tragedy. This is about a musical family who went to a seaside boarding house and took their musical instruments:

Martha spanked the grand pianner,
popper beat the drum,
Mother in a soulful manner blew the bootle-tum.
Charlie swung the concertina, Bob went whistle-whee,
But I'm a brick for I waggled the stick with a one, two, three.

Tom Seabrooke adds to the gayety of this number by beating wildly on a big bass drum. Perhaps in no other portion of the show does the good-humored quadilling in Mr. Seabrooke's fun comes out so strongly. There is something about his foolery that not only makes us laugh, but also creates a friendly feeling. He is unfortunate in having no extra good song. Much as "Mr. Dooley" is helped by its whistling chorus, it is only Mr. Seabrooke's personal drollery that carries it. He should, and probably will, be better supplied in a few weeks. Good as "A Chinese Honeymoon" is, some new numbers should be put in.

The third cockney song that Miss Barry sings is about a girl who wants to live "in lidy and with the liddies' rank." Among her ambitions is to peroxide her hair the fashionable shade so that "folks will stare and say 'there's 'air, she's a loldy bred and born.'" Among the humorous songs is "The a la Girl," principally because Adele Ritchie makes it so. She is only mildly amusing as the English maid who "buys her frocks in Brixton, but they're fashioned a la Jay's," and as the French girl "a la Folies-Bergere." But she becomes uproariously funny as the Yankee girl who does "the thing in swagger form a la the Hotel Cec." The Brother Jonathan accent and American brashness that Miss Ritchie puts into this verse are delightful, because usually in these songs about girls of all nations every one is made ridiculous, excepting the American girl.

Applause must settle the value of everything in musical farce, and judging in that way, Aimee Angeles has made the biggest success in "A Chinese Honeymoon" with her imitations. She is an excellent mimic, not so sure in her reproductions as Chsie Loftus or Fay Templeton, but quite likely that is due to her newness. Where she has the advantage over them is in her skill as a dancer. After each of her imitations she dances, and reproduces with amusing effect the awkwardness of women whose fame does not rest on their agility. Her shy manner saves her from seeming impertinent. The women's awkwardness is differentiated as neatly as their voices. Minnie Ashley is not very clumsy in dancing after "Rhoda and her Pagoda," but her machine-like movements become comic when shown by Miss Angeles. In Fay Templeton's steps after "Rosie" we see the clever woman who knows her limitations and therefore tries to attract attention from her feet by making her hands conspicuous, or her facial expression the center of interest—anything to keep all eyes from feet that are small, yet seem a bit heavy when Bonnie Maginn is on one side and Aimee Angeles on the other. The awkwardness of Anna Held and Adele Ritchie, as compared to a trained dancer, is brought out as positively and individually. Ethel Barrymore is to be next. Miss Angeles is preparing an imitation of her at the end of the second act of "Capt. Jinks of the Horse Marines" when she dances though her heart is breaking.

The song that the first night audience at "The Chaperones" selected to whistle was called "Blooming Lize." It was a sextet, sung by Harry Conor, Walter Jones, Joseph Miron, Lou Middleton, Trixie Friganza and May Boley. The verses explained that Lize was so like the fresh, blooming flowers that every one called her "Blooming Lize," the point that later sprang forth being that "she told those blooming lies." The music of this was so catchy that it was immediately taken up by the listeners. In most of the cases, however, the words beat the tunes, but better than either of these were the same lines in the play. Whether they were written by Frederic Rankin or not is not known and does not matter to the public for entertainment. Anyway, they are all in two characters, although others have as much or more to do with the plot. The roles that Harry Conor plays and the one built up by Marie Cahill are too witty ones. The others are sometimes amusing, but never clever. As the head of the chaperons talks exactly as Miss Cahill does in "The Wild Rose," and as no one else does, the author of the lines seems obvious. But original humorists cannot be copied closely enough to make parts fitted to them suit any one else. Who ever saw any one fill May Irwin's place, or could any actor step into a role fashioned to fit Frank Daniels and succeed in it without fundamentally altering it? Mr. Conor's part in "The Chaperons" was at first taken by Dingby Bell, but the first-named comedian has had it long enough to suit it to himself. He even weeps when the prima donna sings a sentimental ballad, just as he did in the old Hoyt days, but he is still funny enough in doing it to make an audience rock with laughter.

What might be called the prima donna role is played by a Lederer find. Nellie Follis was in the chorus when G. Lederer joined "The Chaperons" to enliven it. He taught her as he did Edna May, step by step, when to look up and when to glance demurely down. She is a very pretty girl with a sweet although rather light voice. New Charms should be accentuated by a background of familiar ones. Edna May had Ada Dare, Eylvia Thorne, Marie George and a stage full of familiar Casino women to set off her novel demureness. Miss Follis is one of many new ones. Even Trixie Friganza seems new as leading actress. And Miss Follis has not a "Follow On," not to mention "The Ornamental Purity Brigade," which Miss May also sang in "The Belle of New York." She has two attractive ballads though, one about the "maiden who could not say no," sung with amusing incidental comments by Walter Jones. Then in the second act she sings about a man who confused her by the expression of his eyes. In this she is helped by a frisky chorus. This snap and go is what carries a negro ditty "Sambo," sung with violent success by Eva Tanguay.

Two graduates from the chorus come to the extreme front in "The Chaperons." They are Trixie Friganza, who smacks of May Irwin, and Eva Tanguay, about as jolly a little stage tough as we have had. Miss Tanguay's violence may shock some persons, but it is comic, its vulgarity is not indecent, and she may be set down as the most popular single thing in the show.

THE FLINTS COMING.

Will Be at the Lyceum All Next Week.

ad DRAMATIC ft.6..HSS?htff m

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Flint, the hypnotists, and their company, will be at the Lyceum next week, presenting their entertainment, that is filled with fun and much that is mystifying. Of all the hypnotists now upon the American stage, Herbert L. Flint stands confessedly at the head. His native abilities in this direction are wonderful, and show that he possesses occult powers of the high type. He takes a class of twenty from the audience, and in a very few moments he has them under perfect control, ready to obey his slightest wish. They will see things which he suggests with the reality of perfect vision as if they stood before the object. All sorts of hallucinations are experienced and all kinds of vagaries are exhibited, but the whole entertainment, while exhibiting all of the phenomena of hypnotism, is done without the slightest detriment to the subjects. They go through the most surprising feats and then awaken and enjoy the entertainment and laugh at their comrades who are executing some ridiculous feat in their turn.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO.

Mrs. "Jack" Bloodgood Married And May Retire.

New York, June 14.—Last week broke all records for summer theatrical activity. "A Chinese Honeymoon" and Miss Viola Allen in "The Hunchback" made their bows on Monday evening, and on Thursday we had "The Chaperons" and Miss Grace George in "Frou-Frou." It was a source of much regret that Miss Allen was obliged to cut her stay in this city so short. Despite the hot weather the Garrick was packed to the doors at each performance and the play could readily have had a run of considerable length. Miss George, too, is with us but for three nights, although it is possible that she will repeat this production next season.

The marriage of Mrs. Clara Bloodgood to William Laimbeer, broker and stock exchange member, attracted much attention among theatrical folks. When Mrs. Loimbeer was the wife of John Bloodgood, Jr., she made her début upon the Empire in "The Conquerors," hoping thereby to contribute to the support of her husband, broken both in health and fortune. Her theatrical comrades looked upon her coming with much misgiving, but she displayed considerable talent and was withal so companionable that she speedily developed lasting friendships on every hand. From the Empire she went to Amelia Bingham and later to Elsie de Wolfe, with whom she appeared in "The Way of the World." She had signed a contract with Charles Frohman to appear in a new Clyde Fitch play next season, but, Cupid having interfered, Frohman, I understand, has released her from his service.

According to E. J. Ratcliffe, who returned to broadway this week, Theresa Vaughn is to blossom forth as a star next fall, after her long retirement in a sanitarium near Worcester. Mr. Ratcliffe, who saw her only a few days ago, says that she is in much better health than she has been for years, her mind is strong and perfectly normal and she is filled with ambition to return to the stage. Ratcliffe denies that there is any trace of white hairs which, it was reported, were the result of her long illness. She drives about a great deal and is exceedingly anxious to leave her present quarters.

* * *

There was much excitement on Broadway one afternoon last week. A couple of automobiles sihed and three runaways were reported by the police of the Tenderloin precinct, all because Corse Payton journeyed over from Brooklyn in a new suit of clothes. He is going to England in a few weeks, and expects to startle the English populace. If he does half as well as he did on this side of the bridge there is no telling what kind of international complications may arise.

* * *

Lulu Glaser has a double at West Point, that is so far as figure is concerned, and she is busily forwarding much interest to meeting the unknown cadet next week. The graduating class of the military academy went to witness "Dolly Varden" in a body Thursday evening. Mr. Whitney, in Miss Glaser's behalf, wrote to the commandant at West Point to say that if he would supply Miss Glaser with a cadet uniform she would appear in it as a special tribute to Uncle Sam's soldier lads. No one yet knows whether or not Miss Glaser sent her official measurements, but the fact is known that if the uniform sent her fitted—well, as nearly like wall paper as possible.

* * *

A. H. Chamberlyn, the Boston theatrical wonder, blushed coyly when asked if his unknown and certainly munificent angel is none other than Thomas Lawson, who has been rapidly spending the money he made in copper on yachts and other expensive trifles. Mr. Chamberlyn would not reveal his secret, but pointed to the name he had given to his largest production, "The Defender." He also hinted that Brandywine would be given a chance to admire his work of art before months are over.

* * *

James K. Hackett will open his season in New York at Wallack's theater early in November, when he will present his dramatization of Winston Churchill's novel, "The Crisis." His company will be practically the same as that which appeared in the play during its recent spring tour. The company includes Miss Charlotte Walker, Joseph Brennan, Thomas A. Hall, Brigham Royce, Edward Donnelly, James Scott, Frank Patton, John Mackin, Wyman Grayon, Charles Howard, Harry Miller, Joseph Mackin, Miss Deronda Mayo, Miss Lottye Hicks, Miss Isabelle Donnelly, Miss Georgianna Pitcher, Miss Grace Barber, Miss Isabel Richards and Miss Mary Marble. Mr. Hackett will spend his summer in Europe. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Hackett, Miss Mary Mannering.

* * *

Robert Hunter, or "Bob," as he is better known all over town and outside of it, has forsaken the department of publicity for the more attractive role of leading man. Bob has spent the past season looking after the interests of Kyrle Benew, but the task of promoting pink teas and violet matinees wore so heavily on his soul that he left the employ of Liebler & Co. and bought an interest in the stock company with Walter Bradford, at Worcester, Mass. They have opened their season with "The Wife," with Hunter in the leading part.

Henry B. Harris has engaged for the companies to be under his direction next season Frank E. Aiken and Miss Maude Granger. Miss Granger will support Miss Percy Haswell in "A Royal Family," and Mr. Aiken will join Robert Edeson's company in "Soldiers of Fortune."

Digby Bell will be seen as Sam Weller when DeWolf Hopper produces "Pickwick" next season. Mrs. Laura Joyce Bell and George Chatman, the baritone, will also be in the company.

Harlem had another theater added to its places of amusement last night—on paper, of course. Henry Greenwall, of New Orleans, has arrived here after what he declared to be one of the most successful Southern tours he has had since he was interested in that circuit. He said that, in addition to the two theater buildings he controls in this city and Brooklyn, he proposes to construct a third somewhere in Harlem, presumably One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street. With the two he already has, he says, it will be comparatively small additional cost to operate a third with the same scenery and stock company.

Weber and Fields spent a few days after their return to this city in casting up accounts for their recent trip out of town. They found that their box office receipts reached the exceedingly comfortable figure of $131,000. This meant playing to an average of nearly $3000 a performance, and they were exceedingly well satisfied.

It is courting danger to stand under icy eaves. Not a few have learned this to their cost. Every winter injury and even death are reported as the result of this carelessness. But there is a far more popular way of courting danger. Every man or woman who neglects a cough is inviting sickness, and many a fatal sickness has its beginning in a slight cough.

The timely use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure the cough. Even when the cough is obstinate and there is hemorrhage with emaciation and weakness, "Golden Medical Discovery" always helps and almost always cures.

"I was troubled with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs and left me with a miserable cough," writes Mr. Joseph D. Burns, of 318 Huestis Street, Ithaca, New York. "I used two bottles of your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' after which my cough disappeared entirely. I cannot recommend your medicine too highly."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood, and lungs. Substitution means a little more profit to the dealer but a loss to you.

so much so that the rumor is current, if a [illegible] can be obtained for William Collier, the stock company will be started on its travels some months earlier next season, and a much wider territory will be covered. Incidentally, there is considerable doubt along the Rialto whether Cuser will resume the "White" when he appears this fall.

Messrs. Robinson and Temple recently assigned Percy Willing as leading baritone for their summer opera company at the New Star theater. Mr. Willing is the youngest son of Chief of Police Willing, of New York, and made his first appearance in opera under the direction of Shrigley in Paris in the fall of 1895. He will open in "Boccaccio" June 9.

Tyrone Powers will go abroad for the summer, returning in the autumn to a prominent place in the company of Mrs. Fiske. While in London he will appear with Sir Henry Irving as Bassanio in "The Merchant of Venice."

Catherine Linyard is to star in a farce comedy next season with Willard Simms. They played together for the first time in "An American Beauty" at the Casino, and since that time have been separated, Mr. Simms devoted his talent chiefly to vaudeville. Their new play will be entitled "Pickings From Puck" and the management will consist of Ollie Mack and Joseph M. Gaites.

The Earl of Rosslyn has signed a contract with Charles Frohman and will appear at the Garrick in September as the hero in Capt. Marshall's new comedy. Under his agreement with the manager the earl is to permit his title to be emblazoned upon the program, instead of the stage name of James Erskine, which he has been using in England.

A striking novelty in chorus work has been introduced in "The Chaperons." The curtain rises upon fourteen pretty girls, each playing a recent mandolin. The girls were picked out first and then placed under an instructor, who, in a couple of weeks, managed to put them into such shape that the orchestra could take a rest. The play, as produced here, is the result largely of George Lederer's work. He revised it on the road and again whipped it into shape before presenting it in New York. The indications are that it will run all summer at the New York.

Active preparations are already under way at the Academy of Music for Frank McKee's production at that house on Oct. 6 of Rumsey Morris' new play, "Ninety-and-Nine," which takes its title from Evangelist Sankey's world famous hymn of the same name. The present stage at the Academy is being demolished and a new one, as complicated with traps as a Chinese puzzle, will take its place. This change is made necessary by a sensational mechanical effect which will be presented in the third act. The scenery will be completed by the 15th inst. and a full scenic rehearsal will be had two days later. Miss Katherine Grey has been engaged for the leading female role. The principal part will be played by Edwin Arden.

The following story is undoubtedly true, as it is vouched for by a press agent who is willing to take an affidavit if necessary: "A stuffed kangaroo was the present received by Miss Elizabeth Kempsely in a box that had come all the way from Australia. It now adorns the porch of Miss Kennedy's house in Bensonhurst. At night it looks like a big mastiff sitting upright to guard the premises and serves the purpose of burglar-scaring-away admirably. Miss Kennedy next season will play the part of Mme. Trentoni in "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines."

"Yours Merrily" John R. Rogers, exhusband of Minnie Palmer and all-around theatrical man, is taking life easy at a sanitarium at Riverhead, in Jersey, nearly opposite this city, which he is using as his summer resort. When he was examined on a charge of supposed lunacy by the doctors in Bellevue hospital they recommended that he rest for a while, and he selected Riverhead as the place to lay off. His friends contributed means to pay for his board and other expenses and he is now enjoying Rimself hugely and at perfect liberty to come back to Broadway whenever he sees fit. A friend who seems to be familiar with his case says: "John is no crazier than he has ever been. He has always been willful and eccentric and while angered at what he considered unfair treatment by the theatrical syndicate he sat down and indited a letter to Abe Erlanger, one of the members of the syndicate, which was, to say the least, injudicious, and could be distorted into a threat. He never intended killing Erlanger as was presumed. He merely thought to frighten him into giving one of his stars and plays, three of his theatrical circuit. Erlanger became alarmed and invoked the law to his assistance. John has all he can eat, drink and smoke, paid for by his friends, and is at liberty to return to Broadway and active life whenever he considers that he has sufficiently rested. There are hundreds of men in New York who would be glad to be as well taken care of as is Rogers today."

Miss Viola Allen closed her spring season in "The Hunchback" here the other day, and shortly after sailed for Liverpool on the Celtic. Arriving at Liverpool, Miss Allen will be met by Hall Caine and his wife, and from here they will journey to Rome in quest of atmosphere for Miss Allen's forthcoming American production of "The Eternal City," a dramatization of Manx author's latest novel.

Col. George F. Hinton as ambassador from John Philip Sousa to the recorder of St. James is now on the ocean blue with a magnificently illuminated copy of Sousa's latest march, "Imperial Edward." In the coronation rush on the other side it is fairly possible that the ceremonies attending the reception of this gem by England's sovereign may be cut somewhat short, but the American people can rest assured that Hinton will get it into Buckingham palace in proper shape.

Alfred Hirschfeld, known to the vaudeville stage as Alfred Fields, of the team of Fields & Ward, has been granted a divorce by Justice O'Gorman of the supreme court here, from his wife Isabella, known in vaudeville as Belle Stewart. The plaintiff named as co-respondents such well-known variety performers as George Crawford, Edward Lattell and George B. Reno. The plaintiff offered evidence to pryove that his wife had been too friendly with these as well as other co-respondents named, and on this testimony he was granted a divorce. The couple were married by a justice of the peace in St. Louis in 1887.

Clarence Frohman, by cable received from London, announces that he has re-engaged Miss Jessie Millward, the English actress, to return to this country next season to create the leading female role in a new comedy by Capt. Marshall, author of "His Excellency, the Governor," for a period of at least fifteen weeks. This means that Miss Millward will abandon her intention of presenting "In the Palace of the King" in London until after her American engagement. The leading male role in the new play to be brought out at the Garrick in New York will be assumed by the earl of Roslyn, a lithad Britisher, who will come over to capture the applause of some Americans who are dazzled by a title.

When Dan McAvoy returned from his brief and somewhat hurried honeymoon in Boston he entertained some of his friends with a few remarks about his plans for next season. "I've had all sorts of offers," he said, "even one from George Edwardes in London. It may be that I will decide to cross the water, but I have not made up my mind as yet. I haven't signed a contract to star under Henry B. Sire's management, although he has made me a very attractive offer. Then there is a new burlesque to go on at the New York soon, and I can have the leading part in it if I wish. I am not worrying a bit about next year this trip."

Harrison Gray Fiske announces that the new comedy by George C. Hazleton, which will be produced at the Manhattan theater next season is entitled "Captain Molly." Although its period and several characters, notably that of Molly Pitcher, are of the revolution, it is not, strictly speaking, an historical play. Moreover, there is not a single red coat in it. The production will be under the supervision of Mrs. Fiske, although she will not appear in the cast. The leading role will be intrusted to Elizabeth Tyree, and Max Figman will direct the rehearsals.

FOOTLIGHT FLASHES.

Lole Fuller is to dance in America next season.

Sunday is the only matinee day in Buenos Ayres.

William Bonelli and Rose Stahl will star in "Janice Meredith."

Minnie Dupree will star next season in "Rose o' Plymouth."

W. B. Curtis is to star in "The Greenhorn from Breslan."

Whitney is to produce "When Johnnie Comes Marching Home."

Robert Drouet has written a play entitled "The Captain's Interference."

Julia Marlowe, E. S. Willard, Ferdinand Gottschalk and Adelaide Herrmann sailed last week for Europe.

Mrs. Langtry will make a tour of the United States next October, with Mademoiselle Mars and "The Degenerates."

"Looping the Loop" is announced from America, and may be expected at the Aquarium next time in June.—London Letter in Clipper.

Mason Mitchell has been appointed United States consul at Zanzibar. Mr. Mitchell announces that he has retired from the stage for all time.

Eddie Foy has signed a two years' contract with Klaw & Erlanger to appear in extravaganza. His wife will be in the cast of "Bluebeard" next season.

Zelle de Lussan is to return to this country next winter for a concert tour under the management of Loudon Charlton. She has been abroad for a year.

David Warfield was taken ill last week in New York, and was operated on for appendicitis. The operation was successful, and Mr. Warfield is recovering.

Camille D'Arville will be starred by Frank J. Perley and George Lederer at the head of a new opera organization. The tour will begin either next season or the following one.

Gustavo Salvini, one of the sons of the Italian tragedian, will be Mary Mannering's leading man next season in her new Clyde Fitch play. Mr. Salvini has recently been in the support of Eleanor Duse.

Klaw & Erlanger's production of Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn" will receive its premier in Hartford, Conn., next November. Lee Arthur is at work on the stage version. Arthur Dunn will play the title role.

Rose Melville was granted a decree of divorce at Cincinnati, O., on Thursday, June 5, and was permitted to resume her maiden name of Smach, if she desired. She sued as Rose Hardy, wife of Harry Hardy.

Henry E. Dixey and Amelia Summerville have arranged to combine for a short summer tour in the best vaudeville theaters, where they will present an act that will revive pleasant memories of Adonis days.

John A. Rogers is particularly anxious to have his friends know that there is nothing wrong with his mental condition. He was recently sent to Bellevue hospital to be examined as to his sanity, but was discharged.

"The Defender," which is classified as a "yachtical extravaganza," book by Allen Lowe and music by Charles Dennle, was first produced by A. H. Chamberlyn at the Grand Opera house, Springfield, Mass., on June 5. It was well received.

New plays current in Chicago include "The Storks," "Ping Pong," "The Suburban" and "Shady Hollow." It will be preceded by "The Wizard of Oz," the latter a musical extravaganza, based on Frank Baum's fairy tale of the same name, which will be launched at the Grand Opera house June 16.

The new comedy by George C. Hazleton, which Harrison Grey Fiske will produce next season, is entitled "Captain Molly." The play will be produced under the supervision of Mrs. Fiske, although she will not appear in it. The leading part will be played by Elizabeth Tyree.

A Greek opera company at Constantinople wishes to perform "La Boheme," by Puccini, but the censor stopped the performance on the ground that in the first act some money bearing the effigy of a king is thrown on the stage. This indignity to royalty scandalized the Turkish censor as being derogatory to the dignity of King Louis Philippe, the monarch of the piece.

The earl of Rosslyn has signed a contract with Charles Frohman to open at the Garrick theater, New York, on Sept. 5, in Capt. Marshall's new comedy. Up to the present time the earl has always appeared on the stage here under the name of James Erskine, but it is provided in Mr. Frohman's contract that in the United States he will be billed as the earl of Rosslyn.

THE HOME AND ITS MISTRESS

By Emma Irene McLagan.

There is a great deal of quite unnecessary philosophizing and moralizing nowadays over the duties that naturally fall to the mistress of a home. It appears that the philosopher finds food for wise saws as to accepting one's lot with resignation, because of the mutability of all things, and therefore the uselessness of bothering about anything; while the moralist can spin you sermons by the yard on the beauty of your life, the good that will eventually come from your seeking to learn the true inwardness of it, and so on and on ad nauseum as well as ad infinitum. Now, as a matter of fact, there is really no calling a woman can adopt, if we may use the expression—accept, perhaps, is better—where she may find such scope for her individuality and be so sure of lasting results, far beyond her own day and time, as the one of wife, mother and mistress of her home; and this without the need of any sort of resignation, any martyr's crown, or any search for occult reasons as to the whys and wherefores. Indeed, common sense, in its fullest and broadest significance, is the very best and wisest of mentors. Were I asked to define common sense I could think of no better answer—possible to see matters as they really are, free of mawkish sentiment, without prejudice and without expecting too much of poor humanity. Would not this appear to be a common sense course?

Sentiment is very fine; this world would be poor indeed without it, but there is a time and place for its use, and it is very often abused, beautiful attribute of human nature though it be. Take, for example, the story told of the young wife who met her husband upon his return from his business with an outburst of tears and smiles, and, throwing herself into his arms, exclaimed: "Oh, John, dear, I've just been reading over the letters you wrote me before we were married! How desperately you loved me, didn't you?" "Yes," replied John; "I believe I did. Is dinner ready? I am nearly famished." Sentiment had taken the place of common sense in that young wife's understanding, yet I've no doubt the story would have ended in her crying retiring mortally offended, deeply wounded or convinced that a man is an unsympathetic, unsentimental brute.

The sentiment that weeps over imaginary trials and troubles is exasperating to a matter-of-fact companion; it is the same that causes its possessor to brood over fancied slights, magnifying them into injuries; the same that demands constant apologies for omissions and commissions of which we are both innocent and ignorant.

You do not need to go far in any direction, dear mistress, to find the thing you need most of all in your daily life. You need not study psychology or philosophy; you need not probe for motives w....in your own soul, nor, indeed, anyone's; you best, according to divine law, not stopping to weigh each individual action ping to weigh eacha individual action and to dig down for any atom of wrong purpose you might find in weak human nature, your own included. Never mind the philosophers and the moralists; never mind the various cults that come before your mental vision. I am afraid you would find upon thorough investigation that said cults are phantasms—creations airy and without any reason for their existence other than the egoism of their creators.

If you pursue the even tenor of your way, making the beloved of your heart happy by sweet, cheerful companionship, marking each little soul God has given you to rear with strong and indelible traits of sobriety, honor, truthfulness, charity and all manner of kindly attributes, following the golden rule with all your heart and soul and mind; if you do as this and look well after the ways of your household, studying economy and using wisely what is yours, be it much or little, believe me there will be no time for you to do any other thing; no time for occult research and consequent restlessness of thought. And it will work out so beautifully, like a problem in mathematics, that is so easy after it is proven, and to which there is always a key. You are the key my dear; it is your words and speech, your manner and action that work out the problem of your own domestic life, with no difficulty in the doing if you are quite straight-forward, simple and natural, and if you cultivate common sense.

You must not forget that flies breed disease; they carry infection, and to them may be traced outbreaks of various diseases in widely separated localities. See that they do not crawl over the food that is to be served, as it is in this way they convey infection.

Try the following recipes for the slight ailments summer heat usually brings to the little ones of the household. There is really no occasion for alarm or even for a physician if the mother knows what to do for the bowel trouble or the nausea to which children are subject in hot weather.

For the first give toast water instead of plain water as a drink for a day or two. Simply pour boiling water over toasted bread; let stand an hour or two, strain and use either with or without sugar. See that the toast is dry and not burned. Or parch rice in the oven until a rich, even brown; throw into boiling, salted water, and boil until perfectly tender; strain and use the water when quite cold; both of these are good for the bowels.

For nausea, which is only an effort of the stomach to rid itself of something repellant give a little lime water in milk, in the proportion of one teaspoonful to three of milk; the addition of pounded ice makes this a pleasant and efficacious, while absolutely harmless, remedy.

A fine cauliflower served whole is an ornamental dish and you may easily preserve its beauty by tying it in a square of cheesecloth before boiling; then it can be lifted by the tied corners and opened on the platter, which must be always very hot. A nice drawn butter sauce, which is simply melted butter with a very little boiling water and some minced parsley is just as savory, and not so troublesome as the usual cream sauce.

If you are practicing economy, either from choice or through necessity, gaze from afar on the various tempting preparations offered under the general name of salads. You will find shrimp, crab, lobster, every variety of shell fish salads on exhibition for your buying, but they are simply atrocities, and you should neither buy them nor eat them. All shell fish must be absolutely fresh when eaten; otherwise they are a menace; canned food of that sort may possibly be used in winter, but beware of it during hot weather. There can be many deaths traced to the free partaking of these things in summer time.

Other fish, such as fresh salmon, broiled mackerel and sardines, when of good brands, may be used safely, and really make, with the addition of home-made mayonnaise and crisp lettuce, a wholesome and satisfying meal. But if you cannot buy the best from a responsible grocer and of a first-class name, do without. Inferior canned goods are never healthful food.

When once liberated within your system, it produces a most wonderful effect. It's worth one's last dollar to feel the pleasure of life that comes by taking Rocky Mountain Tea. Ask your druggist.

GRAND RAPIDS.

Grand Rapids, June 14.—At a special meeting of the village council held last Saturday evening, a settlement was made with J. M. Romans, for injuries received by his son, Victor, on the Third street bridge last summer. Mr. Romans at first demanded $5000, but at this meeting he settled for $500 and the village to pay for medical attendance, care, etc. The attendance at the special school meeting held last Monday evening was very small, the citizens and taxpayers, seemingly inking but very little interest in the affairs of the school board. There has been some difference of opinion regarding a site for the new building that is now to be built, some citizens being in favor of the old site, the present building to accommodate the pupils for some years to come, could be erected upon the sit of the Central building, as an addition thereto, but the meeting the board was instructed to secure a suitable site in some other part of the the city. The board was also instructed to erect a building that will cost not more than $30,000.

THE PICTURE ON THE CABIN WALL

BY FRANK H. SWEET

(Copyright, 1902, by W. R. Hearst.)

One bad season had followed another, and now there was destitution all through the Narragansett country. The few traders who were fortunate enough to have any goods left doubled and trebled their prices, and even then would take nothing but good standard coin in exchange. They refused even to look at the depreciated Rhode Island currency.

A few of the more wealthy landowners sent to Plymouth and Boston, and even to faraway Nlen Amsterdam and Philadelphia for supplies. But the poor settlers and the new arrivals from the Northern colonies, could not do this. They had to depend on the chase, and on such scanty harvest as they were able to glean from their newly cleared fields. As the winter came on, some of them became discouraged and drifted back to Plymouth and Boston.

But for the most part they were strong, hopeful men, having faith in the new country, and willing to endure privation and hardships until they could fight their way to competence.

Jacob Holdness had built his cabin in a small clearing overlooking the Saugatucket river. He was a watchmaker by profession, and had brought the tools of his craft with him. But finding them useless in this new country, he had put them away and tried to accustom his hands to the gun and plough instead.

During the summer and fall the family had not lacked for food. There were fruit and game in the woods, and fish in the streams; and by going to the Pettaquamscutt river, a few miles away, they could obtain crabs and other shell fish. And before cold weather set in Holdness had the foresight to catch and salt down a half barrel of mackerel.

His harvest had not been very successful this first year. A few bushels of corn and a basket or two of vegetables, and that was all. But the great misfortune came when he was caught under one of his own falling trees and crushed to the earth. He was unconscious when they found him, and weak from the loss of blood; but a few days in bed showed that although his injuries were very severe, they were not likely to prove fatal. Still it would be many months before he could do any more labor.

There was only 14-year-old John now to look after the outside work and provide for the family needs. Mrs. Holdness was almost an invalid, and the twins, Peggy and Joan, were not yet 8. The nearest neighbor was three miles away, and in nearly as bad a plight as themselves. There was no store or trading post in the vicinity, and even the occasional barter with the Indians was cut off, for the red men were still smarting under the sense of injury which they fancied the whites had put upon them, and several tribes had already sent in runners with ominous messages of arrows and snake skins.

John Holdness was a pioneer boy, however, and did not shrink from the prospect before him. He had grown accustomed to hardships and difficulties, and rather gloried in overcoming them. Every day now except when the storms were unusually severe he was in the woods felling trees for building. A small deer and several wild turkeys were added to the stock of provisions, and then the ammunition gave out.

John Holdness had intended to make a late trip to one of the Northern trading posts after powder and shot and salt, but now John would have to undertake the journey. Carefully boarded in the bottom of his strong box was a single gold coin, all that was left of the £100 which had accompanied him across the sea. It would not go far in provisions, but it would buy a little powder and shot, and perhaps some salt. The powder and shot were absolute necessities, and the salt they regarded as scarcely less so.

John was given the coin with admonitions regarding its safety and careful expenditure. It would take three days for him to go and return, but he had been over the route with his father and had little fear of being lost. After leaving the valley he would strike the old Pequot trail, and that would lead him almost to his destination.

It was a clear, crisp December day when he sent out. Icicles glistened on the trees and under foot the snow was packed firm and solid. But on the third day a fierce storm set in from the northeast. In the afternoon it grew bitterly cold, and Mrs. Holdness began to make frequent trips to the door. Night came early, but the storm seemed to increase with the darkness. The wind shrieked through the trees and around the cabin, and fine, soft fingers of snow sifted through the closed shutters and oiled paper windows. Mrs. Holdness piled more wood on the fire, and the light flared up and danced into every part of the little room. It revealed a few shelves in one of the opposite corners, and the family dishes of pewter and wood—it made weird shadows of the spinning wheel and caused them to waver up and down the rough background of the cabin walls. Some of it even flashed through the open door of the small cabin room and rested on the bed where Jacob Holdness lay, anxiously listening for the sound of his boy's footsteps.

But only the wind came roaring and shrieking about the cabin, and at last the invalid grew weary and fell asleep. The twins played before the fire until their eyes grew heavy and dull, and then they climbed up the short ladder to their bed in the loft.

But Mrs. Holdness could not sleep. Her boy was somewhere out in the storm, and he was cold and hungry. She piled more wood on the fire, and put water in the big iron kettle to heat. Then she refilled the little soup kettle and hung it on the crane over the fire. There was corn bread left from supper, but John preferred it warm, so she mixed more dough and placed it on the bread board, and set it before the fire to bake.

Drearily the hours passed away, and the noise of the storm was only broken by the occasional howls of wandering wolves. At last she drew out her spinning wheel and began to spin.

It was near midnight when she heard the door shake as though something had fallen against it. Opening it quickly she found John upon his knees, reaching for the latch, and in his arms, half held and half dragged the form of a young indian girl.

By a strong effort he staggered to his feet and drew the girl into the middle of the room. Then he sank utterly exhausted upon the floor.

"I'll—be all right in a minute, mother," he gasped. "I'm—tired out, that's all. It was awful," shudderingly. "I never expected to see home—again."

His mother brought him a dish of warm soup and began to remove his shoes and stockings.

"Look after the girl first," he expostulated; "she needs it more'n me. I found her on the trail. She became unconscious while I was bringin' her. I couldn't go more'n a rod or two without stoppin' to rest. I've been since dark comin' from Tower hill."

"Why didn't you leave her?" piped a shrill voice from overhead. John looked up quickly. Peggy's eyes were staring at him through the trapdoor.

"Oh, I couldn't do that, Peggy," he said, rebukingly. "I never even thought of such a thing."

"I'd a left her," declared the child, stoutly. "Injuns killed Uncle Tom an' stole our doggie. I wouldn't have nothin' to do with 'em."

Mrs. Holdness had been chafing the Indian girl's hands. She now rose and went after more of the warm soup.

"She's comin' to," in answer to Tom's inquiring look. "I'll give her something warm to drink, an' then put her to bed. I think she'll be all right in a few days."

It was late the next morning before John awoke. When he went down the ladder he found the Indian girl sitting by the fire. She turned quickly as he approached.

"Me waitin' see you," she said, gravely. "Want t'ank tor last night. Not many do like you, only great warriors. But you not know me?"

A strange look came into her face as she rose slowly to her feet. John shook his head.

"me Wachita, from big river country. Panther Leap, my fader."

Mrs. Holdness started and drew the twins closer to her. The girl saw the motion and her eyes gleamed.

"Panther Leap, kill, burn, destroy," she said coldly. "Hate paleface. Me, Wachita, only daughter. What you do now? Better left in snow," to John.

Mrs. Holdness' hesitation was but momentarily. Placing her hand kindly upon the girl's shoulder, she gently forced her back to her seat.

"You are sick and tired," she said soothingly. "You mustn't think of leavin' here just his injuries were very severe, they were not likely to prove fatal. Still it would be many months before he could do any more labor.

"An' what you do when me get well?" "Why, send you home, of course," indignantly. "You don't suppose we'd harm you on account of someone else, do you?"

A softer look came into the girls face. "Me not know," she said simply. "Me never see much of paleface."

In the afternoon she was on the floor playing with the twins.

The next day was pleasant, and after breakfast Washita made her simple preparations for departure.

answer to Mrs. Holdness' advice for her to remain another day. "He have many scouts huntin' for me."

"Panther Leap not know," she said in But before she left she took some pigments from her girdle and painted a rude picture on the door of the cabin.

"No take him off; no weather and doing a good deal of climbing about the cars, kept my condition aggravated. I felt all run down, and I say Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and procuring a box at the Duluth Drug company's store and used them. In a remarkably short time I was entirely relieved of the trouble. My wife was suffering from the effects of la grippe and had a great deal of suffering from her back. She used Doan's Kidney Pills and the results obtained were most satisfactory."

Timely Warning Comes to Duluth People.

Backache is such a deceptive thing.

It comes and goes—Keeps you guessing all the time.

Learn the cause—then cure it.

Nine times out of ten it comes from the kidneys.

It's the kidneys' cry for help—The warning of more serious trouble to follow.

Doan's Kidney Pills

Cure backache—and every form of kidney trouble, down to the very verge of Bright's disease—Nothing will cure that.

How do we know? Duluth proof—Lots of it. Proof that can't be gainsaid.

Here is one Duluth case:

Mr. C. Hackmann, of 2222 Michigan street, brakeman on the Northern Pacific railroad, says: "I was troubled for years with a heavy, dull aching pain through the small of my back and an unnatural and irregular condition of the kidney secretions. My work is particularly trying on the back and being frequently exposed to rough weather and doing a good deal of climbing about the cars, kept my condition aggravated. I felt all run down, and I say Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and procuring a box at the Duluth Drug company's store and used them. In a remarkably short time I was entirely relieved of the trouble. My wife was suffering from the effects of la grippe and had a great deal of suffering from her back. She used Doan's Kidney Pills and the results obtained were most satisfactory."

THE ARENA OF SPORTS

Board of Trade Ball Team Is Organized For the Season.

Games Being Arranged With the Big Duluths and Superior, Aitkin, Brainerd and Ashland—Games For Sunday.

The Board of Trade ball team has organized for the season, and the thirty-third degree fans are cordially invited to get out and root. The grain men were a little late getting a team in the field, but the delay is justified in the line-up announced. W. A. Jones has been elected manager. Three of the team played on the champion inter-scholastic team of the Minneapolis Central high school in 1900. The other members are all well known players. The Herald takes pleasure in introducing:

Glenney ..... Pitcher.
Chapman ..... Pitcher.
Gearhart ..... Pitcher.
Kempten ..... Catcher.
Totman ..... Catcher.
Barnes ..... First base.
Klichli ..... Second base.
Gearhart ..... Third base.
Getchel ..... Short-stop.
Blasing ..... Short-stop.
Cross ..... Left field.
McCarthy ..... Center field.
Jones ..... Right field.
Helm ..... Substitute.
Norton ..... Substitute.
Gentlemen, be seated.

This team is arranging games with Superior, Aitkin, Brainerd and Ashland, and the Big Duluth. This afternoon its first practice game is being played at Oneota park with a pick-up nine of high school and business college players.

Sweet memories of a summer idyl will be rudely shattered some time tomorrow afternoon when the Superior and Duluth Eagles meet on the baseball diamond in that lonesome village across the sad sea waves.

Duluth will win, but the size of the score has not been definitely settled as three of the local Eagles failed to report the number of home runs they were prepared to perpetuate. The following men are good for a batting average of at least .566 in this particular game:

Girard ..... Catcher.
Lambert ..... Pitcher.
Kremmerer ..... First base.
Goldie ..... Second base.
Schroeder ..... Short-stop.
Patton ..... Third base.
Schulte ..... Left field.
Daugherty ..... Right field.
Randall ..... Center field.
Roberts ..... Substitute.
Platt ..... Substitute.

* * *

The Big Duluth team, handicapped by the temporary loss of several of its best players, will do stunts at Brainerd tomorrow with the folowing line-up:

Campbell ..... Catcher
Duncan ..... Pitcher
Dahl ..... First base
Bowden ..... Second base
Alger ..... Third base
Dietman ..... Short stop
McPhee ..... Right field
Skelton ..... Center field
N. B.—Notice the large amount of new material in this line-up.

Danny Shay, the clever little short stop of the St. Paul team, tried to imitate the National league fad of contract jumping on Monday. He was arrested just as he boarded the train for California and fined $10 and costs in police court under a law passed at the last session of the legislature designed to prevent lumberjacks from hiring out and then deserting the concern hiring them after reaching a certain destination.

The cordial relations which have sprung up between British and American sportsmen will be accentuated by the action of Field and Stream, the sportsmen's magazine of New York, which has employed the Gorham Manufacturing company to make a specially handsome cup for the Ladies' Kennel association of London, to be competed for at their coronation day show, June 10, 11 and 12. The cup is for open contest, and it is the hope of all that it may be made a matter of international competition at no distant date.

The cup is a unique flower form, supported by three fish, and bears the coats of arms of Britain and America on one face, the seal of the Ladies' Kennel association on another, the unique buffalo skull device of Field and Stream on another, and the presentation face bears the picture of a prize-winning bulldog.

It is the desire of all that this cup should become as important an international matter as the famous America cup.

The presentation of this cup is unique in sporting annals, being the first ever offered for British competition by a representative American publication.

The performance of Arthur Francis Duffy of running 100 yards in 9 3-5 seconds will go down in athletic history as the greatest achievement on the cinder path of the present age. The little Georgetown sprinter electrified the entire athletic world by his brilliant performance at the annual intercollegiate meet on May 31, when he established a world's record which, in the opinion of experts, will stand for years, unless Duffy himself is able to cover the distance in 9 2-5 seconds.

Three things were necessary to bring about this important event—a great occasion, a great athlete and a perfect day. All of these conditions were found on the last day of the intercollegiates.

With a splendid record behind him, and a strong field to push him to his limit, this was Duffy's opportunity. A month before he had covered the distance at the university of Pennsylvania relay games in 9 4-5 seconds, and at that time one of the timers had caught the time at 9 3-5 seconds.

The track was in perfect condition, and a very light breeze was with the sprinters. Duffy declares that he had no idea of covering the distance in 9 3-5 seconds. What he hoped to do on this occasion was to run 100 yards, twice in the same day, in 9 4-5 seconds. When the race was over and the four judges agreed that he had won in the remarkable time of 9 3-5 seconds, Duffy was as much surprised as anyone else.

Professional runners have, at times, claimed to run 100 yards in 9 3-5 seconds, but the necessary proof to make such a performance stand was usually wanting. One record in this time which is generally conceded is that of Edward Donovan, who made this time at Natick, Mass., on Sept. 2, 1895. But 9 4-5 seconds was the world's amateur record. A dozen runners in this and other countries had made this time. The record had stood for so long that it was the general belief among sporting men that it was not within the power of a human being to cover the distance in shorter time.

This little one-fifth of a second has stood in the way of many a famous athlete in establishing world's records. Twenty-five years ago the intercollegiate 100-yard dash was won in 11 seconds. Year by year the record has been lowered. In 1901 the distance was covered in 10 seconds. This was considered a wonderful performance, but in '94 it was equalled by Ramsdell, of Pennsylvania, and the following year by Crum, of Iowa, who is also credited with a record of 9 4-5 seconds, But it was left to another Georgetown athlete to smash all predictions and clip the first one-fifth of a second from the record of even time. In 1896 B. J. Wefers ran the 10 yards at the intercollegiate in 9 4-5 seconds.

This was the American intercollegiate record, but as far back as 1890 there is authentic amateur records for 9 4-5 seconds. John Owen, Jr., of Washington, D. C., made this time on Oct. 11, 1890. Other amateurs who are credited with this fast time are W. T. McPherson, of Auckland, New Zealand, in 1891; C. W. Stage, of Cleveland, Ohio, in 1893; John V. Crum, of Chicago, in 1895, and James H. Maybury, of Chicago, in 1897.

But to Duffy remains the honor of holding the first amateur world's record for this distance, and makes him at this time the most interesting figure in American athletics.

Duffy hails from Worcester, Mass., where as a school boy he first became famous as an athlete. While in the Worcester high school he won many honors on the cinder path. Before entering Georgetown he won the national championship, in this event defeating the wonderful Kraenzlein, of the university of Pennsylvania, by a foot. This victory kept Duffy out of college athletics for a year, as it is in direct violation of one of the intercollegiate rules, which declares "that an athlete who wins a place in an open event cannot represent a university in athletics during his first year in college."

This is the same rule under which Shick, of Harvard, was protested by Yale. After a year at Georgetown, however, Duffy was permitted to compete, and for the last two years has participated in the intercollegiate meet. He is eligible to compete two more years at the college games, but, as he has but one more year in college, it is likely that next year will be his last. In fact, he declares that he will retire from athletics after his graduation. He is a student in the law school at Georgetown.

Judging from Duffy's stature, one would never guess that he was an athlete, much less a world's champion. He is but 5 feet 4 inches in height, and in condition weighs 137 pounds. He is as quick as a cat, however, and on account of his great spring has a stride of eight feet. This stride does not compare with such men as Kraenzlein and Tewkesbury, whose stride measures close to ten feet. From this it will be seen how quick the little runner needs to be to defeat such athletes as the ones mentioned.

Duffy had the honor of defeating these two champions from Philadelphia once each. The defeat of Kraenzlein has been mentioned, and occurred when that athlete was in his prime. He defeated Tewkesbury in a sixty-yard dash at the Boston A. A. games the year after "Tewkes" was graduated.

Duffy has equaled the world's record in the forty and sixty-yard dashes, and hopes to break all of these records before he gives up running. Sporting men who have watched his career believe that he will be able to do this. In several attempts to break the sixty-yard record Duffy has been "caught" by one of the timers at 6 1-5 seconds, but this will not stand until the majority of timers agree as to the time.

The first time that Duffy ran the 100-yard dash in 9 4-5 seconds was at the University of Pennsylvania relay games on Franklin field in 1900, but a slight wind aided the Georgetown flyer at this time, and Referee "Father Bill" Curtiss would not allow the record. Before this time he had been able to cover the distances under 100 yards in record time. It was said at that time that Duffy could not run 100 yards, but he has developed wonderfully in the last two years, and in the race a week ago at New York ran the strongest part of the race after the first forty yards.

What Duffy has needed in the last ye... was someone to push him. All his races were won with comparative ease. But in Shick, the fast Harvard sprinter, Duffy found just the man that was needed to make him break the record. Shick won from Duffy in a forty-yard dash early in the spring, and this showed the Georgetown runner that he would be up against the real thing at the intercollegiates. Shick came to New York with a record of 9 4-5 seconds, while there was a score of sprinters who had done even time.

This was the fastest field Duffy had ever been up against, and by winning in record time he proved he is an athlete of the right sort—one that can do his best at all times, and a little better if necessary when in competition.

A peculiarity of the Georgetown sprinter is that he trains himself. Most of our college athletes have been developed by some of the past masters in the art of training and conditioning athletes, but Duffy looks after his own training. He is careful of his diet when training, and, with lots of sleep and plenty of exercise, easily rounds into condition.

On June 14 Duffy sails for England, where he will compete in the coronation games on June 28 and the English championships on July 5. This is not Duffy's first trip abroad, as he has won foreign honors on several previous journeys.

If the English promoters can make their patrons think they are seeing championship fights there certainly can be no objection over here, says Malachy Hogan. Aside from the Walcott-West go, the only good fight on the English card is that between Tom Sharkey and Gus Ruhlin, which is set for June 25. This pair may put up quite a battle. They are both second-raters in the heavy-weight class, although both have at one time held commanding places in the list of the best heavy weights.

Sharkey has gone back as a fighter and Ruhlin has been exploded. The English promoters make the fight look better by announcing that the winner will fight either Jeffries or Fitzsimmons for the world's championship. P. T. Barnum would have made more money if he had spent all his time in England.

There is another match in the list that is not unlike an American arrangement. It is Tommy Ryan's fight with Johnny Gorman. Ryan, who is regarded as the best of our middle weights, has failed to impress people with his claim to that title because of his habit of fighting "easy marks." A few nights ago he had the courage to face Jimmy Handler in the ring. Handler was easy picking for Ryan, and the referee interfered to save Handler from a knockout. It has been Ryan's habit to fight men in Handler's class because it is easier for him to make money that way than by fighting men of his own class. He is in less danger of getting hurt.

* * *

"Philadelphia" Jack O'Brien is something of a fighter. He made his first appearance last week in the West since he returned from England with the middle and heavyweight titles of that country, and put Al Neill, of San Francisco, out in less than three rounds.

Considerable credit is due O'Brien for what he has done since he returned from England. He was not classed as a top-notcher when he left this country, and some remarks were made when he laid claim to be the best fighter in two classes in England. It was pointed out that American fighters must be much superior to those in England simply because O'Brien defeated the foreigners. Jack O'Brien is a much better fighter than supposed. He is one of the biggest surprises in years. He is not only a wonderfully fast man, but is entitled to compete with any pugilist in the world at his weight.

It is true that O'Brien has not whipped any champions since he returned, unless we take it for granted that he out-pointed Joe Walcott when the pair met in one of those Philadelphia bouts where no decision is rendered. He has whipped "Young" Peter Jackson and Charlie McKeever in Philadelphia, but all his bouts have been with a six-round limit. In all his bouts that have not been knock-outs he has been reported as having had the better of it.

The baseball season at Havana, Cuba, which closed last week, has proven a highly successful one, and the indications are that the American game will prove as popular in the recently organized sister republic as it is in this country. The games drew well and the managers of the teams in the league express themselves as well pleased with the financial returns. The success of the teams means that Cuba will be invaded by several nines of National and American leaguers this fall, and the Cubans will get a taste of what the game really is if they should clash.

* * *

Manager McGraw says that it is next to impossible to bunt the ball when they have as opponents Collins on third and Young in the box. Collins fields these little taps with lightning-like rapidity, and Young's fast ball makes it impossible to lay the sphere down in front of the plate.

* * *

After defeating every man of his weight in the country, and some considerably heavier, Benny Yanger, the undefeated Chicago pugilist, is after championship honors in earnest. His manager has posted $1000 to act as a forfeit for a match with Young Corbett, and he stands ready to make a side bet of this sum on the result of the battle.

* * *

Pedlar Palmer has evidently reconsidered his determination to retire from the ring. The former bantam champion is now taking the best care of himself and offers to box any man in the business. The latest issue of the Mirror of Life to hand has this to say of Palmer's future plans: "Tom (Pedlar) Palmer, in company with George Sheppard, called up at the Mirror of Life on Saturday on his return from Norwich, where he has been working a boxing combination, and in the course of conversation said he was very desirous of getting on a match with the so-called champion, Andrew Tokell, for from £200 to £500 a side and the best purse offered.

Pitchers say the foul strike rule is becoming more of a handicap to the batters as the season progresses.

Output of Calumet & Hecla Mine Last Year Over-Estimated.

Employing Much Smaller Force Than Eighteen Months Ago.

Present Year Expected to Show Increase In Reduction.

Houghton, Mich., June 14.—(Special to the Herald.)—The official figures of production by the Calumet & Hecla for the fiscal year ending April 30 show an output of about 20,000,000 pounds less than the commonly accepted estimate of copper produced for the calendar year 1901. While the figures for the calendar year will differ to some extent from those of the fiscal year, it is evident that the output of the mine has been over-estimated. As a result of the receipt of the revised figures it is apparent that the accepted estimate of 170,000,000 pounds production by lake mines last year is considerably in excess of the real output, which was probably about 150,000,000 pounds only.

The Calumet & Hecla is now employing a much smaller force than eighteen months ago, but it is stamping a larger quantity of rock. This rock, however, is not as rich in copper as the average of a few years ago. The maximum output of the Calumet & Hecla in 1889, when 89,610,963 pounds of refined copper were produced. Each of the two following years has shown a decrease. The present year should andd oubtless will show an increase, but it is a question whether the Calumet & Hecla, like the Anaconda, has not achieved its maximum output. The mine is by no means exhausted, or nearing exhaustion, but in the nature of things there must come a time in the history of every mine when the apogee is reached. The Calumet & Hecla must go deeper every year for its metal, and the operation of a very deep shaft is a task of such magnitude as to be comprehended only by those thoroughly conversant with such work. The Red Jacket vertical shaft of the Calumet & Hecla is but little less than a mile in depth, and is equipped with a duplex hoist of 8,000 horse power, and ten boilers of 1,000 horse power each. This plant, for the operation of a single shaft among the eighteen on the mine, develops more horse power than is required to run the entire street car system of the city of Buffalo, a town of 400,000 inhabitants. The cost of equipment for deep mining may be said to increase in geometrical ratio, rather than by arithmetrical progression. For exploratory work and the sinking of shafts to the depth of 200 or 300 feet, pony hoists carrying loads of a ton are sufficient. For deeper work, to a depth of about 1,000 feet, two ton skips are generally used, with larger drums and greater horse power. A third class of equipment is required for shafts ranging from a quarter to a half mile in depth, a fourth kind of machinery is needed, the hoists in this case running well into the thousands in horse power, and hoisting loads of six to ten tons. Such machinery is necessarily very costly in construction and expensive in operation. At the deep vertical shafts of the Calumet & Hecla and Tamarack mines there are hoists that raise loads of six to ten tons, vertically, at the rate of thirty to fifty miles per hour, or at a speed equal to that of an express train traveling on a horizontal plane, but requiring infinitely greater power.

The Protogene Gold Mining company, limited, has been chartered under the laws of Ontario, by local mining men and capitalists, to operate the Foley mines, at Mine Centre, in the Rainy Lake district of Ontario, on the northern side of Lake Superior. These mines have been considerable producers of gold, but have suffered from poor management in the past. It is hoped to resume operations next month, and as the mines have a complete equipment, including stamp mill, production can begin practically as soon as the shafts are unwatered.

The new mill of the Champion mine is progressing rapidly, and is about the only one in the district tha tis not suffering from delays in the receipt of machinery promised for delivery many months ago. Judging from the returns secured from the single stamp in use at the Atlantic mill, the Champion will make good its name by producing more copper per ton of rock stamped than any other amygdaloid mine in the lake district, and ranking second only to the Calumet & Hecla in percentage of copper secured from its rock.

When the Trimountain mine gets its four stamps in operation, the mine should produce about the same amount of copper as the Quincy. The present high price of Trimountain stock is unquestionably made by the owners of some 90 per cent of the stock, but of the wonderful promise of the mine there can be no question, and it should not be compared with Arcadian, merely because the same people are interested as owners. The difference between the mines is that Arcadian has a narrow lode, lean in copper, while the Trimountain has a lode that is the widest in the district, and among the richest in copper.

The Arcadian mine has been dismantled to a large extent, and much of its machinery sold, the bulk going to the Trimountain. Present activity its confined to the shafts at the southern end, which are showing better than those opened to the northward.

It is the opinion of the best judges that Isle Royale is actually earning a profit on its operations at present. Development work has been stopped, and the working force pared to the bone. The mill is treating about 1350 tons of rock daily, and the copper secured is probably about fourteen pounds to the ton, as the mill is now running.

The Mass mine made a fine output in May, and should turn out fully 200 tons of mass copper and mineral this month, barring accidents. A production of this size should show a profit for the company, as the working force is small and general expenses comparatively light.

The recent talk rewarding a consolidation of the Mass and Adventure mines seem to have been started without good foundation. The advantages of such a consolidation would be considerable, and it is not impossible that such a merger may be effected at some future time, though the management of neither company seems desirous of a consolidation at the present time.

The assessment of $1 per share levied by the Rhode Island will be used in continuing the exploratory work now under way at the property.

There seems little doubt that the Tecumseh has at last reached the copper chute making southward from No. 6 shaft of the Osceola mine, as the Tecumseh shaft, now about 1900 feet deep, has been in good ground for several weeks. Shafts No. 5 and 6 of the Osceola proper are about all that is left of the old Osceola mine at present, the northern shafts having been abandoned. The future of the Osceola Consolidated rests with the Kearsarge, and these give rich promise. The big amygdaloid lodes of the lake district are the Kearsarge, Baltic and Pewabic. On the first named are located the Mohawk, Wolverine, Kearsarge, South Kearsarge and Centennial mines. The Baltic, Trimountain and Champion are opened on the Baltic lode, and the Quincy and Franklin mines are working the Pewabic.

Coal receipts by lake mines continue very heavy, as the mines do not care to take any chances of a shortage in coal supply. It is probable that the receipts of soft coal for the present season will exceed one million tons.

Developments in the supposed Baltic lode, on section 16 of the Atlantic, are of a negative nature. It is by no means certain that the lode recently cut is the true Baltic, as there is either a big faulting, or an unusual twisting in the entire formation just north of No. 5 shaft of the Baltic mine.

WHY?
IS ELECTRIC LIGHT BEST
Because it is healthy, clean, pure and brilliant.
HEALTHY—
It has no odor. Professor Thompson states that one cubic foot of gas consumes as much oxygen as four adults.
CLEAN—
It causes no discoloration of furnishings and decorations in homes.
SAFE—
As electric bell work, no danger of suffocation.
CHEAP—
By using a little care in turning off lights when not in use it is cheaper than any other illuminant.

ARE STILL DIVIDED

Breach Over Cuban Reciprocity Continues.

Beet Sugar Men Again Decide to Stand Firm.

Washington, June 16.—It is still the purpose of the Republican members of the committee on Cuban relations to hold a meeting tomorrow for the purpose of conferring upon the question of Cuban reciprocity, and whether there shall be a caucus of Republican senators will depend upon the decision of the majority members of that committee. If they decide finally upon a bill and ask that a caucus be called to pass upon it, the call will be issued and the caucus probably will be held Wednesday. There is some feeling against a caucus on the part of the Republican senators who support the reciprocity plan, and on account of this sentiment there is a growing possibility that no caucus will be held. No one doubts that the reciprocity advocates would be in the majority in a Republican caucus, but the minority would be sufficiently numerous to show a serious division. It is the wish of the leaders to avoid this exhibition, if possible.

The beet sugar men show no disposition to weaken. They held a conference last night and again pledged themselves to stand solidly against the senate bill. They say as a result of that conference, that there are no fewer than nineteen Republican senators who will announce in the caucus, if one is held, that they will vote against the bill for a reduction of the tariff. There are some who are not willing to vote for the house bill with the Morris amendment included, but others say they will do so if pressed to that extremity. They continue to urge strongly the rebate proposition as a compromise, and they claim that their compact is firmer than ever before.

FOUR CARDINALS FAVOR

The Proposal of the United States to Purchase the Lands of the Friars In the Philippines---One Opposed.

Rome, June 16.—The complete success of the negotiations between Judge Taft, governor of the Philippines, and the vatican on the subject of the friar lands in those islands, appears assured, four out of the five cardinals composing the sub-committee of cardinals, favoring the governor's proposal. Cardinal Steinhuber, a Jesuit, opposes them.

After the completion of the negotiations an acute conflict is expected between the vatican officials and the Filipino religious orders regarding the disposition of the money which the United States will pay for the lands. The vatican considers that the money ought to be given to the propaganda, or Society of Cardinals having the care and oversight of foreign missions.

WISCONSIN'S CHANCES

Of Winning the 'Varsity Race Are Better Than Ever Before---Crew From Georgetown Attracts Considerable Attention.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 16.—The chief interest in the work of the college crews today centered about the Wisconsin and Georgetown representatives, as they are the latest arrivals and there has been no opportunity bfore today to observe their rowing. The reports that have come East concerning the Badgers were so flattering that there has been all along a strong feeling here that their chances of winning the 'varsity race are this year better than ever before. Consequently there was much disappointment when Coach Cobb announced that the men would not row before this afternoon.

Georgetown stock his risen considerably within the past two days owing to the warning of Coach Hanlon of Columbia, to "look out for Georgetown," and the appearance of the men from Washington certainly seems to bear out the impression that they are a strong lot, although their average weight, 165 pounds, is lighter than Cornell, Pennsylvania or

WILL MEET THIS WEEK

Seventh Annual Convocation of Missionary District of Duluth.

In Session Wednesday and Thursday at St. Paul's Church.

Bishop Morrison Will Deliver Address at Opening Meeting.

The seventh annual convention of the missionary district of Duluth of the Episcopal church will be held in St. Paul's church Wednesday and Thursday of this week. The missionary district of Duluth comprises that part of the state of Minnesota lying north of St. Cloud.

There will be in attendance about thirty-five clergymen and probably an equal number of lay delegates, who will arrive in the city Tuesday evening or Wednesday morning. The services will be opened Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock with the administration of holy communion, followed by an address by Bishop Morrison. The routine work of the session will occupy the remainder of the day.

Wednesday evening there will be a missionary meeting, and 10-minute addresses will be delivered by visiting clergymen. Thursday morning at 10 o'clock the Woman's auxiliary will hold its annual meeting, to which a general invitation is extended.

Thursday Bishop and Mrs. Morrison will hold a reception for the visitors and auxiliary at their home on East Superior street.

RICHARD MANSFIELD.

Seat Sale to Be Open Earlier Than Customary.

The announcement that the sale of seats for Richard Mansfield's appearance at the Lyceum next Monday would begin as early as the day after tomorrow, Wednesday, June 18, has caused a stir among theater-goers both in and out of town. The railroads have all consented to a round-trip rate for the accommodation of citizens of nearby cities who wish to come to Duluth to see Mansfield. Already mail orders are pouring in. This morning the postman was especially heavily freighted. In view of this, the management wish it to be understood clearly that every protection will be given local purchasers, while every courtesy and convenience will be shown mail orders which are accompanied by remittance.

The tickets for all seats in the house, except the press seats, will go on sale at 9 a. m. Wednesday. Those in line will have first choice. It will only be after the line has broken that the ticket sellers will begin to fill the mail orders. In order to avoid speculation a close watch will be kept on those buying, and large groups of tickets will be refused any one purchaser who cannot show clearly that he is buying for a party of theater-goers and not for the purpose of reselling at an advance. Of course no telephone orders can or will be taken while the first busy rush of the sale is in progress.

Mansfield and his company of sixty players will arrive Monday morning by special train of seven cars from the West. The curtain on "Beaucaire" will rise at 8:15.

There is a pretty irl in an Alpine hat.
A sweeter girl in a sailor brim,
But the handsomest girl you'll ever see,
Is the sensible girl who uses Rocky Mountain Tea.
Ask your druggist.

BIG CROWDS.

Many People Coming To Duluth On This Week's Excursions.

There promise to be nearly 4000 strangers in the city next Sunday. The Great Northern will on Saturday bring two sections of fifteen cars each from Litchfield and Benson and intermediate points, and it is estimated that there will be over 2000 people on the excursion. The Atwater and Benson bands will be aboard. The Northern Pacific will bring 1000 or more, it is expected, from Wahpeton and intermediate points, arriving here on Friday.

The 2900 people who spent yesterday here enjoyed the fine weather that prevailed all day. There were excursions morning, afternoon and evening, though both excursion trains left in the afternoon The Alexandria band which came with the Great Northern excursion played on the Argo in the morning and on the Iroquois in the afternoon. Many city people joined these excursions on the lake and had a very pleasant day of it.

Secretary Preston, of the Commercial club, is preparing to declare a 10 per cent dividend to the contributors to the fund for entertaining the visitors that the South Shore road brought from the copper country. This is said to be one of the first instances on record in this city that the fund subscribed has so overrun the requirements of such entertainment. W. R. Peyton, who was chairman of the committee, having the matter in charge, declines to place much stock in the statement. It was his first experience of this kind, and though it was not carried out to his satisfaction many have spoken of the successful way in which he handled his work.

The Medal Shoot.

At the Duluth Central Gun club shoot yesterday the Big Duluth diamond medal was won by Cap. The attendance was small, many members being out of the city. The scores were as follows:

	Shot at.	Broke.	Per Cent.
Cap	25	23	92
Warren	25	22	88
Nelson	25	21	84
Hugo	25	19	76
Jackson	25	18	72
Zopp	25	12	48

BOARD OF REVIEW.

Will Meet Monday, June 23, to Hear Kicks.

The board of review will hold its annual banquet for all protesters in the city assessor's office next Monday, June 23, beginning at 10 a. m. All taxpayers who have grievances because of assessments which they think are unjust are invited to be present. The board will probably sit two or three days. As a rule the business brought before it is cleaned up in that length of time and a report prepared. There is no reason to believe that the board will have a larger than usual list of guests this season.

SUPPRESSED.

Blind Pete Cannot Beg For Next Thirty Days.

The police court annals this morning showed that yesterday was a strenuous day for many besides the excursionists that spent the time in visiting the places of interest in the city. It was also evident that it was a thirsty day, and the class of inebriates that lined up before Judge Edson this morning for the usual admonishment were living examples that their thirst was not in vain.

The heaviest sentence was imposed on Peter Van Dyke, the blind beggar that has been making Duluth his headquarters for so many weeks past, in spite of the police department's efforts to get him to change his residence. Peter is a well-known character about the streets, where he is usually seen with a handful of pencils to sell. Yesterday, in celebration of the gladsome summer day, he took on a load of Bowery booze and started out to clean up everything that came his way. With his cane he assaulted everyone that came within reach and bestowed some hard knocks on Officer Miller when he arrested his headway. Van Dyke was very forcible in his remarks even after his arrest, and a charge of disorderly conduct was lodged against him. After sobering up this morning he pleaded guilty and was given a fine of $20 or thirty days in the county jail. He took the latter.

Charles McCauley and Fred Hagley, who were to appear in answer to the charge of drunkenness, forfeited their bail of $12. Paul Asselin, A. McMullen, William Schlebb were assessed $12 each or given the alternative of the county jail for ten days. Victor Mattison, John Sweeny and Theodore Swanson acknowledged that they were drunk yesterday, but were released under suspended sentences. Martin Marshall, who was taken in last evening by Officer Blain, denies the charge of being drunk and will stand trial. Thomas McDougal, against whom there was a disorderly charge pending, failed to put in an appearance and his bail was forfeited.

Ernest Sterglund, a barber, contributed $3 to the city treasury for being detected in the act of riding a bicycle without a light.

Of the three boys, Lee McNulty, George Connelly and Edward Kilby, whom the Northern Pacific Railway company had arrested for trespass, young Kilby was the only one to appear for trial, the other two forfeiting their bail. Kilby pleaded not guilty at first, but changed his plea to guilty and was assessed $5. The railway company has been much annoyed this spring and summer in the continued practice of boys about the ages of 13 to 16 years in jumping on trains, and from now on an example will be made of every boy caught doing it.

A PECULIAR BLUNDER.

Sidewalk Builder Does Queer Stunt In Numbering.

"11th" st."

That is the designation which appears in the new concrete walks on certain portions of East First street in the East End.

Amusement and disgust has mingled in the feelings of the East End residents who gazed upon this. They will be spared the necessity of permanently seeing this horrible blunder, however, for the city engineer has already taken the matter up with the contractors and they will put down new blocks.

The criticism is also made that the letters are not large enough, being only about one and a half inches long. It is claimed that no letters longer than that are obtainable at this time. However, the city engineer has ordered that the number of the streets be spelled out and not expressed in numerals and he anticipates that this will in a measure meet the objections that have been raised.

MUELLER CASE ON

The Attorneys and the Heirs Fill the Court Room.

Will Be Bitterly Fought Through All the State Courts.

New Set of Brothers and Sisters Added to the List.

The famous Mueller case was taken up in district court this morning before Judge Cant.

The case will take some time in trial, and it is likely that before it is finally ended it will go through most of the movements that it is possible to send a piece of litigation through.

It probably cannot go to the United States supreme court, but there is no certainty about that, nor will there be until the state courts have been exhausted. The parties to it will fight it bitterly, and it is likely to prove one of the greatest legal fights ever recorded in the state.

When the case was called in court room No. 2 before Judge Cant this morning the part of the room back of the railing was comfortably filled with heirs and claimants, and the part in front of the railing was pretty well settled up by attorneys.

Saturday afternoon Judge Cant made an order bringing a new set of heirs into the case. They are Kathrine Simon, Adelbert Mueller and Alois Mueller, two sisters and a brother, as it is claimed, of the late Johann Mueller, who died in 1899 in the belief that he was a very poor man and without the slightest knowledge that his little piece of land up in township 58-19, on the Mesaba range, would ever be worth all that bother that is now being taken with it. Mitchell & Reynolds represent this new set of claimants.

The legal talent involved indicates a determination on the part of all the various claimants to fight the matter out to the bitter end. For the plaintiffs are Frank D. Kellogg and C. A. Severance, of the law firm of Davis, Kellogg & Severance, Francis W. Sullivan and Towne & Merchant. The plaintiffs are Rev. F. S. Kosmerl, Joseph F. Buh, Nettie L. Geist and Ellen C. Sullivan, and the latter three claim through conveyances from Father Kosmerl, who retains a half interest. Monsignor Buh claims a quarter interest, Mrs. Geist claims seventy-thirty-seconds and Mrs. Sullivan claims one-thirty-second.

Among the attorneys for the defendants are R. R. Briggs, John Jenswold, Jr., John G. Williams, Alexander Marshall, Warner E. Whipple, W. E. Pickering and George P. Knowles, of Superior.

The defendants claim to be relatives of Johann Mueller, and they attack the title of Father Kosmerl, which comes through two mortgages and a deed from Mueller, the validity of whose signature to which is not contested. One mortgage, for $432, was given to F. F. Marshak, and assigned to Father Kosmerl by him. A second mortgage of $300 was made to Father Kosmerl, and Mueller also gave one Peter Schweitzer a deed to the property for an expressed consideration of $1000. Schweitzer has assigned his title to Father Kosmerl.

Both of the mortgages have been foreclosed. M. W. Bates was appointed special administrator of Mueller's estate, and he redeemed the property from the foreclosure before the period of redemption expired. The plaintiffs claim that Bates had no right to redeem. The defendants attack the Kosmerl mortgage foreclosure on the ground that no notice of the foreclosure was given to the Swan River Logging company, which was occupying the land at the time. As to the Schweitzer deed, the defendants claim that Mueller owed him $50 for board, and that the deed was made simply as security for that debt.

The defendants combine against the plaintiffs, and one department of the fight will be to determine the dispute between the plaintiffs and the Mueller estate. If the estate wins out, then the next fight will be between the various heirs to establish who are the real relatives.

Some of the various sets admit that others are relatives, and some do not. There are probably more brothers and sisters than there should be, and the question of who are the rightful heirs will be an interesting one.

Chief among the claimants are Katherine Mueller and her six children. Mrs. Mueller is from eDtroit, and she claims to be the widow of the former owner of the land that is involved in the dispute. She says they were married thirty-seven years ago, and that though he deserted her they were never divorced. She will dispute the validity of the two mortgages and the deed because she did not sign them.

The new brothers, Adelbert Mueller, and the new sisters, Alois Mueller and Katherine Simon, have been mentioned.

Wilhelmina Possok and Anna Paciska of Austria, claim to be relatives, the former a sister and the latter the daughter of the deceased sister.

Katherine Schafer and Christian Mueller, also of Austria, claim to be brother and sister of Johann Mueller.

Margarethat Berger, who is a sister of the above two, claims also to be a sister of Johann Mueller, and her nieces, Christine Zachman, Lizette Zachman and Christiane Zilly, claim to be the children of a deceased sister of Mueller.

Not much progress was made this morning. The case was started nearly two years ago, and there have been an abundance of motions of various sorts during the intervening period, but there were some motions still left in the repertoire of the attorneys to be sprung this morning. Mrs. Possak and Anna Pachiska gave notice of a motion to continue the trial for their claim, to be heard when it is reached. This was because some expected depositions from Austria, which should have been here in time for the trial, have not yet arrived.

C. A. Severance opened the case of the plaintiffs to the court after the preliminaries had been settled. He spoke briefly, saying that the plaintiffs would introduce documentary evidence of the various mortgages, deeds and assignments by which the plaintiffs secured their interests in the property. While he did not say that the plaintiffs would confine themselves to documentary evidence, he intimated that that would be about all the plaintiffs would have to start with.

Before a witness was called, R. R. Briggs, representing the widow and her children, objected to the introduction of any evidence under the complaint, as a bill in equity to remove a cloud from the title of the plaintiffs and to reform the Schweitzer deed, which had a mistake in the description of the property. He did this on the formal ground that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The arguments on this objection were still in progress at noon.

OF NO AVAIL.

Board of Public Works Turns Down Sidewalk Complaints.

The board of public works held a session this morning and considered at some length the protests that have come from various parts of the city because of new sidewalk ordered to be built. Particular attention was paid to West Duluth, from whence most of the complaints have come within the past few days.

C. H. Martz, of the board of public works, has spent the last two days thoroughly inspecting the sidewalks in West Duluth, and in his opinion the protests made have not been based on good argument. Mr. Martz relates several instances where property owners claimed that the sidewalk in front of their property was all right and needed only a few repairs. He demonstrated by lifting plank after plank and kicking the stringers to pieces with his heel that it would be a waste of the city's money to put down new plank on old stringers. Mr. Martz says that this condition of sidewalks exists all over the Third division, except in those localities where the walk was put down new last year. In many places the surface of the walk may appear all right, but the under side of the plank, as well as the stringers, has rotted away to a mere shell, leaving the walk in a dangerous condition.

The board claims that most all of the damage suits in the past year, against the city, on account of defective sidewalks, have been brought by people from West Duluth, and that while they are backward in asking for new sidewalks they lose no time in asking the city to settle when they get hurt by reason of a defective walk.

The board, in general, claims that it would be bad policy for the city to go ahead, furnish new planks, nails and labor to put new planks on rotten stringers, and that it seems to be the idea of some people that they can get a new sidewalk at the city's expense.

The members of the board expressed themselves as wishing to work no hardship on any property owner, but as there has been no instance where a property owner has come voluntarily to the board and asked for a sidewalk, that body is compelled to act when the walks become so bad as to be a public menace.

Certain members of the board take exceptions to the published statement of a West Duluth citizen the other day wherein he intimated that the board must be standing in with the contractors that have lumber to sell. Members of the board say that they are perfectly willing to compare their reputation with persons making such statements, and that the board is willing at all times to investigate the protest of any and all property owners, when made by them personally.

Commissioner Martz said today that the building of new walk may serve as a lesson to many people that have not yet learned to take proper care of their walks. He says he knows of instances where people have driven horses, cows, and even loaded wagons over their walks in defiance to the city ordinances, and then complain because they are ordered to rebuild their walk. He says that particular attention will be paid to such people hereafter, and all violations of the ordinance regarding the abuse of a walk will be properly punished.

In some instances where there has been a protest by property owners that their walks could be repaired with a few planks and nails, the board has suggested that the owner go ahead and make the repairs himself, but it is understood that such repairs have not been attempted in a single instance.

TRUELSEN'S

St. Paul, June 16.—Special to The Herald.)—The appeal of Henry Truelsen from the decision of the Duluth election board and St. Louis county court, awarding the mayoralty of Duluth to T. W. Hugo, was argued in the supreme court today. There are about 200 ballots to be examined by the court, and they ar marked in all sorts of ways.

To Consider Memberships.

The directors of the Commercial club will meet this afternoon to take up the matter of charter membership. Five hundred memberships have already been paid for. One hundred more must be paid before the lease for the quarters can be closed, and it is desired that these be secured at once. It is considered likely that after the required additional 100 have paid in, the initiation fee will be raised and the charter membership roll closed.

The monthly meeting of the club members will be held at the club rooms Wednesday evening.

COOL FOOD

For Hot Days.

Better health comes with less meat and fat during the warm weather.

By proper and pleasant diet you can prepare the body for summer and feel from ten to twenty degress cooler than your neighobr.

Grape-Nuts and cream, a little fruit and possibly a couple of soft boiled eggs, is sufficient for the breakfast. An ordinary portion of Grape-Nuts contains sufficient nourishment to sustain the body until the noonday meal; being a predigested food, it does not overtax the stomach and contains none of the heat supplied by the heavy carbonaceous foods.

Fully cooked at the factory by food experts, brings it to you ready to serve, and does away with the heat of cooking and the time necessary to prepare ordinary food, and its crisp daintiness is pleasing to the palate of young and old.

Many delicious recipes are found in each Grape-Nuts package, so that the form of eating this wholesome food can be changed to suit the user.

These suggestions, if followed for ten days, will convince the most skeptical that a cool body, an active brain and an energy hitherto unknown will prevail and the general lassitude peculiar to warm weather will disappear.

ROYAL S. LAIN

Is Real Name of Deaf Mute Who Shot Himself.

Royal S. Lain is the correct name of the deaf mute that shot himself in a West Superior street lodging house Friday evening. Brought face to face with death, and informed by the surgeons that his hours are numbered, the young man, who first gave the name of Richard Hall, has confessed his true name. Although very weak he was able to scrawl the information on a piece of paper. He also stated that his home was Canisteo, N. Y.

Since the publication of the young man's true name, it has been learned that he has a relative in Duluth. This morning W. W. A. Holgate, who has a real estate office in the Manhattan building, told Chief of Police Troyer that he is a cousin of E. L. Lain, father of the boy, who lives in Canisteo, N. Y.

Chief Troyer wired the father the news of his son's condition, and this morning the chief received an answer asking further details and asking if the son was dead, to have the remains shipped to his home.

Young Lain was still alive this afternoon, but no hope was held out for his recovery. An operation was to have been performed on him at 3 o'clock by Dr. Stewart with the hope of getting the bullet.

At Mr. Holgate's solicitation, Chief Troyer has wired E. L. Lain that he better come to Duluth immediately.

VISIT LANDS.

Large Party Going to Canadian Northwest June 25.

June 25 a special train will leave St. Paul for Prince Albert, in the Canadian Northwest bearing a large party of Northwestern men, who will visit the lands recently purchased in the Saskatchewan river district by Col. A. D. Davidson, George C. Howe and others. The train will be made up of four Pullmans and a dining car and about 100 people will go. They will go as fare as Prince Albert and will be away a week. One car will carry Duluthians.

June 25, which is Coronation day, will be spent in Winnipeg.

The company has already sold 300,000 acres of the 2,200,000 acres purchased, or one-third of the whole. Fifty thousand acres were sold in one lot, but aside from that nearly all was sold in small parcels not exceeding four of five sections in a lot.

VENEZUELA.

Revolutionists Bombard La Guayra; Government Shelled Maiquelita.

Williamstad, Island of Curacao, Monday, June 9.—Advices received here today announce that the Venezuelan revolutionists attacked La Guayra, the port of Caracas, Saturday, June 7. The government forces answered by shelling Maiquelita, a suburb of La Guayra, from the forts ashore and from the Venezuelan warship, Miranta. Only peaceful women were killed.

All the commercial houses at Guayra were closed the day of the bombardment and the inhabitants were panic stricken.

Eventually the revolutionists, who numbered about four hundred men, were repulsed. They destroyed the bridge at Bouqueron on the Caracas (English) railroad and stopped all traffic for twelve hours. They also cut the French cable and telegraph wires.

The people of Caracas were thrown into a state of alarm and every one began buying provisions, apprehending a siege.

The situation in Venezuela as these advices were dispatched indicated that a crisis was near.

A Dutch warship and the German cruiser Falke leave Curacao today for La Guayra.

DANGER OF FIRE.

Chicago, June 16.—In a sermon on "Rain, Storm and Fire," Bishop Samuel Fallows has laid stress upon the danger of fire in hospitals, apartment buildings and hotels in Chicago. The sermon was delivered in the pulpit of St. Paul's Reformed Episcopal church.

"I am no alarmist," said the bishop, "but I simply speak the truth when I say that the vigilance of our municipal authorities is needed in scores if not in hundreds of directions in Chicago today to guard against the contingency of fatal fires. Thousands of lives are in deadly peril every moment.

"It is not a spasmodic but a steady investigation that is needed of every building where people congregate that is not erected on fire proof principles."

Notable Arrival of Furniture!

During the past ten days we have received probably the largest assortment of Furniture ever received in Duluth in the same length of time.

The shipment consists of two solid 50-foot cars from Grand Rapids and equal to three carloads by boat from Eastern points, making a total of five full carloads of assorted Furniture of the choicest kind, all bought under the most favorable conditions.

Many of these goods were bought in January and the factories have just been able to ship them owing to the congested condition of manufacture. It is safe to say that you will find the display a most interesting one and it will be ready for your inspection tomorrow morning. It extends over the entire store and includes many unusual pieces and groups, such as choice Mahogany Colonial reproductions, graceful Teak Wood Furniture, substantial Mission Furniture in Fumed and Weathered Oak, India Punjab inlaid pieces, Japanese Carved Walnut Furniture, and a general assortment of useful and ornamental articles.

Wicker Furniture.

New Arrivals in all Finishes.

The demand for this style of furniture is growing—to meet this growing demand we have made a large selection of the best and newest goods in the market. Wicker rockers, chairs, settees—in all different finishes, upholstered and plain. To tell you all about them would occupy a page. To induce you to call and see them we place on special sale this week—a rocker like cut—with solid maple frame, basket seat, fancy woven back. This rocker is of THE LARGEST SIZE MADE—serviceable for porch, living room or bedroom. This week only—

PECULIAR SITUATION

Milwaukee Road Uses Northern Pacific to Retaliate on Hill.

Came About Through Tariffs on Lumber From Duluth.

New Lake Michigan Route For Which Much Is Claimed.

June 20 the Northern Pacific, and probably the other Duluth-Twin City roads, will restore the former proportional and local rates on lumber from Duluth to Minneapolis and the Southwest. About the first of the month the old tariffs were withdrawn, and a uniform rate of 7 cents was named, whether it applied to local business in Minneapolis or at points beyond there, but west of the Mississippi river. Previously, the Duluth-Southwestern rate plus 5 cents a hundred, with a differential under the Minneapolis local rate from this city of 1 cent.

A week or ten days ago the Milwaukee published a tariff restoring the 5 cent proportional Duluth to Minneapolis on through business originating here and destined for points on its own line beyond Minneapolis but west of the Mississippi. The local rate from Duluth to Minneapolis was not touched, for owing to the Milwaukee's traffic contract with the Northern Pacific it cannot solicit business from here consigned to the Twin Cities or business at the latter points consigned to Duluth. It is also out of the flour business via Lake Superior.

There is a suspicion that the lumber freight rate question was reopened by J. J. Hill's insistence on giving coast lumber a 2-cent differential under the Duluth-Chicago rate from Minnesota Transfer to Chicago. Other lines than those in the Northern Securities company opposed giving the differential, believing that the 10-cent rate from Duluth should not be shaded via the other route. Mr. Hill, however, thought that lumber was costing the people of the Middle West too much, and that coast lumber was needed to bring down prices at retail points. Inasmuch as he declared that he would name the 8-cent rate at any hazard, the other lines had to accept the situation. It would not be surprising, if the inner truth could be learned, if the Milwaukee is seeking a little retaliation for Mr. Hill's action, and that too via one of his lines. The Milwaukee is at least protecting itself.

It is said that there is not an immense lot of lumber moving from Duluth to the Southwest just now. Cedar, however, takes the same rate as lumber, and large quantities of cedar are going forward to the lower Minnesota, Iowa and other Southwestern roads and it will continue to move rapidly all summer. It is said that posts and poles from here are shipped as far south as New Mexico.

HAS GREAT POSSIBILITIES.

New Lake Michigan Route That Offers Much.

A new route from lower Michigan points to Duluth, saving eighty-five miles in the length of the present shortest route, is what is claimed by Dan W. Kauffman, of Marquette, for his new across-lake line via North Port and Manistique.

Mr. Kauffman has given an order to the American Shipbuilding company for the first of two immense car ferries, which will be ready for service at the beginning of navigation next April. This ferry will have a capacity of thirty cars, and will be about the same as the Pere Marquette ferry, which was turned out last winter, except that it will be equipped with more powerful engines. The ferry will also have passenger accommodations. It will cost $500,000.

The new ferry will be started on the route between North Port in the lower peninsula of Michigan, and Manistique in the upper peninsula. It will form a connecting link between ports that are open all the year around, for two sections of a system of railroad that are quite important though small. The Manistique, Marquette & Northern extends from Manistique almost due north, having a connection with the Soo line at Manistique and with the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic at Shingleton. This will give the road important feeders for its lines in the lower peninsula. A line is now projected between Traverse City and North Port, through Leelenau county, that is under construction and is to be known as the Traverse City, Leelenau & Manistique, which will have its lake port at North Port. At Traverse City the line connects directly with the Grand Rapids & Indiana railroad, a Pennsylvania property.

Mr. Kauffman advances a proposition which has stunned some of the marine men. He says that it is altogether possible for the road to handle ore down from Manistique, or possibly Duluth, and to handle coal back, all rail, by the use of this ferry, and thus for the first time in the history of the great lake trade bring the all-rail competition directly opposed to the boat lines into a trade the boats have hitherto monopolized. The undertaking is gigantic and almost incredible. Mr. Kauffman says, however, that he believes the rates can be made, and that the roads can be operated in such a way as to make it a paying business. The route would be the South Shore from Marquette to Shingleton, the M., M. & N. to Manistique, the ferry to Noth Port, the new T. C., L. & M. to Traverse City, and the Pennsylvania or its connections through to the valleys or the Pittsburg district.

DEMONSTRATION CAR.

Correspondence School Has One In Northwest.

Demonstration car No. 103, one of eighteen that are sent out by a correspondence school located at Scranton, Pa., passed through the city last evening on its way from the iron ranges to the Chicago Northwestern system, where it will make the rounds of the principal terminal or shop cities for the purpose of demonstration to its students in the locomotive engineer course.

The car represents an investment of $25,000, and is hauled about the country free of cost by all railroads, which are glad to give their employes and prospective employes a chance to learn in a scientific way of the operation of air brakes and other locomotive devices. First of all the car carries all the equipment of air brakes for a freight train of thirty-two cars. It also carries the brake equipment of a passenger train of ten cars, sectional parts of valves, cyclinders and other parts of the air brake system.

The school gives instructions by mail, and its cars visit the various points at which the students live and give demonstrations in order to illustrate and make perfectly plain in operation the learning imparted in the mail instruction. In this way, it is claimed, the same results are obtained in the end as if the student journeyed to Scranton to take the course in shorter time.

The car spent a number of days each at Two Harbors, Proctor, Mountain Iron and in this city. It carries a force of five men, under the direction of Manager T. F. Lyons. The instructor is John Pearson.

SPICK AND SPAN.

Lake Superior Limited Cars Coming Out of Shops.

The equipment of the Northern Pacific's Lake Superior Limited train has been in the shops and one train has come out looking spick and span. One train is put through the shops at a time, and temporary equipment from the North coast limited is loaned to replace it. It is generally conceded that this train has no superior in the world as a beautiful day train on a short run.

The Railway Age urges the Pullman company to make it a practice not to lower the upper berths in its sleepers until they are needed. Its inspiration for this advice comes from the Central of Georgia, which the Age gives credit for being the originator. Such a well-posted technical paper as the Railway Age should know that the practice of not making up the upper berths on sleepers until actually sold originated on the old St. Paul & Duluth twelve or fifteen years ago, and that it has been in use on the Duluth-St. Paul night trains on all roads for years. It is one of the greatest luxuries of railway travel at night to thus enjoy practically the greatest ease of a compartment, and it doesn't cost the sleeper company any more money.

Another Lumber Tariff.

One more new lumber tariff has been published by the Great Northern in it is presumed is joined in by competing lines. The rate from Duluth to Grand Rapids, Mich., has been reduced from 19½ to 17 cents per hundred. It is said that considerable lumber will move into Grand Rapids territory as a result of this reduction. The rate is, of course, openly quoted.

It is understood that quite a little lumber is being shipped all-rail to Eastern points, though it is mostly stuff that was worked some little time ago, and is not largely in the nature of new business.

Railroad Notes.

The Omaha's first Sunday fishermen's train to Solon Springs was patronized by about 250 people, far more than had been anticipated. The train makes the run in an hour and thirty-five minutes.

Vice President Fitch of the South Shore road arrived in the city this morning in his special car. He was accompanied by Assistant Chief Engineer Simer.

The Omaha road is setting up in public places some handsomely colored views of scenery along the gulf coast. They are prepared by the Louisville & Nashville.

Another Improvement.

CHICAGO, BOSTON AND NEW YORK TRAVEL.

On and after June 15th, the Erie railroad will still further improve their Boston and New York service by offering to the public a handsome limited train to leave Chicago from Dearborn station every day at 10:30 a. m., arriving New York next afternoon at 3:30, and Boston at 9 o'clock.

There is no doubt that this service will be highly patronized, as this new train will land the traveler in New York city in ample time to permit him to proceed leisurely to his hotel or home, rest, dress, dine and spend the evening in whatever manner may appeal to him most.

This every-day morning train will consist of standard Pullman drawing-room and sleeping cars. All meals en route served by the famous Erie dining cars. No extra fare charged on this train.

Ticket office, 242 South Clark street, Chicago.

The 20th Century Limited.

THE LAKE SHORE'S NEW TWENTY-HOUR NEW YORK TRAIN Will be placed in service June 15, leaving Chicago daily 12:30 p. m., reaching New York the next morning at 9:30. Leave New Lork 2:45 p. m., arrive Chicago 9:45 next morning. This new train is in addition to the present magnificent passenger service afforded by the Lake Shore.

The new train will save one full business day between Chicago and New York.

NEWSIES' PICNIC

Annual Event of Summer Season to Be Held June 25.

Chamber's Grove at Fond du Lac Is the Place.

Steamer Newsboy Will Carry the Boys to the Grounds.

Now that the weather is clearing, the sun shining warm, and all out doors is beautiful, people fondly turn their thoughts to "picnic." This also includes The Herald newsboys, who have been talking picnic ever since the Thanksgiving dinner at the Bethel.

The time is now at hand and the boys are all eagerly anticipating the day. The number of little fellows who are found in the ranks of The Herald's newsboys is steadily growing and fully 500 will be on the picnic this year. This will be the first of the large picnics of the season.

Clow & Nicholson, owners of the excursion steamer Newsboy, Duluth and Fond du Lac line, have offered the use of their boat to the management of The Herald, to take the newsboys to Chambers' grove, Fond du Lac, the most beautiful place on St. Louis river—for their fifth annual picnic, Wednesday, June 25, is the date.

This picnic, like those of the past, will be under the personal direction of A. C. Pearson circulator of The Herald. Each boy will carry his own lunch, while lemonade, peanuts, etc., will be free.

There will be baseball, races and contests of all kinds, including a swimming race with horses for the older boys.

En route the boys will be guarded by sentinels on both the main and upper decks of the boat, expert swimmers, and a small boat in readiness in case of any possible accident.

The West Duluth boys will be under the charge of Donald Holmes. They will take a car at the corner of Spencer's drug store in time to reach The Herald circulating room and form in line with the Duluth boys and march in double column to the Newsboy's dock at foot of Fifth avenue west. The boat will leave at 9 a. m. sharp and return at 3:30 p. m.

It is always the pleasant times and happy days of one's boyhood that are remembered until old age, the hard knocks are first forgotten; and with this in view, if such a thing is possible, this picnic will surpass all previous ones in the number of boys going and the plans laid out for a good time.

The Newsboy is 110 feet over all, beam 22 feet, runs 18 miles an hour, has a license to carry 500 passengers, has a good high railing, and is considered one of the safest excursion boats running out of Duluth.

Theft of Oats Charged.

George Peterson, a teamster residing at the West End, has been arrested on the charge of stealing oats from Charles Bibbell's livery barn on West First street. Peterson drives a team on a coal wagon and it is alleged that his purloining of grain to feed the team has been carried on for some time. Peterson's case will be tried this afternoon.

STIRRING

Scene at Emigrant Gap On Summit of Sierra Nevadas.

To the Editor of The Herald:

While on my way to San Francisco Sunday afternoon I witnessed one of the results of the actions of an educated fool. A special train of seven coaches from Cincinnati was pulling out of Reno, Nev., at dinner time and all of the people seated around the tables happened to be Shriners on their way to Frisco and were having the usual pleasure a man with a good appetite always experiences. While the dinner was at its height several members prepared a toast for the chief officer of the lodge, and before their words had time to be taken up by the other members, one of the "wise guys," always found in gentlemen's company—how they get there no one knows—hissed the proposition, and was immediately hissed all around himself. Thus ended the incident for the time being, but the insult had been given and several gentlemen started a movement to make the evening a contrast to the noon hour.

At 5 o'clock as we were running along at a moderate rate of speed through the last of the snow sheds we heard the emergency brakes applied and the train was stopped at Emigrant Gap, a small historic village on the summit of one of the Sierra Nevada mountains, and we were informed that owing to a wreck of a freight train at Blue Canyon, our train would remain on the divide for six hours. We had hardly stopped when the lights of a New York special were seen about half a mile behind and in about ten minutes more we were joined by about 300 more who, upon learning of the stop, at once joined the crowd to pass the time as wished by the passengers of train No. 1. To describe the whole scene would be impossible, but what that body did to "Mr. Hisser was a "plenty." After everybody had satisfied the "inner man" all eyes were turned to a rock where one of the leaders stood, and there was delivered as fine a speech where the praises of a man were sung as was ever listened to in the Lyceum or in any other place. There, up on the highest point in view, in the Sierras, where snow could be seen a thousand feet below, a man listened to several hundred friends cheer his name until it was echoed and re-echoed from peak to valley and the man who played the goose—for only snakes and geese hiss—could not find a place to hide his face. To say that it was an inspiring scene would be to put it mildly.

After all had been heard, the ladies started a song, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and every man and woman in the small village joined in along with the passengers, and it is safe to say that the oldest inhabitant in years to come will hand down the happenings of Sunday, June 8, 1902, at 6 o'clock, as the greatest event in the history of Emigrant Pass, Cal.

A FINE DAY.

Excursionists Have Ideal Weather For Visit In Duluth.

Yesterday was just such a day as the excursionists in the city could enjoy. There was a stiff breeze from the northwest and it was cool, affording relief to the many that come from the warmer sections of the state and from Iowa.

There were crowds of people all day at Duluth's beauty spots. Shortly after noon Lester Park was thronged with visitors who admired in unmeasured terms the natural beauty of the park. Others visited Cascade park and Lincoln park, in fact the excursionists were asking the location of every park in the city and announcing their intention of visiting them.

Park Point was also thronged with visitors. The Park Point street railway line handled 3000 people during the afternoon. Every trip in the afternoon was made with a trolley car and two trailers and these were so crowded that people rode standing on the side steps of the trailers.

The concert given at the Oatka Beach auditorium was a splendid one. In the absence of the Third regiment band Lanner's concert band gave the concert and evidence of the pleasing nature of the music rendered was given in the liberal encores.

Minnesota Point and Lake Superior were great attractions to the people from the interior, who seldom have the opportunity of seeing anything of the kind. Every excursion boat about the harbor or out on the lake, yesterday, was crowded and hundreds of people took the river excursions to Fond du Lac.

The excursionists left for their homes late yesterday afternoon, tired with sightseeing, but happy and promising to come again.

Dance at Oatka this evening—Lisbon Orchestra.

TEMPERANCE MEETING.

Arguments Against the Evil Effects of Drink.

The temperance meeting held yesterday in the Y. M. C. A. rooms was largely attended. The topic of the meeting was "The Great Anarchist," and for over an hour argument was made against the liquor traffic by previously appointed speakers. The subject was handled in a very interesting and entertaining manner. Nine of the members of the association making five-minute speeches on subtopics bearing on the general subject.

Phil Bevis, secretary of the association spoke on "Whisky vs. Missions," and told of the great work of the missions of the last century as compared with the retarding effect on civilization of the liquor traffic. Harry Milford's subject was, "A Look at the Beast," and he told of the ruin and degradation that has been brought about among mankind by the liquor habit. "The Saloon vs. the Home" was the very pertinent topic assigned to John Brown and he drew a vivid picture of the homes desolated by King Alcohol.

Neil McGibbon talked of "Historical Wrecks," and mentioned the names of many of the formerly gifted men of the country that lost their prestige through becoming confirmed drunkards.

A. G. Rousfield gave some very interesting local statistics of crimes committed while their perpetrators are under the influence of liquor. C. M. Wilson, with the topic "Alcohol and the Physical Man," gave a very convincing talk of the effects of the stimulant on the human system. Swan Erickson talked of "Saloons and Anarchy" and argued that it was in the saloons that anarchistic sentiment was fostered. Henry Schunz had an estimate of the income of the 160 saloons in the city and what the money would buy for the needy classes.

The whole subject was summed up by Paul Gilbert under the sub-topic, "Who is to Blame." He placed the responsibility not only on those who deal in liquor and those who drink it, but with those who permit the traffic to continue. Mr. Gilbert rendered a solo during the afternoon.

AMUSEMENTS.

MANSFIELD IN "BEAUCAIRE."

Richard Mansfield will disclose his latest success at the Lyceum next Monday evening. It is a new play, "Beaucaire," an original comedy in five acts, by Booth Tarkington and Evelyn Greenleaf Sutherland. The echoes of the praise bestowed upon the artist's new creation is one of rare charm, vital with chivalry, scintillating with wit. Mansfield's characterization is said to be the finest portraiture and the most painstaking piece of comedy and romance he has presented in years. The cast of "Beaucaire" is a long one. There are upwards of twenty-five speaking parts, and almost as many more people of experience to complete the picture of the smart set of Bath, but Beaucaire, played by the comedy with Lady Mary and the Duke of Winterset. Far from being a dramatization of "Monsieur Beaucaire," the author, Booth Tarkington, admits that his book is merely a scenario of the play. The picture of the fopperies of a swagger English watering place under the social sway of Beau Nash will be the colorful background of the comedy, but the dressing is that familiarly known as the Louis XV. for the constitutional monarch of France only, the cousin of "Beaucaire, the barber," was in reality the dictator of the world's fashion.

MR. AND MRS. FLINT.

Tonight Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Flint will open their engagement of a week at the Lyceum. Their hypnotic entertainments are the source of no end of wonder and fun.

Brother of a Victim.

Robert McGraw, of Sault Ste Marie, Mich., is in the city in search of information with reference to his brother, James McGraw, the wheelsman, who is supposed to have been drowned on the steamer Thomas Wilson. He has little doubt that the lost man is his brother, but did not know previous to this accident that he was on the Thomas Wilson. He will satisfy himself absolutely of the fact and endeavor to learn whether any steps will be taken to recover the body.

Some Corn Coming.

Corn has been arriving in the Duluth market in some quantities and this fact has caused some little comment, as the demands for corn in other markets have been such that Duluth has been getting practically none at all during the past few months. The corn that has been arriving here is part of the shipment of 50,000 bushels that is being made by Brooks-Griffith, of Minneapolis, and will go down the lakes.

THE NORMAL.

Faculty as Decided On--- Opening to Be Advertised Now.

Dr. E. W. Bohannon, president of the Duluth state normal school, returned Saturday night from St. Paul, where he has been attending a meeting of the state normal board and of the normal presidents. At this meeting five additional members of the school faculty were chosen for the opening of the school Sept. 2, when modest dedicatory exercises will be held. Three others remain to be selected—kindergarten instructor, a critic for the primary grades and probably a critic for the intermediate grades.

The faculty, so far as decided upon, is as follows: President, E. W. Bohannon; science and mathematics, J. W. Hubbard; grade critic, Alice Paul Ray; music, Nelle Farnsworth; clerk and librarian, Bertha Paine; psychology and education, F. W. Kline; English, Sophie Pendergast; history and civics, Harry C. Strong. The last three were chosen in March.

Dr. Bohannon said this morning that the matter of admitting children to the model classes to be had in the school will be settled shortly. A limited number of children would be admitted, he said, to form model classes, and probably on payment of a tuition fee sufficient to pay for the books and materials used.

Referring to the controversy of Secretary of War Root with Gen. Miles, Gen. Alger said he had no desire to wage war upon Gen. Miles, as had been imputed to him.

"All I have said about this matter," commented the general, "can be summed up in the statement that I am very glad indeed—not that the administration has him—but that the country has had an opportunity to see what kind of a man he is under another administration. I was told that I would not be able to get along with him—that he was an impossibility—but I answered that I could get along with him. However, I found I could not do so.

"Just a word about a reminiscence I have told about the civil war, not to justify, but to explain the emotion a soldier feels over atrocities committed by the enemy on the man that sleeps under the same blanket with him. I was probably misunderstood in speaking of this. I referred to an attack made upon our men by a gang of Moseby's guerrillas in the Shenandoah valley while the guerrillas were dressed in Union uniform. They dashed up on horseback and into the midst of our men and then shot them dead. When I came up with my regiment I found eight of my men alone shot through the head. When Gen. Sheridan heard of this he told his officers—verbally, not by written order—that if any of Moseby's men— the guerrillas, not any men of the Southern army—were caught they were to be treated summarily, and some of them were.

"So, when our soldiers over in the Philippines learn of fearful atrocities committed on those under arms with them—not upon dead men, but upon live men—you can hardly wonder at their action, even if you do not justify it. It would be bad enough to practice it on the bodies of the dead, but when American soldiers have been killed in the most tortuous way, one's sentiment revolts.

"Still, it is not to be so much wondered at, when we remember that the Filipinos have been educated under Spanish rule for 300 years to mistrust everybody. They will ultimately get acquainted with our motives, though it seems as if we had a long, hard struggle ahead of us to educate all of them to a proper appreciation of our purpose."

MEMORIAL SERVICES.

Odd Fellows Honor Memory of Their Dead.

The annual memorial service of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows was held yesterday afternoon at the hall on Lake avenue north. There was a large attendance and all of the lodges of the city together with the Rebekah lodges were represent.

Rev. Harry W. Knowles, of Grace Methodist church, delivered the address, and it was an eloquent tribute to the dead of the order and the sentiment which prompts a memorial day for them.

The music was good, the feature being a vocal number, "Beautiful River," sung by Mrs. A. B. Gilman with fine effect. Miss Williams gave a pleasing piano solo.

T. J. St. Germain was the chairman of the afternoon.

GENERAL R. A. ALGER

Attending to Business For First Time In Six Months.

Has Great Faith In President Roosevelt's Ability and Honesty.

Comments on Gen. Miles and the Philippine Troubles.

Gen. R. A. Alger arrived at the Spalding yesterday morning. He says he came up to Duluth thinking that the cool, exhilarating air here might help him regain his former health. The general has been recovering slowly from the effects of a surgical operation that was performed six months ago, and from which he narrowly emerged with his life. He says that this morning, when he visited the offices of Alger, Smith & Co., was the first time he had been to business in six months.

The general spoke with admiration of President Roosevelt, whom he came to know during President McKinley's first administration while the present executive was assistant secretary of the navy.

"I know the president to be an honest man," said the governor. "He is a hard worker, and is doing the very best he can. With experience he will discharge the duties of the office with ability and care. I have a great deal of faith in him. He is a good deal of a rusher, but his heart and head are both right and his motives are good.

RUSSELL A. ALGER.

He is a man of decided ability, and wants to do the right thing.

"No, it is too far away to discuss the probabilities of the next presidential campaign, and besides I have been ill for the past six months, and am not in a position to discuss the question comprehensively.

"The controversy between Admirals Sampson and Schley was a bad affair. It is an impossible thing to take two parties or two men, one of whom believe in one man and the other in another man, and get them to agree. The controversy was an unfortunate matter, and it ought never to have been opened up. It made us appear ridiculous to the world. However, it will soon be forgotten."

Referring to the controversy of Secretary of War Root with Gen. Miles, Gen. Alger said he had no desire to wage war upon Gen. Miles, as had been imputed to him.

"All I have said about this matter," commented the general, "can be summed up in the statement that I am very glad indeed—not that the administration has him—but that the country has had an opportunity to see what kind of a man he is under another administration. I was told that I would not be able to get along with him—that he was an impossibility—but I answered that I could get along with him. However, I found I could not do so.

HE WILL RUN.

Capt. Lewis to Be Candidate For the Legislature.

Capt. Ray T. Lewis has practically decided to file his certificate of nomination on the Republican ticket in a day or so for representative from the Fiftieth district. The captain said today that he had been approached by many friends during the past two weeks who had urged him strongly to become a candidate. While he had not finally decide to do so, he added, he was considering the proposition favorably. His friends had argued to him that his term as mayor of the city and sixteen years' residence in what is the Fiftieth legislative district would give him ample acquaintance with the needs and views of the people of the district.

Aside from Capt. Lewis and Capt. Randall, no candidates have been mentioned from this district. The present members of the house from the Fiftieth are T. M. Pugh and Andrew Miller, both of this city. Mr. Pugh has already filed his certificate for the senate to succeed F. B. Daugherty, and it is understood that Mr. Miller will not be a candidate again.

MILLENIUM.

Baptist Preacher Says It Is Already Partly Accomplished.

New York, June 16.—Dr. MacArthur, preaching in the Calvary Baptist church, has declared the ushering in of the millenium already has been partly accomplished. He predicted federation in the near future of all the nations of teh earth on the basis of the golden rule, and with this country and Great Britain as the dominant factors.

"These are days," he said "of gigantic enterprises, of large mergers and of world wide undertaking. Many great trusts, doubtless, are necessary, but there may be a 'selfless' Altruistic and spiritual trust. There may be an imperialism of love which one day may dominate the world. God is raising up a love trust to offset the 'self trusts' which are menacing our civilization.

"Now, the basis of the golden rule, a federation of the whole world will one day be accomplished. We are approaching such a federation today."

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.—

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of ten hundred eighty-eight and 96-100 dollars ($1088.96), which sum is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain real estate mortgage, duly made and executed and delivered by Augusta Berg and John Berg, her husband, of Floodwood, St. Louis County, Minnesota, mortgagors, and John P. Olson, morigagee, bearing date the fifth day of April, 1901, and with power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for St. Louis County and state of Minnesota, on the 9th day of May, A. D. 1901, at eleven o'clock a. m., in Book 151 of mortgages, on page 261 Such default consisting in the non-payment of the principal sum thereby secured, with interest thereon from the 5th day of April, A. D. 1901.

And whereas, said mortgage contains a power of sale in due form which has become operative by reason of the default above mentioned; and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise, has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of said premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

All that part of lots six and seven (6 and 7), block twenty-one (21), Floodwood, described as follows: Commencing at the northeast corner of lot six (6), thence east seventy-one feet seven inches (71 ft. 7in.), thence southwest forty-two feet seven inches (42 ft. 7 in.), thence northwest fifty-three feet seven inches (53 ft. 7 in.), to the place of beginning, containing ten hundred sixty square feet (1060.)

Also lot eight (8), block twenty-one (21), village of Floodwood, according to the recorded plat of said village of Floodwood, on file with the register of deeds in and for St. Louis County, state of Minnesota.

All of said property being located in the county of St. Louis, state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which said sale will be made by the sheriff of said St. Louis County, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Duluth, in said county and state, on the 29th day of July, A. D. 1902, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of ten hundred eighty eight and 96-100 dollars and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises and fifty dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from date of sale, as provided by law.

Dated June 14th, 1902.

A LIVE NEWSPAPER.

Norman County Herald: As a live paper for busy people The Duluth Evening Herald ranks right up at the top notch and we esteem it the most highly of any of the city dailies. Our reason for this is that its news service, always full and complete, is so handled down as to give all the important news of the world within a space that busy people can easily cover.

Centenarians Are Not Very Numerous.

A new book upon centenarians has lately been published, written by T. E. Young, late president of the Institute of Actuaries of England. The records of life insurance and annuity societies have been ransacked, and among over 800,000 insured persons he has been able to find only twenty-two cases of centenarians. The oldest of these was a woman who lived 105 years and 8 months. He accepts as demonstrated the mythical character of the story of the life of Henry Jenkins, who, it has been believed, lived 169 years, of Thomas Parr, 152 years and 9 months), and of others. It seems difficult to believe, says American Medicine, that the dozen or more instances of people living 125 years or over also also all "mythical." And yet the life insurance companies should have found at least one such well-authenticated case. It is a strange kind of weakness that makes people proud of great age, but this vanity often becomes ridiculous and has been the cause of the numerous cases of exaggeration. It is extremely doubtful if anyone has ever lived 110 years. The subject has always been of interest, both to the scientific and the lay public. Those who have investigated it find that the most clearly ascertainable cause of longevity itself. If one wishes to live long, he should choose long-living ancestors!

The Pan-American Railway Scheme.

At the recent Pan-American congress, held at the City of Mexico, the delegates pledged themselves to urge their various countries to support the intercontinental railway project which is intended to connect the railway systems of North and South America. With this end in view a special effort will be made to have congress make an appropriation of $250,000 for the appointment of a commission to investigate the desirability of the United States taking up the scheme of the construction of a Pan-American railway. The idea of the appointment of the proposed commission is to have its members visit each country through which the railroad is to runa and make an investigation of the resources of each of the railway facilities already established, and to report on these facts, as well as the prospects for business for an intercontinental line. Those who have the matter in charge for the United States say that no opposition has been encountered from any of the big railroads of the country or from the various commercial steamship lines whose business might be affected by the construction of a railroad to connect Argentina and New York. This is not the first time this big enterprise has been under discussion. In 1890 the International American Conference recommended a survey of a route for an intercontinental line of railroad to connect the systems of North America with those of the Southern continent, and on the recommendation of President Harrison, congress made an appropriation for this work. H. G. Davis, the head of the present committee, was placed in charge of the survey authorized under the administration of President Harrison. The survey was concluded in 1895 and on account of the favorable showing made there has been more or less discussion of the project ever since. It was found that the distance to be covered between New York and Buenos Ayres was 10,471 miles, about one-half of which was already laid out in roads that could be utilized. It was estimated that the cost of laying the connecting lines would be about $175,000,000. Since then some additional railroad has been built and ex-Senator Davis is of the opinion that not more than 5000 miles of road would have to be constructed to establish complete railroad communication between the systems of North and South America. As showing the lack of proper transportation facilities now existing between the republics of America, some of the delegates to the recent conference in the City of Mexico had to go by way of Europe and New York, and others via San Francisco. A letter or express package from Mexico or the United States intended for some of the South American republics would go first to Europe and from there to its destination. There is no doubt but what the construction of such a railway would prove a great public utility and that it would do much to gain for the United States the exclusive trade of our Southern neighbors. It is, however, a proposition of great magnitude and probably will not be considered while the canal agitation is on.

ASPHALT PATCHING.

The Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin reports that the season's patching of asphalt pavement under the guarantee of the contractors is now in progress. Holes made by the disintegration of the surface layer are being widened to solid material, and fresh asphalt surfacing stamped in and rolled down. There are holes on all the streets, and judging from the persistency of their appearance, the paving contractors will have a good business in the repair work after their guarantee expires by limitation.

Milwaukee uses the Trinidad lake asphalt on the ground that it is the best asphalt for street work. City engineers, members of the board of public works and other city officials have testified to this effect, and the company which has the sole right to use Trinidad lake asphalt in that city has profited as a result. "But," asks the Wisconsin, "do the numerous patches that are now being put down indicate that the asphalt here used is the best? There is ground for the belief that it is lacking, or, at least that it can be improved."

The question asked by the Milwaukee paper is not surprising, in view of the numerous holes in the pavement. But where can it find a better quality of asphalt—where an asphalt pavement that has not disintegrated and become full of holes? The truth is that there never was an asphalt pavement laid anyhere that did not need repairs within a very short time. Look at the asphalt pavements in St. Paul and Minneapolis and see their miserable condition after a few years' wear. It is evident that asphalt is not the best pavement, and yet it is the most expensive.

IN AN AWKWARD FIX.

The president's special message to congress has made the Cuban reciprocity bill a party measure. This places the Republican beet sugar insurgents in a decidedly awkward position, and there are signs that they are weakening. The Cuban committee of the senate will meet tomorrow and bring in a bill. On Wednesday a Republican conference will be held, and it will decide by a large majority to adopt the bill.

Eighteen Republican senators have been opposed to reciprocity with Cuba, but if eight can be won over the Republican leaders will have a majority of the whole senate. The administration senators are confident of getting enough votes and predict that before the war is over the president will have a majority of all the Republican membership on his side. It is proposed to make it as easy as possible for the insurgents to abandon their attitude and support the majority measure. The Spooner plan already embraces a provision empowering the president in administering the law to see to it that the refining trust in New York does not get any of the benefit of the reduction. It is proposed to strengthen this provision in some way, though just how is not announced. The beet sugar senators have claimed from the first that all they want is to make sure the refining trust does not get the benefit of the reduction, and if the Cuban committee can frame a law obviating this danger the dissenters will be asked what ground they can find for continuing their objection.

But what will the framers of the platform to be presented to the Minnesota state Republican convention say on the question of Cuban reciprocity? The two senators and all the representatives are with the "insurgents" and are said to be mad at the president's message, claiming that he had no right to put them in a position of apparent disloyalty to the party. In what form will the resolutions be framed? Will they throw down the two senators and the entire delegation, or will they throw down the president and his special message? It is an awkward situation.

THE LOSSES BY FIRE.

Statistics of the fire losses in the United States and Canada during the past month of May place the total at $14,866,000. While this is smaller than the loss in May of last year, it is a heavy total for one month in which there was not a single very large fire. It is claimed by insurance men that prosperity is responsible for some of the fires, there being much working overtime in all kinds of factories and much overcrowding of space by which the fire-risk in factories and warehouses is increased.

While the fire-loss last month was $14,866,000, the total in May, 1901, was $22,380,150, and in May, 1900, was $15,759,000. These figures make a good showing for May, 1902, in comparison with the same month in the two preceding years. The figures for the first five months of the year also show up well by comparison, as follows:

First five months 1902 ... .$76,860,500
First five months 1901 79,336,150
First five months 1900 82,017,900

This is a large amount of actual wealth wiped out. Insurance may replace individual losses to a considerable extent, but it can not recoup the community for the destruction of a portion of its wealth. Fire losses in the United States are very heavy, and every community should take steps to eliminate, if possible, the conditions which are productive of conflagrations. There is no doubt that rigidly enforced regulations could do much to reduce fire-losses.

EXPORTS INCREASING.

Some months ago there was a decided falling off in the exports of manufactures from the United States to foreign countries. This was particularly apparent in copper and some kindred products. A reaction has occurred and the record of commerce for the century for the first ten months of the fiscal year shows a marked improvement. The exports of manufacturers for the month of April, 1902, are four and a half millions greater than those of April of the preceding year, being $38,961,301, against $34,416,297 in April, 1901, and forming 36.5 per cent of the total exports in April, 1902, against 29.1 per cent in April, 1901. For the ten months ending with April the exports of manufacturers are $335,820,809, against $339,307,623 for the corresponding ten months of the preceding fiscal year, a reduction of about $5,500,000 for the ten months. This would indicate that the total exports of manufacturers during the full fiscal year, which ends with the present month, will fall little, if any, below those of last year.

An examination of the details of the exports shows that the small reduction of $5,000,000, which exists at the present time, occurs chiefly in manufactures of iron and steel, the exports of which are $82,388,463, against $99,228,228, comparing the figures for ten months of this year with those for the same months of the preceding year. Thus the reduction in exports of iron and steel manufactures alone is much greater than the net reduction in total exports of manufactures, indicating a marked gain in other classes of manufactures. In iron and steel, however, the figures for the month of April show a marked improvement over those for earlier months of the year, being $9,320,633, against $9,081,223, in April, 1901. In iron and steel exports the principal reductions in the ten months occur in pig iron, a decrease of nearly $3,000,000; steel rails, nearly $5,000,000, and metal working machinery, nearly $1,000,000.

In other articles of manufacture, which some months ago showed a marked reduction, there has been a decided reaction and a return to normal conditions. In manufactures of copper, which during the early part of the year showed a very great reduction, the figures for the ten months fall but $2,000,000 below those of the corresponding months of last year, while those for the month of April are nearly $3,000,000 greater than those of April, 1901.

Philadelphia has an officer whose designation is "director of public safety," and to this official the mayor has addressed a series of admonitions in the course of which he says: "I would also instruct you to especially direct the lieutenant in each district to notify the patrolmen to direct their attention to all hospitals, homes and public institutions wherein there may be infirm, sick or aged people, likewise that wherever any citizen notifies the patrolman on the beat or the lieutenant of the district that there is a sick member of a household, a special care and protection should be given to that immediate locality against the explosion of fireworks or fire-arms preceding or on July 4 next." This comprehends a humane provision that should be made in every community throughout the Union.

The Young Men's Christian association of Denver is undertaking a noble philanthropy, that of providing suitable, healthful headquarters for the host of invalid and semi-invalid young men coming daily to the Rocky mountain region to be cured of consumption. Out of funds contributed by charitable persons a farm of sixty acres has been purchased near Denver, where a sanitary home, proper environment, nourishing food and skilled medical attendance is provided, together with opportunity for light outdoor employment. It is a worthy enterprise and deserves the support of all generously-inclined people.

The discussion as to whether Washington was a Christian has brought out what he said in a letter in regard to the disturbance of a Mohammedan in Philadelphia, whom a mob threatened because of Mohammedan prayers on a roof. The Father of His Country wrote: "I will protect you if it takes the whole United States army to do it; this is a government in no sense founded on the Christian religion, nor any other." Though this does not settle the question, it shows how well he understood that this is a country of religious liberty.

Ridiculing a gallant old veteran with a glorious record is not considered bringing the army into disrepute. It is only when questionable Philippine methods are criticised that we become the unscrupulous foe of the American soldier, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Pennsylvania road is to pay New York $1,382,500 for the privilege of constructing a tunnel under Manhattan island. Time was when cities paid railroads to come in and gave them choice of routes instead of railroads paying cities for the privilege of burrowing in.

J. Pierpont Morgan's plan of a trust of fire insurance companies may be regarded as a warm proposition.

The May statistics of gross postal receipts at the fifty largest postoffices in the United States show a net increase of 11 per cent over the receipts for May, 1901. Another proof of the country's growth and prosperity.

As further evidence that England is determined to leave nothing undone to show her friendship for the United States, it is stated that the new British ambassador to Washington is an enthusiastic baseballist.

If we are to oppose the sugar trust by opposing Cuban reciprocity, why cannot we go farther in anti-trust work and remove tariff duties from the products of great and dangerous combinations, made for the restraint of trade?

A sensation has been created at Louisville because a little girl refused to sing "Marching Though Georgia" to please a super-loyal schoolma'am, but the country is in no particular danger.

SPRING RAIN.

The rain is falling swiftly down,
The summer bloom is nigh,
The birds have hushed their liquid notes
And clouds roll dark across the sky.
Why droop the leaves so sadly down?
'Twas drops like these that gave them birth,
For genial showers did call them forth
To dress the naked earth.

Fall, precious drops, and kiss the sod
Which forms my friend, a screen,
From mortal pains and jealousies,
And deck his grave with green!
Cold is the earth above his head,
And cold my lips from him apart,
Yet they with fragrance fills the past
And breathes a stillness o'er my heart.

Must I in loneliness abide?
Is all my care and love in vain?
No, heart shall yet be joined to heart
And all that bloomed will bloom again.
I'll take my load and journey on,
Nor seek the day, nor shun the night,
Till sometime, somewhere, freed from pain,
I burst into his orbit bright.

Duluth, June 1.

Means Much to Minnesota.

Bemidji Pioneer: The one thing which Van Sant has been unable to understand and which no Minnesota governor should have to learn after having become the chief executive of the state, is, that it is more important that Minnesota should be the headquarters for Mr. Hill's Oriental operations than that any man should be governor of state or that any party should succeed in a merely state election. The Oriental traffic means hundreds of millions of added wealth to those cities which foster him and his plans; and it is a sad commentary on the wisdom of the Twin City business men that Mr. Hill should have delivered the ablest address of the day to a Chicago commercial club instead of a Minneapolis or St. Paul club.

Sophistries of Uncle Bill.

Got to arguin' last night,
Me'n Uncle Bill;
Hadn't got so sleepy we'd
Been at it still!
Uncle Bill he 'lowed a camel
Was pervided wit a hump
For a fleas' observatory!
(Never heerd o' such a chump
As Uncle Bill!)
"Pigs has got a squirmy tail,"
Says Uncle Bill,
"So's when storms comes blowin' 'round
'Em fit to kill,
They can wrap them curly tails
'Round a rusty nail, you know,
An' then go to sleep an' let
The dad-burn tornado blow!"
(That Uncle Bill!)
"Cats is skeered o' water, too!"
Says Uncle Bill.
"'Cause their hide shrinks when it's wet!"
Says Uncle Bill;
"An' a pore rat would feel awful
Worried, I'm a-tellin' you!
If his skin was shrunk so tight he Couldn't wink his eye nor mew!"
Says Uncle Bill.
"Flies is always wantin fight!"
Says Uncle Bill.
"Watch the next one that comes 'round,"
Says Uncle Bill,
"An you'll see him rub together
Them there little fists o' his—
Braggin' that of all the house flies
He's the biggest fly what is!"
Says Uncle Bill.
"Hen's ain't got a speck o' teeth!"
Says Uncle Bill.
"Ever see a hen a-scratchin'
An' a-peckin in the dust?
She's a-huntin' fer her false teeth—
Bound to find 'em, too, or bust!"
(Oh, Uncle Bill!)
"Lightnin' bugs is coward bugs!"
Says Uncle Bill,
"Like some little boys I know!"
Says Uncle Bill.
"'Fraid to sleep without a candle—
Them there little fire-fly sons!
Yf I'd a-had a rotten 'tater
I'd a-soaked it, sure as guns,
(At Uncle Bill!)
Sometimes ain't so mighty sure
'Bout Uncle Bill;
Sort o' 'spicion he's a josh—
My Uncle Bill;
If he isn't, what d'ye think—
Honest—'bout that rusty nail
An' the pig, an' 'bout his fool
Funny little squirmy tail?
Believe Uncle Bill?

The Thirty-First Day

By Angela Morgan.

(Copyright, 19--, by W. R. Hearst).

For three weeks now he had denied himself the exhilarating influence of Eleanor Duncan's society. He was indeed holding firmly to his promise—the promise he had given to his highest self on the day that Roy Hadley, all unconscious of the wound he was inflicting, impulsively confessed to him his love for Eleanor.

Even while he marveled at Hadley's blindness, Pearson had resolutely determined to be loyal to the friendship which, begun at college, had strengthened into a sturdy bond seemingly impossible of dissolution.

Roy Hadley should be given a fair chance, so far as Pearson's absence from the field was concerned. Thus the latter had resolved. This he had acted, even to the present day—the twenty-first day since he had made this promise.

Twenty-one days without a glimpse of her! They were twenty-one months—nay, years—instead of days.

Pearson began to wonder at his superb self-control and to congratulate himself upon the heroic strength of his invincible will. The fact that his unruly thoughts reveled in sweet imaginings did not as yet impress him as being inconsistent. So he steeped his soul in dreams of her and let delicious memories have their sway.

It was not until the twenty-fifth day that this spiritual indulgence of his love impressed him with a sense of its disloyalty. This startling accusation of an aggressive conscience awakened within him a tire of rebellion.

"I may chain my body," he protested, "but not my thoughts, my longings, the very impulses of my being! They belong to Eleanor. They will always belong to her—to crush them would be to crush life itself!"

The twenty-sixth day, nevertheless, found him struggling against the dear imaginings which heretofore had fed his love and compensated in some degree for the sacrifice he was making. Unconsciously at first, then with direct intent, he strove to curb even the tender secret thoughts which, following the lead of his longing, winged their flight toward Eleanor day and night.

Meanwhile he avoided too frequent meetings with Hadley nor did he encourage further confidences. He at least need not force himself to endure another ordeal of that nature.

Then came the thirty-first day, when Pearson, cooking heavily about him, wondered at the blank desolation that had settled upon the earth. For four entire days he had succeeded in keeping Eleanor out of his thoughts. But where now was the motive for living? Ambition, incentive, inspiration—all had left him. His heart was of lead, his soul of stone.

Again rebellion shook him. "It is because I have shut her out of my life! It is wrong—wrong! I love her—love her!"

The old influence swept upon him once more, magnetizing his thoughts, thrilling his world with color.

It was in the early afternoon that he strolled through the park in the vicinity of Eleanor's home. Of course he would not for the world break that sacred promise of his by venturing near her residence. He merely wished to breathe the pure air and witness the beautiful miracle of awakening spring.

By no effort of will could he resist the onslaught of dear memories that attakced him as he paced the pebbly paths and felt the magic of an exquisite pain thrill through him. Eleanor, Eleanor! The image of her shone everywhere. Radiant blue sky, delicious air, budding green things, vast sweeps of velvety turfs, fragrance, sunshine—and Eleanor! It was all Eleanor!

He walked on and on, in a tumult of happiness. At a turn in the path a sudden glorious premonition throbbed through him. He looked up. The image in his brain resolved itself into the real image. Coming down the path toward him was the flesh and blood Eleanor, radiantly sweet in her dainty spring attire.

There was no mistaking the fact that her eyes grew luminous at sight of him.

"You!" she cried. "Where have you been all this time? One whole month!"

Pearson murmured some unintelligible apology. He was aware of but one thing now—the intoxication of her actual presence.

"For shame, sir! I fear, after all, you are at heart a selfish recluse."

There was a bench near by and they unconsciously moved toward it and seated themselves. Pearson looked at her and tried to think of a fitting reply to her accusation. A soft haze hung palpitating before his eyes. Out of this haze her face smiled upon him.

"You have, of course, seen Hadley?" he questioned at length.

"Oh, yes—he comes very often. But you—you have not treated me as he has. You have forgotten me. Confess!"

Pearson looked sternly at the ground. "Roy is a good fellow," he said; "a splendid fellow! You have no idea—"

He paused vaguely. There was a long silence.

"Why don't you speak for yourself, John?"

He started violently. Had his memory become vocal, or was it indeed Eleanor herself who had given utterance to the familiar question?

His gaze met hers and clung. In a flash he knew—knew without doubt!

"Dearest—dearest!"

* * * * *

After a while she tried to release her hand.

"Don you realize," she said demurely, "that we are sitting here on a bench in the park, making love in the most plebeian fashion, right in sight of everybody?"

"But no one is looking!" he protested. "No one is looking and——" he leaned forward imploringly, "quick, Eleanor—just one!"

"Aren't you ashamed?" she panted, rosy and smiling, as she tried to readjust her hat.

"No, I am not!" he declared. "I should have some reward for thirty-one days of blank wretchedness. Oh, those awful days—each one a wilderness!"

"Each one?" she repeated. "Surely there is one exception!"

"Yes—just one," he replied, seizing her hand again, "and that is the thirty-first day."

A WISH.

I see the boy who graduates
Stand up before the crowd;
His collar's very, very tall,
His tie is very loud;
He sees his parents sitting there,
As proud as they can be
And there's another, too—his breast
Is filled with ecstacy.

I see him raise his good right hand
And wave it in the air;
I hear the big, uncommon words
Roll from his lips, up there;
He draws himself up proudly, and
His face with pleasure glows—
I wish that I knew half as much
As this boy thinks he knows.

TRAVELERS

Excelsior, Minn., June 16.—The session of the United Commercial Travelers closed on Saturday with the election of officers. There was no contest except that of grand sentinel, all the officers being advanced according to custom, one point. The following is the result of the election:

Grand Counselor—T. McCoskar, Grand Forks.

Grand Junior Counselor — Ernest Grant, Minneapolis.

Grand Past Counselor—F. X. Gravel, Crookston.

Grand Secretary— J. M. Dresser, St. Paul.

Grand Treasurer—A. H. Overman, Duluth.

Grand Conductor—G. W. Rodgers, St. Paul.

Grand Page—W. G. Jacobs, Aberdeen.

Grand Sentinel—O. M. Hatcher, Winnipeg.

Grand Executive Committeeman—E. C. Walters, Minneapolis.

Grand Executive Committeeman (for two years)—H. J. McGarvey, Huron.

Early in the convention it had been supposed that there would be a spirited contest between Winnipeg and Duluth for the next place of meeting. Winnipeg, however, fell gracefully into line, a member from that council seconding the motion to make the next place at Duluth. Not a dissenting vote was cast against the proposition to meet at Duluth in 1903, the second Friday and Saturday in June.

Only one ballot was taken for election of officers, with the exception of that for sentinel, which required six ballots to elect Hatcher.

The regular delegates to the supreme council, which meets at Columbus, Ohio, Friday and Saturday, June 27 and 28, were elected as follows: Thomas Kleinogel, Fargo; F. X. Gravel, Crookston; T. McCosker, Grand Forks. Alternates, J. M. Dresser, St. Paul, for Kleinogel; H. J. Mooney, of Winnipeg, for Gravel; Chauncy Burch, Sioux Falls, for McCosker.

The secretary was authorized to send a message of congratulation and greeting to the grand council of Iowa, now in session at Council Bluffs.

Paul W. Reymer extended a cordial welcome from Duluth, presenting a special invitation from the chamber of commerce and Commercial club, assuring the members that they will receive a cordial and hearty welcome to that city when they arrive next June.

RETURNS.

Inez Evans of St. Paul Back at Her Parents' Home.

St. Paul, June 16.—Inez Evans, the young girl who has been missing from her home, 809 Marshall avenue, since Wednesday morning, returned Saturday night of her own accord. She arrived at her home about 8 o'clock in the evening. The girl was in a nervous condition and her parents asked her no questions for some time.

The girl told her mother that she left home Wednesday morning and went to Minneapolis. There she saw an advertisement for a domestic in a house in North Minneapolis. She applied for the position and secured it. She remained there until Saturday evening, when she saw the newspapers containing the account of her disappearance, and she decided to come home. She left a note at the house where she was working and started at once for St. Paul. She explained in her note to the mistress of the house who she was and why she left.

On account of the girl's nervous condition, and the condition of her mother, she was not questionde concerning her whereabouts. She said that she did not know the name of the person for whom she worked or where they lived, other than it was in North Minneapolis. When she alighted from the Selby avenue car she was so wrought up that she had almost forgotten where she lived. Her father was on the porch of the house, however, and as soon as he caught sight of her he rushed to her. The return of the girl saved the life of her mother, who was gradually worrying herself into a dangerous condition. The family was entirely too well satisfied with the safe return of the girl to ask her why she had left home.

THE DAKOTAS.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Stirgis—The remains of George Puck and George Ostrander arrived from Red Owl and were shipped to Sioux City. Both men had their skulls crushed and both were shot. The officers have a good clue, but all information is withheld at present. The coroner's verdict is that deceased met death by blows on the head with an ax.

Huron—Thomas Thomas, the oldest man in Beadle county, died at his home here, aged 86. He was born in Wales and came to the United States about the year 1848. He lived for many years in Wisconsin and came to South Dakota, locating at Huron in 1883, where he resided until the time of his death. Mr. Thomas was the father of nine children, six of whom are now living. The wife, now past 80 years of age, is still living. The remains of Mr. Thomas were taken to Yorkville, Wis., for burial.

Yankton—The graduation of the twenty-third class from Yankton college took place last night. The occasion was made memorable by the unveiling of a bust of Dr. D. K. Piersons, who has been a great benefactor of the college, having given many thousand dollars for its upbuilding. The bust was unveiled by Rev. Andrew Melrose Brodie, of Hinsdale, Ill., pastor of the church regularly attended by Dr. Piersons. Rev. Brodie also made the address of the occasion.

Evarts—The two tramps who broke into Peterson's store the night of June 11 were captured by Sheriff E. Adams, of Gettysburg. Most of the stolen goods were recovered and the prisoners were taken to Selby, where they pleaded guilty.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Dickinson—Shepmen are happy this year. Their wool, now coming in freely, is free from grease and of a very fine quality and bids fair to sell for an advance of 3 cents per pound over the 1901 prices. The lamb crop, too, has been unusually good, averaging 75 per cent. The wool to be marketed here reaches about 2,000,000 pounds, or an increase of 25 per cent over the 1901 clip.

Minnewaukon—One and a half inches of rain fell Saturday. Seeding is finished except a small amount of flax and barley. All crops are in the finest condition of any year since 1895.

Cooperstown—Mrs. W. A. Barker, living southeast of Cooperstown, went violently insane yesterday afternoon. Sickness and the recent loss of her husband were the causes. She has two daughters. County Judge Carlton sent her to the Jamestown asylum.

QUARREL

Ends In Shooting of Widow and Her Suitor.

Philadelphia, June 16.—Mrs. Rachel Sahlor, a widow, was today shot and instantly killed at Coatesville, Pa., forty miles west of here, by Harry N. Rieer, of Newcastle, Pa., who was also killed by a bullet from his revolver while struggling with another woman for possession of the weapon. The tragedy, it is said, was the result of a quarrel. Rieer was employed by a Pittsburg firm of contractors who are building a new steel plant at Coatesville. He was regarded as Mrs. Sahlor's accepted suitor. Last night Rieer visited the woman and they are said to have quarreled. Mrs. Sahlor ordered him from the house and she went to the home of Mrs. Mary L. Ernest to spend the night.

Last night Rieer appeared at the house and asked an interview with Mrs. Sahlor. She declined to receive him and was dismissing him at the door when he drew his revolver and shot her through the heart. He then, it is claimed, aimed the revolver at Mrs. Ernest, who grappled with him. During the struggle the pistol was discharged, the bullet taking effect in Rieer's head, killing him almost instantly.

The coroner's jury found letters in Rieer's pocket signed "Alma," which indicated that he was engaged to be married to a young woman in Columbus, Ohio.

DROWNED.

Party of Three Lose Their Lives In Lake Huron.

Port Huron, Mich., June 16.—During a gale P. Martin, aged 17, Beatrice Harris, aged 16, and Norma Abraham, aged 7, were drowned in Lake Huron by the overturning of a rowboat off Edison beach. The accident was witnessed by a number of people, but the storm was so fierce that no help could reach the young people. The storm blew up suddenly, the wind from off shore. All three bodies were recovered. Martin came from England three months ago and was residing with his uncle, James Abraham. The girls were his cousins.

In the same storm a boat containing Jennie and Marion Patton and Elwyn Skiming of this city and A. L. Parry, from St. Johns, Mich., was overturned. The quartette clung to the fish nets set out in the lakes and were rescued. Several yachts had narrow escapes.

"I suffered from dyspepsia and indigestion for fifteen years," says W. T. Sturdivant, of Merry Oaks, N. C. "After I had tried many doctors and medicines a friend persuaded me to try Kodol. It gave immediate relief. I can eat anything I want now and my digestion is good." Max Wirth.

JUMPED FROM BRIDGE.

Young Man Ends Life In Sensational Manner.

New York, June 16.—A young man who was a passenger on a Brooklyn bridge car sprang over the bridge railing into the river below. The body has not yet been recovered. Those who noticed the man before he made the jump say he was apparently about 27 years old and was well dressed. Policeman Dorn was the nearest person to him when he leaped to death. Dorn saw him alight from the car and, divining his dangerous purpose, started after him. The stranger said: "Don't you touch me," and then crying out, "Good bye," went over the rail into the river. His body reappeared only once after the plunge. A police launch crew searched for hours without finding any trace of the suicide.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

Program Given at Lakeside Presbyterian Church.

Children's day at the Lakeside Presbyterian church yesterday morning was a complete success, a feature of the exercises being the baptism of twelve infants, children of members and adherents of the congregation, and the presentation of twelve New Testaments to boys and girls who had been present at school every Sunday during the past year, the gift of the late pastor, Rev. J. B. Ferguson, now of the First Presbyterian church of Seattle, Wash. The pulpit was prettily decorated with flowers, the words, "The Children for Christ," being conspicuously displayed with red letters, in a round circle, on a background of ferns and cut flowers. The primary class was seated on the platform. Twelve members graduated to the school proper, the test consisting of the repeating of the 23rd Psalm, the ten commandments and the apostles' creeda. The exercises in this class were very good, some of them repeating several verses, and all of them telling of the love of Christ for little children. The Lakeside Presbyterian orchestra, consisting of five canary birds, sang sweetly before the exercises began, and joined with the scholars in singing the beautiful hymns compiled by Dr. J. A. Worden.

Recitations were given by the Misses Fanny Stephenson, Estelle Bradley, Jessie Todd and Marie J. McDowell. The collection of the children amounted to $37.50.

Eczema, Psoriasis, Salt Rheum, Tetter and Acne

Belong to that class of inflammatory and disfiguring skin eruptions that cause more genuine bodily discomfort and worry than all other known diseases. The impurities or sediments which collect in the system because of poor digestion, inactive Kidneys and other organs of elimination are taken up by the blood, saturating the system with acid poisons and fluids that ooze out through the glands and pores of the skin, producing an indescribable itching and burning, and the yellow, watery discharge forms into crusts and sores or little brown and white scabs that drop off, leaving the skin tender and raw. The effect of the poison may cause the skin to crack and bleed, or give it a scaly, fishy appearance; again the eruptions may consist of innumerable blackheads and pimples or hard, red bumps upon the face. Purification of the blood is the only remedy for these vicious skin diseases. Washes and powders can only hide for a time the glaring blemishes. S. S. S. eradicates all poisonous accumulations, antidotes the Uric and other acids, and restores the blood to its wonted purity, and stimulates and revitalizes the sluggish organs, and the impurities pass off through the natural channels and relieve the skin. S. S. S. is the only guaranteed purely vegetable blood purifier. It contains no Arsenic, Potash or other harmful mineral.

VISITS DULUTH

President Mellen of Northern Pacific Here For Brief Time.

Views Docks and Yards and Recently Bought Transfer Property.

Chief Engineer Darling and Other Officials With Him.

President Charles S. Mellen, of the Northern Pacific road, made one of his infrequent visits to Duluth Saturday afternoon. He spent the latter part of the afternoon looking over the yards, docks and tracks and shops of the terminal system in this city and West Superior. The night was spent here, and yesterday morning the special train carried Mr. Mellen and his party to Ashland, and thence over the newly purchased Washburn-Iron River road, which has just been added to the Northern Pacific system. The party returned late yesterday afternoon and after looking over the yards at South Superior went to Cloquet on their way back to St. Paul.

Mr. Mellen's train arrived here about 5 p. m. Saturday. It was a special consisting of the president's private car Yellowstone and the general manager's car, Glacier, and a baggage car.

In the party besides President Mellen were Chief Engineer W. L. Darling, General Manager Thomas Cooper, General Superintendent M. C. Kimberley Assistant General Superintendent E. J. Pearson, General Passenger Agent Charles S. Fee, and Secretary to the President Easton.

The yards at West Superior were briefly looked over on the way to Duluth. Then one special was taken to the Rice's Point yard, where the entire yard system is being reconstructed and the dock front on the westerly side of Rice's Point and along the shore to Twentieth avenue west is being cribbed, filled and the slips dredged out. This work and the shop buildings in course of construction attracted much interest from the official visitors. They got out and walked about for some time. They took a brief trip over the newly bought Duluth Transfer line and then pulled into the Union depot yards, where dinner was had aboard the train and the night was spent. The members of the party were in conference on Mr. Mellen's car all the evening, and did not come up town.

President Mellen said that he did not have anything of any public interest to say. Crops at this time, he said, were looking fine, except that the wheat acreage along the line running north through the Red river valley was somewhat smaller than usual on account of the late spring. But this seemed to be made good by the fine conditions in the grazing districts in Montana. Ranges that for want of moisture in the early spring had heretofore been almost devoid of vegetation were now enjoying a luxuriant growth of grass. Traffic all over the system was very heavy, and the outlook was for a busy year.

Mr. Fee said that tourist traffic over the Northern Pacific has been unusually heavy for June. "We are carrying to Yellowstone Park from fifteen to twenty-five people each day, aside from the movement of special parties. One day last week we carried a party of 140.

"Returning Shriners will form a large part of the June travel. Medina temple, of Chicago, 135 strong, will enter Yellowstone Park Tuesday. A special carrying 125 will leave Portland Wednesday and another carrying 150 will leave Portland for the park Friday. This give only a partial idea of the number of special parties going in this month. We have arranged for many more, representing hundreds of travelers.

"The temperature and weather conditions in the park could not be better. The temperature ranges on our daily reports about 65 degrees and there have been few rains to interfere with coaching trips. I have never known a season when the prospects for record-breaking travel all summer were better."

Assistant Superintendent Pearson was at one time employed in Duluth as a member of the train dispatcher's force. His rise in the service of the Northern Pacific is said to have been very rapid, for he is still a very young man to occupy the important place he now holds.

Division Superintendent Vandersilice went to St. Paul to accompany the party over his division of one system, and went to Ashland with them yesterday morning.

AN ACROBAT.

Doris Pretty and Stage Struck But Her Mother Objects.

Chicago, June 16.—There was excitement behind the scenes at the Masonic Temple roof garden Saturday afternoon when Miss Jacobs, the officer of the associated Jewish charities, appeared with a tearful German mother who was searching for a runaway daughter. The daughter, Miss Doris Florence Jgossalson, is pretty and stage-struck. She is now riding a bicycle with the Kaufman family troupe, and she protestingly told the officer that she was learning to be an acrobat.

Mrs. Jgossalson had been searching the town for over three weeks, and it was only by accident that she learned of her daughter's whereabouts. Last Sunday she went to the theater and after the performance searched the dressing rooms until she found her. When she talked in German to the girl, begging her to return home, the girl answered in English, which Mrs. Jgossalson cannot understand.

A big, black-haired woman and a member of the troupe asked Mrs. Jgossalson what she wanted, and when Mrs. Jgossalson explained the woman said: "Well, you've got the wrong girl, I guess; this is my daughter. She don't belong to you and never did."

Mrs. Jgossalson protested, but the woman persisted, and it was only when appealed to with threats of punishment that Doris admitted the truth. She refused to go home, however, and Mrs. Jgossalson left, threatening dire things.

The mother secured her daughter through a bench warrent, although the girl promised to run away in time for the night performance. The Kaufman family was, notwithstanding, one short for the night performance.

Mrs. Jgossalson is a widow, with a family dependent upon this girl for support. She says that her daughter was a hard-working, home-loving girl last winter. Even then the mother thought she was doing well. She went away every evening to work, she said, for the telephone company. Every week she gave her mother $4 for her board. The girl was very fond of clothes and the mother thought she spent her money for pretty things, although she could not see that there was much to show for the money.

After the girl had disappeared, three weeks ago, the mother discovered that she had been going to a dancing teacher in Madison street and had not worked with the telephone company. She was then being trained for a vaudeville dancer, and, the mother said, had made good progress and was to have repaid the teacher when she went on the stage.

In the meantime, however she met the Kaufmans, who induced her to join their troupe. They gave her the required training, and she became not only a good rider, but a clever acrobat.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

An attempt was made to burn the Woodward block, one of the largest office buildings in Beatrice, Neb., at 2 o'clock Sunday morning. The flames were subdued before headway was gained, and the firemen discovered that a bold attempt had been made to destroy the building. It is the third time the building has been fired.

The steamer Northwest, which cleared for Chicago Saturday night, returned to her dock at Buffalo and discharged her passengers. She has been remodelled, and it was found that there was something wrong with the electrical machinery. The Northwest will leave for Chicago on Tuesday.

Arthur Underwood, a prominent member of the Castle Square Opera company, playing an engagement in Cleveland, whose home is in Boston, was struck and killed Sunday night by a street car at the corner of Euclid and Wilson avenues. Mr. Underwood got off of one car and in a blinding rain storm stepped in front of another car, which knocked him down and crushed him to death.

VIRULENT CANCER CURED.

Startling proof of a wonderful advance in medicine is given by druggist G. W. Roberts, of Elizabeth, W. Va. An old man there had long suffered with what good doctors pronounced incurable cancer. They believed his case hopeless till he used Electric Bitters and applied Bucklin's Arnica Salve, which treatment completely cured him. When Electric Bitters are used to expel bilious, kidney and microbe poisons at the same time this salve exerts its matchless healing power, blood diseases, skin eruptions, ulcers and sores vanish. LUMBER MARKET

Waiting Game For the Buyers Is the Situation Now.

Little Expected Until the Lumber Already Sold Is Cut.

Situation Among the Mills---Piling Room Getting Scarce.

No changes of an important nature have taken place in the local lumber market for the past week or ten days. The situation has practically come down to a waiting game. The buyers will have to wait until stocks in the advanced sales of lumber have been cut and got out of the way. Now and then a small sale may be made to fill out some special stock, but the big movement will come later in the season, and that is the one to which the local manufacturers are looking forward. Certain it is that the current prices will not be lowered at that time, but it is not so certain that they will remain stationary, but will advance.

Arrangements have been completed to start up the St. Louis mill after July 4. It is not likely that the mill will again shut down until the close of the season, unless it be for accident to machinery. The log drives of the coming month will fully clean up the last winter cut on the Northwestern logging streams, and, besides, the high water has enabled the lumbermen to get out the remainder of the logs that were hung up along the streams last season on account of low water.

There has been no check in operations at the other deep water mills except at the Scott-Graff mill, where the usual midsummer repairs will be made and sawing will be recommenced as soon as possible.

There are rumors current of a change of location of the American Lumber company's planing mill plant at the West Superior Lumber company's mill. The planing mill was burned down, or seriously damaged, some weeks ago, and it is understood that instead of rebuilding there, the company will move. While not yet definitely settled, it is quite likely that the American Lumber company may locate its plant on this side of the bay. Negotiations for a site are not yet closed.

The closing of the contract between the Duluth Log Salvage company and the Peyton, Kimball & Barber company to cut the salvage logs this year will increase the cut of the company's mill from 4,000,000 to 6,000,000 feet, depending largely on the weather conditions for getting in the rafts. Last season there were several rafts broken up and the salvage reached quite a large figue.

Some of the lumber manufacturers are said to be having a little trouble over a lack of piling room. The policy of the shippers in holding back shipments of lumber and of the vesselmen in reducing the lumber fleet to stiffen the rate has a tendency to make the movement from the saw stower, and a continuance of such policy will, in the end, mean a congested condition of the docks. Among the sawmill companies that have already been inconvenienced because of limited dock space for piling are the Scott-Graff company and Hubbard & Vincent.

R. P. Taber, of the Taber Lumber company, of Keokuk, Iowa, who has been here looking over his logging interests in Northern Minnesota, looks on the situation as encouraging, but he does not look for a heavy movement of Northern white pine to mills so far southward as his for some time to come. The Taber Lumber company has closed a four years' contract for logging with the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy River company. The timber is cut twelve miles north of the Mesaba range. Is hauled to Virginia, where it is turned over to the Great Northern to be hauled to Cloquet, thence over the Northern Pacific road to Stillwater, Minn. This shipment of logs is probably the only instance in the state where timber is handled by three railroad companies before it is placed at the mill where it is to be sawed.

Sixteen miles of the logging road begun last year for Walker & Akely, running from the Great Northern road between Solway and Shevlin, in the direction of Lake Itasca, have been finished and placed under operation. The logs are hauled to a mill at Akely to be cut, and the average capacity of the road is about 35 cars of logs per day.

A Twin City report says that the Brooks-Scanlon Lumber company has recently added to its immense timber holdings in the northern part of the state by the purchase of a white pine tract from M. H. Alworth, of Duluth. The timber is said to be located on the White Face river, a branch of the St. Louis river. The lumber will be manufactured at the Scanlon plant. The purchase price is given as $65,000.

M. Lalla has bought the old Putney sawmill at Grand Rapids, and after repairing it will operate the plant. Alexander Harris is opening a large cedar yard at Grand Rapids, Minn.

CASS LAKE GUN CLUB

Will Hold Shoot and Large Crowd Expected.

Cass Lake, Minn., June 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Cass Lake Gun club will hold a shoot on Thursday and Friday, June 26 and 28, the first and second days of the firemen's tournament. The program of the shoot numbers six events daily. Shooting will begin at 8 o'clock in the morning. There is a good sum of added money to the entrance fee in each event, and it is expected that there will be a large number of shooters present from outside points. All purses of the shoot will be divided, 40, 30, 20 and 10 per cent, with professionals and manufacturers' experts barred. The club owns a fine Magua trap, and the Magua rules will govern the tournament. George Birtch is secretary.

WHEAT IS STEADY

Market Starts Weak and Lower But Improved In Tone.

Steady Cables and Poor Weather In France Stimulate It.

Little Trading In Flax and Fall Options Decline.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 16.—The wheat market started out weak and lower this morning, but prices improved toward the noon hour under the influence of steady cables and the reports of unfavorable weather for the crop in France. The cash situation generally was slow, but in the Duluth market a little wheat was worked for export. The weather in the crop region was generally good.

The Liverpool market closed unchanged to ¼d higher, Paris ¼@1¼c higher and Antwerp unchanged.

The visible supply of wheat decreased 2,533,000 bus, against a decrease of 164,000 bus last year, and the total is now 23,570,000 bus, as compared with 35,139,000 bus a year ago. Primary receipts of wheat were 606,000 bus, last year 882,000. Shipments were 436,000 bus, last year 577,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 239,000 bus. The world's shipments were lighter, being 7,360,000 bus, against 8,880,000 last week, while breadstuffs on passage showed a decrease of 3,068,000 bus.

Corn in the Chicago market was very strong, advancing 2c for the July option. Oats declined. The visible supply of corn last week increased 34,000 bus, against an increase of 1,222,000 bus last year and the total is now 4,791,000 bus, last year 10,032,000 bus. Primary receipts of corn were 464,000 bus, last year 384,000 bus. Shipments 192,000, last year 835,000 bus. There were no clearances.

Trading in wheat on the Duluth board was light and the market weaker. It opened ⅝c off at 73⅜c, sold at 73¼c at 9:35, at 73¼-⅜c at 9:40, at 73¼c at 10:11, and 73⅜c at 12:50, finally closing on sales at 73⅜c. This was Saturday's closing price. Minneapolis also closed without change and Chicago was ¼@¼c higher.

Cash sales of wheat were 25,000 bus. Prices continued at 1c over July for No. 1 northern, 2c under for No. 2 and 3c under for No. 3.

Flax trading was very light. Cash seed showed no change but September was off ½c and October ⅝c. Cash rye fell ¼c and September rye ½c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat: Cash—No. 1 hard, 76¼c; No. 1 northern, 73¾c; No. 2 northern, 72½c; No. 3 spring, 70¾c. To arrive—No. 1 hard, 75½c; No. 1 northern, 74½c; July, 73⅜c; September, 73¾c. Manitoba—No. 1 northern, cash, 73¾c; No. 2 northern, 72¼c. Oats—September, 29¼c. Rye—53¼c; September, 52⅝c. Flax—Cash, $1.25 to arrive, $1.26; on track, $1.25; June, $1.20; September, $1.03½; October, $1.29; cash No. 1 Northwestern, $1.26.

Receipts: Wheat, 4258 bus; corn, 4027; flax, 1184. Shipments: Wheat, 72,250 bus; oats, 2500 bus; flax, 11,008 bus.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Fair Weather Caused Early Depression In Grains.

Chicago, June 16.—July wheat opened ⅛@⅛c to ⅜c lower at 71⅝c to 71¾c on fair weather and declined to 71⅜c. Cables were a little better and local receipts were small, but there was poor support early and July rallied only to 71⅝c. Local receipts were 79 cars, 4 of contract grade. Minneapolis and Duluth reported 443 cars, making a total for the three points of 462 against 398 last week and 470 a year ago. World's shipments were 7,360,000 bus, compared to 9,460,000 bus last week. Breadstuffs on passage decreased 3,068,000 bus.

Late strength in corn and a decrease of 2,533,000 bus in the visible supply put a little life into wheat and brought a fair rally. July closed firm, ⅛@¼c higher, at 32c.

Corn felt the depressing influence of fair weather and the wheat weakness early, but soon gained its former strength. Commission houses sold a little July early, which caused that option to open ¼c to ⅝c lower at 63¼c to 63c. Dandelian shipments were decidedly large, but the manipulative aspect of July stuff together with the small percentage of contract grading in the local receipts brought a speedy reaction and July advanced over Saturday and sold at 63½c. Receipts 359 cars.

There was heavy lifting by the big corn bulls and the short crowd ran when they saw the signs of manipulation again. July advanced strongly after the first hour and closed strong, 1c higher, at 64⅝c.

Oats felt the early fair weather pressure and July opened ¼c lower at 395⅜c and in sympathy with the other grains sold down to 395⅛c. Trade was light, and the selling tendency general. A little support put July back to a steadier position at 396c. Receipts were 146 cars.

Provisions showed marked weakness early on a slump in the hog market and early liquidation for outsiders. Brokers supported however, and prices rallied. July pork opened 10c to 7½c lower at $17.42½ to $17.45, dipped to $17.40 and raised to $17.50; May lard started 2½c down at $10.17½ and sold at $10.20, and July ribs 10c lower at $10.30.

Close: Wheat—June, 72½c; July, 72c; September, 70¾@70¾c; December, 71⅝@72c. Corn—June, 63⅝c; July, 64¼c; September, 58⅛@58⅜c; May, 43½c. Oats—June, 42c; July, 37½c; new, 39½@39⅝c; September, 28⅜c, new, 30⅝c; December, 28¾c; new, 30½c. Pork—June, $17.62½; July, $17.62½; September, $17.75; January, $16.80. Lard—June, $10.20; July, $10.20; September, $10.25; October, $9.47½; January, $9.27½; May, $9.17½. Ribs—June, $10.37½; July, $10.37½; September, $10.27; January, $8.55. Flax—Cash N. W., $1.26; S. W., $1.56; September, $1.42½; October, $1.37@1.39. Rye—July, 56@58¼c; September, 54c. Barley—Cash, 64@68c. Timothy—Cash, $4.65. Clover—Cash, $8.35. Cash July, 74½c; September, 73½@73¾c. On track—No. 1 hard, 75½c; No. 1 northern, 75c; No. 2 northern, 73¾c.

FACETIOUS

Thief Robs Library and Leaves a Note Behind.

"Things are a little better.

"London."

Thus reads a note that the assistant librarian found at her desk at the Duluth public library this morning. In connection with the note it might be mentioned that the room showed every evidence of having been ransacked by an experienced hand, in thorough style, and the cash drawer was minus its entire contents, which in this case happened to be $1.85.

Entrance to the library building was made by means of a back window, and the hastily scrawled note left behind to lend humor to the event was the only clue which the light-fingered gentleman that broke into the institution left behind.

After daylight this morning Officer Tony Schulte picked up on his beat on First avenue west a small tag that was attached to the key of the cash drawer in the librarian's rooms and which had been torn off and thrown away by the thief as he walked down to the city.

The police department has not yet made the acquaintance of "London," but hopes to, for the reason that it seems too bad to have a gentleman of the light-fingered gentry with such literary tendencies escape without having his identity made known to the public. The authorities are at a loss whether to credit the burglary to a desire to break into the institution which bears the name of the great Carnegie for a pecuniary purpose or for the purpose of gaining some of the knowledge stored up in the vast number of books and magazines. As a rule a public library would be one of the last places that an experienced burglar would look for money, and the small amount of change taken last night was some that happened to be left by accident. The intruder is supposed to have expressed his appreciation of small favors in the note he left behind him.

Goes to Illinois.

Professor C. W. Weeks, director of music at the First M. DEATH LIST.

New York, June 16.—James Edgerton Learned, author and newspaper writer, and managing editor of the Evening Post from 1832 to 1893, is dead at his home in this city. He was 64 years old and was born at New London, Conn.

Mr. Learned came to this city in the early '60s and went into the cork business. Later he began newspaper work. In 1882 he joined the staff of the Evening Post and for a number of years was an art critic on that paper. At the same time he was musical critic of the Tribune. For a number of years he was managing editor of the Evening Post. Since 1892 Mr. Learned had devoted himself to general literary work.

CRAIN GOSSIP.

Chicago Record-Herald: When the Minneapolis July wheat was at 69½c Friday it showed about 85c early within a week. The millers up there are supposed to own the cash and to have in addition about 4,000,000 bus bought for July delivery. But this anxiety of the millers to secure stocks has not been the only bull influence. A rich Minneapolis lumberman, Akeley, is credited with being long about 1,500,000 bus July at Minneapolis, with a hedge out at Chicago for December. A moderate sized line in the hands of a good speculator always counts a good deal more with the price than a very much bigger holding the hands of investors.

• • •

Chicago Record-Herald: Armour has been selling July corn persistently all the week; sold a good deal of it Friday; it had some of it for sale Saturday. It has been for sale every day. It was not been hedging against corn bought in the country, for the whole trade together has not bought in the West as much as Armour alone has sold in the pit. Has he been making a lot of contract corn in his private elevators and only now selling against it, or has the Armour Grain company been selling out July corn for the Harris-Gates interest? Each hypothesis has its believers. Early in the July deal the Armour house was as active in buying July as Harris-Gates themselves. There was little doubt at that time that the Armour Grain company was executing orders from the New York bull crowd. It would not need a great stretch of the imagination to believe the same people were giving the Armour corn crusher orders, this time on the selling side. Yet it may be the Armour people have just found out about what they can do in the way of turning low grade corn into contract, and that they are now merely selling July against corn they feel certain they can deliver.

• • •

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The market here was a little easier early on more favorable weather reports and tone of cables, however, and the reports of unfavorable weather in the United Kingdom and France imparted a rather better feeling later. The cash situation is slow. Primary receipts have of course an increasing tendency. General movement is large. The weather here and abroad will dominate the market.

Corn—The shorts in July corn were the principal buyers. The increasing movement and poor demand is not preventing premium over later options. The trading seems scattered and so far as we can see indicates no change in the local situation. The weather is more favorable, but advices indicate that the position would be most critical if the recent wet tendency should be again resumed. On higher ground much corn is weedy and has been washed out and on low ground a great deal is under water. As a rule the trade is optimistic as to the outlook and there has been little or no buying on weather as a factor.

Broomhall: Total world's shipments of breadstuffs during the past week were 8,480,000 bus, against 9,326,000 bus the previous week and 9,822,000 bus a year ago. Of the above quantity the United Kingdom took 2,732,000 bus, against 4,056,000 bus the previous week and 4,128,000 bus a year ago. Corn shipments the past week were 5,125,000 bus, against 6,149,000 bus the previous week and 6,424,000 bus a year ago.

• • •

Broomhall cables that weather in France is cold. Wheat is backward but of fair promise, although the plant is turning yellow. It is lodging on heavy soil. Warmth and dryness is much needed.

FACETIOUS

Thief Robs Library and Leaves a Note Behind.

"Things are a little better.

"London."

Thus reads a note that the assistant librarian found at her desk at the Duluth public library this morning. In connection with the note it might be mentioned that the room showed every evidence of having been ransacked by an experienced hand, in thorough style, and the cash drawer was minus its entire contents, which in this case happened to be $1.85.

DULLNESS IN STOCKS

The Torpid Condition of the Speculation Was Unchanged.

Prices Advanced Quite Generally But Declined On Realizing.

Pressure on Steel Stocks Which Closed at a Decline.

New York, June 16.—The torpid condition of the speculation was unchanged this morning. Dealings were on a very moderate scale and changes were insignificant. The most prominent stocks were unchanged. There was some special demand for American Car at an advance of ⅝.

Prices were advanced quite generally, but the improvement induced some realizing which unsettled the list and subsequently caused a general setback. Missouri Pacific, St. Paul and the smelting stocks were conspicuously firm, but the movement otherwise was slight. Colorado Fuel declined 1¼, Pressed Steel Car, 1¾, and Northwestern pfd, a point, with a subsequent recovery. Canadian Pacific rose about a point over Saturday.

Small buying orders were executed in some of the leading stocks and as offerings were small some good gains were established. Missouri Pacific was the most active, but scored only a fractional advance, but St. Paul, Northwestern, Great Northern pfd, Iowa Central pfd, St. Louis & San Francisco 1st pfd, Toledo, St. Louis & Western pfd and Des Moines & Fort Dodge gained 1@2¾. Canadian Pacific sold up to 137¼, and New York Dock jumped 3¼. Twin City Rapid Transit fell off 1⅝, and Chicago Indianapolis & Louisville pfd, 1. Before noon profit-taking had some effect on special stocks, but there was no decided pressure. Bonds were firm at noon.

Many prominent stocks showed no response to the rise of the two or three leaders. New York Central, Canadian Pacific and Missouri Pacific reacted, the market became heavy and dull. American Linseed preferred and Minneapolis & St. Louis rose 1¼ each and D. & H. lost ¼. Wabash preferred also lost about a point.

Room traders covered shorts in the general market when Reading was lifted to 66. The more active stocks rallied to their high price of the morning. The United States Steel stocks and Sugar were rather heavy. Delaware & Hudson recovered fully and the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo stocks and American Express advanced 1½@2.

The Northwestern stocks rose 3, New Jersey Central, 2, and Chicago & Louisville preferred rallied 1¼. The tone generally was rather heavy and the market was very dull. St. Paul preferred dropped 1¼, Hocking Valley preferred, a point, and Manhattan & Fort Dodge reacted 1¼ and Canadian Pacific, a point. The closing was dull and easy.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Ridgley to W. H. Hadley & Co.: All indications favor a slowly advancing market for two or three weeks. Things looked very uncertain ten days ago, but the outlook seems now quite clear. The general sentiment is to buy on reactions, take quick profits. While this sentiment continues there will be no reactions worthy of the name. I hear 120 for Missouri Pacific. Union Pacific may be slow, but I consider that stock good for 150 ultimately. Southern Pacific will sell at par within a year, probably within six months. Take on some Eries for a long pull. Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, Panhandle, and the Wabashes are all good, but I am not aware just when they will move. The steels are around bottom, but may not advance much.

• • •

Dick to B. E. Baker: I am inclined to think that the Gates party has taken an interest in Missouri Pacific. It looks as though this stock has been selected as being relatively cheap compared to others and would be used to broaden the market. There is no difficulty in putting up price. It remains to be seen to what extent the public will come in and the Paul sold around 68 and 69 on the anticipation of bad crop report, is being covered. Heavy buying of Reading Saturday is attributed to Field.

• • •

S. B. Dickinson to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Opinion of one of the shrewdest traders in the street was given this morning as follows: "Bankers have the stocks to sell. They can be bought on a declining or narrow market, and will surely show good profits if present crop conditions maintain. In other words they have begun to discount a bull market." He believes this market is a purchase at one.

• • •

S. B. Dickinson to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Continued talk of increases in dividends in several quarters of the present crop prospects be fulfilled. St. Paul, Union Pacific and Missouri Pacific being those most persistently spoken of, and in which properties stand best and which the best kind of buying is going on.

• • •

Warrington to W. H. Laidley & Co.: General conditions are good and crop reports are of the most gratifying nature.

As I have stated in recent specials, good crops will be the determining factor in sustaining the present seemingly high prices for stocks. Indications point toward strike influences being full discounted and it will not be any surprise to hear of a stampede among the strikers. My advice to buy Missouri Pacific still holds good. I see no reason to take profits as yet on this stock. There is no cause for serious alarm to investors and capitalists, labor as a rule being profitably employed at good wages.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to W. H. Laidley & Co.: There is nothing much to say in regard to the copper market. The regular midsummer dullness seems to have taken hold of the market and until outside speculative interests become more active we do not look for much activity one way or the other. However, on any little dips would advise purchase of the general list.

• • •

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Popular feeling is decidedly more bullish, but the manipulative forces are working to prevent an advance in coppers by depressing Amalgamated. Advices in the metal market were all favorable today. The general visible supply shows a net decrease. The copper situation, we think, is healthy.

• • •

The visible supply of copper on June 15 was 23,563 tons, a decrease of 1161 tons since June 1.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 16.—The cotton market opened quiet with prices down to 4 points following the lead of the English market. Following the call the local list stiffened up to Saturday's bids on all months except July wheat, seemed to have little support from any quarters. The better feeling resulted from official reports that practically no rain had fallen west of Georgia during the past week interval. Atlantic states, however, pretty thoroughly covered with moderate rains, thus setting at rest all drouth talk for that district. Toward the close of the first hour, July liquidation sent the market lower again. July dropped to 8.67 and other options were heavy in sympathy. Trading was not active. Wall street bear interests appear to be free of offerings of July and August contracts.

Cotton closed barely steady: June, 8.90; July, 8.63; August, 8.33; September, 8.06; October, 7.93; November, 7.86; December, 7.87; February, 7.87; March, 7.83.

INCREASING.

Number of Boats at Ore Docks Getting Larger.

There is reasonably good supply of vessel tonnage at the ore docks here again. Last Friday morning there was only one vessel at the Iron Range docks at Two Harbors, and though only one vessel was loaded out at the Missabe docks here over Sunday, there were only four vessels at the docks today. Consequently, there is nothing approaching the rush that might have been expected as a result of the congestion that occurred at the Soo last week as the result of the accident to the C. P. R. bridge, which blockaded the American lock.

From now on, however, it is considered likely that there will be a plentiful supply of tonnage available. If this is true, the indications are that the Missabe docks will break their biggest monthly record of 709,000 tons during June. This road is now well over one-half of that record, with half of the month gone, and that beset by a good many difficulties.

The Eastern Minnesota is increasing its shipments all the time, as the new steel cars are being pressed into service and new mines are beginning shipments. The Eastern has shipped close on to 1,000,000 tons thus far this season, though, owing to the fact that it hauls only ore from surface mines, it was unable to begin hauling as early as the other two roads.

May shipments from all lake ore-shipping ports amounted to only 3,200,000 tons, and the total for the year is 5,118,000 tons, as against 1,590,000 up to June 1 last year. It was thought that the shipments would reach 4,000,000 tons for May, but, as noted in The Herald at the close of the month, the movement from this district of only a little over 1,100,000 tons would not warrant such an estimate of what had gone forward.

STRIKERS PARADE.

Several Bands March Through the Coal Fields.

Roanoke, Va., June 16.—According to advices received by the Norfolk & Western Railroad company today, the only deviation from the usual quiet that has prevailed in the Pocahontas coal region since the strike was inaugurated was the parade of several bands of strikers through the field this morning. Most of them were accompanied by bands, and some of the men were armed. These demonstrations later in the day were somewhat checked by the counseling of wiser heads, and the later reports indicate that the armed bodies will give up their guns. No serious trouble is anticipated.

CONCENTRATING.

Steel Trust Consolidating Its Iron Mine Holdings.

Four assignments of leases were filed Saturday afternoon in the office of the register of deeds, covering iron properties owned by the steel trust. The assignments are understood to be in pursuance of the plan of the steel company to consolidate its holdings.

The Fayal Iron company assigns to the Minnesota Iron company a lease given by E. M. Fowler in 1894, covering the nw ¼ of the nw ¼ of section 5 and the ne ¼ of the ne ¼ of section 6, 57-14.

The Genoa Iron company assigns to the Minnesota Iron company a lease given by S. J. Murphy and others in 1895, covering the e ½ of the sw ¼ and the sw ¼ of the sw ¼ of section 31, 58-17.

William J. Olcott assigns to the Oliver Iron Mining company a lease given by F. W. Higgins and others covering a half interest in the s ½ of the nw ¼ of section 4, 58-17, given in 1901.

William J. Olcott assigns to the Minnesota Iron company a lease given by the Higgins Land company in 1901, covering lands in sections 3, 5, 9, 10, 17, 18 and 19, 58-17.

The consideration is the nominal one of $1 in each case.

OPTION IS RECORDED.

After Months Pine Island Iron Deal Is Filed.

The purchase of an option for a lease to mining lands on Pine Island, in Vermilion lake, by Alfred Merritt, announced by The Herald some time ago, went on record in the office of the register of deeds Saturday morning. Mr. Merritt purchased an option running until Jan. 1, 1903, for $5000, of which $500 is paid down and the balance is to be paid in two equal installments in thirty and sixty days from May 20. The proposed lease carries a royalty of 12½ cents and a minimum output of 50,000 tons the first year and 1000,000 tons annually thereafter. The property is lots 5 and 6, section 32, 63-16; and lots 2, 3, 4, 5, 9 and 10 and the south ½ of the nw ¼ of section 5, 62-15. The option is given by A. S. and Albert Kitto.

POISONING

Suspected In Death of Mrs. Lowey of Eau Claire.

St. Paul, June 16.—A special to the Dispatch from Eau Claire, Wis., says: The postmortem of Mrs. Mary Lowey, who died suddenly last night is going on, and in the meantime the inquest is adjourned to Tuesday. Doctors suspect poisoning. The district attorney has taken charge of the matter. The woman was 51 years of age and housekeeper for James Nell, a railroad man residing on the East Side. She visited Mrs. McFadden on the West Side and had supper there at 6 o'clock. Mrs. Lowey then returned to the Nell residence and at 9 p. m. went out for a walk. She took a drink of bromo seltzer at a confectionery store, was seized with convulsions and died in a buggy while being taken home.

REAR ADMIRAL CLARK.

Fitting Reward For the Captain at Last.

Washington, June 16.—The president today sent the following nominations to the senate:

Captain Charles E. Clark, to be advanced seven numbers in rank and to be a rear admiral in the navy.

Joseph E. Proffit, of West Virginia, to be consul at Pretoria, South Africa.

Hood River, Oregon, Strawberries; Second Car Arrives.

The second car of these beautiful berries arrived in the market today, attached to the Northern Pacific passenger train from the West, car consigned to the Knudsen-Ferguson Fruit company. This is the second car of these berries received by this firm this season. As this week practically ends the strawberry season people desiring berries for preserving purposes had better take advantage of supplies now in the market. For preserving purposes the Oregon berries stand alone in a class by themselves without a competitor in the strawberry line. They are truly the king of strawberries. At the prices they are at now they are really the cheapest berry in the market, as there is absolutely no waste to them.

PRICE OF MACADAM

City Engineer Patton Makes Estimate of Cost of Pavement.

Section From Eighth to Sixteenth Avenues to Cost $42,896.06.

Report of Committee on the Petition May Be Delayed.

City Engineer W. B. Patton, this afternoon, filed with the board of public work his estimate of the cost of paving East Superior street, between Eighth and Sixteenth avenues East with tar macadam. The city engineer's total estimate is $42,896.06. This amount is $14,251.92 cheaper than the estimated cost of paving the same distance with asphalt.

The entire cost of tar macadam is divided as follows: 19,418 square yards of old pavement to be removed, $776.72; 1000 cubic yards of cruche rock, $1600; 5000 feet of curb stone to be reset and redressed, $1200; 1200 feet of new curb, $1,200; 19,418 square yards of new macadam at $1.65 per square yard, including incidentals at 10 per cent, $38,-996.40.

At the board of public works this afternoon, it is said that the estimate of the engineers of the cost of tar macadam would hardly go to the council this evening for the reason that the petition of the property owners asking for the pavement has not yet been looked over and may not be reported back to the council.

It was thought at the city hall this morning that there was no reason why the report should not come from the committee. There is reason, however, to believe that it will not come up until the meeting one week from tonight, for Alderman Barnes, who is chairman of the committee said this noon that he had not yet considered the petition and it was of such an important nature that he would not be in favor of its going back to the city council until the committee has fully discussed the subject.

It is claimed at the city hall that the report that there is money enough in the city treasury to cover the cost of paying East Superior street from Eighth to Sixteenth avenues is erroneous because of a mistake in the published cost of the improvement. The estimates in the city clerk's office show that the cost will be $57,147.92, instead of $52,000, as was stated in the morning paper, and the revolving fund, according to the statement of Comptroller McCormick, will not have in it the amount available for the improvement.

The comptroller's statement shows $84,290.04 on hand, against which there are claims on existing contracts for $33,988.12 and on the contracts allowed by the city council, but not yet executed, $4,923.44. The last named figures are an estimate, the actual amount of which will run a little more than that stated. This leaves $45,378.49 available. There is yet $7,482.48 in unpaid assessments, which could hardly be added to the available amount as cash for the reason that some of the assessments may not be paid. Even were all the assessments paid that would bring a total of only $52,607.65 available for the improvement, whereas the improvement is estimated at $57,147.98, or a fund nearly $7,000 short of the required amount.

The engineer's estimate will go to the council with the committee's report on the petition, and as soon as this is done the controversy over asphalt and tar macadam pavement for East Superior street will have been opened before that body in good earnest.

DOCK BILL IS PASSED

Senate Approves the Bill Presented By Senator Nelson.

House Refuses to Investigate Dismissal of Bee Taylor.

Resolution Tabled on Report of Civil Service Committee.

Washington, June 16.—To furnish more time for the consideration of the isthmian canal project the senate today began at 11 o'clock.

At the conclusion of routine business Mr. Teller (Col.) offered the following resolution:

Whereas, it seems impracticable to prepare during this session of congress an itemized statement showing the collection and disbursement of all funds for the whole period of the military occupation of Cuba, and,

Whereas, it is important that a statement be now made of the accounts hereafter named; therefore be it

Resolved, that the secretary of war be, and he is hereby, directed to send to the senate the following:

A full itemized statement of all payments made out of Cuban funds to any person or corporations; if any, for the purpose of promoting "reciprocity" between the United States and Cuba, at any time during the military occupation of Cuba by the United States, and whether such payments were authorized or approved by the secretary of war.

Mr. Kean (N. J.) objected to immediate consideration of the resolution and it went over.

Consideration was then resumed of the London dock charges bill.

Pending disposition of the bill, the senate agreed to a conference on the bill for the protection of the president and Messrs. Hoar, Fairbanks and Pettus were appointed as conferees.

The London dock charges bill was discussed by Mr. McCumber (N. D.), Mr. Nelson (Minn.), Mr. Gallinger (N. H.), and Mr. Hale (Mo.) Mr. Hale could not see why the amendment offered by Mr. Hoar sohuld not be accepted. It must be an extreme, drastic and unreasonable bill and it ought not to be passed; if a provision should not be inserted in the bill of lading, that the carrier should be required to pay charges lawfully made upon him.

Mr. Nelson contended that this London charge was, "An arbitrary and fixed charge, not subject to competition." If the charge were included in the freight charge, that would be subject to competition.

After some further discussion the vote was taken on Mr. Hoar's amendment, which provided that nothing in the act should prevent the carrier from stipulating for reimbursement to him by the shipper or consignee of any charges which he lawfully may be compelled to pay for compensation for any service which he may agree to render. The amendment was rejected, 9 to 36.

The bill was then passed.

It provides that no master, agent or owners of any vessel transporting goods from the United States to foreign ports shall insert in the bill of lading or other agreement any clause whereby he shall be relieved from liability for loss or damage arising from negligence, fault or failure in proper loading or proper delivery of any goods committed to his care; or any clause or agreement whereby there is imposed on the consignee any port or dock charges of any kind for the discharge or delivery of goods, the payment of which by law is imposed upon such master, agent or owner.

A bill for preventing the adulteration, misbranding and imitations of foods, beverages, candies, drugs and condiments in the District of Columbia and the territories and for regulating inter state traffic therein, then was taken up.

Without disposing of the measure the senate at 1 o'clock at the conclusion of the morning hour, resumed the consideration of the isthmian canal project, Mr. Cullom (Ill.) addressing the senate.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, June 16.—At the opening of the session of the house today, Mr. Cooper (Wis.) asked unanimous consent for the consideration of a resolution to make the Philippine civil government bill a special order from June 19 to June 25 inclusive. The resolution provided for five days for general debate, beginning at 11 o'clock each day, and for night sessions from 8 to 10:30 p. m., for two days consideration, under the five-minute rule, and a final vote at 4 o'clock on Thursday, June 26.

Mr. Richardson, the minority leader, asked if the effect of the rule would not be to cut off all except committee amendments. Mr. Cooper denied this and said it was the intention of the committee to allow the widest latitude in amendment.

There was no objection and the resolution was adopted without division.

Mr. Gillet (Mass.), chairman of the committee on reform of the civil service, from that committee reported back the resolution calling upon the secretary of war for the reasons for the dismissal from her position in the classified service of the war department of Rebecca J. Taylor and moved that the resolution be laid on the table. Upon that motion Mr. Shallenberger (N. Y.) demanded the ayes and nays and the roll was called. Mr. Gillet's motion prevailed, 109 to 84. Mr. McCleary (Minn.), Mr. Bromwell (Ohio) and Mr. Minor (Wis.) voted with the Democrats against the motion.

The other correspondence, including Miss Taylor's letter acknowledging authorship, heretofore have appeared.

Messrs Shallenberger (Neb.) and Zenor (Ind.) were the Democrats present, who void against tabling the resolution.

The senate amendments to the naval appropriation bill were non-concurred in and the bill was sent to conference. Mr. Foss (Ill.), Mr. Dayton (W. Va.), and Meyer (Iowa) were appointed conferees.

Mr. Sherman (N. Y.) moved to suspend the rules and adopt a senate resolution to amend the Indian appropriation act for the coming fiscal year in reference to the amendments in severality of lands in certain Indian reservations.

Mr. Richardson, the minority leader, asked if the president had signed the Indian bill with the obnoxious provisions in it.

Mr. Sherman replied that the president had signed it in the expectation that the provisions would be modified in accordance with the resolution.

Mr. Little (Ark.) said he believed the president should have vetoed the bill on account of the provisions it contained regarding lessees in the Nintah reservation. He was, however, in full sympathy with the purposes of the pending resolution.

Mr. Ephens (Tex.) criticised the resolution, because he said it would re-enact existing law and perpetuate the present system of leasing grazing lands. Under that system the secretary of the interior, he said, had leased 400,000 acres on the Red river in Oklahoma to millionaire cattlemen. The resolution was adopted.

THE TAYLOR CASE.

Washington, June 16.—The house committee on reform of the civil service today voted 6 to 2, on party lines, to table the resolution calling on the secretary of war for information as to the dismissal of Rebecca J. Taylor, a clerk of the war department. The case has excited some attention because Miss Taylor was dismissed for writing a letter appearing in a Washington newspaper, headed "The Flag Shall Stay Put," and criticising the president's attitude in reference to the Philippines.

Chairman Gillet presented to the committee all the correspondence which had been forwarded by Secretary Root. This included a letter from Mr. Root to the chairman stating: "The opportunity for explanation of statement afforded to Miss Taylor with express reference to section 8 of civil service rule 2 was deemed by the department to be a full and substantial compliance with the civil service law; and clearly was so under the rulings of the civil service commission.

"No head of a department can maintain effective administration if he is obliged to depend upon the services of clerks who are so violently opposed to the success of the work in which they are engaged, that they are unable to refrain from public denunciation of the purpose of the work and public insult to the president."

DROP HOUSE.

New Plan Proposed In Relation to Cuban Reciprocity.

Washington, June 16.—Should it become apparent that there is no possibility of an agreement between the senate and house upon the pending Cuban reciprocity proposition, then the president probably will endeavor to simplify the problem by dropping the house out of the calculations and negotiating a treaty directly with President Palma. It is true such a treaty would require the approval of two-thirds of the senate, but it is believed that, under the changed conditions, this would not be impossible of attainment. A any rate, the situation would be clarified by the omission of the house from the calculation, and hence it is that the project is being earnestly considered.

FAST TIME.

New Trains Maintain Higher Speed Required By Schedule.

Cleveland, June 16.—The new westbound Twentieth century limited train on the Lake Shore pulled out of the Union station exactly on time at 2:30 this morning.

The high rate of speed called for by the new fast schedule was maintained both east and west of Cleveland, the train frequently running at the rate of seventy-five miles an hour.

Dispatches from Toledo, Ohio, and Elkhart, Ind., state that the new flyer passed those points on schedule time.

New York, June 16.—The new special train over the Pennsylvania railroad that is to make the trip from Chicago to Jersey City in twenty hours, arrived at the latter place at 8:35 o'clock this morning, three minutes ahead of schedule time. The trip was accomplished without a hitch.

Chicago, June 16.—New York to Chicago in 19 hours and 57 minutes—that is the record time made by the new fast trains put into service by the Pennsylvania and Lake Shore railroads yesterday. The twenty-hour schedule over both was more than equalled. The train of the former road that left New York yesterday at 1:55 p. m., arrived here three minutes ahead of time at 8:52 this morning. The Lake Shore train made exactly the same time, arriving three minutes ahead of the schedule at 9:42 a. m.

HIGH PRAISE

For the Third Regiment Band of This City.

St. Paul, June 16.—A Lake City, Minn., special to the Dispatch, says: Monday dawned at camp bright and sunny, finding the men in the best of spirits and with everything moving in that exceptionally good form that has so conspicuously marked this encampment. General Libby gave his friends and the officers of the Third regiment a launch party and dinner Saturday, and as a fitting ending for the day, considering that it was his birthday, they presented him with a twenty years gold medal. He has been in the service for twenty years. Major Whitney, of the Second regiment, who is visiting in camp, made a revolver score of 49 out of a possible 50 yesterday.

Robert Block, of company C, is colonel's orderly today. Captain Pratt is officer of the day, with Lieut. Maxwell and Lieut. Barns as officers of the guard. The regimental rifle team are shooting on the 1,000 yard range today with the new Krag-Jorgensen rifles.

The inspection of companies and company property was finished yesterday. Captain W. W. Price, inspecting officer, said:

"The idea of holding an inspection in camp is an experiment and has been talked of for a number of years. The Third regiment is in excellent condition right straight through. The property and men are in good shape, the men turning out well and in most every case have passed a very creditable inspection."

When asked their comparative standing with last year, he continued: "I can see a great improvement over all the work of last year. To a stranger a company that does fine work on an armory floor would seem ragged upon the drill ground, but an allowance is made for that. I will give a complete report upon finishing with the other two regiments."

The pay and inspection rolls were turned intoday. The men will be paid in camp the last day. The band is reported by the staff as being the best ever inspected here. Their quarters are in ship shape order and no company in the regiment had its property and quarters in as perfect a shape as this band. Their concerts are fine and draw large crowds every night. A more orderly and gentlemanly and soldierly crowd of men never camped here with the national guards and they are certainly an honor to Duluth, their home city. The third will break camp Wednesday at 1:50 p. m.

BOILERMAKERS STRIKE.

Warren, Ohio, June 16.—Two hundred employes of the Warren City Boiler works struck today because of the discharge of the president of their union.

ROUTINE BUSINESS.

Detroit, June 16.—According to President John Tobin nothing but routine business is before the convention of the International Association of Boot and Shoe Workers, which began here today. President Tobin said that unless some unexpected fight developed the business of the organization will be completed in five days.

TRAVELING ON HORSEBACK.

Chicago, June 16.—Dr. A. Donaldson Smith, of Philadelphia, an African explorer who is crossing the continent on horseback, accompanied by his valet, also on horseback, has arrived here. They left Philadelphia May 17, and, omitting periods of complete rest, have averaged thirty miles a day. They will rest in Chicago four days and then resume their journey to the Yellowstone park, and thence either to Seattle or to Nevada.

PRESSMEN

And Their Assistants Meet In Convention at Baltimore.

Baltimore, June 16.—The fourteenth annual convention of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' union of North America assembled this morning in this city. The convention began business at 9 o'clock and will continue to hold daily sessions until Friday. There are more than 200 delegates, from every state in the Union and Canada. Many important questions will come before the convention, including one to grant autonomy and a separate national organization to the press feeders' assistants.

The officers of the international union are as follows: President, Martin P. Higgins, Charlestown, Mass.; first vice president, Edward A. Banisir, Washington, D. C.; second vice president, Daniel J. McDonald, Charlestown, Mass.; third vice president, William H. Burkelin, St. Louis; secretary and treasurer, William J. Webb, Brooklyn.

An elaborate program of entertainment has been provided for the convention by Baltimore union No. 61.

MISS HANNA

Married to Harry Parsons at Her Cleveland Home.

Cleveland, June 16.—The marriage of Miss Mabel Hanna, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Hanna to Harry Parsons, of this city, took place this afternoon at the Hanna residence on Lake avenue. Bishop Leonard, of the Episcopal church, performed the ceremony. Only the closest friends of the Hanna and Parsons families were present. The ceremony took place before an altar erected beneath a canopy of rambler rose and smilax. The bride entered the large parlor on the arm of her father. She was attended by her sister, Miss Ruth Hanna and Miss Lucia McCurdy, her cousin. The bridegroom was attended by George T. Tillman, of New York. Bishop Leonard used the full Episcopal service.

ARBITRATION BOARD

Will Be Appointed By Chicago Federation of Labor.

Chicago, June 16.—Recognizing the advantages of arbitration in labor difficulties, the Chicago Federation of Labor has decided to appoint a board to renew and pass on all disagreements of affiliated unions. The federation thinks the dissentions have invariably been the cause of unwarranted strikes.

This board of arbitration will be composed of one representative from each of the 201 unions affiliated with the Chicago Federation of Labor. The judgment of the board will be absolute, and the workmen must abide by its decisions or cease their connection with the Federation of Labor.

CONTEST NOTICE.—

Department of the Interior, United States Land Office, Duluth, Minn., May 26, 1902.

A sufficient contest affidavit having been filed in this office by Hans A. Michelson, contestant, against, homestead entry No. 10370, made November 24, 1896, for s½ of sw¼ and lots 5 and 9, section 20, township 54 N, range 18 west, by Sam Monson, contestee, in which it is alleged that said Sam Monson never established his residence upon said land or any part thereof, and never cultivated any part of said land, nor made any improvements thereon, although more than five years have elapsed since he made said entry, and that said alleged abandonment was not due to his employment in the army, navy or marine corps of the United States during any war, said parties are hereby notified to appear, respond and offer evidence touching said allegation at 10 o'clock a. m., on July 23, 1902, before the register and receiver at the United States land office in Duluth, Minnesota.

The said contestant having, in a proper affidavit, filed June 11, 1902, set forth facts which show that after due diligence personal service of this notice can not be made, it is hereby ordered and directed that such notice be given by due and proper publication.

A CORNER IN CORN

Excitement On the Chicago Board of Trade.

Bull Clique, Led By Gates, Has July Cornered.

Chicago, June 17.—Excitement ruled in the corn pit on the board of trade today. The fear of a corner in July options, which caused a sharp upturn yesterday, was augmented at the opening of business by the reluctance of the big holders of July to sell. In consequence, shorts, who feared a runaway market, bought everything in sight and bid excitedly for more in order to stop their losses. Prices fluctuated widely and wildly. The manipulated option opened rather steady at 64⅜ to 64⅞ cents, but at once began making jumps of one or more, receding as much and then advancing still further. Shortly after the first hour of trade July sold at 66⅝ cents. From this price it declined to 65½ cents, only to be pushed up again in a short time to 67⅛ cents.

The supposed corner that is at present the only factor in corn is said by other traders to be an assured fact. Last year's small yield of corn gave an early buying argument when July options were first quoted. As prospects for a good crop year began to develop the old-time bears sold short. A bull clique, led by John W. Gates and his Wall street affiliations, bought everything offered. Stocks of contract corn have been very low and are growing lower. All told, at the present there is less than 2,000,000 bus of contract grade corn with which shorts can cover, and yet the Gates crowd is credited with having bought of these same shorts over 15,000,000 bus.

IN PRECARIOUS STATE

The Fate of the Morris Chippewa Bill and Other Minnesota Measures In Congress Is Doubtful.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, June 17. (Special to The Herald.)—Two very important measures bearing directly upon the future development of northern Minnesota, will undoubtedly be called in the house of representatives within the next two days. A special order has been promulgated by the rules committee of the house calling for evening sessions of that body tonight and tomorrow night. During these sessions the fate of the Morris bill providing for the opening of the Leech Lake reservation and the disposal of the pine on the Chippewa reservations, and also providing for the creation of a forest reserve, will be decided. The house will also take up and dispose of the bill providing for the opening to settlement of some quarter of a million acres of agricultural land in the Red Lake reservation.

The Minnesota delegation and their friends have been marshalling their forces for some days for the coming contest in the house over these bills. It may be said that, despite the cheerfulness of the friends of these bills as to their fate, they are in rather a precarious position, chiefly because they are to be considered during night sessions. It is proverbial that it is very difficult to maintain a quorum at evening sessions. Representative Fletcher has several amendments which he may propose to the Chippewa bill, and it is feared that these may provoke considerable discussion and a point of "no quorum," eventually raised by opponents to sidetrack a bill. However, Representative Morris and the friends of the several measures are working hard to secure a full attendance during the coming evening sessions and express strong hopes of being able to get the bills through.

A RANCHER MURDERED

Hyattville, Neb., June 17.—James Gorman and his sister-in-law, Mrs. Thomas C. Gorman, were arrested yesterday charged with the murder of the latter's husband. Thomas Gorman, who was a wealthy cattle owner, disappeared from his home two weeks ago, and his wife and brother gave it out that he had gone West to seek another location for their herds. A few days later Mrs. Gorman and James began selling the personal property at the ranch. After disposing of as much of it as they could, they left with a 6-horse wagon, taking with them Mrs. Gorman's 3-year-old daughter. Neighbors became suspicious and made a search of the premises, finding the mutilated body of Thomas Gorman buried in the garden.

Sheriff Hale started in pursuit of the couple and arrested them near Cody. Gorman was disposed to fight, and was handcuffed with difficulty. The little girl was not with them, and it is thought her body is in the Big Horn river. Great excitement has been caused by the arrests, and the citizens are demanding that the child be produced unharmed at once. The man and woman are in jail at Basin awaiting a hearing.

SWINDLER IS CAPTURED

Chicago, June 17.—United States marshals from Milwaukee today arrested Otto Jaehkel at Trevor, Wis. The prisoner is wanted for securing $50,000 from Englebert, Hardt & Co., of New York, Berlin and Buenos Ayres. It is alleged his plan was concocted in Buenos Ayres, where he was employed by the firm, and was carried into effect in Hamburg and Paris. Since securing the money he has eluded his pursuers by traveling in the United States and Mexico.

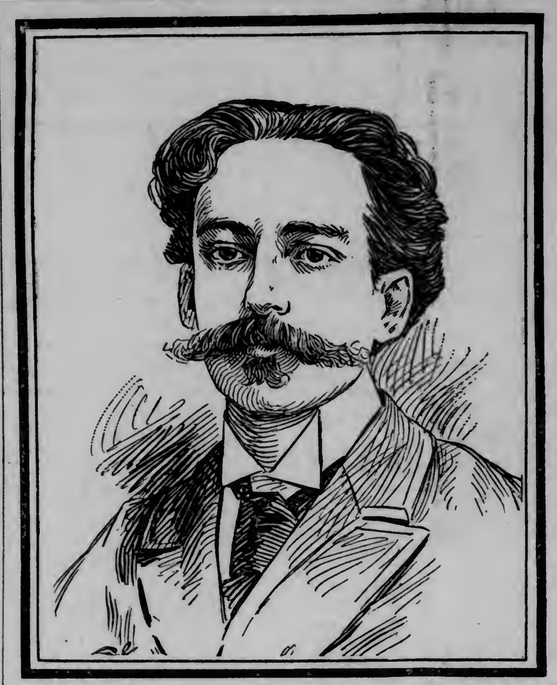
Through alleged misrepresentation, Jaehkel is said to have induced his firm to buy drafts aggregating 200,000 marks, drawn on a Hamburg firm, with the view of opening an account in the latter city. These drafts were endorsed by the firm and later, it is alleged, the firms name was removed by the use of acid, and the fictitious name of H. Newman substituted. A letter of advice was then written to the international bank of Brussels, stating that Newman would be in that city to close a large business deal, and that a large sum of money would be deposited to his credit. This letter was written by Jaehkel, it is said, but the firm's name was signed to it. Then he went to Brussels, where, as H. Newman, he introduced himself and later secured the money in Paris.

BAD FIRE AT KOOCHICHING

Fort Frances, Ont., June 17.—The business part of the town of Koochiching, Minn., was wiped out by fire which broke out in Stone's hotel. The fire was being got under control by a steam fire engine when the engine broke down. Stone's hotel, Kahte's restaurant, Caldwell's fruit store, the Itasca hotel, Haulman's saloon, the Koochiching hotel, Bury's store, Jameson's real estate office, Barge's store, No. 2 Custom house and post-office, and Hulbert & Gibson's real estate office were completely destroyed, the fire only being stopped for lack of material to burn. The cause was an overheated stovepipe. Loss, $40,000.

REBELS BORROW A STEAMER

St. Thomas, D. W. I., June 17.—Advices received here from Georgetown, British Guiana, under date of June 14, say that the Norwegian steamer Jotun arrived at Georgetown this morning from Venezuela and the chief officer reported that Venezuelan revolutionists "commandered" the vessel June 6 at Barrancas. The chief of the party, Gen. Valentin Perez, took charge of the vessel. Revolutionary troops were then embarked on board and she conveyed about 2½ of them to Bolivar, landing them at the latter place June 7, when Capt. Meling was allowed to resume command of the ship and she was taken to the other side of the bay, where she loaded cattle. On her return voyage, when passing St. Felix, venezuelan troops fired on the Jotun, killing Capt. Meling and wounding a passenger. The government vessels pursued the Jotun, but she succeeded in escaping.



GONZALO DE QUESADA, CUBA'S FIRST MINISTER TO THE UNITED STATES.

Gonzalo de Quesada, who has just arrived in Washington to take up the duties of his office as Cuban minister to the United States, is still a very young man, having been born in Havana in 1868 at the beginning of the Ten Years' war for Cuban independence. His parents were exiled, and young Quesada received his education in New York. He studied engineering at Columbia and later was graduated from the law department of the University of New York. Senor Quesada in early manhood became prominent in the effort to free his native land from the rule of Spain. He represented Cuba at the Paris exposition and was secretary of the unofficial Cuban delegation in Washington and later charge d'affaires. Senor Quesada is very popular in the social circles of our national capital, and already a number of entertainments in his honor have been planned.

A VERY RARE DISEASE

Bridget Dempsey Had Landry's Paralysis --- Her Heart Beat For Over Eight Hours After She Ceased to Breathe.

Chicago, June 17.—Practically dead for eight and one-half hours, the heart of Bridget Dempsey, a patient in the county hospital, has finally ceased beating. All action of the respiratory organs of the woman had ceased and the physicians in attendance pronounced her dead.

The heart action, which apparently had died away, grew stronger a few moments afterward and injections of nitro-glycerine and other stimulants and artificial respiration were used, but ineffectually. Still the pulsations of the heart continued with regularity while the woman remained, to all other indications, lifeless.

Dr. J. H. Mustard, of the hospital staff, pronounced the case one of Landry's paralysis, one of the rarest diseases known to medical science. The disease is primarily paralysis of the respiratory organs, which does not act immediately on the heart.

The dead woman was 21 years old and entered the institution two weeks ago to be treated for tuberculosis.

BLACK MAN MUST ACT

Bishop Walters Says All Signs Point to Trouble For the Negroes and They Must Now Protect Themselves.

Chicago, June 17.—"The time has come when the black man must depend upon himself for protection. I do not stand for mobs, but every negro should be prepared to protect his home, his wife and his children, even to the death."

This advice was given at a meeting of negroes last night by Bishop Alexander Walters, of the colored church of Ohio, after he had warned his hearers that all signs pointed to a time of great trouble for them. Bishop Walters is president of the Afro-American council.

The meeting was held in the Olivet Baptist church and was called for the purpose of taking action on the persecution of the negro residents of Eldorado and Harrisburg, Ill., and the lynching of Louis W. Wright in Missouri last winter.

A resolution was adopted and telephoned to Governor Yates calling on him to take immediate steps to protect the lives and property of the colored people at Eldorado and Harrisburg, Ill.

Governor Yates, who is in Chicago, said last night: "The authorities have been ordered to proceed against any persons who may have been guilty of assaults against the colored people of that locality, and the law will be maintained."

OBJECTS TO DEGREE OF D. D.

Chicago, June 17.—The Rev. John John Thompson, pastor of Centennial Methodist church, Rockford, Ill., has declared that he will never use the title of doctor of divinity, which was conferred on him last week by Taylor university. "In my judgment," said the pastor, "the degree of D.D. should be reserved for men who have displayed extraordinary scholarly attainments or have accomplished great things in their work. The question is not one to be settled by a decision as to whether the school is big enough, but whether the man is big enough. He should be judged by himself, and not by the diplomas or the scholarships and degrees he bears."

LIGHTNING'S QUEER PRANKS

Winona, June 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Word has just reached here of a prank of the lightning at Fountain City, Wis., on Saturday evening. A bolt struck the residence of M. Rupp, entering by way of the chimney, which it entirely demolished. It then glanced along the building and cut off one corner of the structure as cleanly as though it had been done with a saw. None of the inmates of the house were injured. The lightning also struck the blacksmith shop of L. Dressendorfer and caused considerable damage.

TWO NEW BANKS FOR CHICAGO

Chicago, June 17.—Two more new banks, one large and one small, have been added to the list of Chicago financial institutions. The large one, the National Bank of North America, began business in the rooms formerly occupied by the Metropolitan National bank. The smaller one, the Colonial Trust company, opened in the old quarters of the Western State bank. The National Bank of North America will cater to all classes, while the Colonial Trust company expects to build up its business immediately through the patronage of merchants in the territory left without immediate banking facilities since the Western State bank moved away last month.

WAS CLOSE TO DEATH

Winona Boy Sentenced to Be Hanged In Philippines.

Had Been Captured But Was Arrested As Deserter.

Case Investigated and He Was Pardoned By President.

Winona, Minn., June 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—John English, a soldier from the Philippines, who was sentenced to be hanged but was pardoned, has returned to his home in Winona. He enlisted in October, 1899, in the Fortieth regiment, and in April, 1900, was located at Cagayan. While there English was captured and held until the war was over. He then made his way back to headquarters, and was placed under arrest, charged with desertion. He was court-martialed, found guilty and sentenced to be hanged. Officers interceded and caused a review of the proceedings. The case was brought to the notice of President Roosevelt, who found that the young man was innocent and ordered his release. He later secured a full pardon. Mr. English had many exciting experiences during his captivity, and many times was very close to death.

DOORS OPEN.

Admiral O'Neil Makes Inspection of German Armament Works.

New York, June 17.—Rear Admiral O'Neil, the United States naval construction bureau delegate at the recent International Naval Construction congress at Dusseldorf, who has arrived at Berlin, cables the Herald's correspondent, after visiting all the leading armament, guns, ammunition and ship building works of Germany, says all doors were opened to him during his tour.

"There is no necessity," he said, "for making invidious comparisons between the United States and Germany in matters of armament, artillery, gun equipment, and so forth. German methods stand for thoroughness and solidity. Germany has great gun and naval construction works, and adapts itself to the most modern methods. Its steel industry has developed remarkably. The claim circulated recently to the effect that Herr Krupp had discovered a new projectile which would penetrate any armament, I do not know of. We all know that it is only a matter of getting near enough to be able to penetrate any armor. This is a well-known mathematical computation.

"I was deeply impressed with the works and experiments at the Krupp works at Essen. I visited the Germania ship yards at Stettin and saw there what a remarkable stride Germany has made in ship construction."

Admiral O'Neil will remain at Berlin until the latter part of the week, and will proceed to Hamburg and other ports to make further inspection of ship building. He will then go to London to attend the coronation ceremonies and leaves for Washington on July 5.

TO VISIT BERLIN.

Captain Schmittberger Will Call on Prince Henry.

New York, June 17.—Capt. Max Schmittberger of the New York police department, who was in command of the detail at the pier, where the German emperor's yacht Hohenzollern lay during Prince Henry's visit to this country, has decided to accept the warm invitations extended him by the prince and members of his suite to visit Berlin. The captain who, through his activity, saved the prince's party from much annoyance through the persistence of sightseers, also has received several valuable presents from the prince and his officers.

SMITH PARDONED.

Governor Dole Acts In Case of Honolulu Editor.

Honolulu, June 10, via San Francisco, June 17.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Governor Dole has issued a pardon for Walter G. Smith, editor of the Advertiser, who was sentenced to thirty days in Oahu prison for contempt of court. Smith's offense was the publication of a cartoon attacking the judge, which was held to obstruct the trial of a pending case. In response to its advertisement for tenders for treasury notes the government has received no tenders. Local banks are stated, however, to be willing to loan money in some other way.

A DULUTH INVENTOR.

Washington, June 17.—(Special to the Herald.) A patent for a chain retaining and releasing means was today issued to John J. Galway, of Duluth, who assigns one-half interest to K. McDonald, of that city.

NO NOMINATION MADE.

Beatrice, Neb., June 17.—The Republican congressional convention of the Fourth district adjourned shortly after midnight, after taking 133 ballot without result. On the last ballot Hinshaw led with 45 votes; Shultz had 39; Sloan, 26; Hainer, 22; Pope, 22; Aldrich, 17; Good, 10.

FIRE AT STRASBURG.

Strasburg, Ohio, June 17.—The Garver Bros.' department store here burned today with a loss of $100,000. It was thought that the fire was started by robbers.

AMES IS INDICTED

Mayor of Minneapolis Is Charged With Bribery.

Some Startling Sensations In Police Trials.

Minneapolis, June 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Sensations came thick and fast in the police bribery cases this morning. When it came time to open the trial of Christopher Norbeck, detective, for bribery, W. W. Erwin, his attorney, arose and confessed that he did not know the whereabouts of his client. He had an appointment with Norbeck last night, but the accused had not kept it. Nor had he called at the attorney's office this morning, as had been his custom since the trial began. The disappearance of the accused caused great excitement, and a bench warrant will be issued for him. Since the conviction of Gardner, special officer, and the commitment of Detective Harvey for perjury, Norbeck has been very despondent and has threatened suicide. His bail bond for $5000 was signed by R. J. Hill and Brando Sodini. Mrs. Norbeck told a reporter that her husband left home with another man at 8 o'clock last night and she had not seen him since.

Another sensation developed when it became known that Albert A. Ames, mayor of Minneapolis, had been indicted by the grand jury for offering a bribe. The charge is that the mayor endeavored to have his secretary, Thomas R. Brown, appointed sheriff by the county commissioners, when it became evident that Philip Megaarden would be removed from the office by the governor for malfeasance. In attempting to carry out this plan he is alleged to have offered to so arrange matters that the $20,000 annual income of the sheriff's office should be divided equally between Brown and the three county commissioners, who were to vote for him, forming a majority of the board. The evidence to this effect was given before the grand jury by County Commissioners M. W. Nash and Ed Sweet.

Dr. Ames has been four times mayor of Minneapolis, having been elected thrice as a Democrat and again in November, 1900, after having been out of office for some years, as a Republican. He is a veteran of the civil war, in which he served as surgeon, and is a G. A. R. Man.

REBELS ARE HOPEFUL

Venezuelan Revolutionists Think They Will Be Able to Overthrow President Castra By Next Month.

New York, June 17.—Owing to the news of an exodus of a large number of President Castro's supporters from Venezuela, coupled with recent defeats suffered by the government, the revolutionists are hopeful of overthrowing Castro in the ensuing month, says a Herald dispatch from Port of Spain, Trinidad.

Four hundred government troops who landed at Soro for the purpose of retaking Quira were completely defeated by Gen. Corco. The government lost seventy killed and many wounded, besides 150 men taken prisoners.

Gen. Matos' army, which is marching on Caracas, has reached Carines, en route to Guarcio, where reinforcements are awaiting the revolutionary leader. Guarico was recently occupied by a large body of revolutionists, a portion of whom are invading Barabobo district, under the command of Gen. Pedro Condo.

Gen. Perzo has sent 400 insurgents via Barraico.

Gen. Alexander Ducharme is marching from Maturin with a large force to strengthen Cuidad, Bolivar, which is still in the hands of the revolutionists. The insurgents have held the town since June 8.

Gen. Ayala, with 70 men in Coro has been besieged by Gen. Rierra.

IMPOSING CAVALCADE

First Full State Parade to Ascot Since the Death of the Prince Consort Excites Great Interest In London.

London, June 17.—The royal procession left Windsor Castle for Ascot before 1 p. m. Although the king was unable to attend the races, Queen Alexandra, the prince and princess of Wales, the duke of Cambridge, the duke and duchess of Connaught, and the other guests at the castle and members of the court all participated. The procession was the first full state parade of that description since the death of the prince consort, and consisted of eight carriages each drawn by four horses. The mounted equerries and gaily-liveried postillions and out-riders formed an imposing cavalcade. Leaving the palace quadrangle by the George IV. gate the royal cortege drove down the famous long walk which was lined by cheering crowds, and, crossing the review ground, the procession reached the New Mile gates and passed up the course to the royal pavilion.

In spite of the inclemency of the weather, immense crowds assembled about the course and the royal party was everywhere warmly welcomed. The royal inclosure was brilliant with ladies' dresses and the picturesque costumes of Indian princes, while large numbers of special ambassadors, colonial premiers and diplomats, including Henry White, secretary of the United States embassy, and Mrs. White, John R. Carter, second secretary of the embassy, and Miss Carter and Miss Choate, Mesdames Montgomery-Sears and Adair, and other Americans, were present in the enclosure. United States Ambassador Choate, Mrs. Choate, Whitelaw Reid, the special ambassador of the United States to the coronation, and Mrs. Reid did not go to Ascot. All the big houses in and around Windsor contributed their quota to the fashionable throng.

WIFE'S TESTIMONY USELESS

New York, June 17.—Judge Skinner, of the common pleas court at Newark, N. J., has set aside the conviction of John P. McEver, a Newark man, who had been committed for ninety days on a charge of having been drunk and disorderly. The testimony upon which his conviction was based was given by his wife.

An appeal to Judge Skinner was taken from the conviction on the ground that under the New Jersey statutes as recently revised, a wife's testimony against her husband is not competent in a case in which a crime is alleged.

The point raised was a novel one and was sustained.

THE KING IS MUCH BETTER

London, June 17.—It is officially announced that King Edward is much better this morning.

The king passed a good night and his progress towards complete recovery is uninterrupted. The precautionary measures ordered by his physicians are due to the necessity for husbanding his strength in view of the fatiguesc of coronotion week. Therefore the king will remain at Windsor Castle today. He was keenly disappointed at being unable to attend the Ascot heath race meeting today, which he intended to open with all the state ceremonial of the early days of Queen Victoria. He hopes, however, to be present Thursday, Gold Cup day.

Queen Alexandra and the prince and princess of Wales went to the races today.

REVOLUTION IS OVERTHROWN

New York, June 17.—The overthrow of the Colombian revolution appears to be complete, says a Port of Spain, Trinidad, dispatch to the Herald under date of June 10. Leaders of the revolutionary forces, including Gen. Uribe-Uribe and other chief commanders, have arrived in Caracas, Vez., disheartened, after escaping from the Colombian troops by the Meta river. They were pursued for eight days. The leaders hope to obtain further assistance from President Castro.

AGAINST ASPHALT

Only Three Members of the Council Said to Favor It.

Chances Are That Improvement Will Be Tied Up.

Large Number of Paving Petitions Expected Coming Fall.

Unless there is a great change in sentiment the council will not order a sheet asphalt paving for East Superior street.

The indications now are that the East Superior street improvement will be tied up indefinitely unless a cheaper and more satisfactory paving is asked for.

As far as can be learned there are but three of the sixteen members of the council that are in favor of asphalt and one of these acknowledges that asphalt is not the proper paving, but says he will vote for it simply because the people in that district have petitioned for it.

The asphalt proposition means that the entire balance in the permanent improvement revolving fund would be used in making an improvement eight blocks long.

In the meantime there are many very much more important improvements that are held up pending the settlement of the dispute over asphalt and which would be held up for a year or more if asphalt were to win out in the present fight.

Consequently the property owners in other parts of the city are urging the aldermen to sidetrack the East Superior Street Improvement for improvements more necessary and less expensive.

The indications are that before autumn there will be a regular deluge of petitions for street paving. Beside the petitions now in there will be a petition in shortly for the paving of First avenue west from the railroad tracks to Cascade Park.

This petition, started but a few days ago is in the hands of hustlers and already more than 1300 front feet of property is represented. This is more than 25 per cent of the property required, but the petition still lacks a few names of 25 per cent of the required number of property owners.

The petitions call for dressed sandstone blocks from the railroad tracks to First street and tar-macadam from First street to Cascade park.

This is only one of the many street improvements now being worked up, but all will be held up indefinitely if it is finally decided to use sheet asphalt on East Superior street.

The asphalt paving is not only opposed on the grounds of economy. Several of Duluth's best engineers, including City Engineer Patton, predict a short and unsatisfactory existence for it, owing to the particularly wet subsoil on which it must be put down.

PETITIONS.

Pavement of Lake Avenue With Sandstone Is Asked.

This paving has been given a year's trial on Michigan street and South Fifth avenue, and the wholesalers say that it is the ideal material for heavy traffic.

The proposed Lake avenue paving would probably make a better appearance than that on Michigan street. This paving was put down with a rough surface, while it is proposed to put in the Lake avenue paving with a bush-hammered surface.

Although there is an urgent demand for the paving of South Lake avenue by the big business houses, the improvement is not likely to be immediate, owing to the expensive street paving asked by East Superior street property owners, whose petition has precedence and will undoubtedly exhaust the permanent improvement revolving fund for fully a year, holding up all other improvements no matter how necessary.

There is also a petition out to finish paving Michigan street with sandstone from Lake avenue up to Second avenue East.

AT THE SHIPYARD.

Important and Costly Improvements Planned.

Preparations have been made for important improvements at the shipyards in West Superior, that will cost from $50,000 to $75,000. The Barnett-Record company has been given the contract for the foundation work for the punching sheds, the blacksmith shop, furnaces and shops for the bending of iron slabs. There may be some delay in the construction work contemplated owing to the difficulty in securing structural steel. The orders have been placed but is likely to be several months before they will be filled. Two of the old slips in the yards are being filled in order to secure more space for the buildings. The slips have not been used for some time.

MORE MONEY.

Team Owners Out For Scale of Five Dollars a Day.

The team owners' union is out for a wage scale of $5 a day.

There is no strike—simply an understanding that members of the union demand that scale.

This union has a membership of sixty-five or more, but their cause is sympathized with by several hundred team owners that are now getting $4 a day for their horses.

It is probably the first union labor movement on record where more men in the same line of business are interested in its success than the men making the demand.

The team owners' union is an entirely different organiation from the team drivers' union—an organization of about eighty members. Frequently the two are confused and since the demands of the owners went in effect the drivers have had any amount of trouble from people that mistook them for members of the union making the demand.

MAYOR TAKES EXCEPTION.

Flags Appeared On City Buildings On Flag Day.

Mayor Hugo and other city officers take exception to an interview of Commander Clement, of the Culver Post G. A. R. published in this morning's paper.

Mr. Clement is quoted as saying: "The executive building of our municipality had not a flag flying from its roof on Flag day."

Mayor Hugo says the flag was there because he saw it himself, and gave personal direction for the raising of flags on every fire hall in the city on that date. The custodian of the city hall says the flag must have been up on that day for he distinctly remembers raising it in the morning and taking it down again in the evening.

SCORCHING ON WALK.

Mounted Officers Directed to Watch It Closely.

Sidewalk scorching is the latest nuisance that the police have been ordered to stop. The mounted officers in the suburban district have been directed particularly to look after the bicycle offenders, and as a result two thirteen year old boys were taken in custody.

Both got off with a few moist tears and a bad scare, but it is announced that in the future there will be no suspended sentences for boys caught riding on the walks. They will be expected to pay a fine or go to jail for a few days.

One of the boys this morning caused considerable amusement in the court room. He was crying as the judge was questioning him.

"Did you ever ride on the sidewalk before?" asked the court.

"Yes, but this is the first time they ever caught me," answered the youngster, between sobs.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

Of Wisconsin Hold Annual Meeting at Madison.

Madison, Wis., June 17.—The annual conventions of the grand lodge of the Knights of Pythias and of the grand temple of Rathbone Sisters began here today with 400 delegates in attendance. The visitors were welcomed by Governor La Follette. One of the matters to come up for discussion is the proposition to make an assessment of $1 per capita for the establishment of a Pythian sanitarium at Hot Springs, Ark.

FIRE AT EAU CLAIRE.

Loss to Lindermann Box & Veneer Company.

St. Paul, June 17.—A special to the Dispatch from Eau Claire, Wis., says: The Linderman Box & Veneer company's conveyor, 2,000,000 feet of lumber, and the company office, was destroyed by fire. The fire started at 11 o'clock this morning and still raging at 1 p. m., and only the southeast wind saves the factory. There is insurance. The loss already amounts to $25,000. A hundred men are fighting with buckets as only one stream can be thrown by the fire department. Thorp Wilcox, vice president and general manager, is away on his wedding tour. President Delos Moon's valuable bull dog, Pat, was burned to death in the office.

BLOODHOUNDS

Will Be Used On Tracey and Merrill.

Portland, Ore., June 17.—Before daylight this morning, Robert Bieswack, one of the posse in pursuit of Tracey and Merrill, the escaped convicts, was shot at, presumably by one of the fugitives, about six miles from here. The bullet did no damage except to tear his coat. Bloodhounds were brought here from Walla Walla this morning and will be put on the trail of the fugitives.

DENIED BY SCHWAB.

Cresson, Pa., June 17.—Charles M. Schwab, president of the United States Steel corporation, stated to a reporter of the Associated Press today that there was no truth in the report that he had bought the Cramp ship yard.

Spent the Morning Here Leaving Early In the Afternoon.

Put In a Very Slow Sunday at Port Arthur.

About 300 retail coal dealers of Illinois and Wisconsin arrived in Duluth on the steamer Manitou early this morning. They went out for a drive over the boulevard and through the residence parts of the city at 9 o'clock, and spent the major part of the forenoon admiring picturesque Duluth. The steamer was scheduled to leave Duluth at noon on her return trip, but the running time was cut an hour and the stop at Marquette reduced an hour, and in consequence the departure was not made until 2 o'clock.

The members of this association have made an excursion for the past two years, each time on the Manitou, and heretofore going to Buffalo. This time they thought they would vary the outing a bit, and so after holding their annual meeting last Thursday at the Grand Pacific hotel in Chicago, they boarded the line Manitou, which in season runs between Chicago and Mackinac Island, and came up on Lake Superior.

The first stop was made at Detour, where a dance was had. The dance hall floor of the hotel there had just been varnished, and for a time the dancers' feet did not trip as lightly over the newly polished surface as traditions would warrant. The hotelkeeper came to the visitors' rescue at last, and sprinkled corn meal all over the floor. While the surface was not waxen, the conditions were improved by the treatment, and the time-honored "good time was had."

After a stop at the Sault, the steamer sailed direct to Port Arthur, where Sunday was put in. Port Arthur, like other Canadian towns, has a most puritanical Sunday. It was one of the dullest days—for the grounds—ever spent there—that the party had ever seen. Finally a delegation was sent up to see if the business men could not provide a little excitement of some sort, even by opening up their places of business. The merchants were very sorry; they had held a meeting the night before to see if they could not do something for the party, and were very sorry they had been forced to the conclusion that they could not. Piqued by desperation, the party formed in line at the dock, and with Debaugh's band, of Chicago, at the head of the procession marched up town and through all the principal streets, the band playing some of the latest rag-time and other modern airs. One merchant opened his store, thereby defying Canadian reverence for tradition and law; and sold $200 worth of souvenir spoons and similar articles.

The voyage up Lake Michigan last week was made in the midst of a heavy fog all the way. While today is a little cooler than the Illinois people are accustomed to at this season, they are delighted with the clear weather they have had on Lake Superior, for the fog lifted as soon as they struck the big lake.

From Port Arthur the Manitou made a night run to Houghton, and thence to Dollar Bay, where the business men had provided a special train for the purpose of visiting the copper mines there. This was one of particular interest to all on board.

The Manitou soon after arrival this morning went over to the Northwestern Fuel company Fifth avenue dock to coal up. The new steamer Richardson was just discharging a cargo of coal at this dock, and the coal men were particularly interested in what they saw of the unloading and shipping out by rail. Because of the opportunities thus provided the boat lay at the coal dock all the rest of the stop here.

In all there are 277 people aboard, many of them ladies. About forty came on at Milwaukee, though many of the Wisconsin people were to Chicago to attend the meeting of the association and take the entire trip. F. E. Lukens, of Chicago, the newly elected secretary of the association, has general charge of arrangements. A distinguished member of the party is Col. Lawler, of Rockford, Ill., who is a former grand commander of the G. A. R. of the country. Col. Lawler betrays the loss of the militant bitterness of '76 and '61, by having traveling companions from both Scotland and Kentucky. It is a merry party of fine people, and the sumptuous accommodations provided by the steamer Manitou are as complete as could be desired for such a trip.

The personnel of the party is as follows:

Carrie Hancock and ward, Mrs. F. L. Sayles, Wheaton; J. Gaskell and wife, Joliet; S. P. Wagg and wife, Appleton; John Peter and wife, Algonquin, Ill.; A. W. The Manitou, which is the finest passenger boat on the lakes outside of the Northern line boats, registers from Duluth, and pays her taxes here, though she has not been at this port since the year she was built. Since the craft was brought out, the pressure for accommodations on the Mackinac trip has resulted in the utilization of all available space for state rooms. She is a beautiful craft, and well kept up. She is sailed by Capt. Allan McIntyre, who for years sailed the steamer Peerless into Duluth. The purser I Mr. Carlton, who seems to have been equipped by nature for making an ideal officer in his station.

MINING CONGRESS.

Indications of a Large Attendance at Butte.

Butte, Mont., June 17.—Secretary Mahon, of the International Mining Congress, which meets September 1, has received a message from Charles S. Fee, general passenger agent of the Northern Pacific railroad, to the effect that the Western Passenger Traffic association has determined to offer a rate of one fare plus $2 on all transcontinental lines to the congress at Butte.

An attendance of about 1,000 is already insured. Several questions of prime importance are to be considered, among which are the formation of a department of mining and mines with a cabinet portfolio, and the codification of the mining laws.

HIS NECK BROKEN.

San Francisco Capitalist Victim of a Runaway.

San Francisco, une 17.—Herman A. Tubbs, a well known capitalist of San Francisco and member of the Tubbs' Cordage company, has been instantly killed near his home in Sausalito in a runaway. Mr. Tubbs, his wife and Miss Ella Coughlin, of Sausalito, had just started for a ride, when the horse became frightened, throwing the occupants of the buggy out.

Mr. Tubbs struck on his head, breaking his neck.

Mrs. Tubbs and Miss Coughlin were badly bruised and cut but not seriously injured.

American Window Glass Company Hides Its Latest Purchase.

Expected to Make Great Saving In Cost of Production.

No Details Regarding the Workings Allowed to Get Out.

Alexandria, Ind., June 17.—The Du Pauw window house, owned by the American Window Glass company, is just now the most carefully guarded spot from both within and without of any place in the state of Indiana, unless it would be the state prisoners. When visited by a reporter, admission, as was expected, was denied.

The fence which surrounds the factory is eight feet high and is topped by heavy barbed wire. Men on the inside pace up and down along each of the four sides of the inclosure. All this secrecy is to keep the public's eye off the twelve new blowing machines which the company has erected and is experimenting with.

Forty or fifty laborers have been busy setting up these machines under the guidance of George E. Moore, of Pittsburg, general superintendent of the American Window Glass company's mechanical department, assisted by R. W. Bridge, mechanical engineer of the Westinghouse Manufacturing company.

Mr. Boland, the local superintendent, admitted in effect that the machines were working in an experimental way, but denied that glass in either commercial quantities or marketable quality had as yet been made. He stated, however, that the company hoped to have them ready for practical operation by Sept. 1, the beginning of the season's fire for this house.

Before the shutdown last winter, ostensibly for lack of workmen, the factory employed fifty-six blowers, with an equal number of gatherers, and now it is expected that twelve machine tenders will do the work of the fifty-six blowers and at much less cost, for a glass-blower can earn $350 a month, and often more, while the machine tender will get probably $75 a month, as, unlike glass blowing, a man can learn to tend a machine successfully in three months, and if a fellow is an apt learner, even less. When asked what effect it would have on the glass-blowing trade, Mr. Boland studied a bit and said: "Oh, well, they can find other work in the factory which will employ them, and the increased production will add force to the former list on the pay rolls."

When asked as to what, in his opinion, would be the result on the market, and if he thought the price of glass would fall, he said: "No, I hardly think so, because the American Window Glass people own and control the only successful machine in the United States and there is no need of them slashing prices, although they may in some instances shade them a bit, in which event it would be disastrous to hand-blowing concerns."

This machine is the outgrowth of years of experimenting, and is said by those posted to have cost the American Window Glass people $10,000,000.

No amount of strategy so far has succeeded in eliciting any information as to the details of operation from the workmen, all of whom are sworn to secrecy, and tell all they might, it would be inadequate to describe the intricate machinery in use, which, Local Manager Boland says, "is too mixed up a contrivance for me to begin to understand yet." In the meantime, the outside world waits, and both the hand glass blowing factory owners and the blowers themselves are on the anxious seat.

NEWLY WED MAN

And a Former Sweetheart Have Vanished.

New York, June 17.—Married three days ago, to Miss Eva Allgier, 17 years old, Joseph Hildebrant, 21 years old, a member of a well-known family, has disappeared. Miss May McCormack, a rival of Miss Allgier, also is missing. Young Hildebrant has been engaged to both girls. The wedding with Miss Allgier was fixed for June, and Miss McCormack expected to become Hildebrant's bride in September. A threat of legal proceedings forced him to keep his promise to Miss Allgier and the ceremony was performed quietly. The bride called on a justice on Saturday and informed him that her husband had disappeared, taking the marriage certificate with him.

AT WEST DULUTH

Matters of much interest to West Duluthians came up in the city council last evening. One of the most important was the estimate of City Engineer Patton for Central avenue paving. The city engineer estimated for that portion of Central avenue between Raleigh and Cody streets, and will include the full width of the roadway from sidewalk to sidewalk. The estimate for cedar block paving is $38,425.10, and for macadam paving is $33,320.10.

As has been stated before, in securing the estimates the city council has gone as far as it can in getting the avenue repaved until a petition is sent to it signed by 25 per cent of the property owners owning 25 per cent of the property along the avenue that would be benefited. There has been talk time and again of such a petition being started, but nothing has come from it. Now that an estimate has been obtained of the cost of the desired improvement the property owners will have something definite to go by in case there is a disposition toward asking for a new pavement.

It is evident from the depleted condition of the permanent improvement revolving fund that any repaving this year is out of the question, but if the petition was started the movement could be well underway to secure favorable action by the council just as soon as the fund is again in a condition to permit of so extensive an improvement as this.

Sentiment is not yet united, it seems, on the kind of pavement that would be preferable, some of the owners holding out for the macadam, on the ground that it is cheaper and will outwear the cedar block pavement, while others see in the block pavement the more economical pavement in the long run. Whichever pavement is selected, it is now up to the property owners to make the next move, and right in line for the business interests of West Duluth to give the property owners all the hunches they can to start the petition.

FOURTH OF JULY.

Division of Money For the Celebration.

The Fourth of July committee held a meeting last evening and divided the amount of money already subscribed for the various departments of sports and amusements for the Fourth. The donations this year have been most liberal, but the committee has not yet finished the work of soliciting. It is claimed that there will be more money available for a celebration this year than in any previous year.

The committee on sports was given a liberal slice of the money donated, and the list of sports will be a long and varied one, with many new features. Another liberal share of the money has been set aside for music, and a band will be engaged to play all day and during the evening.

The fireworks for the evening of the Fourth will be about the best ever seen in the city.

NEWSBOYS' PICNIC.

West Duluth Will Send a Large Contingent.

The West Duluth newsboys will form no small part of the annual excursion that is given the boys, and which will occur June 25, this year. The steamer Newsboy, owned by Clow & Nicholson, has been tendered for the excursion, and it will be run up the St. Louis river to Fond du Lac. The boat will leave Duluth at 8 o'clock a. m. and will reach the dock on the return trip at 3:30 p. m. At Fond du Lac there will be a big picnic and all sorts of games will be indulged in. The boys will carry their own lunches, but lemonade and peanuts, etc., will be provided them free of charge.

The West Duluth newsies will congregate at the corner of Ramsey street, near Spencer's drug store, on the morning of June 25, at an hour early enough to permit of their reaching The Herald circulating room a little before 8 o'clock. Donald Holmes will have charge of the boys to The Herald building. The tickets for the ride will be given out by A. C. Pearson, of The Herald, and the boys will march to the dock and take the steamer.

NEW WALKS ORDERED.

New sidewalks were ordered by the council last evening in sections of this part of the city that has long been in need of the same. A six-foot walk will be constructed along the north side of Waseca street from Grand avenue to Seventy-first avenue west and along the south side of the street from Seventy-first avenue west to Seventy-third avenue west. A six-foot walk was ordered built on the south side of Freemont street, from Seventy-first avenue west to Seventy-third avenue west, and a three-foot walk on the east side of Seventeenth avenue west, from Redruth street to Raleigh street. The board of public works is directed to proceed in accordance with the provisions of the city charter to levy assessments on the property benefited.

WANTS A DOCK.

There is now every reason to believe that the gavernment will take steps to provide dock facilities at Spirit Lake, that have been cut off ever since the dock line was changed. The change took the channel 100 feet away from the city dock, and the city has taken steps to ask the government to extend the dock to the new channel. The board of public works has been instructed to confer with the government engineers regarding the dock extension.

NO TRACE OF THEM.

No trace has yet been obtained of the two young West Duluth girls who have been reported as running away from home. It was thought that they might have gone to St. Paul, but inquiry there has failed to disclose their presence. The police have the idea that the girls are yet in hiding in Duluth and a strict watch will be kept for them. One of the girls is said to have taken with her about $30 of her mother's money, and the other had $5 or $6 left over from the purchase of new clothes with money given her by her father.

MUST BE REMOVED.

The police department has issued an order that the herd of bronchos that have been terrorizing portions of West Duluth be moved, and the little animals have been taken to Bay View Heights. They furnish plenty of amusement for the young people here, but when they began appropratng the sidewalks and overrunning the streets, the people objected.

POINT IS SERIOUS

Question Involving Mortgage Foreclosures In Mueller Case.

May Knock Out Many Certificates If It Is Sustained.

Attorney Dwyer Testifies to Making Schweitzer Deed.

If a point raised in the Mueller case in district court yesterday afternoon prevails, 98 per cent of the sheriff's certificates of mortgage foreclosure sales in this county and probably all over the state are void.

Yesterday afternoon Register of Deeds Lofgren was on the witness stand for the purpose of identifying the mortgages involved in the case. Before he got very far, however, the defense raised the point referred to against the mortgages.

The sheriff's certificate of sale and acknowledgment of the same are signed by a deputy sheriff for William C. Sargent as sheriff, the deputy having made the sale. The point raised is that while the deputy could make the sale and sign the certificate for the sheriff, his principal, he could not acknowledge that it was the free act and deed of the sheriff, but must acknowledge the instrument as to himself personally.

An additional point was made that the deputy that made the sale must sign the certificate personally, and not for the sheriff, but not so much stress was laid upon this point. The arguments on the question took up most of yesterday afternoon, and they were not concluded when court adjourned. This morning, however, W. D. Dwyer, of Superior, the attorney who drew up the Schweitzer deed, was called, as he had to get away to attend a session of court this afternoon, and he was on the stand all of this morning. The point on the mortgages was to be taken up this afternoon again.

The Schweitzer deed, by which Mueller conveyed the property to Peter Schweitzer, the proprietor of a hotel in Superior, for an expressed consideration of $1000, contains a mistake in describing the land which the plaintiffs seek to reform in this case. It described the property as township 153-19 when it should have been 58-19.

Before Mr. Dwyer began his testimony the defense raised an objection to the reception of testimony on the deed because the complaint showed that the mortgages, which had been foreclosed, were prior to the deed, and that the foreclosure left nothing for the holder of the deed, and that as the plaintiffs had pleaded themselves out of court in regard to the deed, testimony regarding it was immaterial. The objection was overruled.

Mr. Dwyer testified that he was called to Schweitzer's hotel to make Mueller's will, leaving his property to Schweitzer. He advised that a deed be made, instead, as it would save the expense of administration, and Mueller acquiesced. The witness said he made the mistake in description himself in copying it out of Mueller's government patent, and that he intended to write township 58 instead of township 153.

On cross-examination by Mr. Knowles the witness said that he had been Schweitzer's attorney before this time and after it, and that he considered that he was doing the work for him, though he made no charge for it and was never paid for it. Mueller spoke about Schweitzer paying some of his small debts, and the witness understood that there was to be no cash consideration for the deed. He understood that Mueller had been told by a doctor that he had heart trouble and could not live long, and that that was the reason he was giving his property to Schweitzer. He understood that Mueller owed Schweitzer, and knew that he was living with him, but he did not know whether the debt was for board.

Examined by Mr. Briggs, the witness said that he did not know that he had ever seen Mueller before he was called to see him by Schweitzer, and the only way he knew who he was was that Schweitzer and Mueller both said his name was Mueller, and besides he had papers belonging to Johann Mueller. He did not know him personally.

C. A. Severance for the plaintiff, and George P. Knowles and R. R. Briggs for the defendants, are taking the lead in the trial, though the other attorneys on both sides are participating actively.

Katerine Simon, Adelbert Mueller and Alois Mueller, the new claimants, have filed an answer in which they set up their own relationship and deny that any of the other alleged relatives are any kin of Mueller's. They claim that he left neither wife nor child when he died.

WATER IS HIGH.

F. Schiffman's Fishing Party Keeps Within Limit.

Fred C. Schiffman, state oil inspector, and his party of fishermen, returned this morning on the steamer America from Chicago bay, where they have been for a week. They returned to their homes on this afternoon's Northern Pacific train. They report good luck and a good time, though the water is high still in the principal streams up there. Owing to this disadvantage they were able to keep within the legal limit of fifty fish per man per day.

"We had a splendid time," said Mr. Schiffman today, "and considering the height of the water in the streams fishing was good. Reservation river and the brule are extraordinarily high for this season of the year, and this makes the trip somewhat of a disappointment to those who go there. At Chicago bay, in the Flutereed river, the small trout are biting well."

Sheehy Gets Punched.

Joseph Sheehy, pugilist, of the paperweight persuasion, struck the Bowery yesterday afternoon. Shortly after he endeavored to inaugurate general survival of the fittest. Tom Madden, the biggest man on the Bowery, struck Sheehy. The sunshine was suddenly off. When Sheehy came to he was suffering from a dislocated face and looking through prison bars with the only eye he could get open. This morning he failed to appear in court and forfeited $12 ball.

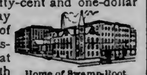
The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

Bladder troubles most always result from a derangement of the kidneys and a cure is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. If you are feeling badly you can make no mistake by taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sized bottles. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful new discovery and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co. Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.



Home of Swamp-Root.

Don't make a mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

IS CLEVER.

Albert Johnson Gets Best of Some of Duluth Jobbers.

Albert Johnson, said to be a clever swindler, has mysteriously disappeared from 1423 West Superior street.

Mr. Johnson began operations at this location some weeks ago. He claimed to be stocking up a large store and gave extensive orders to wholesale dry-goods and jewelry houses.

When he received the goods, which were purchased on time, he sold them for what he could get, and having got all he could get, he got.

That is about all the police know of him. They have a generous ambition to form a closer acquaintance, however, and are using every effort to bring this about.

Up to noon, only one wholesale house had made complaint against Johnson. This house lost $225 worth of goods through his cleverness. It is expected that when full reports are in the loss to wholesalers will amount to several thousand dollars.

No person in Johnson's neighborhood can tell when he was last seen or what direction he was going.

Lerch Barn Is Actually Under Process of Removal.

The Lerch barn is being torn down! Early this morning, when the news went careening wildly through town, people refused to believe it.

It is a fact, however. A force of men were put to work on the unsightly nuisance this morning, and in a few days the disgrace will be removed from the corner of First street and Fourth avenue West.

A TALL ONE.

Weather Signal Tower To Be Built On Dock Front.

The material has arrived for the fifty-foot galvanized steel signal tower that the government will build at the foot of the Northern Pacific dock, near the tug office. It is expected that the tower will be put up some time in July. It will be surmounted by a 50-foot flag pole, to which flags will be attached during the day and colored lights by night. The red light will be furnished by four 32-candle power incandescent lights, and the white light by two 32-candle power incandescents. The tower will be erected at the instance of the weather bureau because the signals now used from the top of the postoffice building are too far back from the bay front to be of advantage.

Forecaster Richardson says that the spot selected for the tower is a very advantageous one because the signals can be seen from any point in the bay and the will not be in the way of the range lights of the harbor. A similar tower was erected some time ago at the end of the Allouez bay ore docks.

FINALLY AGREED

Senate Committee Republicans Accept the Spooner Bill.

Ask a Republican Conference to Consider Its Terms.

Is Offered As Substitute For the House Measure.

Washington, June 17.—The Republican members of the senate committee on Cuban relations, today finally agreed to the acceptance of the Spooner bill providing for reciprocity with Cuba and decided to ask that a conference of Republican senators be called for tomorrow night to consider its terms.

This conclusion was reached at a meeting of the Republican members of the committee today. After the meeting adjourned the text of the bill was made public. It is a substitute for the house bill and is as follows:

When the republic of Cuba shall have enacted a law or laws establishing preferential rates of customs duties on any or all articles the growth, production or manufacture of the United States imported into Cuba, which preferential rates shall in the opinion of the president of the United States constitute a satisfactory equivalent for the reciprocal concession hereinafter provided in the rate of customs duties upon articles of growth, production or manufacture of Cuba imported into the United States, and he shall declare by proclamation, thereupon and thereafter, so long as such preferential duties shall be continued by the government of Cuba, not longer, however, than five years, the duties levied, collected and paid upon such articles so exported from Cuba to the United States shall be 80 per centum of the duties thereof as now provided in an act entitled "An act to provide revenue for the government and to encourage the industries of the United States," approved July 24, 1897, and any amendment thereof. Provided, however, that it shall be the duty of the president to thoroughly investigate, through the diplomatic and consular representatives of the United States in Cuba, and by such other means as he may deem necessary to employ for the purpose, whether the tariff concession hereinbefore provided upon articles the growth, production of manufacture of Cuba substantially inures, so far as articles of sugar and tobacco are concerned, to the benefit of the producers of said articles in Cuba and if the president shall be satisfied from such investigation that the substantial benefit of said concessions exists, the rate of duty levied and collected by law upon such article or articles coming into the United States from other foreign countries."

AT THE HOTELS

Th. Irgens, a Grand Rapid's lumberman, who is stopping at the St. Louis, is exhibiting some very handsome, large-sized photographs he has taken of Itasca scenes, including Pokegama Falls, the new paper mill at Grand Rapids, scenes after the snow storm of May 8, etc. Mr. Irgens is an ethusiastic amateur photographer.

"Of course Grand Rapids is lively thees days," said Senator McCarthy at the St. Louis last night. "The town is pretty deeply interested over the iron explorations that are going on nearby, and which are increasing almost daily. A lot of Grand Rapids people had a chance to get in on the ground floor in this boom, and a few did, but for the most part outsiders are those that will profit largely."

"Some of your newspaper men are wonderful people," said Mr. Fitch, of the South Shore road today, at the Spalding. "I was down in Galveston a few years ago, got in a carriage from my car, and stepped directly from the carriage to the car. I didn't have a single word of conversation with anybody in the town. A day or so later, in another city, I had my attention called to a two-column interview with me that was published in the Galveston paper. It was a very brightly written article, and told more about Galveston and Texas than I could have learned in any other way. The people of Galveston ought to have a band ready to welcome me the next time I go there, because of the nice things I was supposed to say about the town. On another occasion I visited Duluth, was asked four questions, to which I made almost monosyllabic replies. The next day I found I had talked to the extent of half a column along lines that I hadn't discussed with the interviewer."

A NEW POINT

Question If Log Tax Disputes Can Be Tried In Court.

Judge Ensign took under advisement in district court this morning a new and interesting point on the taxation of logs, in the case of the state of Minnesota against the Cloquet Lumber company to recover taxes on logs in Ely lake owned by the defendant.

"The logs are the same ones over which there was so much trouble, as they were cut on the disputed land on the shores of Ely lake. The homesteaders on the land, who claimed it, blew up the company's dam several times, and several men were hurt during the difficulty.

"The logs were assessed both in Carlton and St. Louis counties, and the company is fighting the St. Louis county taxes, being represented by William B. Phelps.

Associate County Attorney Wilson G. Crosby, representing the state, raised a novel point. He showed that the law says that in case of a double assessment of logs in two counties, the matter is to be taken before the state auditor, who shall decide between the two counties.

He made the point that this is mandatory, that the Cloquet Lumber company has no standing in court on the question, and that it must carry its grievance up to the state auditor.

The point was raised yesterday afternoon, and the argument took up all of yesterday afternoon and most of this morning. Judge Ensign took the matter under advisement shortly before noon.

IT IS GOOD STUFF.

Government Test Show Beaumont Oil All Right.

John D. Sloane, supervising inspector of steamboats, who is in charge of the local inspectors' office during their absence in the Rainy Lake district, received a letter today from John E. Edwards, a relative who is connected with the United States navy, that will be of much interest to those Duluthians that have invested in the Beaumont oil fields.

Mr. Edwards reports that in some tests that have just been made by the navy the combustible supply from the Beaumont oil fields gave 33 1-3 per cent better results than the best grade of Pocahontas coal. The data were taken at different periods and the evaporation was regular throughout the tests. He said that it is proposed to conduct a series of tests with 2-inch and 3-inch forced draughts, as soon as the tests with natural draughts have been completed. In a series of tests last week compressed air was used for atomizing the oil and a series of tests will be started where steam jets will be used for spraying it. So many applications have been received by the government from inventors of patent appliances for oil burning that all applicants are now required to put up a bond.

The tests were witnessed by Rear Admiral Melville.

CLEVELAND ADDRESSES

Students of the Augustinian College of Villanova.

Receives Honorary Degree of Doctor of Jurisprudence.

Conferred For the First Time By This College.

Philadelphia, June 17.—For the first time in the United States, the honorary degree of doctor of jurisprudence was conferred today at the Augustinian college of St. Thomas, of Villanova. The recipient was former President Cleveland, who had already had the degree of L.L. D., conferred by the Princeton university.

The ceremony of conferring the degree upon Mr. Cleveland was a part of the commencement exercises of the college, and followed the dedication of a new monastery, college and chancel. The Austrian ambassador, Ladislaus Hengelmuller, Baron Von Hengerbar, received the honorary degree of doctor of philosophy. Honorary degrees were also conferred as follows:

Rev. Wm. J. Hill, LL. D., rector of St. Paul's church, Brooklyn, and Judge Morgan J. O'Brien, Ph. D., of New York, doctor of laws, former judge Joseph F. Daly, of New York; Judge F. T. Fitzgerald, New York. The exercises were held in the college, Archbishop Ryan presiding. Previous to conferring the diplomas, Mr. Cleveland spoke briefly, as follows: He expressed his appreciation of the honor conferred upon him, and continuing, said:

"This incident prominently suggests to my mind the imperious edict of education, which forbids the hindrance or disturbance of its high mission by religious discriminaton, socal intolerance or any of the barrers that to a greater or less extent now divide educated humanity. The republic of education is based upon identical aims, equal rights in its opportunity and impartiality in the distribution of its rewards and honors.

"This, it seems to me, is impressively illustrated when the severely Catholic college of St. Thomas, of Villanova bestows its highest honorary degree upon one connected with the management and holding an honorary degree in the severely Protestant Princeton university.

"The processes of education as they exist in this country of ours have, or always should have, in addition to other characteristics, especial harmony of purpose and design, as they are related to our government, and this should constitute between our institutions of learning, a bond of close fraternity. Whatever other objects and purposes may be involved in educational efforts among us; one of its constant and prominent aims should be the cultivation and maintenance of high standard of American citizenship. When we recall the fact that the beneficence of our scheme of government depends upon the virtue and education of the units of our citizenship, it is at once apparent that an important and common duty rests upon every agency that undertakes the instruction of the youth of our land.

"It will be a sad day for our nation when the forces of education, and the teachers of moral living shall cease to strive in unity to leaven the entire mass of our citizenship, or when their influence in that direction, shall be divided and circumscribed by religious and sectarian differences."

The ex-president then addressed the graduates, pointing out some of the duties and responsibilities they were entering upon, and concluded as follows:

"You may be sure that you will fail to meet these obligations if you are not constantly and solemnly impressed with the conviction that your educational advantages are only valuable as they better fit you to do your duty to your God, to your country and to your fellow men."

Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland and the other distinguished guests lunched at the college after the ceremonies.

NOT SHORT.

The Iron Mines Have All the Coal They Need.

A rumor has gained currency about town that a shortage of coal, owing to the consumption of soft coal by concerns formerly using anthracite, has created such a shortage here that the mines are fearing that they may be obliged to close down for want of supplies.

The rumor has grown specific enough to particularize the big Fayal mine as the first one that expects to discontinue mining because it cannot get enough coal to run its steam shovel and underground machinery.

Capt. John Pengilly, superintendent of the Minnesota district of the Steel corporation mines, was in the city today. The captain is naturally in a position to be familiar with the coal supplies of the mines in his district. He said that there was absolutely no truth in the report.

"The fact of the matter is," said the captain, "we have been getting more coal thus far than we could take care of. Ordinarily we haven't received so much coal so easily in the season."

The same general information is obtained from another source. It is said that the Pittsburg company furnishes the coal for all the mining companies and railroads of the Steel corporation since the three interests were practically made one. It has space leased on foru or five docks here, and also uses the Iron Range coal dock at Two Harbors. The coal is bought at lower lake ports, and naturally with all facilities for handling coal from the mines to the lake and up the lakes, the Steel corporation is not likely to be caught napping for want of coal. It is said that enough coal has been received by the Steamship company here to tax its dock space and keep the mines hustling to provide place for storing it up on the ranges.

A coal man said this morning that outside of the iron, railway and steamship business referred to, the movement of soft coal up the lakes was continuing very fair, though it was not so large that stocks were piling up very rapidly on the docks.

BASEBALL.

National and American League Teams Play At Boston.

Boston, June 17.—Four games of baseball were scheduled here today, on account of the celebration of the anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill. The morning games resulted as follows:

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

Three hits, a base on balls and three errors, added to Cooley's being hit by a pitched ball, gave Boston four runs in the eighth inning in the morning and clinched the game. Washburn had his nose broken by a pitched ball in the seventh and Dunn took his place. Attendance 900. Score:

Boston	0	0	2	0	0	0	0	4	*—6	12	3
New York	0	0	2	0	0	0	0	1	0—3	6	3

Batteries—Willis and Kittredge; Taylor and Bowerman.

Umpire—Cantillion.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Cleveland won this morning's game by bunching hits with Boston's errors. The latter were numerous and weird and worthy of raw amateurs. Moore had excellent command throughout the game. Attendance, 4,500. Score:

Boston	0	1	0	0	0	0	0	1	1—3	8	7
Cleveland	0	0	0	3	0	3	0	0	1—7	9	2

Batteries—Dineen and Warner; Moore and Wood.

Umpire—O'Loughlin.

ASCOT RACES.

The Big Handicap Race Was Won By Scullion.

London, June 17.—At Ascot, the gold vase of 200 sovereigns given by the king, for 3-year-olds, was won by George Faber's Ice Maiden.

Rock Sand (Maher) won the Coventry stakes; the La Fleche filly (Martin) was second and Red Lily, third.

This cleared the way for the big race of the day, the Ascot stakes (handicap) of 20 sovereigns each, which was won by Scullion. Carabine finished second and Rambling Katie ran third. Thirteen horses started.

In the race for the Prince of Wales stake, Ard Patrick, the derby winner, was a hot favorite at 2 to 1 on. The horses finished as follows:

The duke of Westminster's Cupbearer (McCannon) won; J. Gubbin's Ard Patrick (Martin) second; Arthur James Perseus' (Mathews) third. Seven horses started. An objection was filed against Cupbearer on the ground of bumping and boring. The stewards sustained the objection and Ard Patrick, who was three-fourths of a length behind, was awarded the race.

The duke of Devonshire's Cheers, ridden by Spencer, was placed third.

BRINGING IN A GUSHER.

Great Skill Required to Harness a Big Well.

The actual feat of bringing in a gusher is fascinatingly interesting, writes the Beaumont correspondent of the St. Louis Post dispatch. The rattle of the long bailer—a bucket built on the same plan as the long tin bucket that is used to draw water from a bored water well—as it bumps against the steel casing; the slap and the swish of the cable as it winds and unwinds its thousand feet of length about the spool; the chug and "pisss" of the tug like engine that steams away with the utmost seriousness; the gush and the spatter of the oil, mud, water and gas as they are turned out of the bucket which has held them inharmonious prisoners; and the roar and the rumble and the belching and the blowing of the subterranean giant as he struggles to break away from his prison 1100 feet below—these combine to produce a fascinating and an exhilarating spell that holds men close to the derricks and makes them caper and shout as though they were small boys smoking a rabbit out of a hollow log.

And then there is the element of danger—which adds greatly to the fascination of the thing.

The bringing in of the hoodoo-narrassed Smith well was one of the most important events that has occured at Spindle Top since the discovery of the Beatty gusher almost a year ago proved that the Lucas well was not an accident; and the bringing in of this well was pictured and is here described.

Nobody doubts that the Smith well was hoodooed, if any well ever was. The usual time required for the drilling of a well and its development into either a dry hole or a gusher is about three months; but one year and two weeks was consumed in bringing in the Smith well. Three holes were dug, and two had to be abandoned; a boiler exploded and a man was killed; rocks harder than adamant—or at least as hard—were struck at every hundred feet or so; the cap rock lay lower than at any other proven point on the field; and yet, and in spite of it all, the well was brought in.

Contractor W. E. Sharp gave warning of the approach of the well. "And," he said, "it will add a pretty big strip to the proved field if it turns out to be a good gusher." Mr. Sharp is one of the real big drillers. He has sunk more than thirty wells on Spindle Top, and is drilling half a dozen now. And he showed me the way to the Smith well.

"Smith's" initials are C. E., and he is mayor of Port Arthur. He is interested in the Denver-Beaumont Oil, Tank and Pipe Line company, owner of the well, and the three holes that have been sunk have been consistently known as "the Smith well."

Mr. Smith was sitting on the edge of an upturned box at the edge of the derrick floor when the Post-Dispatch party arrived. He was watching the hole that the gusher was expected to come through—watcing it so closely that his body was bent forward and his eyes were drawn almost shut.

"Lost our water last night," he told Mr. Sharp. "Began bailing this morning."

It may be told here now, as it was told to me afterward, that to "lose his water" is pleasing to a driller. Water is kept pumped down to the drill for the treble purpose of keeping the drill cool, overcoming the quicksand pressure and bringing back the "cuttings." The water will return to the top until oil is reached; when it immediately disappears under the oil and is "lost."

"Good lot of oil coming up now," said Mr. Sharp, glancing critically at the foamy brown-green liquid that was running off through the trough.

"Yes, some oil, but it has been mostly mud," said Mr. Smith.

"Think you'll bring her in today?" asked Sharp.

"Oh, yes; heard her growl a bit ago. Think she'll be in by 4 o'clock."

There was a big, fat, red-faced man at the engine lever; there was a tall, thin, sallow-faced man handling the bailer, swinging it into the trough and then back into the well as it came up; and there was a taller and thinner man walking around the floor and the ground at the foot of the derrick most nervously. These three men were the drill crew. Each was clothed in an oilcloth outfit that was greasy with the green spatterings that had been thrown off by the cable; each was grinning and joking; each was watching very carefully every bucket that was brought up.

For twelve months they had been trying to get to just this point. Last night they had got through the cap rock, the flinty deposit that is the roof of the prison, in which is confined the oil sand; and they knew that they had struck a gusher. They had shouted and tooted the engine whistle in joyful greeting to the whole field. And for half a day now they had been "bailing her"—drawing off the 1111-foot column of water, mud, oil and air that weighed down the petroleum beyond the power of the gas to raise it. With each trip of the bailer they had removed some of the weight, and the petroleum and gas had risen higher in the pipe, and now they were half way up and rising more rapidly.

"A-h-h-h!!" came from them in chorus, as a faint, hoarse rumble sounded from the well.

"So he heard the devil grunt then!" cried the man at the lever.

And the three of them laughed uproariously.

"Let's find out what's hurting him," laughed the lever man.

"Whirr" went the spool as the cable spun off down, down, down—"chug" into the oil when it struck it—and still down, past the quicksand, past the gray gravel, past the cap rock, until the bottom of the bailer rested on the bottom of the well.

"Now let's see what we get," cried the jolly leverman as he started the spool to winding in the cable.

Its length seemed interminable. And thirteen pairs of eyes watched every inch of it as it came out.

Up came the bucket at last, and from its top splashed a bit of black foam.

"Gas!" shouted the three drillers.

"Gas," muttered Smith and Sharp and some of the others who knew.

"Nothing but gas, Bill," called Smith to the leverman.

"No, but it smells like gas," gutfawed Bill in answer.

"Sqush!" spouted the foam from the bailer into the trough.

"Nuff of that stuff will bring her in pretty soon," commented Sharp.

"Guess you stirred her a little then, Bill," laughed the bailer as he swung the bucket back into the hole.

"Bet the devil's grunting again when we pull up this time," shouted Bill in the general direction of Smith and Sharp.

Up came the bucket, and thirteen heads were pushed as close as possible over the hole listening for the growl. It came plainly enough. Queer sort of sound it is, too. It combines such noises as a cow's cough, the "sqush" of a cow's foot as she pulls it from deep and sticky mud; the roar and splash of a wave beating against the walls of a cave and the rumble of distant and heavy thunder. It is a groan and a gasp, and a gulp, and a grunt, and a yawn. It is a noise that can be heard nowhere—except at the mouth of a pipe through which a Spindle Top gusher is coming in.

There is something awe-inspiring about it, and something very fascinating that one does not really mind the drops of oil that fall from the rig upon his head and down his back.

"Getting mighty uneasy down there, men," Bill cries out, as he frees the break and allows the bucket to run back into the well.

"She'll be in pretty soon now," predicts Sharp.

"See that gas!" cries Smith. A thin vapor, so thin that it can hardly be seen, rises from the hole.

"Whoop-ee-ee," shouts Bill. And he begins to laugh hysterically.

"Yi!" cries the bailerman.

"Smith, I believe you've got a good one," says Sharp.

"Beginning to think so myself," admits Smith, with a grin.

"How much does this widen the field?" asks Photographer Trost, who is preparing his camera for the gush.

"Two hundred and sixty feet from the nearest one that is in."

"Worth a million to property around here," says Sharp.

The bailerman cocks his ear over the hole, looks serious and shakes his head.

"How's she coming?" asks Smith.

"Be in in five minutes," said the bailerman—and he grins delightfully. So does Smith.

It has become common now for every bucket to come up bubbling over. The gas is near the top, and it makes the oil boil and foam, and fly out of the bailer in great brown flakes which the stiff wind dissipates into a scattered spray. It is a time of the greatest anxiety. Will she come in with a roar? Will she give one vast rumble, shoot the bailer straight up through the derrick, throw a great rain in every direction, and roar like a thousand locomotives "blowing off," or will she come in softly—with a minimum of gas and a maximum of oil?

The last bucketful has boiled so violently that it almost spouted. Bill has gleefully danced a pas ma la; everybody except the drillers, Smith, Sharp and one or two others who want to see the thing through, has moved beyond reach. Mr. Trost has focused his camera to snap what everybody believes will be the last trip of the bailer. It is a tense moment.

"Chug! ptsss!" goes the engine as the cable is drawn in—and the rising bucket rattles against the sides of the well. There is a gush of brown foam, and through its middle comes the top of the bucket.

"Hi!" shouts everybody. "She's coming.

As the bailer swings out, and Smith bends forward, and Sharp looks critically from the other side of a post, and the Post-Dispatch men feels excited and ready to run, but too cowardly to do so, Mr. Trost catches the picture.

"This'll fetch her!" shouts Bill. "And she won't be no gasser, neither. She's coming in all oil."

Down goes the bucket—100—200 feet—when the engine is started and the spool whirrs as it brings in the cable. The splice at the 100-foot line flashes upward, and the clinging oil glints cheerfully. Fifty feet more—seventy-five feet—ninety feet—ninety-five feet—and up bubbles a flow of solid green oil.

"She's in!" shouts Smith and Sharp.

"Look out!" shout Bill and hte bailer man.

The bailer swings up, and is left there, hanging; for the oil stream is mounting high. There is no roar, no gush, no sound save the splash of the oil as it falls back to the earth—until Bill opens the whistle valve, and a joyous screech echoes over the field.

Up—up—mounts the stream, in a series of gushes that might indicate the pumpings of some giant heart through a giant artery. Bill and the others of the crew run into the valve handle, which has been extended under the floor of the derrick to a point almost twenty feet from the pipe. Bill seizes the handle, for Bill realizes the truth of the fat man's statement previously quoted, that "you've got to handle a gusher as you would handle an elephant." The flows grow stronger; the pulsations are freer.

And Mr. Trost takes for the Sunday Post-Dispatch the first picture ever taken of the actual birth of a Spindle Top gusher!

"Bet she goes to the top of the derrick!" shouts some one.

"Guess she will," shouts Smith.

"Ah-h-h-h!" in chorus from everybody, as a thin spray shoots high up toward the top of the derrick.

"She's spouting rocks!" comes a cry, as a pebble the size of an egg rises above the derrick.

"Ah-h-h-h!" comes another chorus, as a thin spray spatters the top of the derrick; and a moment later there is another cry of pleasure, for a stronger spray goes thirty feet above the top and the main stream rises five-sixths as far.

The wind is blowing a gale; the oil stream must fight for every inch that it gains, and it is decided that there will be less danger if the stream is sent at an angle instead of perpendicularly. The gate valve is quickly shut, the joint is placed, and the stream shoots out with a force that roars and a volume darkens the field.

"Snap," goes the shutter of Trost's camera again, and the Smith gusher, going at full speed, is photographed for the first time.

"Wonder what she will flow?" Mr. Smith is asked.

"About 25,000 barrels—if the Lucas well flows 40,000, is the answer.

BEGAN IN DULUTH

Associated With Robert H. Harris In Copper Mining Schemes.

Lost Control of the College Through His Losses.

A fight that is to be made in the courts of Ohio for the control of the famous Oxford college for women at Oxford, O., is the outcome of speculations of Dr. Page Walker, who was its head, in Duluth, with Robert H. Harris, according to a dispatch to the Chicago Chronicle from Hamilton, O. The story as told by the Chronicle's correspondent is as follows:

"Many persons will watch with interest a legal battle to be fought out this summer in the courts of Butler county and in the United States court of the southern district of Ohio for the possession and control of the famous and historic Oxford college for women.

"Oxford college is one of the best known girls' colleges in the middle west and draws its students from the best homes of the Ohio and Mississippi valleys. It was founded fifty years ago by the late Dr. Scott, father of Mrs. Carrie Scott Harrison, first wife of the late President Harrison. It was while Miss Scott was a student here that she met and loved General Harrison, who was then in Miami university. At the death of Dr. Scott the college passed into the hands of Dr. Robert Morris, a wealthy clergyman of Philadelphia. Dr. Morris had three daughters, one of whom, Miss Tillie Morris, married Rev. Dr. Page Walker, of College Hill.

"At the death of Dr. Morris the college passed to his heirs, and it was decided to put Dr. Walker at its head. When he became president in 1885 the Morris estate was worth upward of $200,000. Under his management the school apparently thrived. There was, therefore, a great deal of surprise when it began to be rumored that it was having trouble in meeting its obligations. The name of Dr. Walker appeared at the head of the directorate of several copper mining companies, represented to have properties at Duluth, Minn. He had interested himself and the Misses Morris in the enterprises of Robert H. Harris, then at the height of a meteoric career as a broker and promoter. Harris is now serving a term in the Minnesota state reformatory for embezzlement, and all his enterprises have collapsed.

"From that time things began to go from bad to worse. The revenues of the institution were absorbed and its real estate was incumbered to the amount of $32,000. Then Dr. and Mrs. Walker appealed for assistance to Caleb and William Shera, George C. Welliver and Charles H. Shera, who advanced $4,000 to see the school through the year and undertook its financial management. Dr. Walker was retained as the executive head and Mrs. Walker as matron.

"This arrangement continued for two years, when dissatisfaction developed. The upshot of the matter was that the Walkers were voted out of office. They still owned the majority of the stock, which was used to vote them out, but as they had put it in the hands of Mr. Shera they were powerless. The family moved to Philadelphia.

"The first intimation of the brewing storm came from the defendants, the Messrs. Shera and Welliver, who began an action against Miss Agnes Morris for $1,190 for board, lodging and art lessons received between the surrender of the financial control of the college and the final removal of the Walkers.

"Mrs. Tillie M. Walker appeared as complainant in the federal court in a sensational bill asking for the appointment of a receiver for the college, an order of injunction to prevent Caleb A. Shera from exercising further control of her stock, and for $5,000 damages. It was alleged that the present managers of the college have failed to pay off Mrs. Walker's creditors with stock intrusted to them for that purpose; that they have used the stock to perpetuate themselves in power to the detriment of the institution, and they have not properly accounted for notes payable to the institution."

BIG CARNIVAL.

Elks of Superior Arranging For Great Week of Fun.

Beginning July 7 and lasting until and including July 12, the Superior lodge of Elks, No. 403, will hold one of the greatest mid-summer carnivals ever seen in any city of the Northwest. Arrangements for the celebration are rapidly being completed. The location for the Midway grounds and other carnival features has been secured, all of the Elk committees are hard at work, contracts with the various companies which will exhibit at the Carnival have been signed, and the final details of the event are being arranged.

The main attraction will be the unsurpassed exhibits of the Bostock-Ferari company. This great carnival company is world famous. It was the chief feature of the Midway of the Buffalo exposition, where thousands and thousands of people from all parts of the two Americas visited it, and marveled at its wonders. Since closing its engagement at the exposition, the company, complete in every detail, has exhibited in many of the largest cities of the United States. Everywhere it has been royally received, and every carnival at which the company has appeared has been an unqualified success. It is now under contract with the Superior Elks to exhibit at West Superior during the Carnival week, beginning July 7, and ending at midnight July 12.

It is generally admitted that the Bostock-Ferari company is the largest, costliest and most reliable Midway company in America. They have a guaranteed reputation for providing clean, meritorious exhibitions, devoid of all vulgar features, which are too often seen in so-called Midway companies. Everything is guaranteed to be the best that money can buy, or ingenuity invent. In every city where this company has exhibited in the past, not a word of blame or censure is heard, but instead is heard praise and unqualified endorsement.

Its exhibits are of a kind, and produced in a manner never attempted by any of thee heap, sensational companies. All of the appointments are elaborate and costly. The Bostock-Ferari people will not countenance any of the cheap canvas enclosures. Instead, when one enters their places of amusement, he is virtually walking into a well-equipped theater.

BENEFIT CONCERT.

Fine Program Given at Sixth Avenue Theater.

A concert was given last evening at the Sixth Avenue theater as a benefit for St. Mark's M. E. church and there was a large attendance. The program was an excellent one and gave much satisfaction to everyone in the audience.

The solos of Prof. C. A. Heath, the fine singer, who has been in Duluth for some time, were the features of the program. He sang "The Garden of Eden," by Spencer Adams; "Mamma By Your Side," by Paul Dresser," and "At the Bottom of the Deep Blue Sea," by W. H. Petrie. He was given great applause.

The New Era quartet, composed of Messrs. Richardson, Pittman, Porter and Richardson, sang several numbers and was vociferously applauded. Especially pleasing was their comical numbers, one of the members, Mr. Porter, being an excellent comedian.

The opening number, plantation melodies by a chorus, was very pleasing and made a hit. The members appeared in costume, a husking bee being presented. Miss Ethel Talbot appeared as "The Girl From Old Kentucky" and William Crawford as "Uncle Amos Jackson."

Other numbers were recitations by Miss Elizabeth Johnson and Mrs. S. M. McNeal, a reading by Mrs. McCurdy, duets by Miss Minnie Richey and Miss Jessie Pope and Miss Ethel Talbot and W. B. Richardson, and a solo by Miss Harriett M. Black.

AGAINST IT.

Ministerial Association Adopts Resolution On Sunday Ball.

The ministerial association at its annual meeting at Lester Park, adopted resolutions condemning any effort to revive Sunday baseball in Duluth.

There is not likely to be any attempt to revive professional baseball here this season, and only professional teams are in the habit of drawing big Sunday crowds.

Duluth is now represented by three or four strong amateur organizations that seem able to cope with almost anything in this part of the country, and the fans have about decided to give their patronage to these teams.

It is understood that the amateurs will only play mid-week and Saturday games in Duluth, though some of them will probably play Sunday games in nearby towns.

The resolution of the ministerial association was presented by Rev. Harry W. Knowles, of the Grace Methodist church and head of the West End Civic Federation. It was seconded by Dr. S. P. Long, pastor of the First Methodist church, and adopted unanimously.

The ministers voting in favor of the resolution represent the larger churches of Duluth, and the request made by the city administration "for support in our protest against this attempt to fasten on our city this open lawlessness," comes from a source that is not likely to be ignored.

TO BAR THEM.

Mayor Hugo Would Cut Circus Parades From Superior Street.

Certain city officers announce that circus parades must keep off Superior street.

Realizing that circus parades were delicate subjects involving serious reflection, the mayor and chief of police yesterday held a long consultation over equine ballets militant, juggling seals, aerialists, high-wire gymnasts, thrilling Roman hippodromes, and last, but not least, the big free street parade in thirty sections.

The mayor announces that Superior street is becoming so busy that circus parades interfere with business, and the elephants are so heavy that they are likely to permanently injure the Superior street paving.

Many citizens today have expressed opinions differing from those of the mayor. They say the morning parade is half of the circus, and Superior street is the only street where it can be watched conveniently by large crowds of people.

It has been suggested that the parades be confined to First street. Citizens say that the sidewalks would be so crowded that only about half the people that want to see the parade could do so, while on Superior street the business men and others would take their children into their places of business so that they could watch the parade from places of vantage.

The police say that a parade on First street is always much easier to handle. It is also claimed in opposition to the sentiment expressed by the mayor, that if the new Superior street paving will not hold an elephant, it must be something of a white elephant.

Change of Officers.

Lieut. Haney, who has been recruiting in Duluth for some time past for the regular army, has been ordered to Fort Cook in Nebraska and Lieut. George Deiss, of the artillery branch of the service has arived to recruit. The recruiting party will leave in a few days for a trip to the smaller towns in Northern Minnesota. This will be the first time that attempts have been made to recruit from small towns. Lieut. Deiss returned about four months ago from a two years' service in the Philippines.

WITH STORAGE BATTERIES

The Wabash Road Adopts the Motor System.

Wabash, Ind., June 17.—It is announced today that the Wabash railroad will equip passenger coaches with a new storage battery recently invented and use motor cars to compete with the Fort Wayne and Southwestern Traction company, which parallels its tracks. It is said to be the intention of the company to run the cars every hour from Wabash to Fort Wayne, and thus give the same service as the traction company is giving. A charging plant will be put in either at Fort Wayne or Wabash, so that the cars may be charged at the end of each trip. The installation may be made before the close of the summer. The Big Four also is said almost to have decided to adopt the new battery for the same purpose.

"ALL RUN DOWN," ARE WOMEN IN EARLY SUMMER

A Beautiful Young Society Woman's Letter.

Miss Bess F. Healy, 521 Wabash street, St. Paul, Minn., a prominent society girl, writes:

"I took Peruna last summer when I was all run down, and had a headache, and no ambition for anything. I now feel as well as I ever did in all my life, and all thanks is due to your excellent Peruna."

The symptoms of summer catarrh are quite unlike in different cases, but the most common ones are general lassitude, played-out, tired-out, used up, run-down feelings, combined with more or less heavy, stupid, listless, mental condition. Relish for food and the ability to digest food seems to be lost.

Skin eruptions, sallow complexion, biliousness, coated tongue, fitful, irregular sleep, help to complete the picture which is so common at this season.

Life is a burden, business a dread, pleasure a mockery, friends a bore, and social privileges a tedious round of disagreeable tasks.

Peruna so exactly meets all these conditions that the demand is so great for this remedy at this season of the year that it is nearly impossible to supply it.

It never fails to bring an immediate relief, and a thorough course of it leads with certainty to a permanent cure.

Miss Anna Johnson, 60 Clergy street, Kingston, Ont., writes:

"I have suffered for several years with scrofulous blood, and it would many times break out in unsightly pimples on my face. I also had severe indigestion. I took Peruna and soon found that it cured the indigestion and gave me a fine appetite. I was also pleased that it drove the humor out of my blood. My skin is now smooth and clear and my health is excellent. "MISS ANNA JOHNSON."

May V. Adams, vice president of the Louisiana Library Union, writes from 1119 Terpischore street, New Orleans, La., as follows: "Any person with sedentary habits is apt to become habitually constipated. I have found this to be the case by sad experience, and am thankful to say that Peruna cleansed my system, purified the blood and drove out stomach disorders and all aches out of the body. I take a few doses every few weeks and find that it keeps me in perfect health. I believe it to be an ideal woman's medicine."

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

AT THE MINES

Development Is Actively Progressing On Several Properties.

At the Stephens mine, which is owned by the Steel corporation, and located in Supt. M. S. Hawkins' Mountain Iron district, one steam shovel has been moved in from the Sauntry mine. Tracks have been laid on the property, and development is proceeding slowly. Additional shovels are expected to arrive shortly. Capt. Wasson is in immediate charge of the operations.

Halverson & Richards, of Minneapolis, are already in the midst of stripping the Morrow mine for the Sellwood mining interests. This will not be one of the big mines of the Mesaba, but there is only from six to twenty feet of surface to remove from the ore body. The Croxton, which will also be stripped by the same contractors for the same interests, has from twenty to seventy feet of surface to remove, but the ore body is said to be over 100 feet deep.

The Cleveland-Cliffs Mining company have entered upon drill work on the extreme Western Mesaba range on a large scale. It has placed two diamond drills and three churn drills under Capt. John Mallman, who originally explored the Arcturus, and property recently optioned to this company in section 11-56-23 will be thoroughly explored. Two diamond drills on another property in the same vicinity, will shortly be set at work by Cole & McDonald.

Another Western Mesaba prospect that is being explored by Kremer & King and W. C. Gilbert, of Grand Rapids, is the southwest quarter of section 3-55-25.

It appears that the chief reason for the recent visit of the Ped-Stambaugh party to Duluth was to select a successor to J. D. Shilling as superintendent of the great Biwabik mine. Mr. Shilling opened up the Biwabik and has been there continuously ever since. He leaves to change over the iron property of the Cornwall Iron company in Pennsylvania from an underground to a surface property. J. S. Lutes, assistant superintendent, and for eight years connected with the Biwabik, will succeed Mr. Shilling.

RAILS COME.

Alger-Smith Road Gets Shipment For An Extension.

The Duluth & Northern Minnesota road has received 600 tons of steel rails, and they will be used to extend the road to a point about fifty miles northeast of Knife river, the southerly terminus. Log hauling has been stopped in order to push track construction, the grade for which has already been built, and eighteen miles of steel will be laid before hauling operations are resumed again. The road crosses the Duluth & Iron Range near York station, and at this end of the present grade is within five miles of Lake Superior's shore.

In this connection it has been said that an authoritative announcement would soon be made that this road, which is owned by Alger, Smith & Co. interests, would make an extension to Duluth. The information comes from an interested source, however, that the company does not care to build into Duluth if a favorable traffic arrangement can be made with the Duluth & Iron Range for handling its traffic.

"There is already a railroad from our terminus into Duluth, said the Herald's informant, "that is capable of handling the business of both itself and our road without taxing its full capacity. There is no reason why another road should be built, if the Iron Range will consent to handle our business on the right basis. If it does not do so, we may be forced to build into Duluth. As far as the northerly terminus is concerned, we are building right along in a northeasterly direction and getting closer to the lake shore all the time. We have not determined as yet just where our road will end. The steel we have will build it to about twenty-five or thirty miles of Grand Marais."

ACTION DELAYED

Superior Street Paving Matter Goes Over For Another Week.

Committee Reports Favorably On the Petition For Asphalt.

City Engineer Presents Estimates For Several Improvements.

The city council last evening:

Delayed action on the East Superior street paving matter for one week.

Received estimates of the city engineer for paving Central avenue, Superior street west of Fifteenth avenue west, and First avenue west from Railroad street to Cascade park; also estimates for various proposed storm sewers.

Raised wages of men at the rock crushers from 22 to 25 cents per hour.

Ordered more new sidewalk in West Duluth.

Made question of recommending to charter commission amendments to the city charter special order of business at council meeting to be held June 30.

The proposition of paving East Superior street from Eighth avenue east to Sixteenth avenue east with sheet asphalt came near reaching a vote in the city council last evening. The council committee on streets, alleys and sidewalks, to whom was referred the petition of East Superior street property owners for an asphalt pavement reported the same favorably, but at the request of Alderman Barnes, chairman of the committee, and the only member of the committee present last evening, the measure was laid over one week.

Alderman Barnes, in making the request, said he understood that there was another petition for tar macadam that would probably come before the council in another week, and that it was too important a matter to dispose of in haste, though the paving should not be delayed too long.

A communication from the board of public works stated that a representative of the men working at the rock crusher had notified the board that an increase of 3 cents an hour in wages was asked, and if not forthcoming the men would quit work. The board recommended the advance from 22 to 25 cents per hour, on the ground that the work is arduous and continuous, and that it requires no small degree of skill. On motion of Alderman Krumsieg the advance was ordered.

In view of the possibility of a special election at some date in September on the proposition of purchasing the plant of the West Duluth Water and Light company, the committee on ordinances and resolutions thought it advisable to arrange for the submission of some necessary charter amendments at that time. A resolution was adopted making the question of recommending to the charter commission amendments to the city charter a special order of business at the council meeting June 30.

Alderman Mannheim introduced a resolution for the establishment of a centrally located playground for the children of the city. He said the welfare of the city and its inhabitants demanded it, and his resolution was worded that it be the sense of the council that steps should be taken to secure the playground as soon as possible, and to that end the board of park commissioners should be directed to investigate the subject and report to the council prior to the time for making the tax levy, its recommendations as to the amount of money which could be expended during the coming year for the playground.

Alderman McEwen secured the passage of a resolution ordering a three-plank sidewalk on the Heights from Eighth avenue west and Ninth street to Duluth Heights.

The ordinance amending the ordinance relative to extending the districts within which stone or cement sidewalks are to be constructed was laid over for one week, it being understood that the limits are not yet satisfactory to all of the aldermen.

The city engineer was directed to make estimates of the cost for a sanitary sewer in London road from Sixteenth avenue east to Lester river bridge; of the cost of grading, guttering and gravelling Sixteenth avenue east from Superior street to First street.

The estimates of the city engineer were received for street paving in the western part of the city and for certain sanitary and storm sewers. The estimates were as follows: Cost of paving Superior street with cedar blocks from Fifteenth avenue west to Twenty-fourth avenue west, $43,644.70; from Eighteenth avenue west to Twenty-fourth avenue west with tar macadam, $35,364.50; paving First avenue west from Railroad street to Cascade park with tar macadam, $17,002.59; paving Central avenue from Raleigh street to Cody street with cedar blocks, $38,424.10; the same street with macadam, $35,320.10; cost of a storm sewer on Twelfth avenue east from Superior street to Fourth street, $5588; storm sewer from Superior street to Second street, $2678; cost of cement curb and gutter on Twelfth avenue east from London road to Fourth street, $3764 12; same from London road to Second street, $2310.

Six-foot sidewalks were ordered on Waseca and Freemont streets and a three-foot sidewalk on Seventieth avenue.

A sanitary sewer in Cambridge street from Forty-second avenue east to Forty-third avenue east was ordered.

A petition was presented from the wholesalers and jobbers on and below Michigan street, asking for the removal of the brick pavement at he intersection of the avenues on the lower side of Superior street and its replacement with a suitable pavement that will permit the horses to secure foothold. The petition was referred to a committee.

A resolution was adopted directing the board of public works to confer with the government engineers with a view to having the government construct an extension of the city dock at Spirit lake some 1200 feet to reach the new channel in the St. Louis river.

Notice of injury to Agnes McDonald, a child claimed to have been hurt by a fall while her father was carrying her along the alley between First and Second streets at the intersection of Twenty-sixth avenue west, was given. It is alleged that the fall was due to a defective railing on the footbridge, and $72 damages is asked. The notice was referred to the board of public works to investigate.

Petitions were presented from George C. Howe, J. M. Smith and Charlotte Rouchleau, asking for sheet asphalt paving on East Superior street.

FLAX CROP.

This Fall's Yield Will Make Duluth Great Flax Market.

This fall will see a great flax market in Duluth.

That is the prediction of every grain man on the Duluth board. The Duluth market already is the leading flax market of the country. Chicago took a back seat some time ago.

This fall will see an enormous flax crop in the Northwest, the greatest ever grown in the country. Duluth will be the point at which the greater part of it will be marketed.

The Daily Commercial Record of this city which keeps closely in touch with the flax crop of the Northwest, and whose estimates are highly regarded among the trade, has the following today with reference to the flax yield of this year:

"It is not necessary to enter into an elaborate calculation, or to confuse one's ideas with a muddlipletty of details, in order to form an intelligent judgment of the coming flaxseed crop.

"The census report of 1899 gave the flax area of this country at 2,160,000 acres and the product at a trifle over 30,000,000 bus.

"The Record makes the statement now that the state of North Dakota will have a larger area to flax this year than the entire country had in 1899, and, with a continuation of present favorable prospects, will average more bushels to the acre than the crop of 1899.

"As an index of the value of this statement, it might be added that in June of 1899 the Record estimated the North Dakota flax area at 750,000 acres. The census figures glce the area that year at 774,000 acres.

"The total area and production in 1899 by states was as follows:

	Area.	Production.
Minnesota	595,800	5,895,000
Iowa	126,000	1,413,000
Kansas	192,200	1,418,000
Missouri	101,000	612,000
North Dakota	774,000	7,767,000
South Dakota	302,000	2,453,000
Scattering	46,500	407,000

"Of the scattering states, Idaho had 17,000 acres in 1899, close to 35,000 acres this year. Wisconsin's 11,240 acres in 1899 is more than trebled this year."

O'GORMAN FOR DELEGATE.

CATCHING.

The Coffee Habit Breeds Trouble.

It is quite commonly the case that both husband and wife are somewhat similarly troubled with coffee drinking.

A lady writes, and after giving description of her husband's relief from coffee dyspepsia and general nervous trouble, says: "I was almost as bad as he, having the headache nearly every day and was nervous and weak, did not sleep well, was pale and thin and had a bad complexion.

"When I found how much good Postum Coffee was doing husband, I concluded to use it, and I tell you life is altogether a different thing. I eat and sleep well and look like a different woman. My usual weight for years was from 98 to 100 pounds. I now weigh 108 pounds and everyone tells me how much better I am looking.

"I had some friends who did not like Postum, but knowing it was because they did not boil it long enough, I made some at their house one day, and they agree with me that Postum is a delicious beverage, and while, of course, the flavor and taste are pleasing, and we are glad Postum does suit us that way, the great advantage is in the wonderful, bounding health that we have recovered." Name given by Postum company, Battle Creek, Mich.

Paine's Celery Compound

Has Proved a Blessing to All Ranks and Conditions of People in Summer.

A Prominent and Popular Chicago Lady Restored to Health.

The success of Paine's Celery Compound in banishing the ills and diseases that follow people into the summer time has not been confined to any particular class of society. Men esteemed in business and professional life, mechanics, farmers, women leaders in society and the wives and mothers of humble homes have all, by voice and pen, contributed strong testimony in favor of the medicine that restored them to health and strength.

When Paine's Celery Compound is used there is no more neuralgia, rheumatism, dyspepsia, stomach derangements, liver or kidney troubles. The blood, once foul and stagnant, is made fresh and pure, and courses with a regularity that brings vigor and happiness. The use of one bottle is often sufficient to establish a health robust enough to combat the dangers and perils that are common to hot weather.

Mrs. A. T. Lermond, Chicago, Ill., corresponding secretary of the W. C. T. U., tells of her complete restoration to health through the use of Paine's Celery Compound. The great medicine was prescribed by one of Chicago's ablest physicians. Mrs. Lermond says:

"A few years ago I went through a surgical operation. After being in bed for four months I was able to be up, but was exceedingly weak and worn, nervous, and unable to sleep or eat. My physician prescribed Paine's Celery Compound, and I at once began to feel stronger. After using a few bottles my health and strength were completely restored, and I am glad to give this testimonial in its favor."

BOB DUNN IS TRICKY

Sends Representative Rich Here to Stampede Halden Men.

The Jacobson Bugaboo Held Up to Frighten Them.

Judge Edson Announces Himself As Candidate For Congress.

Duluth politicians are no longer mystified over the attitude of W. W. Rich, the Ramsey county member of the legislature who was here Fridany night spreading alarming reports about the progress of J. F. Jacobson in the state auditorship campaign.

He is a member of Bob Dunn's little political machine, and he was here in the interests of Sam Iverson, Dunn's candidate for state auditor.

When the Duluth people who knew Mr. Rich and his associations and proclivities heard him talking Jacobson so strongly, they could not see into his game at once. No two men in the state of Minnesota are more widely apart in every way than Rich and Jacobson, and they could not understand why Rich should be supporting Jacobson, though this was reported, and seemed to be substantitated by his talk.

It did not take long to find out the inwardness of the matter, however. Mr. Rich was sent up here by Bob Dunn to flaunt the name of Jacobson before the people of Duluth. The idea was that the name would have the effect of a red rag upon a bull, and that the people of St. Louis county would become so alarmed at the prospect of Jacobson being elected state auditor that they would flock away from Odin Halden and climb into the Iverson band wagon so as to be on the safe side.

This was the crafty scheme on which the present state auditor embarked his emissary, Mr. Rich. It did not succeed, however, for the politicians that he interviewed gave him to understand that St. Louis county, at least, was going to stand for Halden for state auditor from start to finish, and that so transparent a bluff as that was not going to knock the Duluth delegation off its pins.

Not only that, but it is understood that some of them informed Mr. Rich that if there was going to be any trouble made in the convention this end of the state would be found just as ready for it as any other, and that if a square deal was not given in the convention fight considerable strength might be swung toward upsetting some of the cherished plans of the powers that be.

While undoubtedly Mr. Jacobson has strength, particularly in his own section of the state, those who are pretty well acquainted with the situation say that Mr. Rich exaggerated his strength and progress very much, with the belief that Duluth so hated the name of Jacobson that if it could be made to believe that there was danger of his being nominated, it would desert its own candidate and flock to the Iverson-Dunn standard.

* * *

While State Auditor Dunn made a pretence of keeping out of the fight on the start, he is now openly putting forth all of his efforts in behalf of Iverson, his chief deputy. His reasons for this are an open secret.

In the first place, he does not care to have a change in the state auditor's office just now, and he is, therefore, against either Halden or Jacobson.

The main reason, however, is that Bob Dunn wants to be governor in 1904.

For that reason he wishes to keep the Eighth congressional district clear of state officers, so he is particularly against the Duluth candidate for the state auditorship. While he would not consent to run this year, he has ambitions in that direction, as everybody knows. If he can keep Odin Halden out of the state auditor's office, he can say in 1904 that the Eighth congressional district has no state officers, and that it is entitled to the governorship.

That is the reason that Bob Dunn is using his little political machine in behalf of Sam Iverson, and particularly against Odin Halden.

* * *

At last there is a candidate for the congressional nomination, a Duluth candidate, a candidate to oppose J. Adam Bede.

Municipal Judge W. D. Edson, whose name has been mentioned frequently in this connection, announced his candidacy last night, and stated that he would resign from the municipal bench, his resignation to take effect not later than Sept. 1, to engage in the canvass.

Senator Daugherty, as stated in The Herald last week, has concluded not to run. He did not state his reasons, but it is supposed that his health is the main one. Besides, it is known that some of his closest friends advised him against making the run, though before he went away fishing he told those who had been after him that if the proper support was shown up he would enter the fight.

Judge Edson is well liked in Duluth, and has had considerable political success in running for his present position, which he has occupied for seven years. He is a staunch member of the so-called Willeuts faction of the Republican party, and he will have the support of that element of the local Republican party.

This, however, may have the effect of consolidating the Bede strength considerably by adding the anti-Willeuts forces to his standard definitely. They have been leaning his way very strongly anyway.

Judge Edson proposes to put up a vigorous canvass, and he has seventy-five days, exclusive of Sundays and holidays, left in which to make it.

At present there are just enough Republican legislative nominations to go around among the candidates actually in the field. If no more candidates come out it will go by default to those now announced, but the lists have not yet closed.

In the Forty-ninth district Senator Hawkins, George J. Mallory and P. Eilard Dowling are announced. Capt. D. E. Stevens has been reported to be a candidate, but he has not announced himself.

In the Fiftieth district, Col. T. M. Pugh for the senatorship and Capt. J. R. Randall and Capt. Ray T. Lewis for the house are announced.

In the Fifty-first George R. Layburn for the senate and N. F. Hugo and Dr. J. B. Budd for the house have come out.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE FLINTS.

Last evening Dr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Flint opened their engagement of a week at the Lyceum, presenting their hypnotic entertainment. A large audience was present and was convulsed with laughter throughout the evening at the comical antics through which the volunteers are put by Mrs. Flint. Tonight there will be an entire change of program.

RICHARD MANSFIELD.

Only a few days remain before the appearance at the Lyceum of Richard Mansfield. He comes next Monday. The great actor is to be seen in his celebrated creation of the French barber prince, "Beaucaire." With him he brings the original cast which has been seen with him from the first night of the play, and all the scenery, furniture, horses, costumes and pictorial paraphernalia which have distinguished the lavish production. At the expense of the criticism of those who would prefer to slight detail rather than approach perfection, Mansfield has always maintained a strenuous fight for the completeness of his production whether he is making a stop of a night or a season. One of his apparently Quixotic pieces of extravagance is his method of carrying all the calcums to light the stage where he is playing; another is the army of stage experts he has on his working staff. In addition to the actors and actresses, musicians and dancers with the Mansfield organization, this cautious artist brings a stage manager and his assistant, a call boy, a groom for the two horses, two calcium manipulators, a property man and his assistant, two electricians, a wardrobe mistress and two maids for the ladies. Mr. Mansfield's personal servants are his valet, the chef and porter on his car, his dresser at the theater and his hostler.

MIRTH PROVOKING PEGGY.

The role of Peggy, the mirth-provoking heroine of David Garrick's immortal comedy, "The Country Girl," has been played by many distinguished actresses since the play was first presented a couple of centuries ago. The latest to essay the character is Miss Kathryn Kidder, whose success is said to have been instantaneous and complete. "The Country Girl" has stood the test of so many successive generations of theater-goers that it is entitled to be ranked among the classics of the English speaking stage. After long negotiations Manager Marshall of the Lyceum has succeeded in arranging for an appearance of Miss Kidder on June 30, at the Lyceum. This will be welcome news to local theater-goers, who have always had a warm place in their affections for Miss Kidder.

ELEPHANTS THAT ACT.

Twenty Elephants Perform In Ringling Bros.' Circus.

There is no animal that illustrates the possibilities of training to a greater extent than the elephant. Everything that the physical structure of an elephant will permit it to accomplish can be taught these curious and intelligent animals. To successfully instruct an elephant, however, requires a peculiar education on the part of the trainer. The latter must not only have a thorough understanding of the art of training, but he must also have a scientific knowledge of the animal's possibilities and limitations. Pearl Souder, the famous elephant trainer with Ringling Bros.' circus, which exhibits in Duluth next Monday, June 23, has a profound knowledge of the habits, physical structure and peculiarities of this mammoth among beasts. This expert knowledge has been secured by years of study and practical observation. He knews exactly what an elephant can perform, and he knows how to make the animal exercise its mental and physical powers to the limit. It is this that makes the great herd of elephants with Ringling Bros.' circus the most marvelously trained company of animal performers ever placed on exhibition. There are thirty elephants in the great zoological display, and twenty of them are presented in one big performance. Elephant acts, comprising from three to eight of these animals, have been more or less familiar in the past, but never before have as many trained elephants been seen in a single display. Their performance, moreover, is not of a conventional character. On the contrary, it is new in every essential respect, while many of the things they accomplish are so startling as to create a genuine sensation among the spectators. One thing especially must be borne in mind. These huge animals are not merely "trained" elephants. They are veritable animal actors, exhibiting the same degree of intelligence and the same artistic sense of the propriety of things, as the most careful and conscientious human performer. They form pyramids, stand on their head, walk on two legs, dance, engage in pugilistic encounters, organize themselves into a brass band, and actually play upon ponderous brass horns and other musical instruments, and, what is more surprising, present complete plays and comedies with an understanding and sense of humor such as no other animal in the whole realm of zoology could possibly equal. This great act does not exhaust the trained elephant features of the show. There is a troupe of wonderful juggling seals, Professor Wood's dog and pony circus and other remarkable trained animal features; and all these displays are given in connection with the greatest triple-ring circus performance the world has ever seen.

"Jay" Idea Anent Circus Parades.

What absurd notion is this of barring circus parades from Superior street? Is Duluth to get a reputation as a "jay" country village and become the laughing stock of all the American people? Yet if the story that is wafted from the city hall is correct, there has actually been a serious consultation on the part of the heads of the police department as to the advisability of preventing circus parades on Superior street and forcing them to travel on First street, or not at all. Danger of accidents from horses running away is assigned as one reason; yet there are likely to be as many runaways on First street as on Superior street. Another alleged reason is that the brick paving might be injured by the "heavy vans and cages;" yet every day vans loaded down with heavy merchandise from wholesale hardware houses pass over the pavement and it shows no sign of injury. The third and last "reason" is that it would be "much easier" for the police force to handle a parade on First street than on Superior street. Why would it be easier? First street is now partially blocked at many points by building operations and the dangers incident to a crowd are much greater in consequence than they would be on Superior street. The whole idea is absurd. Time must hang heavily on the hands of city officials who seriously discuss it. Duluth is not "jaytown" and must not get the reputation.

Cable Service Across the Pacific.

The refusal of the house of representatives to pass the Cooper cable bill the other day practically ensures the construction of a cable to Honolulu and Manila at an early day by a private corporation. The guarantees of the company which proposes to build the cable assure to the people of the United States excellent cable service and reasonable rates. It also assures the government of an opportunity of acquiring the cable by purchase at an appraised valuation, and makes possible the absolute control of the cable whenever it is found necessary through an emergency. Senator Hale, who as chairman of the committee on naval affairs has made a study of the cable proposition, is now strongly in favor of a private company building the cable. The significance of the senator's attitude lies in the fact that, last session, he was an advocate of the government ownership of a cable. He was even willing at that time to give a subsidy for the construction of a cable. He changed his mind when the representatives of the cable company, which now proposes to build a cable, appeared before the committee and gave such positive and definite assurances of the validity of their contracts and were willing to let them become matters of record with the committee. Within a short time after congress adjourns, it is believed President Roosevelt will issue necessary permits to the cable company to construct the Pacific cable. His authority in this connection has been questioned in some quarters. It is no secret here, however, that the president always has in his possession an opinion from the attorney general, the law officer of the government and legal adviser for the chief executive, which, after an exhaustive review of the question, holds that the president has ample power to act. Our sovereignty extends over the Philippine islands and Hawaii, most important points to be reached by the cable. This simplifies the matter to a great degree. Representatives of the company declare that they are willing to make a written agreement with the government covering the question of reasonable fees and securing to the government advantages which the administration may believe it should have. This agreement the company is understood to be willing to enter into as a condition to securing the president's authority for making connections with shore stations and coming within the line of government control along the shores of this country. Senators of the naval committee express the belief that the Pacific cable, with all advantages of government control, and without a cent of expense to the government, is assured for the near future.

A CEDAR BLOCK PAVEMENT.

Attention has been drawn to the fact that one of the petitions for paving East Superior street specifies that the pavement shall be "Warren Bros.' patent bituminous macadam waterproof pavement." This means that if the pavement asked by the petition were ordered, the Warren monopoly could fix any price it pleased. On the other hand, there is a petition asking for sheet asphalt of the first quality, and if this kind of pavement were ordered, another monopoly could fix the price and hold up the property-owners.

This is one of the reasons why The Herald has insisted that East Superior street should be paved with cedar blocks on a good foundation. Experience has shown that, cost, durability and other desirable qualities considered, there is no better pavement than a well-laid cedar block pavement. It is not controlled by any monopoly. The material is close at hand, and there are scores of contractors who would be likely to put in bids. The money would be kept at home instead of going to swell the profits of the asphalt trust or the bituminous macadam monopoly.

The expense of a cedar block pavement would not exceed the limits of the permanent improvement revolving fund, and consequently the street could be paved this year with blocks. This is another reason for favoring a cedar block pavement. Neither asphalt nor bituminous macadam would come within the limitations of the revolving fund.

The city council should order a cedar block pavement on East Superior street. No trust or monopoly would then be benefited; all the money would be kept at home; the interests of the property-owners would be protected, and an excellent pavement would be secured.

THE IRRIGATION BILL.

The passage of the irrigation bill by congress affords great satisfaction to the people of the West, who have long realized the advantages that would come from putting the vast territory now practically worthless in a condition where it will become valuable for agriculture. Sixty million acres of land, running through seventeen states west of the center of the country, are now barren as a city street, and useless for all agricultural purposes. It is proposed to make this vast stretch of territory bloom with farm crops of all kinds by the artificial introduction of water. All this land now has no value but it is estimated that it can be made to be worth from $20 to $50 an acre by irrigation at a cost of from $5 to $20 an acre. The bill which has passed sets aside the proceeds from the sale of all public lands in the Western states. This now amounts to between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000 a year, all of which goes into the treasury. It is proposed that the secretary of the interior shall take this money and make surveys and examinations of reservoir sites, and to construct the same, when it is feasible to do so in his judgment. The land that is reclaimed by the irrigation operations is to be opened to homestead entries, in small lots of from 40 to 160 acres, and sold to settlers at the cost imposed on the government by the building of the reservoirs and the distribution of the water. The money derived from these sales is to be used elsewhere.

This, in brief, is the scheme which it is claimed will open up a vast new country in the West, and furnish the people of the East with a new world of consumers. All the territory now embraced in the area to be irrigated is barren and useless because of lack of rain. When rain does occur it comes in terrible storms which swept through the valley and destroy nearly everything. The reservoirs are to catch this volume of water, and hold it for future use, to be diverted in all directions by means of artificial creeks and rivers.

The secretary of the interior is authorized to examine, survey and construct the irrigation works and report the cost thereof to congress at each section. Section 4 provides for the letting of contracts for the works contemplated in sections when the necessary funds are available in the reclamation fund for such section. Section 5 provides that "No right to the use of water for land in private ownership shall be sold for a tract exceeding 160 acres to any one land owner, and no such right shall permanently attach until all payments therefor are made, and no such sale shall be made to any land owner unless he be an actual bona fide resident on such land or occupant thereof, residing in the neighborhood of said land."

These with other safeguards, will prevent any fraud or undue disposal to prevail in the future disposal of the lands, and the irrigating will certainly prove of great benefit to many homeseekers.

PHILIPPINE LEGISLATION.

It seems evident from the trend of affairs that the administration is not particular as to whether the senate or the house measure in relation to civil government in the Philippines becomes a law. The president has never, so far as is known, expressed any decided preference for one bill over another in the sense of contrasting them. The senate bill, as the one which has drawn out all the regular debate thus far, and which has acquired all the legislative headway, is naturally the one to which he refers in speaking of Philippine legislation, but if the house votes to substitute its own bill for the senate bill, and the senate in conference accepts it as the better of the two, the president will heartily agree. So he will if the two houses split their differences. No two men were ever in more thorough accord than are the president and Governor Taft on a general Philippine policy, and Mr. Taft is well known to favor the house bill; but it is a part of the president's political faith that it is for congress to prescribe the details of government in the islands from the moment it relieves the executive of exclusive responsibility.

The house committee has now decided to offer the house bill as a substitute for the bill which passed the senate. The house bill differs from the senate bill in two important particulars, which have been outlined in these dispatches. The senate bill provides for the government of the island by an enlarged Philippine commission, but does not give the natives a voice in legislative affairs. The house bill provides for a legislative body composed of two branches. The upper branch to be appointive, constituted like the Philippine commission. The lower branch is to be elected. The second essential difference is in the coinage system for the islands. The senate bill provides for the coinage of silver at its bullion value. The house bill provides for the establishment of the gold standard and the coinage of a silver peso, which shall have the weight of two American half dollars, and shall have a fixed value of 50 cents. There is a wide difference of opinion on the coinage question, and it will probably cause considerable delay in conference.

The house agreed yesterday to call up the bill this week and to allow a week for its riscussion. The Democrats of the house, it is understood, are arranging to follow the lead of the minority in the senate, and will oppose the bill as long as they are allowed under the rules to discuss it. The measure will probably pass the house by a strict party vote.

The following speech made by Alderman Bridges, of New York, represents the culture of that part of the country which refers to the West as "wild and woofy": "I see motormen standin' onto a platform of a car with one hand on the brake and one hand on the 'lectricity and I see that them there hands was frozing so that if a woman or a children had been on the track he would have been killed, because the motormen's hands were frozing. I want to beg this committee not to let this bill go to sleep but to keep it awake. This bill has fell into a hole once, before and has been covered up in its silent grave, and I want to say that I have dug up this bill from its silent grave and I don't want to see it fall into no hole again."

What could Secretary of the Treasury Shaw have meant, asks the Springfield Republican, when, at the Maine Republican convention, he spoke of tariff reform as a possible issue in the fall elections, and then added: "But we have had quite a lengthy period of unprecedented prosperity, and, if I read history correctly, our people have seldom been able to stand prosperity very long?" Apparently his idea is that the people are in favor of tariff reform, and intend to get it, if not from one party, then from another. He seems to think that that would wreck prosperity, but this is not the general Iowa Republican view as to tariff revision in the direction of lower duties.

In his report to the British foreign office, Sir Percy Sanderson, British consul general in New York, presents some roseate figures as to the conditions of labor in America. He says that in the three years preceding 1901 wages in New York, for instance, rose from $2.78 to $2.91 in sixteen leading trades. But it is not to be forgotten that against this increase of 16 per cent the cost of living has increased in this eventful year of 1902, can hardly be estimated. Very good authorities put it as high as 33 per cent, while Dun's review puts it even higher. Yet high prices of living are preferable to "hard times."

From the government figures as to acreage and condition on June 1, the statistician of the New York produce exchange forecasts a total wheat yield of 639,363,000 bushels. This would be a phenomenal yield on the basis of old crop returns, but the recent revision of the 1891 estimates to bring them into closer adjustment to the census returns makes the above figures appear moderate—comparing with an estimated yield of 748,490,000 bushels last year. And the condition of the growing crop is likely to fall off from that of June 1 as the season advances.

Mr. Bryan's refusal to run for governor of Nebraska is accepted by his foes as indicating that he has some political shrewdness. As the Detroit Free Press points out, were he a candidate for governor, all the resources that Mr. Hanna, Mr. Hill of New York, Mr. Gorman, of Maryland, and other persons, numerous and powerful, could pour into Nebraska would get poured in, in order to make an end of the chief Bryanite forever.

The New York Herald is authority for the statement that several of the large operating companies have together 1,353,000 tons of anthracite coal in their storage yards, 80,000 tons of it being at Salem, Mass. Some of the coal at these points has been in the heaps since 1889. The total supply of anthracite mined and on hand is estimated at from 2,000,000 to 5,000,000 tons.

According to Dr. Everett, of Hyde Park, Mass., there is a physician to every 539 persons in Massachusetts and a physician to every 547 persons in the United States. And the money owed to them by patients would pay off the national debt. In most cases the doctor is the last creditor to be paid.

Chatter of The Street

One young bachelor and one other man, who also feels young at times, though his hair is touched with a frosty looking gray, spent an evening down town last week playing a series of jokes on ladies of their acquaintance. The bachelor claims to be only 21, though the ladies he victimized insist that he is 50 if a day.

One of the office force in the office of the man that is not a bachelor had won a phonograph on a raffle. Not knowing what to do with it, he left it at the office. The bachelor dropped in to see his friend on business on the evening referred to, and with restlessness that goes with his extreme youth seized upon the phonograph as a means of whiling away the time. Business which had previously pressed so much that it must needs be disposed of that evening was forgotten.

"Central" was called and connection over the 'phone was arranged with the wife of the "other man." It was explained that a fine big new phonograph had just arrived at the club, and wouldn't the lady like to hear some of the latest music? In truth, the instrument was about as small as it could be and make itself heard. But the bluff was good, and the ladies at the other end were charmed with the results.

Then a certain lady on East Superior street was called up presumably by a gentleman of her acquaintance in St. Paul, who wanted her to hear over the long distance 'phone some late music from his phonograph he had just received. The lady was delighted with the results, only she confessed to another lady that she knew it was not the man he pretended to be—she knew his voice and it was a friend of his—but it "came from St. Paul" all right.

Another lady living not far from Fourteenth avenue east, whose husband has been to New York, was another favored one. She was called up and told that some of the songs composed by her husband had been played into a large phonograph; that a test was being made of a new long-distance 'phone from New York; that her husband had learned of this and hit upon the happy thought of transmitting some of the phonograph-made music to her in this way. The joker who 'phoned the lady in question went into ecstacies over the fine work made by the phonograph and telephone, and spoke joyfully of how pretty the music sounded. As she was supposed to be familiar with all this music, they think this was one of the best jokes they scored.

The ladies on whom the jokes were played have not been heard from as yet, but when they are there may be a different story to tell. As it was the two jokers spent three hours enjoying themselves presumably at the expense of all the ladies they could think of to whom they might tell some logical story.

* * *

John McCarthy, postmaster at Stillwater under Cleveland, and a well known Democratic politician of that place. Mr. McCarthy was the unconscious player of a joke on A. G. Schuttinger, one of the largest merchants of Stillwater, who is also well known among people here. McCarthy was down in Florida looking over some pine that he had bought. Running across some "fiddlers," a species of crab, he got a couple and mailed them in a box alive to his friend Schuttinger. He thought Schuttinger would prize them as a curiosity.

The box arrived all right, and Schuttinger opened it before several other people. As he did so, a large half-reptile with enormous legs jumped out and began moving in all directions at the same time. He called some friends to his assistance, meanwhile keeping close watch of the invader, but well out of his way. A banana merchant testified that it was a tarantula and that the animal ought to be killed before it bit and poisoned somebody. A fabian policy of keeping out of harm's way was adopted, but the animal was finally dispatched after several hours had been spent in active military planing and execution. It was known that another infernal machine was in the box, and after various maneuvers of the attacking enemy, so as to determine the best vantage point had been made, an ax dispatched the invader and box at the same time.

All this happened in March, but it was only last Thursday that McCarthy came home and ran across Schuttinger in a crowd. McCarthy innocently asked if Schuttinger turned pale, and the friendship of years was in peril.

"Insects?" he shrieked. "Why did you send me those centipedes without labeling them? You must have wanted my life. I can stand a joke, but——"

It was with difficulty that McCarthy was allowed to explain, after many futile attempts, that the two carnivorous animals that aroused to belligerancy most of the available hostiles of Stillwater that March Sunday morning were merely a couple of harmless insects called "fiddlers" because of their tendency to move first in one direction and then the other, a species of crab that is used on the gulf for fish bait.

Since the story began to leak out, the Schuttinger stock of cigars has several times been replenished without very much income being derived from the outgo, and still the trouble keeps up. William O'Brien and other well known Stillwater men here, have suddenly had calls to go to Stillwater, and it is presumed that they may have learned of the joke.

Hearts That Change

By Louis Honig.

(Copyright, 1902, W. R. Hearst.)

The gong for the visitors to leave the ship had sounded, and the scramble down the gang-plank added the last bit of confusion to the scene. Then came the final adieus shouted from the dock to the human line that crowded the rail waiting for the hawsers to be loosed and the captain's bell to usher in a six day's trip across the ocean.

On the river side of the French liner fore and aft were two couples straining the last minute of leave-taking. Each couple had a love story of its own to linger over. So absorbed were they that the rattling of the gong went unheeded. The watchman acted as a sure reminder.

"Goodbye, Tom," said the tall girl, as handsome of figure as she was pretty of face. The man addressed did not reply for a moment, but looked into her eyes, marvelling at their beauty. From her eyes his soulful regard strayed to her wavy blond hair. He thought he was the luckiest man in all the world. They were standing near her stateroom midway between beam and bow.

"Goodbye, dearest. You will be with me in mind all the time, Tom. I love you. You are the only man who has ever understood me."

"Goodbye, sweetheart."

Down toward the other end of the line of staterooms something of the same sort was going on.

"Dearest, don't worry about me. I'll be steadfast, true. You are the only woman in this wide world who has my heart. My life is nothing without you."

Tom Deming and Effie Sloan left the ship in single file. Estelle Marcy and Fred Holt watched them from different points of the steamer's rail. Walking down the plank Tom Deming stepped aside to allow Miss Sloan to pass.

The voyage to Havre was dull, stale, flat and stupid for Fred Holt during the first three days. "Why was it necessary," he kept asking himself, "to go to Paris every year and spend three months attending to business at a time when he might be with Effie at the seashore." He railed at his business necessities, puffed at his cigar like a steam engine and exorcised visions of the girl he loved. Then there came forth a day and his mental horizon cleared. He found himself reclining on a deck chair, looking with half open eyes upon the vast spread of ocean, a constant flow of vaguely defined ideas adding to his discontent. For the first time he cast an eye about him for the human side of the ship's possibilities. Two chairs from him was Estelle buried deep in a book that had done real ship service. On her further side was Mrs. Stanley Jackson, her chaperone. According to the young woman's own words there never was such a dear of a chaperone. Obesity and a tendency toward somnolence had made Mrs. Jackson a valuable companion when acting in this capacity.

When Fred Holt's eyes fell upon the girl he sat bolt upright. "Well, has that girl been here all the time and I ignorant of it?" was his mental rumination. At dinner that evening they were introduced. So skilful had the young man been in bringing this about that the young girl readily believed it was an accident. Holt took several high balls with the captain of the ship that night, and he insisted upon signing the cards for each and every one of them.

When Effie Sloan stepped into a hansom at he ferry on the New York side of the river, returning home from her farewell and godspeed to Fred Holt, Tom Deming's eyes followed her until she was hid from sight. Her trim figure and heavy black hair, surmounting a face whose beauty was not so much in perfection of outline as in expression, forced him to stop short in a sort of wonderment. "By George! that is a pretty girl. Who can she be?"

Going directly to his office he buried himself in his law books, for he had a case to try that afternoon, and one point of it was still left in a hazy condition. Fred Holt, after his first week in Paris, discovered that he could attend to all his business duties in the morning hours. He saw a great deal of Estelle Marcy, and she began to look upon his visits with more and more complacency each day. One morning toward the end of the second month in Paris he pulled himself up sharp and vowed that he would draw the reins tight upon his affections. His latter day life had been so thoroughly centered upon Estelle that he failed to notice a contraction of feeling in the letters of Effie, far away at Newport.

But the mad career of his new heart episode was not checked. Whenever he saw the girl his resolutions, built upon a remnant of conscience, were sponged out. Then he determined to write Effie a letter, putting the case in detail, and swearing the fidelity of friendship, pure and unalloyed, to the last of his days. He had met his affinity.

At Newport Effie Sloan and Tom Deming found such comfort in a mutual presence that they were unconsciously troubling their minds against the day when the season should call them to town. They had met on a yachting party early in the summer, and had become fast friends. Morning, afternoon and night their pleasures had been taken together. Effie was startled to find herself forgetting among people here, Mr. McCarthy was down in Florida looking over some pine that he had bought. Running across some "fiddlers," a species of crab, he got a couple and mailed them in a box alive to his friend Schuttinger. He thought Schuttinger would prize them as a curiosity.

Growth of Postal Business.

Springfield (Mass.) Republican: Nearly 1,000,000,000 more postage stamps have been issued to the postoffices of the United States since July 1 last than were issued during the whole of the previous fiscal year. This is not necessarily indicative of a great increase in the postal business. From lack of other facilities for the transmission of small sums of money by small stamps have come to be extensively used. But the extraordinary increase in the demand for stamps must reflect not only the existence of improving conditions of prosperity among the people, but a marked tendency of small trade through mail orders to expand.

On account of the great interest already manifested in this engagement, and the large number of inquiries at the box office, it has been decided that applications for seats made before the opening of the sale will be filed in the order of their receipt.

A PLEA FOR PRUNES.

I am waiting, sadly waiting, for the very worst to come,
I am waiting for the wildest, weirdest woe of all the sum.
They've monopolized our bread and they have cornered all the beef.
Our coffee, tea and sugar they control beyond relief,
And all the luxuries of life are drifting past our reach,
And it doesn't do the slightest good to rise and make a speech,
But while the prices soar aloft like gay and light balloons,
We pause and all are glad there's no monopoly on prunes.

It is a steadfast friend that clung when fickle fortune strayed;
That stalwart fruit has stanchly stood when others fled, dismayed!
Though mentioned in derisive glee; though jeered at and despised,
In moments of necessity how truly is it prized!
The saccharine embellishment in which it lightly rests,
Is nectar for Olympian gods to place be neath their vests!
And yet it holds no haughty pose; at mornings, nights and noons,
The simplest and most frugal board is proudly graced with prunes.

Oh, mighty men of money, for whose favor kings must sue,
Pray, spare this precious viand for another year or two!
With golden bands our railroads tie, like mighty sheafs of steel;
The ox, likewise the porker, place beneath a giant heel;
But this, our joy in fleeting youth, our prop in years mature—
Oh, let us feel that for a little while it is secure!
Though all our other comforts fly, as wax and wane the moons,
In this one case have pity! Don't put up the price of prunes!

Unknown Men Attack a Sheep Camp In Wyoming.

Casper, Wyo., June 17.—A gang of unknown men attacked a sheep camp fifty miles west of here Sunday night and killed Fred Kassahan and fatally wounded Dan Ferris, both employes of the camp. Early Sunday morning Ferris and Kassahan had trouble with Tom Murphy, nephew of a neighboring sheep owner. Murphy was whipped out of camp and promised to return with assistance and "clean out" the camp. Shortly after midnight Kassahan and Ferris were awakened by shots. They got up and Kassahan received a bullet through the head, dying instantly, and Ferris was shot through the breast, from effects of which he will die. The sheriff has gone to the scene of the trouble.

SUICIDE.

Unknown Man Evidently Jumped Into the Ohio River.

Wheeling, W. Va., June 17.—About 11 o'clock last night a man's suit of clothes was found on the steel bridge, indicating a suicide in the Ohio river. In the coat pocket was found a note in which the writer said he had decided to end his life as no one cared for him, not even the girl he loved.

There was a letter addressed to W. S. Mahan, 75 West Wheeling street, Washington, Pa., and dated Feb. 28, Easton, Pa., and signed "Mabel," accompanied by her vignette showing the writer to be a beautiful girl. The supposed suicide in another letter claims to hail from New York city, but there was nothing found to disclose his identity. His body has not been recovered and nobody saw him make the leap.

ARE SEVEN

Candidates For Nomination For Governor In Nebraska.

Lincoln, Neb., June 17.—Interest in tomorrow's Republican state convention centers almost wholly in the head of the ticket. The seven prominent candidates for the governorship, who have had their headquarters established since Saturday, were doing active work today among the few delegates on the ground, but so evenly divided is the strength of at least five of them that the best political prophets confessed their inability to even signify the possible winner. There was talk during the morning of abolishing the usual custom of renominating the remaining state officers and tixing up an entirely new slate, but active efforts in this direction were postponed pending more light on the gubernatorial puzzle.

TRAMP'S MONTE CARLO.

Gambling Den Run In An Abandoned Car.

St. Joseph, Mich., June 17.—It has just been learned that for the last four years during the summer seasons a rural district Monte Carlo operated and patronized by hobo berry pickers only, has been quietly quartered in the village of Bridgman, fourteen miles south of this city.

Bridgman is situated in the center of the largest berry district of the state. A box car of the Pere Marquette system was cast aside and later furnished living quarters at different periods for hundreds of tramps, who entered the district early in June with little or no money. Every week tramps returned to Bridgman, the nearest trading point, became intoxicated, and wandered into the tramp house, where they engaged in playing poker until their cash was gone. In this manner thousands of dollars have been lost.

A veteran tramp, who has been known as "Dad," has managed the place, and at the close of each season he leaves the district with a good profit. Early this morning a dispute arose over a game and several members caused a disturbance on the street. Sheriff Collins, of this city, was summoned, arriving before sunrise. He succeeded in arresting six members of the gang, while many others escaped. Collins returned to St. Joseph and lodged his men in jail.

FRAUD CHARGED.

Stockholders In Mine Say They Were Duped.

Cripple Creek, Colo., June 17.—Nelson B. Williams and George H. Kilbourn, of the Isabella, are accused by stockholders of the Orphan gold mining company with defrauding them by inducing them to sell their stock at eight cents a share when it was really worth four times that sum. Joseph K. Eichorn is the plaintiff. He alleges that Williams concealed the presence of rich ore in the Orphan until he had secured possession of the stock. The ore find was made through the workings of the Isabella, with which Williams was connected, and whose stockholders demanded his resignation for alleged manipulation of the market at the expense of the Isabella.

GOES TO SWARTHMORE.

John Swain of Indiana Accepts the Presidency.

New York, June 17.—President John Swain of Indiana university has, according to a Times special from Philadelphia, signified his acceptance of the presidency of Swathmore college, to take effect next September.

Dr. Swain made as a condition of his acceptance that Swarthmore raise $400,000 for the purpose of enlarging the college and increasing its curriculum. The trustees announce that the $400,000 has been subscribed, and the fund probably will be still further increased.

Dr. Swain has occupied the president's chair of Indiana university since 1893.

HIS STORY IS WIERD

Supposed Kidnaped Noble Increases Mystery of the Case.

New York Justice Refuses to Inquire Into His Sanity.

Talks of Strange Persecutions and Missing Valuable Papers.

New York, June 17.—Carlo Cappapene, described as the Marquis di Cordova, was discharged from custody in the Harlem police court. He was taken to court from the hospital by three detectives, who asked that he be held for an examination into his mental condition.

The marquis had been in the hospital since he was found bound hand and foot near the railroad tracks at the foot of One Hundred and Fifteenth street and the North River at 2:10 o'clock on Saturday morning and told the police a weird kidnaping tale, in which he figured as the mistreated hero. After a partial investigation of the story the police were inclined to believe the titled foreigner is a brilliant romancer, and they therefore asked for his detention until the Bellevue authorities could examine into his sanity.

The formal charge upon which the marquis was arraigned was that he was a "suspicious person." He retold his story to Magistrate Flammer, who then said:

"We are not used to such horrible tales of kidnaping in this country. Such things might happen in the wilds of Italy. In this country our people are too busy to go around kidnaping people whom they wish to get rid of. I do not see, however, that I can legally hold you any longer. You are therefore discharged from custody."

The marquis hastened to infrom Magistrate Flammer that Americans were not concerned in the plot to get rid of him or to kidnap him. He declared that the persons who are alleged to have kidnaped him at midnight several days ago were foreigners.

As soon as the marquis was discharged from custody he was surrounded by a score of newspaper men. He became much excited and loudly proclaimed that he did not desire to say anything further for publication. In the fear that the newspaper men would escape him, however, he quickly sent for a carriage and invited the reporters to drive to his home with him, where he promised them that he would convince them of the truth of his story.

Arriving at his house, the marquis jumped out of the carriage and bounded up the steps two at a time. The door was thrown open by a butler, who salaamed and was most effusive in his greetings. "Welcome home, signor; welcome home, once more," he exclaimed loudly.

The butler was joined at the door by Mrs. Eliza Mitchell, who conducts the boarding-house, and the other members of her boarding-house family. Mrs. Mitchell was also most effusive in her greetings to the marquis, while the other boarders fairly hugged him and offered their congratulations upon his alleged miraculous escape.

"Isn't it terrible? So shocking," declared Mrs. Mitchell.

After the marquis had been properly received he ushered the reporters into the house and ordered the butler to produce the bundle of papers, a gold card case, and the broken umbrella that figured in the scene of the alleged kidnaping several nights ago. These things were all found in the hallway of the house the morning after the marquis disappeared. The umbrella looked sadly the worse for wear. The papers were also badly crumpled.

The marquis first fondled the bundle of papers, and running to the reporters, declared:

"These will establish my claim to the estate."

Then, picking up the gold matchease, he said:

"In here is the plan that will tell me how to get at the casket that contains the papers I am searching for. The papers are buried in a casket near Pueblo. The little plan in this matchease will tell me how to reach the place and find the casket. On the night I was taken away I went to a spot on One Hundred and Ninety-ninth street and placed a hundred dollar bill on a big rock. I went away. Subsequently I returned and found the plan in this matchsafe."

The marquis stopped, fondled the matchsafe, and then carefully opened it. From it he pulled a piece of yellow parchment. With great deliberation and impressive movements he unfolded the parchment. On it were a couple of lines of writing. Suddenly the marquis' brow clouded.

He examined the paper closely, and then, jumping up in great excitement, he fairly screamed:

"A fake, it's a fake! That is not the paper. I have been duped. The real paper was written with indelible ink. The real plan has been taken out of this case and this one substituted. But I have letters, letters from well-known society men and women. I will show them to you. No, I won't either. The newspapers have not used me nicely at all."

The marquis then put the parchment back into the case and, arising, invited the reporters up to his room. His living apartment is furnished like a studio. The marquis went to a trunk and threw open the lid saying that he would show certain important letters. After a few moments' search he turned around and exclaimed:

"My God. They are gone. They have been taken. They are not here."

"What has been taken?" asked one of the reporters.

"My private correspondence; my private correspondence!" he screamed. "It was here. It is not here. It has been stolen."

"What was the correspondence?" was asked.

"They want to learn my movements. They want to find out what I have been doing in this matter. To do this they have taken my private correspondence."

"Will you complain to the police about the kidnaping plot?" was asked.

"No, no, no," he replied quickly. "It would do me no good. The police would not believe my story. Then the agents of the people who are working against me would give the police $1000 and they would drop the matter. I shall wait until Pierre Parisienne comes over here from France. He is the greatest detective in the world and I shall put my case in his hands. He will find my kidnapers."

Detroit and Return $13.50.

Mme. Yale's Hair Tonic.

The first and only discovery in the history of chemistry known to turn gray hair back to its natural and original color without dye. It acts on the natural live coloring matter of the hair, increasing and giving it circulation. It tones up the debilitated nerve force and the torpid glands to a healthy reaction, curing all diseases of the scalp. It creates a luxuriant growth, stops hair falling in from twenty-four hours to one week. It softens the hair when harsh or dry; contains no greasy matter, sulphur or lead, or any other injurious or unpleasant substance. Permanently cures dandruff.

MME. YALE'S HAIR TONIC is a perfect Hair Dressing, rendering the hair glossy and fluffy, greatly aiding it to remain in curl.

Manufactured only by Madame M. Yale, 189 Michigan avenue, Chicago.

An Attempt Made to Injure Canal Superintendent at Sault.

Sault Ste. Marie—A charge of nitroglycerine was exploded Sunday morning about 2 o'clock on the front porch of Donald M. McKenzie's residence on Elizabeth street. The front door was blown in and all the windows shattered in that house and many windows broken in other residences in the vicinity. McKenzie is superintendent of the ship canal and had been on the works and was on his way home when the explosion occurred. His wife is in Buffalo. A 9-year-old niece and a hired girl were the only inmates of the house. They were asleep in a back room upstairs and neither was awakened by the detonation. No reason is known for the deed and the police are completely at sea. The explosive had apparently been placed in a bottle and mixed with a quantity of inch wire nails, many of which were picked up in the vicinity.

Tacked to a post on a Sugar Island farm Sunday was found a letter decorated with a skull and cross-bones in which the writer threatened to dynamite the Curran family and burn down their home. Last week their barn and contents were destroyed by an incendiary fire, and the letter leads to the belief that a dangerous man is at large. Officers are searching for him.

Menominee—About forty Menominee Indians from the White Rapids reservation on the Menominee river near Wabemo, in the Red River district of Wisconsin, to hold their annual dance. The distance, about forty miles, will be made on horseback. These medicine dances occur every year and are big events with the Indians. Many people from the towns in the locality witness the affairs every year, although this year there wil probably not be many visitors as the dance occurs earlier than usual and there are not many outside the Indians' councils who know of the event. The dance continues for days, and although they are not as savage as those practiced by some tribes in the far West, they are very interesting.

THE DAKOTAS.

Sioux Falls Man Loses His Life In the River.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—While boating on the Big Sioux river late Sunday night with his sons, Howard, nged 16, and Cressie, aged 15, W. W. Hawley, a well-known resident of this city, was drowned. The party was in a row boat, which was capsized in some unaccountable way and all were thrown into the water. The boys were rescued. The body was recovered half an hour after he disappeared beneath the water. Hawley was a widower, aged 43.

Dr. John A. Garrett, who has been practicing medicine in Sioux Falls for several years, is dead as the result of his devotion to a patient who was stricken with diphtheria.

Brookings—P. C. Murphy, law partner of George A. Mathews, of this city, died suddenly of pneumonia. He was trying cases in the circuit court Tuesday and was taken sick that night.

Bath—Willie Holmes, the 16-year-old son of Emri Holmes, was drowned while bathing in the river.

Mrs. Ann Hill, one of the pioneers of the county, died Sunday night.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Jamestown—Of the five men who were held for the murder of Fritz Phillip, Bowdon and O'Brien Davis have been bound over to await the action of the district court. The other, three men Thomas Carr, Albert Bowman and Harry Cullum, who were implicated in the murder, had a hearing, but as the evidence against them was slight and wholly circumstantial, they were bound over as witnesses, and in default of bail were committed to the custody of the sheriff at Fessenden with the other two.

The $20,000 flour mill in Courtnay, owned by A. B. McDaniels, burned to the ground. It was insured for $12,000. The origin of the fire is a mystery. It was a new structure, and had been running less than a year.

Dickinson—Wool is commencing to come in freely and it is expected that Dickinson will market very nearly 2,000,000 pounds this year, an increase of 25 cent over the 1901 clip. The wool is free from grease and a very clean, nice quality this year. The wool growers are in good spirits, having saved on an average of about 70 per cent of lambs, and they have prospects of from 2 to 3 cents more per pound this year for their wool than they received last year.

HAS MANY PATENTS.

Company May Manufacture Inventions of Minister.

Baltimore, Md., June 17.—The Rev. Dr. W. A. Crawford Frost, rector of the Church of the Holy Comforter, who created a stir at a dinner in New York by demanding that Mr. Carnegie put up $5,000,000 to place his "thought recorder" on the market, has interested a number of men here in his patents. He explained his devices to them with a view of forming a stock company to put them on the market.

First of his inventions is the "thought recorder." Then there is an automatic shoe polishing machine. It has a lever which thrusts the foot into the machine, where it is seized and firmly held. The weight sets a series of springs going and brushes and mechanism start to work cleaning the shoes. The polish is spread and automatic polishers finish the task.

Another device is called a "telephone arm." It is an adjustable piece of iron designed to hold the receiver of a telephone in any position. Busy men, when making a telephone call, can lift the receiver from the hook, adjust it at their ear and go on with their other work while awaiting an answer. A portable dust box is regarded by Mrs. Crawford Frost as one of the most useful of her husband's inventions.

I Advise Suffering Women Strongly, to Take Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This advice comes from a woman who had suffered all the miseries women can suffer from disease, and had been perfectly and permanently cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This great medicine for women establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

Read Mrs. Kempson's letter and, if you are sick, follow her advice.

"Although it has been quite a time since I wrote you," says Mrs. Fred Kempson, of Cambria, Hillsdale Co., Mich., Box 57, "still your name is a blessing in our house, and I think it my duty to let you know that I am still enjoying good health, thanks to you and your 'Favorite Prescription.' When I think how I was five years ago, and then see how I am now, I say, God bless Dr. Pierce's works, and may he live long to help poor suffering women. I have never had any return of my weakness and am well and hearty. Can do all my own work without any pain. You saved me from the grave when all others failed. I advise suffering women strongly, to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as I know it will cure in all cases, if indeed there is a cure."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are an excellent laxative, suited to the use of delicate women.

FIGHT WITH WOLVES.

Just Outside the City Limits of Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 17.—There was a fierce fight at the edge of Aspinwall, just outside of the city limits, between three wolves, a cat, three dogs, a woman and a baby. One wolf was killed and the two others are at large.

The wolf killed is four feet four inches long and gray. It is presumed to be a menagerie wolf, as its fangs were filed and the feet were worn. The three animals were seen by Mrs. Margaret Jeffries, who lives with her family in a boat house on the Allegheny river. The animals tried to enter the cabin by the gangplank and Mrs. Jeffries set her dogs against them. The dogs circle around and backed away, followed by the wolves.

The wolves jumped into the cabin with the dogs after them and ran towards Mrs. Jeffries' baby, which was playing on the floor with the cat. In an instant dogs, wolves and cat were in a snarl on the floor, while Mrs. Jeffries picked up her bably and ran. The dogs worried the wolves so they fled back to the gangplank. Frank Love heard the noise, took a shotgun and killed one wolf.

BOY INVENTS

A Burglar Story to Hide a Theft.

New York, June 17.—Ten-year-old Henry Foster is the adopted son of Rev. William E. Johnston. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston left the boy alone at their home for a couple of hours at night. When the got back at 10:30 at night they found the boy sitting on the front doorsteps. He said he heard a knock at the door when he was upstairs alone, and upon opening it he saw a man standing outside with a mask over his face and a revolver in his hand.

Young Foster said he ran past the burglar and found a policeman, who returned to the house with him and arrested the burglar.

The rector and his wife could find no evidence that the place had been robbed, except that $5 was gone from the desk drawer. The rector, with his wife and the boy, went to the station to see what the burglar looked like. No such case had been reported there—nor could the boy pick out the policeman. Finally, under sharp questioning, the boy broke down and admitted that the whole story was false. He had stolen the money himself, he said.

THE MEANEST MAN.

Pawn Wife's Teeth to Buy Circus Ticket.

New York, June 17.—Justice Coghlin, of Paterson, believes he has found the "meanest man." He is Tunis Veenstra, a farm laborer. Veenstra was before the magistrate on an informal complaint of pawning his wife's false teeth and her best skirt to get money for a circus ticket. "He admitted the theft when he came home," Mrs. Veenstra told the justice, "and I want to have him arrested for larceny. He stole my teeth and skirt while I was asleep, and when I discovered the loss he said that I must have swallowed the teeth."

Veenstra was warned by the justice to produce the teeth, and he did so, after raising 90 cents, the price for which he pledged them.

FRUSTRATED

Was a Half Million Dollar Jewel Swindle.

New York, June 17.—An attempt, into which abundant nerve had been injected, to swindle twenty-seven of the best-known retail jewelers in Manhattan and Brooklyn out of $50,000 worth of jewels, was frustrated in Shippensburg, a little town in Cumberland county, Pa., Friday evening through the shrewdness and cleverness of Charles E. Zoob, a young salesman employed by Shumann's Sons here.

One of the wealthiest men in Cumberland county, Pa., is George H. Stewart, banker, capitalist, and wholesale dealer in grain. The commercial agencies rate him at $300,000 to $1,000,000. Twenty-seven of the largest retail jewelers received letters headed "G. H. Stewart, Shippensburg, Pa." and signed "G. H. Stewart," asking the firm to send several pieces of jewelry from which he would make a selection for a present.

Each letter specified that the jewel which Mr. Stewart would select must cost not far from $2000. All but one consigned the goods to the United States Express company.

The firm which did not send its goods by express was Schumann's Sons. That concern sent Mr. Kolb. He arrived with the goods, found the real G. H. Stewart, learned that he did not want any jewelry, and he ran down the swindlers. One of the two who were in the job was arrested.

TOGA OF MATTQUAY

May Fall On His Son Who Is Money Maker.

Senator Kept From Bankruptcy By the Young Man.

Haggles Over a Penny and Has Made a Million.

Philadelphia, June 17.—"Put money in thy purse." This is the motto which rules the life of "Dick" Quay, the newest big figure in Pennsylvania politics. His father is bending the most strenuous efforts of his declining days to have "Dick" succeed him in the senate. It is the greatest ambition of Matthew Stanley Quay's life that he should be able to give his toga to Richard as an inheritance, just as Simon Cameron handed his well worn garment to Donald Cameron. Dick Quay will accept the gift of his doting father, if it is secured for him. But he will do so more for the sake of pleasing "the old man" than for the office itself, for he is not a politician. The carefully organized political coup does not seem to appeal to him. He is a business man. "Dick" Quay is 30 years old, yet already he has made a million dollars. And he is rapidly adding to the pile.

This rolling up of wealth has occupied all of young Quay's time. During the years in which his father's wily brain has been busy conjuring the forces he believes will enable him to crown his last great personal ambition, "Dick" has been sitting in an office, in Allegheny, buying trolley lines, dabbling in stocks when he knew it would pay, helping to organize Tin Trusts and keeping a careful watch on the 5-cent pieces.

This would not, of course, be the first instance of a son succeeding a father in the senate. When Thomas F. Bayard entered the senate in 1869 his father was already there, and the two served side by side for years. J. Donald Cameron succeeded Simon Cameron, so there is already a precedent in Pennsylvania for the proposed Quay inheritance. In New Jersey there has been a still more remarkable instance. Richard Stockton, who first entered the senate from that state, was followed by his son, John I. Stockton. And to revert to the Bayards, of Delaware, James A. Bayard and his son, Thomas H. Bayard, and Richard H. Bayard and his son, Thomas F. Bayard, have all served in the senate.

Small wonder then if Senator Matthew Stanley Quay should dream of sending his favorite child to take his seat in the upper house of the nation's congress. And this, in spite of the fact that the son is a business man and not a politician.

For "Dick" Quay quotes his motto by paraphrase, "Put money in my purse." That is the way he reads it, and to such purpose that he is worth $1,000,000, and is one of the most powerful financiers in the western end of the state. But rich and powerful as he is only a few people outside the brokerage circle know him. To the voters of Pennsylvania, whose representative he would be if he went to congress, he is practically unknown.

Ninety-nine persons out of the hundred will ask: "But who is 'Dick' Quay?" Politically he is the son of his father; financially he is himself; socially he is "Dick" Quay. He is small in stature, and his physiognomy and physique closely suggest the craft of the fox and the sinuousness of the weasel.

When the correspondent visited Pittsburg to see him, he went first to young Quay's office, at the American Tin Plate company. But he had disposed of his heldings in the company apparently and took no interest in the office drudgery of that concern.

Later on, at the office of former Lieutenant Governor Walter Lyon, in the Park building, he was found, working in his shirt sleeves, nervously alert, and with energy and thrift written all over him. From his well-brushed hair to his daintily polished shoes he was the personification of this "bank note age."

"What do you want to see me for?" he asked, with a slight smile. "I'm not in politics. I'm out to make money. I'm a business man. People don't want to read about me. I'm busy. I shall be at work here until 10 o'clock tonight.

"Don't you want to say anything about the senatorship?"

"That story is all rot. Not a word of truth in it. I'm in business. There's nothing picturesque about me."

Terse and sharp. When "Dick" Quay speaks it is like a rapid fire gun. He never says a word more than he can help. He is economical even of his breath. He lets his visitors do the talking, and confines himself to yes and no, and even these he clips to their briefest point.

Only one thing will arouse him. Mention money. Tell him of investments made or about to be made. Talk of dollars. Instantly he is alert. He knows how much the thing is worth, how much money such a man can command and how he made it. His keen, gray eyes light up and a metallic tinkle comes into his voice.

The day of this interview he was concluding the Allegheny traction deal, by which he has made an immense amount of money. Senator Quay was in this deal and so were Don Cameron, Arthur Kennedy, Walter Lyon and a few others. "Dick was up to his ears with work dividing the profits. It was a congenial task. Of late years it has been a familiar one. The million that he has made has come by slow but steady accretion, and rarely has he been compelled to record a loss.

He has made his money by thrift. From his advent in the business world until now he has been thrown with "big men." Don Cameron has been his adviser, his father has been a deep well of information and an endless source of tips for investment. But his own judgment has been good. He is always satisfied with a fair profit and will not hold on for a big "take off." He is an investor, working on safe and conservative lines. His father is a plunger, but time and time again the son's sagacity has saved the senator from hopeless bankruptcy. It was at "Dick's" sugestion that Senator Quay placed the major portion of his fortune in trust for his family. Thus, no matter what the senator's losses may be in the stock market his wife and children are protected from loss.

But every now and then the father gets the laugh on the son. Some years ago "Dick" Quay was heavily interested in sugar stocks. The market began to sag, and in spite of inside information that everything was all right, he went post haste to his broker and arranged to dispose of his holding at about the figure that he had paid for it.

"What shall we do with your father's stock?" asked the broker.

"Has he bought any?" questioned "Dick" in surprise.

"Ahount 800 shares."

"Eight thousand shares! Heavens, sell at once. Sell at any price," exclaimed "Dick" as he dashed out of the office on the run.

The stock was sold at a slight loss, and half an hour afterwards it began to rise point by point. The old man had had the correct tip and had "Dick" not sold him out he would have made a fortune on the deal. After lecturing his broker, Senator Quay sent for son "Dick" and proceeded to laugh at him, and unto this day he tells the story with great glee.

It is this saving spirit of "Dick" Quay's that annoys his business associates. His care for details induces him to waste time over 3 and 2-cent pieces that could more profitably be spent on larger ideas. He will haggle for a penny. In his philosophy 5 cents is the interest on a dollar for a year, and the more 5-cent pieces he can save the more interest he is getting on his money.

He is a man without a vice or a diversion. He neither drinks nor smokes. He does not ride, play ping-pong, golf or tennis. He has a summer house at Montauk Point, Long Island, but he never goes yachting. He is coldly sociable with men. His one pleasure is his home. For years he lived at Sewickley, in the handsomest house in that pretty suburb of Allegheny. But as he began to pile up his dollars, he found his house too poor for him, so he sold it last spring to build a finer one.

He is married to Elizabeth Waters of Sewickley, and they have had two children—Matthew Stanley and Elizabeth. His family is his sole source of pleasure. When his day's work is done, and he has made as many dollars and 5-cent pieces as possible, he returns to his home and stays there until it is time to go to work again.

The luxury of this former Sewickley home that he has found unsatisfactory throws a broad light on the man's love of comfort and beauty. The halls are spacious, the staircase of elaborately carved oak, the dining room of massive Flemish oak, and the parlor is superbly fitted in hardwoods.

Young Quay's personal probity is unquestioned by those who know him best. His friends say he could not be bribed or bought. He was his father's confidential secretary in the national campaign of 1888, when the senator was chairman of the national Republican campaign committee, with headquarters in New York. If this close-mouthed, keen young man chose he could probably tell some interesting stories of that campaign.

STORK HAS FLOWN AWAY.

Mrs. Roosevelt Has Changed Her Summer Plans.

Washington, June 17.—Mrs. Roosevelt's recent illness was much more serious than was reported at the time. Although of unusually strong physique, she succumbed suddenly on the eve of the reception to the French delegation at the Rochambeau exercises.

The long receptions at which she was forced to stand and receive the thousands who presented themselves broke down Mrs. Roosevelt's strength.

As a result, the stork has flown away from the White House and all of Mrs. Roosevelt's plans for the summer have been changed.

Just before she left Washington for the leisurely trip to Oyster Bay on the Dolphin, Mrs. Roosevelt announced her intention to return to Washington July 5 and resume the hospitalities which has been so freely dispensed from the White House during the present administration. She probably will remain in Washington until after the adjournment of congress.

CLOSED SALOONS.

Stranger's Hint Had An Instantaneous Effect.

New York, June 17.—One plain looking man, smooth shaven and wearing a large pair of spectacles, succeeded in shutting up the Tenderloin on Sunday morning. About 1 o'clock he walked up to Policeman Meyers, at Broadway and Twenty-ninth street, and complained that the Savoy, a resort near by, was violating the excise law. The policeman was talking to Detectives Buckridge and Courtney, who told the stranger that he had better mind his own business. They were being paid to see that the law was not violated, they said. The stranger insisted, however, and all hands went to the resort. One old man was seated at a table with a half empty glass before him.

The detectives wanted to know what business it was of the stranger's whether the excise law was being violated or not. He told them he was a society agent and had been all over town, having closed many other saloons. He then walked away, and the two detectives, to be on the safe side, arrested the Savoy's proprietor, Louis Stern. The tip went all over the Tenderloin that Parkhurst society men were around, and nearly every place in the vicinity closed up tight.

GOSSIP OF CAPITOL

Funny Method of American Soldier to Avoid Bridge Tolls.

How Col. Wadsworth Got Valuable Lands From the Indians.

And Then the Chief Tabooed All Future Dreaming.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, June 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Congressman Hull of Iowa, chairman of the military affairs committee of the house, is a warm friend of Congressman Wadsworth of New York, chairman of the committee on agriculture. Mr. Hull, like everyone else, had heard that Mr. Wadsworth was a great farmer, but he scoffed at the idea. He didn't believe any such thing, and so about two weeks ago he challenged Mr. Wadsworth to give him an occular demonstration of the agricultural chairman's ability to farm the land instead of the farmers. In answer to this challenge Mr. Wadsworth invited Mr. Hull up into the Tennessee valley to see farming as it had been carried on by the Wadsworth family for nearly a hundred years. For three days Mr. Hull and Mr. Wadsworth rode over mile after mile of the most beautiful grass lands that ever laid out of doors. Great fields of wheat just ready to head out, acres of land prepared for bean planting and meadows stretching for miles down the valley attracted the attention of the Iowa man and caused him to exclaim that he had never seen such meadows and such country in his life. And Mr. Hull has practically traveled around the earth. He went to the Philippines last year, and as he and Mr. Wadsworth returned to Washington he told a funny story of the method which the American soldier adopted as a means of paying tolls.

"There is only one bridge across the Pasig river upon which tolls are collected," said Mr. Hull. "For a year or so after the American occupation even this bridge was free, but last year tolls were again exacted. But no fees were received from the American soldier. When the bridge tender would come out and strike one of the boys in kahki and claim the toll, he would be instructed peremptorily to go to hades. He bowed respectfully to the American authority and passed back into his hut. One day a civilian American came to the bridge and toll was demanded by the tender. 'But I have never paid before,' said the passenger, 'for I am an American?' 'Oh, no, you are not,' said the Filipino, 'for if you were an American you would tell me to go to shool.' I heard this story,'' continued Mr. Hull, 'after I had passed over the bridge two or three times, paying the customary toll for the privilege. And I thought I would try the military method the next time. When I approached the bridge the bridge tender came out and demanded the customary fee. 'Oh, go to hades!' I shouted, and much to my surprise he bowed respectfully and returned to his box, evidently satisfied as to my nationality.

* * *

Mr. Hull says that in addition to finding that Wadsworth's constituents, as well as the congressman himself, are practical, scientific farmers, who make their lands produce as much today as when they were secured from the Indians by the original Col. Wadsworth in the early part of the last century, they are up-to-date in many other respects. "There is in the district," said Mr. Hull, "a beautiful lake surrounded by cottages occupied by people from Rochester, Buffalo and other neighboring towns and villages. Wadsworth told me that the occupants of one of the cottages have overcome the difficulty of securing up-to-date amusement material in a very unique manner. The inhabitants on the borders of Lake Conesus have recently been attacked with a form of ping-pong fever. Nets and racquets and ping-pong balls are not found on sale in the small general stores which supply the inhabitants with codfish, nails, canned tomatoes, linseed oil, sugar and other groceries. But this difficulty has been overcome by at least one enterprising family of the Wadsworth constituency. When the congressman called there the other day he found the young people of the family playing ping-pong in the kitchen with the kitchen stove for a net, frying pans for racquets and little round potatoes for balls."

* * *

Mr. Hull, like every other man in congress today, takes a great deal of interest in the bill which proposes to divide up the last remnant of the vast tract of land once owned by the powerful Iroquois among the few living descendants of the Six Nations residing in New oYrk state. On his visit to the Genesee valley Mr. Hull was told that at one time the Wadsworths could drive from the county seat of Livingston county, twenty-five miles to the city of Rochester without stepping off their own lands. And when he saw miles after miles of meadow and woodland and green fields pointed out as the property of some member of the Wadsworth family, he believed that statement, but naturally he wanted to know how it had come into the possession of the Wadsworths. His guide, who was showing him around during the temporary absence of the congressman, said in answer to his query as to how the land was obtained: "Away back, after the war of 1812, when Col. Wadsworth settled here he stood on this knoll, where we stand now, gazing down this valley. After a few minutes, Peglow, the great Indian chief, came to him and said: 'Col. Wadsworth, last night I had a vision. In that vision appeared to me the Great Spirit, who said: 'Peglow, a beautiful horse has just come to Col. Wadsworth from his former home in Connecticut. Stand here and you will see Col. Wadsworth. Tell him you want that horse and he will give it to you.'

"'Are you sure,' responded Col. Wadsworth, 'that it was the Great Spirit that you saw in your vision?'

'I am absolutely certain,' responded the noble Red Man.

'And he told you that if you would ask for this horse I would give it to you?'

'He did,' laconically replied Peglow.

'Then,' said Col. Wadsworth,' take the horse. He is yours; I can not go back on what the Great Spirit has said.'

"The Indian chief mounted the horse and wasn't seen again for two weeks. At the end of that time Co. Wadsworth again stood on that knoll. In fact, tradition has it that he made it a point to stand there on every morning during the two weeks. On this particular morning Peglow came up to the knoll again. 'Peglow,' said Col. Wadsworth, 'I, too, had a dream last night. The Great Spirit appeared to me as in a vision and he said: 'Col. Wadsworth, stand once more on this knoll and Peglow will appear to you. Tell him that you want all the land you can see from this elevation and he will give it to you.'

"Peglow was a stoic. He evidently found that he was up against it, as modern slang would put it.

'Col. Wadsworth,' said he, 'are you sure it was the Great Spirit that appeared to you in your dream?'

'Absolutely certain,' replied Col. Wadsworth.

'And the Great Spirit told you that if you would ask me for all the land you can see from here I would give it to you'

'He did,' said Col. Wadsworth.

'I can't go back on what the Great Spirit promised,' responded Peglow. 'The land is yours, colonel. Make out the papers and the signatures shall be affixed. But, he added, colonel, don't let's you and me dream no more.'

"The lapse in grammar," continued Mr. Hull, "on the part of the noble chief from the traditional exquisiteness of Indian diction was probably due to the excitement of having made such a poor horse trade. I don't think." Mr. Hull added, "that the remaining lands of the Indians in western New York will be so easily disposed of."

DAUGHTERS

New York, June 17.—At a special meeting in this city of the General Society of the Daughters of the Revolution held for the purpose of making the society's administration more representative of the country at large, the constitution was amended to legalize four, instead of two, vice presidents, and six added members of the governing board. These officers were elected to fill vacancies and the newly created positions: Third vice president, Mrs. Frank Trumbull, of the Colorado society; fourth vice president, Mrs. Thomas Hill, of the Maryland society. Board of managers—Class of 1903, Mrs. J. J. Holloway, West Virginia; Mrs. A. W. Bray, New Jersey; Mrs. Robert J. Reed, West Virginia, and Mrs. Geo. J. Raymond, Delaware; class of 1904, Mrs. Linn Bird, Maryland; Miss Clara B. Adams, Massachusetts, and Mrs. Ola Forest Perry, Pennsylvania.

MUTILATED.

Terrible Treatment of American Soldiers By Ladrones.

Manila, June 17.—The bodies of the sergeant, two corporals and four privates of the Fifth cavalry, who were captured May 30 by ladrones at Binangonan, Rizal province, this island, have been recovered. Most of the bodies had been hewn limb from limb, and it was found impossible to recognize four of the dead men.

A number of arrests in the matter have been made and nine men have been absolutely identified as belonging to the band of ladrones which captured the Americans. The identified men include two members of the police force of Teresa, Morong province.

The American soldiers were buried together. It was impossible to make separate interments.

WOULD SETTLE STRIKE.

New York, June 17.—Representative Allan McDermott, of Jersey City, has announced that he will introduce tomorrow in the house of representatives a resolution pertaining to a settlement of the coal strike. It will call for an investigation by a national board of arbitration to be appointed by the president. This board shall have power to settle all disputes between labor and capital.

WILL RACE AT HARTFORD.

New York, June 17.—It has been definitely settled that the match race between Thomas Lawson's Boralma and E. E. Smather's Lord Derby for a side stake of $20,000 shall take place at Hartford on Saturday, August. 2. The horses have been matched and forfeits of $5,000 have been posted for sometime.

TREATY READY IN THE FALL.

Madrid, June 17.—It was announced today that the Spanish-American treaty of friendship will not be ready for conclusion before the autumn, when the return here of the United States minister, Bellamy Storer, is expected.

WHY? IS ELECTRIC LIGHT BEST

Because it is healthy, clean, pure and brilliant.

HEALTHY— It has no odor. Professor Thompson states that one cubic foot of gas consumes as much oxygen as four adults.

CLEAN— It causes no discoloration of furnishings and decorations in homes.

SAFE— As electric bell work, no danger of suffocation.

CHEAP— By using a little care in turning off lights when not in use it is cheaper than any other illuminant.

"FORCE"

This big O and that big E stand for two little words that represent what is necessary for every advancement we make in life—OUR EFFORT.

Effort means activity, physical and mental. Activity uses up vitality and wears away tissue. Vitality and tissue must be rebuilt or health departs. Body-building material comes from proper food. Food, then, of the proper kind, makes effort possible. Effort makes the man.

Your doctor will tell you that the whole wheat kernel contains every element necessary for building up each part of the human body, and that barley malt is the best natural tonic. "FORCE" is composed of the whole of the wheat and barley malt, ready cooked, in the form of a crisp, delicate, delectable flake, and contains in just the proper proportions those elements required for nourishing, strengthening and invigorating the human body.

DESPERATE

Efforts Made By Negro To Cheat the Gallows.

Ellicott City, Md., June 17.—John Johnson, a negro murderer, who is awaiting the execution of the death sentence on Friday, yesterday fired the jail and hanged himself in his cell. Johnson set fire to his clothing, which he piled against the wood work of his cell. The wardens discovered the blaze and extinguished it before any great damage had been done. Shortly after locking the man in another cell, the attendants were attracted to his compartment by strange noises, and upon investigation found Johnson hanging from a beam. He had used his suspenders as a noose. When cut down he fought the jailers viciously and endeavored to butt out his brains against the walls. A straight jacket was put on the prisoner. The sheriff thinks Johnson is not seriously injured.

Johnson and another negro, named Frank Joens, are to be hanged on Friday for the murder in March of Israel Radotsky, a jewelry peddler.

HANNA NOT A CANDIDATE.

Says He Is Not In Presidential Field.

Florence, Ala., June 17.—Senator Hanna of Ohio, in reply to a suggestion from Gen. Cutter Smith of this city that he become a candidate for president in 1904, has written Col. Smith as follows:

"I appreciate sincerely the friendship which prompts the high compliment paid me in your suggestion. I am grateful for such confidence, but must insist that I am not to be considered in any sense a candidate for the nomination for president in 1904."

AT CLOQUET.

The Maccabee lodge went in a body with their friends to enjoy Sunday at Lake Verana.

A. E. Batson, A. Korizek and F. D. Vibert went on a fishing trip to Deer Creek yesterday.

The Epworth league of the First M. E. church will give a social at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Skemp next Friday.

The village council held their regular monthly meeting on Monday night. No business of special importance came up for consideration.

Councilman Elm went to New Ulm as a delegate to the firemen's annual meeting.

There has been some strike talk here lately, but it is hoped that the men will get together and try peaceful methods of settling their grievances before deciding on such an extreme step.

There was a ball game Saturday between the Deweys, of Superior, and Cloquet high school. Dewey won by a score of 11 to 9. Cloquet played in hard luck.

Miss Carry Korizek is visiting her brother and wife, and will remain until August.

The funeral of the 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Lavoie took place at the M. E. church on Friday afternoon last.

Born—On Friday, to Mr. and Mrs. A. Korizek, a daughter.

Saturday morning a couple appeared in police court, highly decorated with black eyes, scratches and bruises. The Murphys, it turned out, had been having a Kilkenney time on the island all Friday, until finally the marshal was compelled to interfere. They came here a few days ago, the man securing a lease of the Mongovan house, keeping his wife in the background until matters were arranged, when she proved to be a lady of color. They were fined and ordered to leave town at once or suffer further consequences.

JEALOUSY

Columbus, O., June 17.—Harry W. Bragg, a private in the Twentieth United States infantry, last night shot and killed Mrs. Lizzie Tibbits and then shot and killed himself. The tragedy was enacted on the grounds at the Columbus barracks, and jealousy was the motive. Bragg, whose home is in Pelican, Wis., served in the Philippines, in the Thirty-fourth United States volunteers. Mrs. Tibbits came here from Chicago as cook for Maj. Augur of the Twentieth regiment. Her husband was an enlisted man, but was dishonorably discharged several weeks ago. Bragg became infatuated with the woman. Last night, just preceding the tragedy, Bragg quarreled with her because she had gone out with another man.

MAY HAVE BEEN DISBROW

Who Ended Life By Jumping From Bridge.

New York, June 16.—Thomas Disbrow, of Richmond Hill, L. I., father of Louis Disbrow, who disappeared shortly after Miss Sarah Lawrence and Clarence Foster were reported missing from Good Ground, L. I., was asked today whether he thought it was his son that jumped from the Brooklyn bridge yesterday. Mr. Disbrow said that the description given of the man answered in some respects to that of his son, but he knew of no reason why he should have desired to end his life. It was possible, he thought, that his son's mind had become unbalanced on account of the notoriety brought upon him in his connection with the tragedy at Good Ground.

CUT WIFE'S THROAT.

Indianapolis, June 16.—Andrew Deiss, of Peoria, cut the throat of his girl wife at the home of her mother today and then killed himself by swallowing carbolic acet. Mrs. Deiss, who is 16 years old, is perhaps fatally injured.

STEAMER ASHORE.

Block Island, June 16.—The steamer Federica from Palermo, bound for New York and Philadelphia with a cargo of lemons and nuts ran ashore on the southeast part of this island today in a dense fog. She lies in a bad position on the rocks.

SHOCKING

Are the Detail of Awful Tragedy In Mississippi.

Hazelhurst, Miss., June 17.—Details have been received here of one of the most terrible tragedies ever enacted in this section of Mississippi as a result of which the six children of Louis Westrope, a well-known farmer living near the little village of Brandywine, 30 miles southeast of Hazelhurst, on the edge of Clarborn county, were killed, while their mother, who is charged with having committed the murders while in a fit of temporary insanity, lies seriously wounded from a bullet fired by herself.

While Mr. Westrope, with his grown daughter, was attending services in a neighboring church, a messenger hastened into the church and told him that all of his little children, six in number, had been murdered, his home was in smoke and ashes and his wife gone, or also murdered, and her body probably consumed by the fire which had destroyed his home.

Arming themselves and procuring dogs, the male members of the congregation hurried to the scene of the catastrophe. Upon their arrival five dead children were found scattered around the premises with bullet holes in the head of each child. Among the ashes of the ruined home were found the charred bones of the infant babe.

Diligent search failed to locate the body of the mother. Outside of the yard was found a bloody apron and tracks leading towards a swamp.

From facts in evidence the spectators soon were convinced that Mrs. Westrope had committed the deed. Search was immediately instituted for her, and she was finally located this afternoon in a country grave yard, where she had spent the night. Beside her was a rifle. When she saw the searching party she placed the rifle to her breast and pulled the trigger, the bullet passing one inch below the heart, seriously but not necessarily fatally wounding her.

The woman conversed intelligently and said she did not know how she came to be in the grave yard or what she had done.

Those who know her and her family believe that she committed the crime while mentally deranged.

WILD PANIC

Caused By Fire Near St. Louis Shoe Factory.

St. Louis, June 17.—Terrified by smoke and heat from the burning building occupied by the St. Louis riding academy and boarding stable at Locust street and Channing avenue, three hundred girls and one hundred men employed in the Friedman Bros. shoe company factory, just west of the stable in panic this afternoon, sought egress by fire escapes and elevator. Through the fall of the elevator and in crowding down the fire escape, several persons were slightly injured. The fire completely destroyed the stable and burned five valuable horses, causing a loss of $50,000.

SHOT HIS PRISONER.

Result of Crowd's Attempt at Rescue.

Baltimore, June 16.—At Warwick, Cecil county, today Marion C. Brown, colored, aged 25 years, was shot and fatally wounded by Constable Horace M. Eaton. Brown was charged with assault and while the officer was on the way with the prisoner to the office of a justice, a crowd of colored men surrounded them and threatened to rescue the prisoner. Constable Eaton drew his revolver and fired with fatal effect.

MOTHER'S FRIEND

THE TRADE OF ALASKA

Commercial and Financial Results os American Ownership.

Output of Furs, Fish and Gold Aggregating $150,000,000.

Fur Seal Industry Has Declined In Last Few Years.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, June 17.—(Special to the Herald.) "Commercial Alaska in 1902" is the title of a monograph prepared by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics for publication in the forthcoming issue of the Monthly Summary. In this the commercial conditions, opportunities and prospects in Alaska are set forth, the number of industries at the present time, the routes of travel, the methods of reaching that once distant, but now accessible territory, and a summarization of the commercial and financial results of ownership of that territory by the United States. This statement is presented at the present moment both by reason of the growing interest in Alaska and especially because of the fact that the Bureau of Statistics is to publish in future monthly statements of the commerce of Alaska with ports of the United States. Heretofore no detailed statistics of commerce with Alaska have been obtainable because of the fact that no provision of law existed for the collection of statistics of commerce between customs districts of the United States; and as Alaska was by law a customs district such statistics could not be gathered, under the law.

When the Hawaiian Islands and Porto Rico were also made customs districts of the United States, and the collection of statistics of our commerce with those islands was rendered impracticable, a measure providing for the collection of statistics of trade between the United States and all of its noncontiguous territories was framed by the Bureau of Statistics, approved by the secretary of the treasury, sent to congress, passed, and signed by the president; and beginning with the new fiscal year the record of trade between the United States and all of its non-contiguous territory will be available in form similar to that of commerce between the United States and foreign countries.

The fact that statistical statements of the commerce and conditions of Alaska have not been regularly made in the past, renders the attempt to present a picture of present conditions in Alaska a difficult one. Necessarily the information is fragmentary. Aside from the statistics of population published by the census, and statements of the number of fur seals taken by the lessees of the Pribilof islands, the number of cans of salmon packed, and the number of fish taken as reported by the special agent of the treasury department, and the statements of gold production reported by the mint bureau, little information of a statistical nature is available. Even these reports are extremely meager, and in most cases the statements are simply those of quantity, unaccompanied by estimates of value. The shipments of merchandise between the United States and Alaska have been considered as coastwise commerce, and no reports of the value of merchandise so transported have been made to the collector; while in many cases the manifests are so indefinite in statements of quantity that it has been found difficult to obtain satisfactory estimates in detail of the movements of merchandise into and out of Alaska. The fluctuation in prices of the seal and other furs and the salmon and other fish, which have been until recent years, the chief industries of Alaska, coupled with the fact that in the official reports only quantities were stated, have in the past rendered detailed statements of values year by year difficult. The statements which are presented as to the industries and their result from a financial standpoint are the results of careful inquiries from collectors of customs both in Alaska and the United States by the various governors of Alaska and their subordinates, and by the special agents of the government appointed to report upon the various industries.

In general terms it may be said that Alaska, for which the United States paid Russia $7,200,000 in 1867, has supplied furs, fish, and gold, amounting to about $150,000,000 in value, about equally divided between these three items; that the investments of capital from the United States in Alaska are probably $25,000,000 with a large additional sum invested in transportation to that territory; and that the annual shipments of merchandise to Alaska now aggregate more than $12,000,000, and have aggregated since the purchase, nearly or quite $100,000,000. Meantime, the population has grown from an estimated 30,000 at the date of purchase, to 32,052 in 1890, 63,592 in 1900, and an estimated 75,000 at the present time.

The number of fur seals taken on the Pribilof islands from 1870 to 1901 is 2,187,317, estimated value $35,000,000, and the value of the seal and other furs taken since the purchase of Alaska by the United States is estimated at about $50,000,000. The fur seal industry, which has declined in the last few years, was succeeded by the fishing industry, Alaska now supplying about one-half of the salmon of the country. The value of the salmon pack in Alaska last year is estimated at about $7,000,000, and the total value of the fish taken in Alaska since the purchase, about $50,000,000; while the value of gold and silver mined since the purchase is also about $50,000,000.

DOWIE RAVES.

Sensational Feature of the "Prophets" Sunday Services.

Chicago, June 17.—John Alexander Dowie, in Shiloh Tabernacle, Zion City, Sunday afternoon scored parents right and left and threatened to curse them forever if they interfered with the law of procreation. In one breath Dowie blessed the dear little ones, in the next he ordered some fond mother to "remove that squalling brat to the baby house, so I won't have to be annoyed with its noise."

A feature of the service was the denouncement of Masonry by an Englishman name Raeside, who recently came from London.

Denunciation of physicians was also a side feature. Dr. Ward, health officer in Zion, brought out all of his surgical instruments, explained their use, and said that the reason he had been induced to lay them aside for Dowieism was that a spirit with a voice like his own had told him to join Dowie.

"Did he tell you that I was the prophet of Christ?" chimed in the "healer."

"Yes, dear doctor," was the meek answer.

In his address Dowie saddened the hearts of the little folks present when he loudly denounced the familiar old story books they love so well—Mother Goose, Mother Hubbard, etc. "These books must be kept out of every home in Zion City," he said, "and any homes that have them are not Christian homes. Santa Claus is another curse to the world. Don't let the children hear about these things. They're no good and they won't be tolerated in Zion."

Then Dowie went into martial relations. He said marriage was given by God for two reasons—for the mutual society and comfort of husband and wife in sickness and death, and for the bringing of children into the world.

"Every child that can be born has a right to be born, and you dogs who in any way prevent it are sinning against God," thundered Dowie.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

A Big Four freight train was wrecked between Perth and Carbon, killing two men instantly and injuring two others. The four men were stealing a ride from Lana to Terre Haute, and as the train was going down a steep grade an axle broke, wrecking eight cars. The two men who were killed were pinned under one of the cars and remained there for several hours.

Capt. Hands, quartermaster of the Twenty-third Infantry, was put on trial Monday at Plattsburg, N. Y., before a court-martial for alleged cruelty in stringing up a private of his company by the thumbs at Jolo in the Philippines without orders from the commanding officer.

Tracey and Merrill, the escaped convicts, secured food Monday morning about five miles from Vancouver, when at the house of a farmer named Reedy, whom they tied and gagged. The sheriff's posse in pursuit of Johnson numbered about 200 men.

Democratic congressional conventions were held in the ten Chicago districts Monday afternoon. There was a fierce struggle between the different factions in the Fifth district. James McAndrews captured the nomination, the convention adjourning in disorder.

The strike of the telephone linemen against the Chicago Telephone company is ended and the 350 men on strike since October 8 of last year will return to work. Their wages will be increased, the union is recognized and no work will be done on holidays.

A. A. Hanson, the long distance bicyclist, who sought to make a thousand-mile motor cycle record, has failed in his attempt. Early Monday morning after he had completed his 370th mile, well inside of the time limit of fifty hours, which he had set, he was thrown from his wheel into a ditch and was rendered insensible for several hours. He was not injured severely.

In the federal court at St. Paul, State Senator George P. Wilson, one of the state's attorneys in the merger suit of Minnesota against the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern and James J. Hill, asked permission to file a return permitting the state on June 24 to move that the case be remanded to the Ramsey county district court on the ground of no jurisdiction in the federal court. Permission was granted. This means that on June 24, the motion to remand will be heard.

STRIKE EXTENDING.

Pittsburg, June 16.—The strike of moulders and pullers, who are out in the melting departments of the crucible steel company of America, is extending, and all the plants of the Pittsburg district with the exception of the Howe, Brown & Co. works are affected.

DENIED BY BASHFORD.

Delaware, O., June 16.—President Bashford, of Ohio Wesleyan university, today, before students and alumni at a commencement gathering denied the report of his receiving a call to the presidency of the University of Wisconsin, as announced last night.

Creamy essence of sweet flowers, healing balsams and milk of plants, describes dainty Satin-Skin Cream. 25c.

Another Improvement.

CHICAGO, BOSTON AND NEW YORK TRAVEL.

On and after June 15th, the Erie railroad will still further improve their Boston and New York service by offering to the public a handsome limited train to leave Chicago from Dearborn station every day at 10:30 a. m., arriving New York next afternoon at 3:30, and Boston at 9 o'clock.

There is no doubt that this service will be highly patronized, as this new train will land the traveler in New York city in ample time to permit him to proceed leisurely to his hotel or home, rest, dress, dine and spend the evening in whatever manner may appeal to him most.

This every-day morning train will consist of standard Pullman drawing-room and sleeping cars. All meals en route served by the famous Erie dining cars. No extra fare charged on this train.

Firm Foundation.

Nothing Can Undermine It in Duluth.

People are sometimes slow to recognize true merit and they cannot be blamed for so many in the past have been humbugged. The experience of hundreds of Duluth's residents expressed publicly through newspapers and other sources places Doan's Kidney Pills on a firm foundation.

Mr. Homer R. Thompson, of 2217 Third street west, employed as flier at the Scott & Holston Lumber company's mills, says: "We have used Doan's Kidney Pills in our family for years, sending to the Eastern states for them as they were not at first on sale here. They never failed to give prompt relief whenever the kidneys became inactive or backache threatened. Both myself and Mrs. Thompson had been for years subject to kidney complaint and nothing we were able to get was successful to remove the trouble. I cannot speak too highly of Doan's Kidney Pills and never fail to advise others suffering from their kidneys to go to W. A. Abbett's drug store and get a box. They have invariably given satisfaction in every case where we have recommended their use."

For sale by all dealers. Price, 50 cents. Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y. Sole agents for the United States.

ADVANCE IN WHEAT

Wheat Started Out Firmer And Kept Within Narrow Range.

Strength of Corn And Rain In Southwest the Cause.

Flax Trading Very Light And the Market Weaker.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 17.—The wheat market was quiet and stronger this morning, but prices kept within a narrow range. A sensational advance in corn in Chicago and wet weather in the Southwest were the bullish features. There was no response by the foreign markets to the slight advance yesterday in the American markets. The foreign demand is somewhat improved as far as the local market is concerned and a little wheat is being sold for export every day. This morning a few loads were sold. The Liverpool market closed unchanged to ½d lower. Paris was ½@¾c higher and Berlin ¾c higher.

Primary receipts of wheat were 279,000 bus; last year, 387,000 bus. Shipments, 470,000 bus, last year, 223,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 140,000 bus. Bradstreet reported a decrease of 4,461,000 bus, in the world's visible supply of wheat, as compared with an increase of 133,000 bus last year.

The Harris-Gates crowd made things interesting in July corn in Chicago, advancing the market 3¼c, an advance of 4¾c in two days. Oats advanced ¾c. Primary receipts of corn were 477,000 bus, last year, 415,000 bus; shipments, 262,000, last year, 592,000 bus. Clearances were 6000 bus. The world's visible supply of corn increased 1,218,000 bus.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 98 cars, and at Chicago 48, a total of 146 cars, against 150 last week and 437 last year.

Trading in wheat was very light on the Duluth board and the market stronger, though narrow. It opened unchanged at 72¾c, sold up to 74⅝c at 10:07, reacted to 74c at 11:12 and finally closed on sales at 74¼c. This was an advance of ½c. Minneapolis advanced ⅝@¾c, but Chicago was not as strong as either of these two markets, closing only ⅛c up.

Cash prices continued at ½c over July for No. 1 northern, 2c under for No. 2, and 3c under for No. 3. Sales were very light.

Flax today was very light and the fall fixtures weaker. September declined 1½c and October 1¼c. Cash seed was unchanged. September oats advanced ¼c and cash and September rye were ½c stronger.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—Cash, No. 1 hard, 76¾c; No. 1 northern, 74¼; No. 2 northern, 73c; No. 3 spring, 71½c; to arrive, No. 1 hard, 77¾c; No. 1 northern, 74¾c; July, 74¼c; September, 70⅝c; Manitoba No. 1 northern, cash, 74¾c; No. 2 northern, 72¾c. Oats, September, 28¾; May, 33¼c. Rye, 55½c; September, 56c. Flax, cash, $1.75; to arrive, $1.70; on track, $1.75; June, $1.70; September, $1.42; October, $1.37¾; cash No. 1 Northwestern, $1.75.

Cars inspected—Wheat, 18; last year, 163; corn, 4; oats, 1; rye, 4; barley, 1; flax, 1.

Receipts—Wheat, 12,220; corn, 2820. Shipments—Wheat, 187,550; oats, 1000.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Yesterday's Strength In Corn Causes Lively Scramble.

Chicago, June 17.—The corn pit was the scene of a very active scramble at the opening today. Shorts in July options were much frightened over the strength displayed in that delivery yesterday and stop-loss orders were executed in considerable quantities. The result was a jump of 1½c in the first few minutes of business. July opened unchanged to ½c higher at 68⅝c to 67½c and jumped straightway to 65½c. The manipulative feature of this option overshadowed all other conditions in the pit. Cables were poor in strength and the general trade only fair. The showery weather had some effect on prices, as did the small percentage of contract receipts, only ten cars coming up to grade out of 378 received today. After the opening bulge, July sold back to 66¼c and steadied.

Excitement broke out in the corn pit again shortly after the end of the first hour's trading. Shorts were badly frightened, because of the tight manner in which the bulls were holding stuff. In their anxiety to cover to avoid further loss they bought everything offered until July sold at 66⅝c. At this figure long stuff came out for profit and the price of July slipped back to 65½c.

Shorts continued to cover in July corn fevverishly upto the close of trade. Gossip on the floor had it that the elevators were against the bull manipulators and that they were rushing in contract stuff. This was given as a reason why the bull crowd let the price jump so high this early in the month. It is thought that the culmination of the corner is to be brought about within the week. July kept on the upward jump and closed at an advance of 1⅝c since yesterday morning. The closing price was the highest of the day, 67½c.

Wheat felt the influence of the corn advance and of the wet weather in the Southwest. Cables were indifferent to the slight upturn here yesterday, although France and England reported cold showery weather. Distant futures showed the best strength, based on the weather conditions. Trade was good at the opening. July opened unchanged to ⅛c up at 72@72⅛c and sold at 72¼c. Local receipts were 48 cars, 13 of contract grade; Minneapolis and Duluth reported 98 cars, making a total for the three points of 146 cars, against 150 last week and 437 a year ago.

Wheat was neglected in the corn excitement. July closed a shade lower, steady at 72@72⅛c.

Light offerings in oats and the strength in what and corn started July oats about steady, a shade lower at 39⅛c. There was fair activity early with commission houses buying a little and July sold at 39⅜c. Receipts were 225 cars.

Provisions were dull with a small show of strength early. Hogs were lower, but brokers supported the pit. July pork opened unchanged at $17.62½, advanced 2½c and then eased to $17.60. July lard started unchanged at $10.20 and July ribs 2½c up at $10.40.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago—Wheat: Market was very steady. It started out strong with quite a little snap on the sable and the return of showery weather in the Southwest. Later the sharp advance in July corn took the snap out of the market. The culping trade, which with the small outside interests is an important factor, were afraid to hold wheat for fear of a break in corn. We still regard the weather here and in Europe as an important factor. Showers are generally predicted through the next twenty-four hours.

Corn—The congested local condition to which we have been calling attention for some time past was again in evidence and eclipsed all other features. Nervous shorts were the buyers of corn. As long as the bull interest does not come to the market shorts apparently can only be covered at advancing prices. The only advice we have to give is that it is a dangerous market and we would have no interest in it.

MARKET REPORT.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, 507 Board of Trade, Duluth, Minn.

Chicago, June 17.—Trade in wheat was light today, but the market ruled firm within a range of 1c a bus and closed ¼c higher than last night. Foreign markets were generally firm on unsettled weather, but closed with an easier tone. Liverpool reported their market ¼d higher for the day. Reports about the French crop are unfavorable owing to too much wet weather. There was a good demand for cash wheat here and seaboard reported a fair business done there for export. Weather throughout the spring and winter wheat belts continues unsettled, and rains are predicted for tomorrow. Broomhall cables that the strength in Paris is due to the fear of interior supplies becoming exhausted. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 90 cars.

There was a large and active trade in corn today and principal feature was covering by July shorts, that option advanced 3¾c over last night and closed at the highest point of the day, namely 67½c.; the September and December options were firmer purely sympathetic with the strength in July and closed September ⅜ and December ¼ higher than last night. Foreign markets generally quiet, Liverpool 1d higher for the day. Country offerings light, but cash demand was very quiet. Weather generally favorable for the growing crop. As we said before, the market is manipulated and it is dangerous to be short the July option, the bull leaders have got so much bought that they can do anything they like with the market and it looks as though they were going to give the shorts a good squeeze. Estimated receipts, 175 cars.

Trade in oats was light today and there was no special feature to the market, which ruled steady and closed, old July ⅝c higher, and new ⅛c lower than last night. September old and new closed ⅛c higher than last night. Country offerings were light; cash demand good. Weather continues favorable for the crop. The legitimate situation continues strong and unless supplies increase materially very shortly, which we hardly think they will, we look for prices to go higher. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 110 cars.

Provisions opened slow and easy on large receipts of hogs and further decline at yards. Later there was some support given to pork, but it failed to help the list and the market closed lower than yesterday. Outside business very light and trade mostly between scalpers who try to follow the leaders. It is significant that there is lard for sale all the time of every one of nine different options. Support is being given in a small way to pork, but only after delivery July is over. We received in Chicago for 26 days 793,000 hogs, against 800,000 last year and lately was a record breaker. This means large increases in contract stuff. We think all of the manipulation is over and leaders will be glad to sell now if they could do so. We think they are afraid to hold and their position legitimately is far from enviable.

CROP REPORT.

For the Most Part Conditions Are Favorable.

Washington, June 17.—The following is the weather bureau's weekly summary of crop conditions:

Highly favorable temperature conditions prevailed during the week in the great corn states of the Central valleys; the Central and West gulf states suffering from excessive heat, and portions of the Upper Mississippi valley to the New England coast have experienced temperatures too low for favorable growth. The Lower Missouri and Upper Mississippi valleys, and the southern portion of the upper lake region, where in previous weeks farm work has been interrupted by heavy rains, have received additional heavy rains and crops in portions of these districts are much in need of cultivation. Abundant rains have effectually relieved drouth in the South Atlantic states but the almost entire absence of rain in the Central and West gulf states has intensified drouth conditions previously existing in those sections. The weather conditions on the Pacific coast were favorable, except in Oregon and Washington, where the nights were too cool.

Corn has made rapid growth in Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri, Indiana and portions of Illinois and Iowa, and is much improved in Ohio. In portions of Iowa and Northern Illinois, the crop has suffered from heavy rains, and in Wisconsin and Michigan from too excessive moisture and low temperatures. In Kentucky, Tennessee and generally throughout the Middle and South Atlantic states, corn is being well, but is suffering seriously from drouth in the Central and West gulf states, and is being cut for fodder in portions of Texas. Winter wheat has made generally favorable progress during the past week, further improvement being reported from the Ohio valley and lake region. In Northern Illinois the crop has suffered to some extent from heavy rains and much lodging on rich soils is reported from Wisconsin.

Harvest has begun in Kansas and Southern Illinois, has progressed under favorable conditions in Missouri, is about finished in the Carolinas and Tennessee, and wheat is ripening in Southern Nebraska, with a very promising outlook. Winter wheat continues in promising condition in Washington and Oregon and a good crop is being harvested in Northern and Central California.

Spring wheat has been damaged in flooded valleys in portions of Iowa, but is doing well in the drier portions of the state and some of the late sown in South Dakota is weedy. With these exceptions, the crop is in excellent conditions throughout the spring wheat region. Oats have suffered some injury in Northern Illinois and portions of Iowa from heavy rains and too rank growth is reported from Nebraska and Wisconsin, elsewhere through the Central states and Atlantic region the crop has advanced favorably and is in promising condition, but less favorable reports are received from the Middle and South Atlantic states.

CHICKENS WOULDN'T LAY.

Owing to the scarcity of eggs and the high prices asked for them, one of Coney Island's residents, Samuel Richter, decided it would be cheaper to raise chickens than purchase eggs, but as the weeks flew by and no eggs appeared he grew thoughtful. He consulted with a friend who promised to come around and see if the cure was of the proper sort. The friend who happened to be a retired farmer, stopped in and looked at Richter's chickens and while he stood in the yard with his hands in his pockets, Richter approached and asked him why the chickens did not lay. The friend looked at him awhile and said: "Them chickens is a havin' a bully good time with your corn, Sammy an' a scratching of your yard but they hain't the kind chet lays eggs. Them's all roosters."

"Sammy" will not spend any more money for corn but will wait until the price of eggs comes down.

DECLINE IN STOCKS

Sugar Had a Slump But Made a Partial Recovery.

Canadian Pacific Also Yielded, Closing at Lowest Point.

Not Much Demand For Leaders, Outside of Readings.

New York, June 17.—Prices moved irregularly again this morning, on a light volume of business. The coalers, generally, were lower and the grain carriers, higher. Canadian Pacific rose ⅝ Virginia-Carolina Chemical as much and American Car a slight fraction of large buying. Sugar was off nearly a point and United States Steel declined a fraction.

Continued liquidation in Sugar depressed it 2 points, Reading, Missouri Pacific and Canadian Pacific were bid up slightly, but did not hold. When the general list yielded to the heavy prices of the most prominent stocks fell fractionally below yesterday's close. St. Paul and Canada Southern lost a point. American Snuff advanced 1¾.

The advance in Reading to 66¾ with a strong rally in Missouri Pacific caused a firm tone elsewhere. Sugar and St. Paul recovered good fractions and Great Northern pfd rose a point and there was a rise of 3 in St. Joseph and Grand Island first pfd, 2 in the second pfd, 4¼ in New York Dock and a point each in Reading second pfd, Canadian Pacific and Pressed Steel Car. The market became dull and yielding later when realizing began in Canadian Pacific and Sugar dropped back to 126. General Electric and St. Louis Southwestern pfd declined a point and Sou pfd 1⅞. Bonds were irregular at noon.

The tone of the market was appreciably better, but there was not much demand for the leaders outside of Reading stocks. Reading common touched 67½ on large dealings. Many of the minor stocks expanded their earlier gains. St. Joe & Grand Island first preferred figured in a small movement. National New York Dock 6¼, American Telephone & Telegraph 3¼, Great Northern preferred 2, and American Bicycle preferred, Iowa Central and Evansville & Terre Haute 10@15.

There was a falling off in demand for Reading, but the reaction was slight. Gains in Missouri Pacific and Iowa Central reached 1 to 1⅞. General Electric lost 3 and American Ice preferred 1⅝. There was a reaction of 2 in St. Joe & Grand Island first preferred and 1 in secondp referred. General Electric fell 10 points, and Butterick Publishing company 2¾. Chicago & Great Western debentures 1¼, and Louisville & Nashville a point. Prices generally were well maintained in the dull market. St. Paul recovered to a shade over last night.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Waldorf to Edwards, Wood & Co.: Although the over Sunday accumulation of buying orders was nothing to speak of, legitimate purchase of stocks on the opening of the week were large enough to justify the belief that the June investment demand for securities is beginning in earnest. Hence speculative feeling tonight continues optimistic and representative houses, some of which were noncommittal seven bearish a fortnight ago, are strong in their opinion that gradually the market will broaden out, the upward tendency of prices being maintained in the meantime. The charge so frequently made of late that manipulation is the main factor in the current speculation gets less and less serious attention and crops and earnings are generally acknowledged to be the read source of prevalent strength again. Sold out bulls and disgruntled bears get little encouragement from their captious criticisms to the effect that only the "western crowd" are behind the present price movement. Even if that were true, however, it would not argue weakness in the speculative position, for what the experience of the past few months makes obvious, is that the resources of this same Western crowd have been vastly underestimated. This element includes Schwab, Frick, Gates, Elwood, Lambert and some of the most powerful financial institutions in Pittsburg and Chicago. It is estimated that the combined capital behind it is no less than $50,000,000 and it is pointed out that neither William H. Vanderbilt nor Jay Gould in the hey days of their prosperity had so great a credit at their call.

* * *

Dow Jones to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Metropolitan insiders say there is a short interest of formidable proportions in Metropolitan stock and it may be forced to cover before very long. Arguments used to stimulate bull sentiment is that the stock is absolutely a fine investment and with 7 per cent dividend guaranteed it is the cheapest stock of its kind on the list.

* * *

Dick to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has been moderately active and generally irregular. Missouri Pacific and Readings have been the strong features. Gould interests put the former up and the latter was bought in a way that looked like Pennsylvania for control. The Gates following was a large buyer. Otherwise the price movements were narrow. No strike news of importance. Money was slightly firmer and exchange strengthened. Heavy selling of Sugar followed unfavorable news from Washington, but stock rallied from the lowest prices.

* * *

Warrington to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The news is better if anything and we may anticipate still better news in the near future. An injunction has been made permanent against the United States Steel corporation restraining them from converting part of the preferred stock into bonds as authorized at the stockholders' meeting last month. In view of such action, I would advise having nothing further to do with these stocks. I regard the present legal action as a bull argument eventually, but it may induce some liquidation by dissatisfied investors and therefore it is not likely any upward movement will take place for some time. Confine operations to the standard railways. Union Pacific, Missouri, Atchison, St. Paul, Erie, Reading and Baltimore & Ohio are good purchases on any break of a point or so.

* * *

Dick to Paine, Webber & Co.: If the plan to issue bonds by the United States Steel company is blocked we do not see how the company can continue to pay dividends on its common stock.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Paine, Webber & Co.—There was no session of the Boston Stock exchange today, it being a legal holiday in the state of Massachusetts. On the curb there was little interest, the traders evidently being willing to await a regular session before buying or selling any of the stocks. Transactions were recorded in Calumet & Arizona at prices ranging around 44 for broken lots. The metal was firm in London and copper in this country remains around 12⅝ to 12¾ for lake brands.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 17.—The cotton market opened easy, with June 2 points up and later months 3 to 5 points lower. Whereas early Liverpool cables were tolerably firm. Reports that rain was falling in Northern and portions of Central Texas, caused active liquidation on the call. The room trade continuned to entertain bearish convictions, though rather disposed to sell with great caution at the lower prices until after today's weekly crop statement has been digested.

Cotton—Spot closed quiet, mid-ups, 9 5-16; mid-gulf, 9 9-16. Sales, 510 bales. Cotton futures closed easy. June, 8.80; July, 8.49; August, 8.20; September, 7.86; October, 7.81; November, 7.74; December, 7.74; January, 7.75; February, 7.75; March, 7.77.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, June 17.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in department of redemption shows: Available cash balance, $196,689,-601; gold, $99,232,188; silver, $23,858,493; United States notes, $9,388,299; treasury notes of 1890, $88,539; national bank notes, $9,167,740; total receipts this day, $1,375,-869; total receipts this month, $25,780,383; total receipts this year, $539,448,112; total expenditures this day, $1,300,009; total expenditures this month, $22,860,609; total expenditures this year, $460,230,797; deposits in national banks, $126,877,779.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, June 17.—Close: Money on cal, steady, at 2@3 per cent; closed offered at 1 per cent; prime mercantile paper, 4¼@5 per cent; sterling exchange, steady, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.87⅝ for demand and $4.85@4⅝ for 60 days; posted rates, $4.86 and $4.88½; commercial bills, $4.84@4.85⅝. Silver certificates, 62¼c. Government bonds, weak; railroad bonds, steady; state bonds, irregular.

NEWS OF THE LAKES

Northeaster Causes Suspension of Work On Steamer Hadley.

Feared That Coffer Dam Will Be Destroyed Again.

Experts Appointed to Appraise Hadley Are In City.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon the scows and the steamer Suit, which had been working upon the George G. Hadley, were brought into port and work suspended until the wind dies down again.

This was due to the northeast wind which sprang up last night and kicked up a sea that was increasing steadily. Work was kept up as long as possible, and when the sea made it necessary to stop, work was ceased reluctantly. It was feared that if the sea kept on making as it was when operations ceased the coffer dam would be destroyed again, and the wrecking operations set back considerably.

THEY ARE SHOOTERS

Company C. Men Make a Record In Volley Firing.

Make Best Showing of All Third Regiment Companies.

Duluth Soldiers Will Be Home From Camp Thursday.

Company C., of Duluth, is probably the best company in the Minnesota national guard when it comes to volley firing—the infantry firing which counts most in actual warfare.

The company demonstrated yesterday that other companies in the Third regiment are not in the same class in volley firing, and established a record which companies of the Second and First regiments will strive to beat in the next month or so.

On the rifle range at Lake City yesterday the Company C men made a rating of .311 in the volley work, and these figures stand as a new state record. Advices received in the city today indicate that the men are feeling particularly good over this performance.

Capt. Lee's official report on volley firing of all the companies in the regiment is as follows:

Co. C., of Duluth	.311
Co. D., of Zumbrota	.268
Co. E., of St. Paul	.261
Co. F., of Brainerd	.214
Co. G., of Princeton	.214
Co. K., of Anoka	.182
Co. H., of Oliver	.176
Co. A., of Duluth	.159

Major E. E. Resche, of this city, was the only commissioned field officer in the regiment to qualify as a sharpshooter. His total was 186. On the known distances he did exceptionally well, but was slightly off on the skirmish shooting.

At 2 o'clock tomorrow all the companies of the Third will break camp. It has probably been the most successful, pleasant, instructive, and healthy encampment in the history of the organization.

Duluth companies will have a long layoff over in St. Paul. The regiment's special is due to arrive in that city at 3:45 tomorrow afternoon. Companies A. and C. and the regimental band will leave St. Paul at 11:10, arriving here 6:30 Thursday morning.

Tomorrow morning the most complicated and celebrated event of the encampment is scheduled to occur. Capt. W. H. Hart, brigadier quartermaster, will do a stunt as army paymaster, and keep the boys busy all forenoon trying to sign the complicated payroll books without making a mistake.

Major Charles R. Williams, who provided rations for the Third Wisconsin volunteers in the Porto Rican campaign, was a guest of several of the Duluth officers at Lakeview yesterday. Major Williams is now state quartermaster of the Wisconsin guard. He expressed the opinion that Lakeview was a good camp, but was not favorably disposed to the refined methods of soldiering. He thinks the guard should be kept as closely on a par with the regular army as possible, while the men encamped at Lakeview have enjoyed too many comforts of home life.

The Wisconsin guardsmen do their own cooking in the open, and eat in mess tents instead of having mess halls. In spite of these hardships, as many might call them, the attendance at the Wisconsin encampments averages higher than in Minnesota.

St. Paul, June 17.—A Lake City, Minn., special to the Dispatch says: Another perfect day in camp has passed. The men are preparing for their departure tomorrow. Adjt. Matson is paying the regiment off today. Capt. Little is officer of the day, Lieut. Josten and Lieut. Andres officers of the guard. Private Carnody, Company E, was chosen for colonel's orderly. The rifle team, under Lieut. O'Brien, has been reorganized and are in training for the shoot in August here, at which time they expect to win for the third time the state trophy, and if so they win it for keeps. The regular routine will be carried out tomorrow up to time of leaving. Capt. Lee reports the work on the range as far above the average, and a great deal of time has been saved by the adding of extra targets.

RACE WANTED

One Sought In Vain Between Iroquois and Manitou.

The steamer Iroquois people were very anxious to get a race with the Manitou on her present trip to Lake Superior. At least partisans of both boats claimed to regret that they could not have gotten the steamers together in some way.

The Manitou is a pretty speedy vessel, and her owners have been talking pretty sassy to Capt. Singer whenever the captain has been to Chicago. Last week the captain tried to get the Manitou people to revise their schedule so the two could have a joint trial of speed this week. It was impossible to do this, however, without completely re-arranging the itinerary of one of the other.

The Iroquois people claim the best the Manitou has done is 18 miles an hour, while they insist the Iroquois can roll off about 23 miles with ease.

Some of the railroad boys, with whom Assistant Traffic Agent Brush, of the White Line, used to work, made some valuable suggestions about "brushing up" the speed of the Iroquois, when he was discussing the matter today. They assured him that they believed the Iroquois could beat the Manitou all right, but that there were two or three soft spots in the grade on the south shore route, some rough track in other places ought to be ballasted up, and some light rails be replaced with heavier steel so as to make a sure thing of it. So many suggestions came so fast that Brush retired to seek society that realized better the "importance of being earnest."

Al Gasser, who has been at Phoenix, Ariz., for the benefit of his health, has returned and is at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Campbell, 406 East Third street.

BOERS ALL IN.

Surrenders In the Transvaal Have Been Completed.

London, June 17.—A dispatch from Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria, Monday, June 16, announces the additional surrender of 915 Boers. This completes the surrenders in the Transvaal.

Under date of June 17, Lord Kitchener announces that 700 Boers surrendered at Bloemfontein yesterday and all the surrenders in the Transvaal and Orange River colony are now complete.

Lord Kitchener concludes as follows: "I have handed over the South African constabulary to the civil authorities as the necessity for further military operations has ceased."

Buys a Residence.

John F. McLaren has bought, through the agency of R. B. Knox & Co., the J. M. Lemieux residence property on East Superior street. The consideration is understood to have been $6,500. The house is located at 1719 East Superior street.

Mr. McLaren recently sold his residence property at East Third street and Second avenue east to Roswell H. Palmer for $6,600.

LISTEN TO STRINGER

Address By Temporary Chairman of Illinois State Convention.

Makes Strong Plea For Reduction of the Tariff.

Tariff Will Be Distinct Issue In Next Campaign.

Springfield, Ill., June 17.—At a few minutes after 12 o'clock the Democratic state convention met in Machinery hall on the state fair grounds. Chairman John M. Hopkins, chairman of the state central committee, called the convention to order, and after the offering of a prayer, introduced to the convention in a few words the temporary chairman, Lawrence B. Stringer, of Lincoln. Mr. Stringer, who is slight and boyish-looking, was greeted with great applause as he took up the gavel. His address was as follows:

"Is it strange or is it startling that at one fell swoop, our whole national policy should be perverted and our fiscal system irrevocably changed? Is it not so strange when one reflects that the party in power owes its success, its predominance, save its very life, to the organized and syndicated trusts, that with jaws and jaws have seized the government itself. Having exploited every parent upon American soil, they have sought new worlds to conquer and at their behest and bidding, we are today exchanging blood for dividends and ruling crown colonies by the sword. It is not so strange when we know that their advocates, at the banquet board, amidst thunders of applause, unblushingly have declared that "the trust was a distinct issue in the campaign last fought and was ratified with emphasis by the people of the land." Democracy denies that the trust was a distinct issue in the fight last fought, but avers that it is and will be the issue in the fights now to come. Intrenched the people find relief from these mighty monsters of prey from the party whose tariff policy has produced them, which has fed, nourished and maintained them and which is the suppliant recipient of their bounty. Points to regulate, grandstand plays to obscure, paper promises and injunctions to restrain, do not and will not suffice. If the law be broken, let the offenders be indicted, tried and convicted of their crimes, as the law provides, rather than to be pleasantly warned not to break the law again. Drastic legislation is needed, and extreme measures are required to tear apart, to felonize their reunion, to freelist their products, and Democracy alone, which neither loves them nor fears them, is the only agency in the land that can defeat and destroy them.

Has it not occurred to you that underlying every act against law, liberty and humanity, committed by the party in power, will be found the high protective tariff tax which it levies at our ports of entry?

Destroy high tariffs and you destroy the trusts. Destroy the trusts and you destroy the soul and spirit and the fire of the imperialistic and colonial policy that has hauled down the nation's flag and raised a counterfeit copy of the same instead, with clots of blood on the stars.

The Democratic party stands in this fight where it has always stood, championing the people's rights. It stands the enemy of monopoly, the foe to oppression, the friend of labor and the inspiration of youth. It stands for purity in public life, economy in public service, the abolition of privileges to the few, for taxes no greater than government needs and for a trade unfettered and free. It stands for an expansion, contiguous, constitutional and sympolized by stars-to-be upon the nation's jing. It stands for the enforcement of law as against anarchy that lays low a loved president, that takes the life of a governor in one capital city of a state and thus leaves behind executive power to save political friends, indicted for such crimes from the righteous process of the law. It stands for duty as against the dollar; for human liberty as against human greed, for the constitution side by side with the flag wherever it may be, for government by consent at home, abroad or in the sun-kissed isles of the sea. It stands where Jefferson stood at the day-dawn of the nation, where patriots have stood for ages that free men's souls, and there it will ever stand until the grasp of greed is released from the flag, until the foes of liberty are driven from the field, until the shadow of imperialism has been sent back to the European hell from whence it came and until the banner of a united Democracy shall once more fly, undimmed and free, the herald of glorious victory."

Upon the conclusion of Mr. Stringer's address, which was greeted with cheers, the reports of committees on credentials were read and the temporary organization of the convention was made permanent.

Pending the report of the committee on resolutions, the convention at 1:15 took a recess until 2:30.

HE MAY ACT.

Death Under Christian Science Treatment Being Investigated.

"Cause of death—Diphtheria."

"Contributing cause—Christian Science."

Such is the death certificate of Ernest E. Ball, as signed by the coroner.

The deceased is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Ball, of South Thirteenth street, Minnesota point. He was in the tenth year of his age and died last evening.

Coroner Boyer found that the family had depended on science treatment and then signed the death certificate as given above. He is making a further investigation of the death this afternoon, and if this investigation proves what is anticipated there may be prosecutions.

The coroner could not be found up to a late hour this afternoon. The remains of the young boy were to be buried immediately, owing to the contagious character of the disease from which he died, and it is supposed that the coroner was making a personal investigation of the case before burial.

Phillips-Peyton Wedding.

Mrs. Phillips, of Amsterdam, N. Y., has issued invitations for the marriage of her daughter, Miss Anna Evelyn Phillips, and Bronson Murray Peyton, of Duluth. The marriage will take place at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening, July 2, at her home on Gray Park avenue, in Amsterdam.

PRESIDENT OF WISCONSIN.

Milwaukee, June 17.—Henry Smith Pritchett, of Boston, has been chosen as president of the University of Wisconsin, to succeed Charles Kendall Adams.

HE MAY RUN

Senator Daugherty Intimates He May Run For Senator.

Senator F. B. Daugherty returned this morning from Chisago lake, where he has been fishing for nearly a week. A liberal supply of sunburn testifies to the fact that he has been fishing, and he returns much improved by his trip and fitter physically than he has been for some time.

He confirmed the report that he had concluded not to run for the Republican congressional nomination.

"Is it too early yet to inquire if you will be a candidate for the senate in the Fifty-first legislative district?" was asked.

"Well," replied the senator, "I am in excellent health, and there is no telling what may happen."

While this is not necessarily conclusive, his friends say that Senator Daugherty will oppose George R. Laybourn for the Republican nomination for state senator in the Fifty-first district.

He reports no opposition to Odin Halden for state auditor, and a good deal of friendship for him in the lower part of the Eighth district and in adjoining counties of other districts in that vicinity.

TRAVELERS.

Railroad Men Say That They Are Coming This Way.

Conductors on the St. Paul-Duluth roads report a rapid increase in the travel between the two cities, as the result of the opening up of the tourist season. Steamboat men say the season is not far enough along to permit of very large passenger lists as yet. But the roads from the South and West are already appreciating the setting in of the eastward tourist movement. An occasional tourist comes up on one of the big freighters, but there is likely to be fewer than before.

The South Shore road announces that it will run its regular spring excursion to Detroit a week from next Friday evening. The round-trip rate of $13.50 will be made, and a 30-day limit will be placed on the tickets. The passengers will be routed via D. & C. steamers from St. Ignace.

The South Shore began running trains across the international bridge at the Sault last Wednesday. The draw, which was damaged by a steamer, has been repaired sufficiently so that it can be opened only half way around until a new table casting can be secured. Rail traffic is uninterrupted again, however.

The Duluth-Superior Passenger association is meeting at the Spalding this afternoon to elect officers for the coming year. The outgoing president is F. S. Bacon, general agent of the Omaha at West Superior. The secretary is Mart Adson, general agent of the South Shore road for Duluth. It has not been very active for the past year, and steps may be taken this afternoon to remove it from its somnolent condition.

Traveling Passenger Agent McNaughton of the Erie road is in town. The Erie is now thinking of putting on a 24-hour service from Chicago to New York.

NORBECK.

General Belief That Missing Officer Has Committed Suicide.

Minneapolis, June 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The jury that has been hearing the Norbeck evidence was held in court until it became certain that the missing man would not appear. Judge Harrison then declared the bail bond forfeited and issued a bench warrant. The jury was ordered held for a time, and telegrams of description were sent out broadcast. It is believed, however, that Norbeck has committed suicide. He had made many threats to his intimate friends of suicide, and told one last night that he intended to end it all. Sodini, one of his bondsmen, who runs a cheap variety theater, has offered a reward for the apprehension of Norbeck. The county attorney will on Thursday, if Norbeck does not appear in the interim, move the case against Capt. Nathaniel W. King, accused of larceny and being an accessory to a felony. Meanwhile the grand jury is working steadily investigating other cases of police corruptions and other indictments are certain.

Mayor Ames was to have been arraigned at noon, but had not been able to procure bail, and at the earnest solicitation of his attorneys the arraignment was postponed until 3 p. m. He is much broken in spirit by the turn of affairs, and his health is precarious.

DEATH LIST.

Chicago, June 17.—Mrs. Julia Ancrum Davidson, a direct descendant of the Washington family, died here today, aged 87 years. Mrs. Davidson's grandfather was Col. William Washington, an own cousin of George Washington. Mrs. Davidson, then a girl of 10, was present at Col. Washington's home near Charleston, S. C., when the Marquis de Lafayette visited there in 1825.

New York, June 17.—A dispatch to the Associated Press from Plattsburg, N. Y., announces the sudden death today of the Very Rev. Eugene Augustus Hoffman, D. D., dean of the General Theological seminary of the Protestant Episcopal church. He was in his 74th year.

A private dispatch from Rome announces the death of Rev. Father Cauvin, who, fifty years ago, was one of the most noted Catholic priests in the United States. He was 91 years of age. In his boyhood Father Cauvin was an intimate of Napoleon Bonaparte.

FULL PAY

For Admiral Schley to Be Recommended By Committee.

Washington, June 17.—The senate committee on naval affairs today authorized Senator Hale to make a favorable report upon Senator McComas' bill giving Admiral Schley the full pay of a rear admiral on the active list of the navy. As a retired officer he now receives only three-fourths of the pay of a rear admiral on the active list.

The bill was amended by the committee so as to eliminate the preamble reciting that the admiral was in absolute command of the forces at the time of the battle with Cervera's fleet off Santiago.

IN CONGRESS.

House Has Passed Bill To Amend Bankruptcy Law.

Washington, June 17.—The house has passed the bill to amend the bankruptcy laws.

IN THE SENATE.

Washington, June 17.—When the senate convened at 11 o'clock today, Mr. Quay (Pa.) gave notice that on Thursday, at the conclusion of the voting on the isthmian canal question, he would move to discharge the committee on territories from further consideration of the bill providing for the admission as states of the territories of Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico.

A bill was passed to regulate the commutation for good conduct for United States prisoners.

GRAND RUSH

For Homesteads On the Fort Hall Reservation.

Pocatello, Idaho, June 17.—Exactly at 12 o'clock today 1,300 men and boys of all ages rushed across the line of the ceded Fort Hall reservation and disappeared in a cloud of dust in their mad rush for homestead and mineral lands. Most of them were mounted on horses; a majority heavily armed.

Probably a thousand persons reparted later with pack animals. Before 2 o'clock Pocatello was practically deserted. Many signs of trouble were apparent before the starting signal was given. In scores of instances it is known that three or more men intended to locate on the same piece of land.

MERGER SUIT.

Attorneys Will Make Motion To Vacate Service.

St. Paul, June 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Attorneys for the Northern Securities company and for J. J. Hill, president of that corporation, this afternoon served notice on the attorney general that they would, on June 24, move to vacate service in the suit brought by the state of Minnesota against the Northern Securities company and President Hill. It is claimed that the Securities company is not a resident of Minnesota and that it has no business in this state and attempt to remove it from its somnolent condition.

Traveling Passenger Agent McNaughton of the Erie road is in town. The Erie is now thinking of putting on a 24-hour service from Chicago to New York.

IRISH NATIONALISTS

Will Take No Part In Coronation Ceremonies.

London, June 17.—At a meeting of the Irish members of the house of commons this afternoon, resolutions to the effect that the Irish Nationalists "as a protest against the misgovernment of their country," resolved to take no part in the present coronation ceremonies and that the Irish party be summoned to meet in Dublin on the day of King Edward's coronation, to take into consideration the condition of Ireland, were unanimously adopted.

DOUBLE SHOOTING.

Oklahoma Affray Will Result In Two Deaths.

Oklahoma City, O. T., June 17.—W. McMichael today shot and killed W. E. Johnson, a well-known young man, on the street here, the result of a dispute over a contested land claim. While he was lying on the ground Johnson shot McMichael in the abdomen. Johnson expired within a few minutes. McMichael cannot live.

EDWARD'S BELONGINGS.

Has Finest Collection of Plate In England.

Magnificent as are the British regalia, they are not to be compared for value with the contents of the gold pantry at Windsor. Here, in two large fireproof rooms, are kept services of plate which cannot be matched elsewhere for beauty or price. There is a complete dinner service in gold for 140 persons, and other articles of gold and silver numbering in all 1100, weighing thirty tons, and valued at £1,800,000, says London Answers.

One candelabrum alone, which represents St. George and the dragon, contains 2700 ounces of solid gold and takes two men to lift. It is valued at £12,000. Another more modern piece of plate, an epergne, designed by the late prince consort, represents the queen's deerhounds standing over a dead stag, and commemorates Queen Victoria's first visit to the Highlands. It is almost equal in weight to the St. George candleholder and is worth £11,000. There is not much in the way of old plate at Windsor, because Charles I melted down all that was in his possession in his endeavor to subdue his parliament, but the few antiquities that do remain are very beautiful.

One is the great tankard, known as the "Armada." It is made of gold dubloons looted from the cabin of a Spanish admiral of the Armada, when his huge vessel yielded to the English. There is also the peg tankard, which is of gold, lined inside with precious stones. It was once the custom to fill it every night with rich, heavy Tokay, and the unfortunate guest was obliged by stern estiquette to drink his share of this unwholesome beverage the last thing before he retired.

Another curiosity of the gold pantry is a silver shield, covered with gold snuff boxes of beautiful design. This trophy is worth £9000. Perhaps the most extraordinary of all the curiosities of the gold pantry is a huge cuspidor of solid gold, weighing ten pounds, which the king of Siam presented to Queen Victoria.

There are, of course, china services innumerable—some of old Derby and Worcester; others French and Dresden; others, again, of almost priceless ware from China. The value of these is set at £30,000, and the estimate is probably too low. Among the china is a costly breakfast service given to George III on his birthday in 1810 by his daughters. It was made to order, and each piece has on it the initials of the givers—A. E. U. S. A.

Windsor Castle is a perfect museum of treasure, new and old. Lately a number of these valuables have been dug out of an old curiosity shop in the round tower, and properly exhibited. A royal cloak from the Sandwich islands of brilliant yellow and red feathers is a special treasure. It was left to England by the king and queen of the Sandwich islands, who died within a week of one another in June, 1824. The yellow feathers are from the ooo bird, which is now extinct. The cloak is valued at £10,000.

When Lord Roberts—or Gen. Sir Frederick Roberts, as he then was—came back, in 1880, from his successful plunge through the heart of Afghanistan, he brought a present for Queen Victoria in which the king takes a great interest. It is the gorgeous crimson saddle and horse trappings of Ayoob Khan, the deposed ameer. The reins are of pleated scarlet silk, and all the trappings heavily crusted with gold. The bit is of silver. Among other warlike trophies are the spurs of King Richard III, and a wonderful suit of black, lacquered Chinese armor. It has a headpiece of half mask set with gilt teeth.

The brunt of the defense of the residency at Lucknow fell upon the Thirty-second regiment. The king has a memento of those dark days of heroic fighting in three pieces of plate from the regiment plate chest. These are dented by a rebel round shot, which plunged through the side of the chest. An almost equally somber relic is the wedding present given by Henry VIII to the ill-fated Anne Boleyn. It is a quaint little clock of enamel.

Among the Indian treasures which have descended to the king are two relics of that cruel scoundrel Tippoo Sahib, whom we finally thrashed at Seringapatam just over a century ago. These are Tippo's tiger and jeweled bird. The tiger is life-size, of wood, covered with plates of pure gold, and has eyes and teeth of gleaming rock crystal. The jeweled bird is the mystic uma of Indian heraldry. Its golden feathers are set thick with rubies, pearls and emeralds. It was presented to George III by the East India company.

In the great corridor at Windsor is one of the most beautiful caskets imaginable. It is of the finest enamel, with sides of translucent rock crystal, and was brought to England by Catherine of Braganza. In it reposes the Bible which Gen. Gordon used during the siege of Khartoum. Curiously enough, near it lies the Koran belonging to the Mahdi who treacherously compassed the death of the great governor of Khartoum.

The art collections and library of the king might be envied by any millionaire or museum in the world. The royal library at Windsor contains 105,000 volumes, among its treasures being a unique Caxton, which any collector would give £2500. The pictures include 20,000 drawings of the old masters, nearly 1000 miniatures by famous painters, and the finest collection of prints in England.

The king's own taste in pictures is good, but the preference is Landseer to any other artist. The "Mare and the Foal," by Landseer, which hangs in the dining room at Sandringham, is one of his most prized possessions. Two others less valuable but very interesting possessions of his majesty are a hoof of the great race horse Eclipse, and a couple of small bronze cannon, known as "Eugenie" and "Louis Napoleon." The latter were presents from the late emperor of the French, and may be seen in the salon at Sandringham.

The king's stage coach, designed by Sir William Chambers for George III in 1762, is one of the most valuable among the many treasures which have descended to the king. Eight carved palm trees support the roof, which is surmounted by three boys, representing England, Scotland and Ireland. Carved lions ramp at the corners. Beneath the body are four huge Tritons.

Until he came to the throne the king had never even seen the complete regalia of Britain. It was brought to Marlborough house from the tower some months ago for his inspection. The state crown, which contains 2782 diamonds, 277 pearls, 16 sapphires, 11 emeralds and 4 rubies, is worth over £100,000. It is, however, only one of several crowns which have descended to his majesty. The tiara worn by Queen Victoria, and made about 1860, has in it 2673 diamonds and 523 rose brilliants.

There is also the Scotch regalia, which comprises one of the quaintest crowns in existence. Among other jewels it contains nine carbuncles, four jacinths, four amethysts, two white topazes, eleven Scottish and sixty-one Oriental pearls. It weighs over fifty-six ounces. There is also the silver-gilt Scottish scepter presented by Pope Alexander VI to King James IV in 1484, and a sword of state, also a present from Rome. This sword is decorated with the papal tiara and cross keys; also oak leaves and acorns, the badge of Pope Julius II.

Fools make a mock at advertising, but the wise man sayeth not a word, and secureth additional space.

MANSAAS—A daughter has been born to Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Mansaas, of 1813 West Superior street.

DEATHS.

NOLAN—George F. Nolan, formerly of Duluth, died at Los Angeles, Cal., June 14. Mr. Nolan was 35 years of age. For eighteen years he lived in this city. For eight years he was a member of the fire department. In 1899 he resigned from the department on account of ill health and went to Idaho. The change failed to benefit him and he subsequently went to Los Angeles. He is survived by four sisters: Mrs. Charles Tobin, of Buffalo; Mrs. F. H. Powers, and Miss V. E. Nolan, of Los Angeles; Mrs. W. H. Blake, of Two Harbors. He also left one brother, H. W. Nolan, of Fertile, Minn.

GUTCHER—Capt. George William Gutcher, aged 53 years, died last night at the Bethel after an illness of thirteen weeks. Tomorrow the remains will be forwarded to Port Dover, Ontario, for interment. The deceased is survived by a family of five children.

BALL—Ernest E. Ball, son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Ball, of South Thirteenth street (Minnesota Point), died June 14 of diphtheria. Interment at Forest Hill cemetery.

CABLE—Henry W. Cable, aged 38, formerly of Duluth, died June 11, in the Asbury hospital, St. Paul. Mr. Cable was for a number of years connected with the auditing department of the Duluth Street railway.

Notice to Contractors.

Sealed proposals addressed to the Village Council of Grand Rapids, Minnesota, and endorsed, "Proposals for an Electric Light Plant," will be received by the Village Recorder of the said Village of Grand Rapids until 8 o'clock p. m. of Monday, the 7th day of July, 1902, for the construction of an electric light plant for the Village of Grand Rapids, according to the specifications and plans now on file.

Bonds of the village for the sum of $25,000 have been issued and sold by it, at par, for the purpose of raising funds sufficient to purchase, build, establish and control all necessary buildings, machinery, apparatus and material for making, generating and supplying light for public and private use in said village.

Proposals will be received on the following work:

First—The building.

Second—The machinery.

Third—The electric lines.

Bidders may make in addition a proposal for the entire work.

Proposals will be publicly opened and read at a meeting of the Village Council on the evening of July 7th, 1902. The proposal or proposals which are deemed for the best interest of the village will be accepted.

The right is reserved to reject any or all proposals, and to change any item or items in the specifications.

Blank forms of proposals, instructions to bidders and specifications may be obtained and plans may be seen and examined at the office of the Village Recorder of Grand Rapids, Minnesota, and at the office of Edward P. Burch, Consulting Engineer, 1210-1212 Guaranty building, Minneapolis, Minn. All information will be given on application.

TWENTIETH YEAR. LAST EDITION. WEDNESDAY, JUNE 18, 1902. TWO CENTS.

THE CANAL FIGHT IS ON

Mr. Spooner Opens His Batteries on Senate.

Repeatedly Interrupted By Senator Morgan.

Washington, June 18.—When the senate convened today at 11 o'clock Mr. Allison called up the house resolution providing that the conference committee on the sundry civil appropriation bill be authorized to consider and recommend the inclusion of necessary appropriations to carry out the several objects authorized in the omnibus public buildings bill, and it was agreed to.

A bill to restore to the active list of the navy Surgeon John Walton Ross as medical director was passed.

A resolution offered several days ago by Mr. Carmack, directing the civil service committee to inquire into the discharge from the war department of Miss Rebecca J. Taylor (for the publication of articles in newspapers criticising the president) was called up and Mr. Carmack addressed the senate in support of the resolution. He maintained that the civil service law had been flagrantly violated inasmuch as, he said, Miss Taylor had had no charges preferred against her nor had she been afforded opportunity to make answer to any charges. He maintained that a letter inquiring whether Miss Taylor was the author of a certain newspaper article and her admission that she had written the article did not constitute a charge against her within the meaning of the civil service law. He intimated that she was discharged "because she took the wrong side of the Philippine question from the administration's point of view."

At the conclusion of Mr. Carmack's remarks the isthmian canal question was laid before the senate. Mr. Jones (Ark.) believed it to be the duty of every senator to vote for the canal at the best location. Personally, he said, he would not vote for the proposition that would impede the progress of the canal's construction. He was not willing to brush aside the unanimous report of the isthmian commission in favor of the Panama route, unless it be for substantial reasons. He favored the Panama route, but would not vote for it if there was any doubt of the good faith of the offer.

He desired Mr. Spooner, who was about to adress the senate, to explain away the charge that the purpose of adopting the Panama route was to have no canal at all.

In beginning his speech in support of his own proposition, Mr. Spooner said the construction of an isthmian canal was a colossal enterprise and one which, he believed, the American people with notably little division of sentiment desired should be inaugurated and carried forward.

No higher or more solemn duty ever rested upon men in public life than to determine this question rightly.

Mr. Spooner eulogized the isthmian canal commission, declaring that nobody would attempt to impeach its integrity, ability or engineering skill. The problem, he said, was one of infinite engineering complications, and all knew that the object of appointing the commission was to afford congress the data and the expert opinion which would enable it to proceed consecutively and wisely. He declared that the eyes of the American people had not been focussed simply upon the Nicaragua route. They took a large view of the subject. From the time the commission was appointed it had not been a question of a canal (as all favored that), but merely a question of route.

In response to an interruption by Mr. Morgan, reflecting on the action of the Isthmian canal commission in reporting in favor of the Panama route, Mr. Spooner declared that the recommendations in both reports of the commission "were entirely inconsistent." While the Wisconsin senator was pointing out some of the advantages of the Panama route, as indicated by the commission, Mr. Morgan interjected the remark that he was prepared to controvert them.

"I have no doubt," retorted Mr. Spooner, "that the senator is prepared to controvert anything that may be said in favor of the Panama route."

Referring to the action of the commission in recommending the Panama route, Mr. Spooner declared that the commission dealt with the subject the second time, in view of the financial change of conditions—the lowering of the price of the Panama property from $109,000,000 to $40,000,000.

"That was not the only change," suggested Mr. Morgan.

"Yes, it was the only change," replied Mr. Spooner. "The Panama route was still the same route. The advantages of the one over the other still remain the same."

Personally, Mr. Spooner said, he could not disregard the report of the commission and follow the judgment of a senator (Morgan). He paid a cordial tribute to the energy, ability and earnestness with which Mr. Morgan had advocated an Isthmian canal, and add that Mr. Morgan's name would stand in history as the father of the canal.

EXPECT TO GET QUORUM

Morris Chippewa Timber Bill to Come Before Night Session of House and Good Prospect of Passing It.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, June 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Representative Tawney has appointed himself a committee of one to assure a quorum being present at tonight's session of the house when the Morris Chippewa bill will be considered. A quorum is most earnestly desired by the friends of the Morris bill, as Representative Fletcher still insists upon offering his amendment, providing for a system of open bids, instead of the closed bids, as provided by the bill as it passed the senate. The offering of the Fletcher amendment will undoubtedly cause considerable discussion, and should the friends of the bill fail to muster a quorum, the chances are that matters may become so tangled as to defeat the measure. Representatives Morris and Tawney are this morning confident that they can muster a quorum and that this important piece of legislation will go through.

CAR CLEANERS GO ON STRIKE

Chicago, June 18.—Three hundred men employed as Pullman car cleaners have gone on strike for better wages and pay for overtime. The men have organized the United Order of Car Cleaners' union, No. 1, and application has been made to the American Federation of Labor for a charter. The car cleaners now receive $45 a month and demand $50. If a train is late they say they have to wait around the yards to clean the cars when they come in, no matter what the hours may be, and they receive no extra pay for it.

LITTLE RIOT AT PATERSON

New York, June 18.—A meeting of the striking dyers' helpers held at Paterson, N. J., today was followed by a riot in which one policeman and one of the rioters was shot. The wounded policeman, Charles Robinson, received a bullet wound in the arm. The wounded striker was shot in the neck. He was carried away by his comrades and the police have not learned his name. The trouble did not last long and the mob soon was dispersed and quiet restored in the city.

APACHES THREATEN TROUBLE

Washington, June 18.—The war department has transmitted to the interior department information that trouble is threatened among the Apache Indians on the San Carlos reservation, in Arizona, on account of the proposed shuting off of beef and other rations after July 1 next. The action of the war department is based on reports received from Gen. Funston, commanding the department of Arizona, saying that the Indians are very much agitated over the proposed action of the government, and predicting that in case the rations are discontinued, the Indians will take beef and other supplies wherever they can get them in that section, regardless of consequences. Governor Murphy, of Arizona, is in the city, and has received advices along the same line. As a result of these reports, it is understood that the interior department will suspend the order of discontinuance of rations, pending an investigation.

TREATMENT WAS SEVERE

New Light on That Little Affair at Venice.

Officers Were Urged to Plead Drunkenness.

London, June 18.—The text of the findings of the court of inquiry in the case of the United States naval officers imprisoned at Venice in the latter part of April throws a new and important light on the affair. It now appears that the United States consul at Venice, Henry A. Johnson, and a lawyer provided by him for the defense urged the officers to plead that they were violently drunk. This they utterly declined to do. Rear Admiral Arnet S. Crowninshield, commanding the European squadron, in reviewing the findings of the court, severely censured Capt. James H. Dayton, the commander of the Chicago, for not personally attending to the defense of the officers, and comments on the "revolting indignities" suffered by the officers while confined at Venice. Under the circumstances, Admiral Crowninshield holds "a court-martial would be a farce."

Capt. Dayton's court of inquiry minutely traces the movements of the officers of the Chicago on the day of their arrest, and says Lieut. John S. Doddridge and Surgeon Robert E. Ledbetter were "affected by liquor to a noticeable extent, but were not intoxicated in the ordinary meaning of the term, and there is no evidence that the other parties were affected by drinking."

The disturbance arose when Capt. Robert F. Wynne, commanding the marine guard of the Chicago, seeing Doddridge and Ledbetter sitting outside Florians' cafe, "gave a hail, unusual in this place, resembling 'yi-yi-yi.'"

Lieut. Doddridge and Surgeon Ledbetter ran towards Capt. Wynne, upsetting chairs and two small tables. A large crowd and the police immediately surrounded Lieut. Doddridge, who endeavored to explain. "The crowd," the findings continue, "pressed on, shouting and gesticulating, and were not well controlled by the police. The police seized Lieut. Doddridge, and apparently at the same time the crowd attacked him. Lieut. Doddridge was roughly handled by the police, and it required the assistance of citizens to effect his arrest. But there were no means of distinguishing the persons assisting the police from those who were wantonly attacking the prisoner."

Capt. Wynne, Surgeon Ledbetter, Naval Cadet J. C. Kress and Langley, a marine, all forcibly endeavored to help Lieut. Doddridge, retaliating for the assistance of the civilians, but not attacking the police.

"At the station," it is added in the findings of the court, "there was much excitement. The crowd was at first allowed therein and no one appeared to be in high authority. The crowd shouted and gesticulated and the officers made demands and protests. Their treatment in prison was severe and extremely humiliating, but there is no evidence that the prison rules were exceeded."

REAL PIRATES AT CUBA

Foreigners Who Evidently Think Withdrawal of United States Leaves Cubans Easy Prey Are Robbing Smacks Right and Left.

New York, June 18.—The non-arrival of the United States consul general to Havana and the consuls appointed to Matanzas, Cienfuegos and Santiago has resulted in seriously crippling commerce with the United States, says a Herald dispatch from Havana. Since the evacuation of the island by the United States forces, piracy and smuggling along the Cuban coast have increased enormously. The collectors of half a dozen ports are constantly requesting the assistance of revenue cutters. The chief offenders are smacks from Jamaica, Nassau and Barbadoes. They are only two cutters available to guard two thousand miles of coast line. Four others, owned by the government, are at present out of commission.

Six smacks, which were violating the turtle fishery laws, have been captured. Many others are under surveillance and probably will be captured on the arrival of assistance. Several instances are reported of actual piracy.

Many Cuban smacks have been overhauled and robbed of catches of fish, provisions, water, etc., by foreigners, who evidently are under the impression that the withdrawal of the Americans left the Cubans an easy prey.

It is possible that examples will be made of those captured. It has been suggested by customs officials that the cutter service be abolished as a means of economizing, but the revelations of the last fifty-eight hours have demonstrated the absolute necessity of continuing the service, if not increasing it.

MOB LACKED A LEADER

Great Excitement at Vincennes, Ind., Caused By a Mob Which Gathered For the Purpose of Lynching Alleged Rapist.

Vincennes, Ind., June 18.—Great excitement was occasioned early today by the report that a mob was on its way to the jail to secure possession of William Edison, who has been in custody on a charge of assaulting 3-year-old Irma Pfohl, June 1.

For several days there has been talk of lynching, and early this morning a crowd of fifty or seventy-five men and boys assembled, but without apparent leadership.

The police were notified, and to add to the excitement, some one turned in an alarm of fire. This was done, it is believed, to draw a large crowd to the streets to swell the mob on its way to the jail. Half an hour after the first alarm a second one was turned in, but the police prevented any tendency towards violence. The mob finally was dispersed and no actual attempt was made to enter the jail.

Edison has spent fourteen of his 37 years in the reform school, and the feeling is bitter against him.

REBELS TAKE A SEAPORT

Venezuelan Revolutionists Capture La Velade Coro After Five Hours Fighting In Which Government Forces Lost Heavily.

Willemstad, Island of Curacao, Friday, June 13.—News reached here today of an important success of the Venezuelan revolutionists. After five hours' fighting, Wednesday, June 11, 1,000 revolutionists, commanded by Generals Riera, Penaloza and Sierralta, captured La Vela de Coro, a seaport town on the gulf of Coro. Of the government forces twenty-seven men were killed and 128 captured.

Coro, the capital of the state of Falcon, where Vice President Ayala is in command of the troops of the government, is besieged by the revolutionists and, when these advices left La Vela de Coro, was expected to surrender at any moment.

After a revolt of the government troops in the barracks at Ciudad Bolivar, capital of the state of Bolivar, Governor Carria retreated with his followers to Port Tablas, on the Orinoco, where President Castro had sent him 600 men, with instructions to make an attempt to re-occupy Ciudad Bolivar. The plan is here believed to be chimerical. The French cruiser Suchet is at Carupano, Venezuela; the British cruiser Alert is at Bolivar and the Dutch cruiser Konigin Regentes has arrived at La Guayra.

SHERIFF GETS NEGRO AWAY

Wheeling, W. Va., June 18.—Charles Scott, the negro who shot and killed Samuel Jones and Mrs. John Dull last night, and who was threatened with lynching by the Hungarian friends of the murdered woman, was spirited away by the sheriff during the night. The sheriff, accompanied by twelve guards, arrived at Connorsville, the scene of the crime, shortly after midnight. The guards were stationed at the entrance to the cabin containing Scott, and the mob was driven back, still muttering threats against the negro.

At 2 o'clock, the husband of the murdered woman, aided by the mob moved on the cabin and finally broke in the door, but the guards had secreted Scott. They got him out through the cellar unobserved and managed to get him to Steubenville, where he was safely placed in jail.

TO VISIT THE FOLKS

Old Man Returns After Fifty-Seven Years Absence.

Was Supposed to Have Been Murdered By Trappers.

Found But One Surviving Relative, a Brother, Alive.

Chicago, June 18.—Abraham Burns, aged 77 years, who disappeared from his home fifty-seven years ago and was thought to have been murdered in a trappers' feud, has returned to Hammond, Ind., "to visit his folks," as he said. The old man found that his only surviving relative was a brother, Joseph Burns, two years his junior.

It was not until the aged men had recalled confidences of their boyhood that either was satisfied of their relationship. Then they went into the house together and announced to all who called that they "guessed they'd live together hereafter."

Back in the '40s the Burns brothers were trappers in the Calumet lake region and after a fight among a number of other trappers the older brother disappeared. He was soupposed to have been killed and his body hidden. The parents died with grief, as did other members of the family. Abraham found his way out West and into the mountains of Idaho, where according to his story he lived as a hermit miner. Once he made his way by foot to San Francisco, but he soon returned to his mountain life.

The old man had never ridden on a railroad train until he commenced his journey home.

AIRSHIPS.

Rules and Regulations Concerning Tournament Adopted.

St. Louis, June 18.—Rules and regulations to govern the selection and work of the juries of award at the exposition and the rules of the airship tournament have been adopted by the exposition executive committee.

A copy of the rules to control the action of juries of award was forwarded to President Carter of the national commission for approval of the body, after which the scope of the juries will be promulgated. The rules governing the airship tournament were delivered to the Director of Exhibits Skiff, who will make them up in a few days.

In connection with the airship tournament, the executive committee decided to offer additional prizes to be given for motors for airships or dirigible balloons.

EXCITEMENT

At Ashland Over Brutal Treatment of a Little Girl.

Ashland, Wis., June 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Gertrude Saunders, a 7-year-old daughter of R. E. Saunders, proprietor of the Northern Wisconsin Boiler works and foundry, who lives at 209 Thirteenth avenue east, was criminally assaulted yesterday afternoon about 2 o'clock, by an unknown man. The little girl says he is tall and dark and she could identify him. The man met Gertrude near the Singer office on Second street and gave her a nickel to go with him. He took her to the convent, where she is attending school, and got into the building unnoticed by any one, and choked her to insensibility. She still bears the finger marks on her throat. The girl is in a critical condition, and if the unknown be caught there may be serious trouble ahead for him, as the people are much excited over the affair.

ENDOWMENT INCREASED.

Pennsylvania U. Hears Good News From Wharton.

Philadelphia, June 18.—During the 146th annual commencement exercises of the University of Pennsylvania today, Provost Harrison announced that Joseph Wharton, founder of the Wharton school of finance and economics at the university, had increased his endowment to the school from $200,000 to $500,000. The announcement came as a complete surprise to the large gathering and was greeted with cheers.

NOTHING FURTHER.

Major Waller Declines to Discuss Army Matters.

Chicago, June 18.—Maj. Lyttleton W. T. Waller of the United States marine corps, who was recently court-martialed for carrying out the "kill" order of Gen. Smith in the Philippines, passed through this city early today on his way to the Brooklyn navy yard. With Maj. Waller was a detachment of 298 marines. The party stayed over only long enough to have their cars inspected. Maj. Waller refused further to discuss any army matters.

GARRIGAN INSTALLED.

Sioux City, Iowa, June 18.—Rt. Rev. P. J. Garrigan was installed as bishop of the Cathedral see of Sioux City this morning at St. Marys cathedral. The installation exercises took place at the cathedral, being witnessed by a great throng. A reception followed the installation and then came a banquet to the visiting clergy, with Bishop Garrigan and Archbishop Kene as guests of honor.

QUICK CALL TO MINERS

Convention to Be Held at Earliest Moment.

May Decide to Call Out the Soft Coal Miners.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 18.—The long expected call for a special national convention of United Mine Workers of America was issued today by National President Mitchell at strike headquarters to be held at Indianapolis at the earliest possible date. The date of the convention will be fixed by W. B. Wilson, national secretary at Indianapolis, who has charge of the machinery by which a convention is arranged. The convention will be held for the purpose of discussing the advisability of involving all the soft coal miners in the United States in the struggle now going on in the anthracite coal fields.

Under the constitution of the union, five districts must request action before the national president can issue a call for a national convention. The five districts that applied for this convention were the three anthracite districts, the Michigan and West Virginia districts, where a strike is now on. President Mitchell has had the consent of the five districts for some time, but for some reason did not see fit to issue the call until today. The request for the convention was made at Hazelton four weeks ago last Friday.

President Mitchell was extremely uncommunicative as to what the probable action of the convention might be. If the delegates should decide to inaugurate a national suspension of coal mining everybody at strike headquarters believe it would have a disastrous effect on the industries of the country. The supply of coal would become so short that large and small industrial establishments would be compelled to suspend operations and many railroads also would seriously suffer.

There are approximately about 450,000 coal miners in the United States. Of these about 350,000, Mr. Mitchell says, are affiliated with the union, and an additional 50,000 comply with legislation of the miners' union. It is utterly impossible at this distance to forecast what the national gathering will do, because not one delegate has yet been elected. The anthracite delegates will go into the convention with 142,000 striking hard coal miners at their back for a general strike. The West Virginia delegates will have approximately 25,000 behind them for a strike, and in Michigan, where the union has been having trouble, the delegates also will be instructed for a national suspension. Central Pennsylvania will contribute a certain number of delegates who will want a general strike, as also will Kentucky. It remains for western Pennsylvania, Indiana, Ohio, Illinois and Iowa to offset this, as it is known that miners in these sections are not very enthusiastic for a general stoppage of coal production.

There is a strong belief here that President Mitchell has some plan to submit to the delegates, and this belief is strengthened by the fact that he delayed the call so long. He had a conference with President Gilday of the Central Pennsylvania bituminous district on Sunday, and has been in communication with other soft coal leaders. The great barrier to be overcome in the campaign for a national suspension is the yearly wage scale agreement that many of the soft coal miners have with the companies. These agreements are looked upon as contracts, and a large percentage of miners in the West are rather averse to breaking them. The principal bone of contention in the anthracite region is for a yearly wage agreement. Those who are opposed to a general strike use the argument that if the soft coal miners break these contracts and go on strike to help the anthracite men, they would be losing in the West what the hard coal miners are fighting for in the East. Some of the national leaders who have discussed the subject with the Associated Press correspondent say that if the life of the organization was in danger, the convention would not hesitate a moment to call for a general strike.

It is not improbable that the conservative men in the convention will be able to prevent a general suspension and carry through the convention some sort of a compromise.

One plan that is talked of is to have only the Central Pennsylvania and West Virginia miners help the anthracite workers, and another plan is to have all the soft coal miners work only a certain number of days each week. Failing to gain anything by either of these two moves, then, as a final card, stop the production altogether. All the coal that is now coming east is from Central Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Maryland. A delegation of Illinois leaders will be here tomorrow. It is said they come merely to talk over a local difficulty in Illinois. There will be about 1000 delegates in the convention. Each union will have one vote for each 100 members or fraction of that number, and an additional vote for each majority fraction. Ten delegates can be sent to the convention, yet the delegation may have but one vote among them. National Secretary Wilson has already started to send out the call for the convention. The call is sent direct to every local union, and does not first go through the district offices.

An effort was made to get an idea from Mr. Mitchell when the convention would be held, but he positively refused to make any guess. He said Mr. Wilson would be the one to announce that.

The big lace mill which was tied up yesterday because the management would not discharge several girls whose relatives are still at work in the mines did not resume operations today. General Manager Doran said the firm has been much annoped of late by the strikers insisting upon the discharge of certain employes on account of the coal strike, and that the company is now going to make an issue of it and fight it out. The girls whose dismissal is demanded by the Lacemakers' union, he said, will not be discharged.

ASALVADOREAN FRENZY

People of the Little Republic Declare a Recent Decision of the Washington Court of Arbitration a Scandal and a Crime.

New Orleans, June 18.—The latest news from the republic of Salvador, via Guatemala, indicates a state of frenzy aroused by the recent decision of the Washington court of arbitration in the Burrell case. The president of the little republic and most of the members of the national assembly have signed a pronunciamento to the people, declaring that the decision of the court was a scandal and a crime; that the judges were bribed; that the Salvadorean representatives were treated in a scandalous fashion, and that Dr. Zaldivar, one of the Salvadorean representatives, was receant to his trust, and is now in Europe to escape the results of his actions.

LIBER AL ADVANCE IN WAGES

Pittsburg, June 18.—Jones & Laughlins, iron and steel manufacturers, have voluntarily advanced the wages of all their employes except the tonnage men. The increase affects over 8000 men and the increase will average 10 per cent. Laborers who were paid $1.35 will, in the future, receive $1.50 a day.

The furnace employes of the Carnegie Steel company have been advanced during the present week and it is understood that all of the day laborers in the mills of this company will be located in a similar manner to those employed by the Jones and Laughlins, limited. The advances have been wholly on account of the general prosperous condition of the steel trade and the increased earning power of the plants.

DANISH ANTI-SALE AGITATION

Copenhagen, June 18.—The opponents of the sale of the Danish West Indies to the United States are again active, but privately they admit that they are meeting with little success. The response to the appeal for funds to aid in the movement in opposition to the sale was decidedly weak. The meetings are held secretly, but beyond a few politicians they have mostly been attended by business men interested in the proposed steamship line to the island of St. Thomas. The government discountenances the anti-sale agitation. The Danish West Indies treaty will be a prominent issue of the campaign preceding the elections to the landsthing. The premier, Dr. Deuitzer, starts on a speech-making tour next week.

ST. PAUL CHURCH SCORCHED

St. Paul, June 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Atlantic Congregational church, Bates avenue and Conway street, was partially consumed by fire at 5 o'clock this morning. The loss is placed at $2,500. The fire must have originated in a little pantry in the center of the basement next to the furnace. The cause is unknown. There has been no fire in the church since Sunday. The church carried $5,000 insurance.

The Colonial Tie

Is a new refreshing fashion in shoes for women—surprisingly artistic, with an old "Knickerbocker" quaintness, in patent leather or ideal kid, welted soles, steeple and military heels. By means of an ingenious, practical appliance, they button beneath the wide tongue, insuring firm inclosure of the heels. They are by far the smartest and most unique footwear that has been introduced for years. Ornamented with patent buckles. $1.50, $2.50, $3.50, $5.00 is about the price range. Very few ladies will live through the summer without Colonial Ties.

Shipments of Lumber Do Not Show Much Decrease As Yet.

The effect of the withdrawal of a large number of the vessels from the lumber trade has not yet affected the movement as much as might be supposed, according to the figures at the custom office of the June shipments of lumber up to date. With the month but a few days over half gone, the shipments figure nearly up to about half the amount of lumber shipped during the month of May, or during the month of June in 1901.

Up to date there have been thirty-three cargoes of lumber from the port of Duluth, aggregating 22,367,000 feet. Last month the amount of lumber moved down the lake was 46,955,000 feet, or the largest amount ever shipped from this port in previous months of may. The June shipments a year ago were but 43,856,000 feet, and if the movement continues but steady at the present rate the shipments this month will be very nearly as heavy, if not equal to those a year ago this month.

There has not been a single lath shipment thus far this month, and only one shingle shipment. This would not go to show that the reported easier condition of the shingle and lath market has yet affected the head of the lakes market. In June, 1901, the lath shipments were 1,500,000 and the shingles 5,609,000.

SESSION IS OPENED

Annual Convocation of Episcopal Missionary District of Duluth.

Bishop Morrison Speaks Eloquently of Past Year's Dead.

List of Delegates Present Women's Auxiliary Meeting Tomorrow.

The seventh annual convocation of the Episcopal missionary district of Duluth was opened this morning at St. Paul's church at 10 o'clock. Holy communion was administered by Bishop J. D. Morrison. Afterward, in a short address, he spoke feelingly of prominent members of the clergy and laity who have been called to their reward during the past year. He said in part:

"Since last we assembled in convocation the church has been bereaved of children who faithfully served in the lot where the providence of God had assigned them, and whose names we reverently recite as belonging, we humbly believe, to that honor roll which will endure for ever."

He then spoke of the Rt. Rev. Littlejohn, D.D., the bishop of Long Island, who died last August, characterizing him as a scholar of broad learning and a preacher of eloquence and power.

"Rt. Rev. Henry B. Whipple, D.D., LL.D., died Sept. 16, 1901, aged 78 years. No bishop was better known at home or abroad than Bishop Whipple of Minnesota. No representative of the church was more welcome in pulpit or on platform, and none could plead the cause of missions with more telling effect. He was the peer of any of his brothers in the episcopate in the power to work and plan on and build, and few leaders were his equals in the ability to guide and control his fellow men. Long will he be remembered in Minnesota as the pioneer bishop who founded the splendid educational institutions of Faribault, who built up from nothing the strong diocese in the southern portion of the state, and carried forward the Indian work which Breck had begun. As prelate and as patriot we will remember Henry Benjamin Whipple with reverent affection while the commonwealth endures."

He spoke feelingly of Rev. Alexander Burgess, D.D., LL.D., who died last fall, aged 81. Rt. Rev. John Franklin Spalding, bishop of Colorado, who died last April, was also referred to.

"The district of Duluth has been sorely afflicted by the loss of Rev. James F. Hamilton, D.D., a member of the standing committee and rector of the Church of the Good Samaritan, of Sauk Center. The loss of Rev. Emmegahbowh at White Earth was felt keenly by the church. He was forced to retire in 1897, but up to that time he had always been one of the most faithful workers among his people.

"The Hon. D. A. Dickinson, chancellor of the missionary district of Duluth, trustee of the diocese of Duluth and senior warden of St. Paul's church, after a long and distressing illness, died in January, 1902. To the district of Duluth and the parish of which he was warden the loss is a heavy one. Judge Dickinson was one of the men who help to make a state, a city, a community or a parish, strong and pure. Not only was he a man of such talent as a jurist that he had been called to serve in ther supreme court of the state, a position which he not only occupied, but filled with honor to himself and credit to the commonwealth, but to his eminent legal ability he added the grace and virtue of an outspoken Christian character ready and willing to serve at the feet of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. His pastor found him ever ready to hold up his hands in everything that would work for the welfare and prosperity of the parish, and in the business affairs of the district and convocation I wish to bear grateful testimony to the watchful vigilance, the cautious, wise conservatism, and the unfailing courtesy of the first chancellor of the diocese of Duluth.

"The memory of the just is blessed, and its fragrance will endure. I must also make mention of the loss sustained among the daughters of the church. The parish of St. Paul and Duluth was afflicted by the sudden death of the president of the Ladies' guild, Mrs. W. B. Cross. In the parish of St. John's, St. Cloud, I now miss the face of Mrs. Wakeman."

After speaking of others who have passed away during the year, Bishop Morrison added the name of President McKinley, "who adorned the high office which he administered so well with the graces of a Christian character and with refreshments this evening, who crowned a life of usefulness and virtue with a death serene and hopeful, in humble submission to the sovereign will of God."

After Bishop Morrison's memorial review, the convocation came to order with the bishop in the chair. Dr. J. E. Bowers was re-elected secretary, and the various reports of the committees and officers took up the time of the members till noon, when they adjourned till 2 o'clock.

At 2 o'clock the convocation resumed its session and listened to the annual address by Bishop Morrison. Routine matters occupied the remainder of the day. This evening there will be held a missionary meeting at which ten-minute speeches will be delivered by visiting clergymen.

About fifty clergymen and lay delegates were present, as follows:

J. E. Almfield, Lake Park; Venerable T. H. Appleby, D. D., LL. D., Duluth; F. M. Bacon, Royalton; George W. Barnes, Alexandria; L. I. Belden, Duluth; J. K. Burleson, Grand Forks, N. D.; F. C. Coolbaugh, Cloquet; Charles E. Farrar, Brainerd; F. M. Garlond, Sauk Center; H. M. Green, Crookston; M. Hart, Beaulieu; T. C. Hudson, New Papnesville; E. C. Johnson, Lakeview; E. C. Kah-o-sed, Onigum Leech Lake reservation; J. M. Maggrah, Red Lake; A. R. Mitchell, Hallock; R. J. Mooney, Glenwood; Lewis Manypenny, White Earth; George Morjou, Cass Lake; J. C. Munson, Detroit, Minn.; Spenser Murphy, Wadena; H. F. Parshall, St. Cloud; Lewis Rietz, Duluth; A. W. Ryan, LL. D.,; Duluth; Fred Smith, White Earth; George Smith, Pine Point; K. S. Tottermann, Duluth; Joseph Wakazvo, Bend of Alver; William Walton, Little Falls; William Watson, St. Vincent; Herbert S. Webster, Moorhead; A. O. Worthing, Fergus Falls; Charles T. Wright, Leech Lake reservation.

Lay delegates—J. J. Bradley, Staples; J. X. Martin, Royalton; G. L. Hargraves, Duluth; Frank Tolman, George Putney, New Paynesville; William Kelly, R. D. Lert, Cloquet; James Campbell, St. Vincent; J. C. Small, Brainerd; J. W. P. James, St. Cloud; William H. Davy, B. T. Mitchell, Moorhead; J. A. Brown, Fergus Falls; F. W. Paine, J. E. Bowers and W. J. Johnson, Duluth.

NEW TOWN.

A new town, 69-26, was opened for entry at the local land office today, but there was few entries made. The town is located in a country watered by the Big Fork river. The state gets about ten or twelve thousand acres of the new town, under the swamp land laws. Tomorrow the town of 62-26 will be opened. This town is in a well timbered section at the edge of the Bowstring country. There are already a number of settlers there and numerous applications have been made under the timber and stone act.

A plat of 65-17 has been received at the local land office and the town will be opened some time during the month of August.

WILL BE LIND.

Ray W. Jones Thinks He Will Be Democratic Candidate.

Ray W. Jones, Hennepin county's candidate for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor, arrived at the Spalding on an early afternoon train. He will attend the banquet of the West Duluth Republican club which will be held this evening. Governor Van Sant will arrive at 4 o'clock for the same purpose, and Clerk of the Supreme Court Dar S. Reese is expected on a late afternoon or early evening train. Mr. Jones said this afternoon that he had come to Duluth for the purpose of meeting the Republicans of this county, and he thought the West Duluth banquet would afford a good opportunity. He added that Representative Mallory was a good friend of his, and he felt a personal interest in the affair because of Mr. Mallory's connection with it.

"I don't hear of any decided opposition to my candidacy for lieutenant governor," continued Mr. Jones. "I have good reason to believe that my prospects are excellent for winning the nomination. I believe that Governor Van Sant will be renominated by acclamation.

"As to the rest of the ticket, I have not interested myself. I presume there will be quite a fight for the nomination for state auditor between Odin Halden, of Duluth, Deputy Auditor Iverson and J. F. Jacobson, of Lac qui Parle county. As far as Hennepin county is concerned, there is a large Scandinavian population there, and as all the three candidates for the nomination are Scandinavians all have personal friends in the party there, which divides the strength somewhat in that county. Mr. Halden is a good fellow, very popular, and I like him very much. However, as I said before I know nothing about others' fights except my own.

"I expect that John Lind will be the candidate of the Democrats for governor, I believe, however, that no matter who is nominated by the opposition there will be nothing but Republican success at the polls in such times as these."

Mr. Jones was reticent about the Ames-Gardner trouble about Minneapolis. "I believe in the Republicans washing their own dirty linen," said he, "and they seem to be doing it pretty effectually."

IN FACE OF DEATH

Royal S. Lane Could Speak and Hear As Well As Anyone.

Persisted In Shamming Through His Death Struggle.

Father Arrives and Is Astonished at His Deception.

Royal S. Lane, who accidentally shot himself last Friday and died in St. Mary's hospital Monday night, was neither deaf nor dumb.

He played the role of a mute successfully even during the hours of pain and agony when he knew that there was no hope of his recovery.

The case is one of the most remarkable that has come to the attention of the Duluth police.

E. L. Lane, father of the dead boy, arrived from Canistio, N. Y., this morning and was astonished when told that his son could neither speak nor hear. He knew that the boy was in the habit of playing off while in his wanderings about the country in order to make a living out of his supposed affliction, but that he would keep up the deception under extreme pain and in the face of death, was more than he could at first believe.

The dead boy was about 18 years of age. He was the brightest member of the school he attended in Canistio and had never the slightest trouble in hearing or speaking. When 14 years of age he ran away from home. His father tried unceasingly to locate him.

One day a school mate met him in Muscatine, Iowa, and going up to him expressed himself pleasantly surprised at the meeting. Young Lane played the mute act, claiming that he never saw the school mate before and that he had been unable to speak or hear for four years.

Despite the deception he was taken back to his home, but after staying there a short time and talking as plainly as any person, he again ran away.

Not long ago a merchant in Canistio received $5 from him to be applied on a bill. In the letter accompanying the money Lane said that he never felt better in his life and had not been sick since leaving home.

The next the father heard was when the local authorities notified him of the son's death.

Lane accidentally shot himself last Friday night in a West Superior street lodging house. The bullet passed through the abdomen and the boy suffered the most intense pain until death relieved the suffering late Monday night.

During the periods of most intense pain he would write on a piece of paper urging the nurses to give him something to put him to sleep to escape the agony, but he never spoke a word, though there is now now question but that he could have talked as easily as a person under like conditions.

At the hospital he informed the authorities at first that his home was in Minneapolis and that he was an orphan. Later he made a confession, telling his real name and home of his parents, but still deceiving the authorities in regard to his not being a deaf and dumb man.

TEN BOATS.

It is reported from a reliable source that the Quebec Transportation line, in which Capt. A. B. Wolvin, of this city, is interested, is to build ten more vessels to put on the run between the head of the lakes and Quebec.

The rumor originated during this morning, but it has been impossible to locate Capt. Wolvin and secure a confirmation of the story from him.

The report comes from an apparently reliable source, however, and it is further reported that several of the vessels are to be built at the head of the lake.

The vessels would be of Welland canal size, of course, and would be speedy and up-to-date.

SCHIFFMAN

Will Not Be Reappointed State Oil Inspector.

Washington, June 18.—One of the bits of information which Governor Van Sant left while in Washington was that he could hardly see his way to the reappointment of Fred Schiffman of St. Paul as state oil inspector.

He said that he saw no necessity of giving such a good-paying office to a man who had opposed him so strongly and was out of touch with his administration.

It is announced by those who are in the governor's confidence that a Hennepin county man will be given this place. The man has been selected, but his name has not yet been made public.

HER STORY IS HEARD

Kathrina Mueller Tells of Her Marriage to Johann Mueller.

Introduces a Photograph, a Brooch and a Letter.

Judge Cant Rules Against Important Point Raised.

Kathrina Mueller, the alleged widow of the late Johann Mueller, was on the witness stand in the Mueller case most of this morning. She was very quiet compared with what she has been, and with what was expected from her when the case came to trial, though the attorneys experienced great difficulty in keeping her down to answering the questions put to her. She evinced a tendency to talk without ceasing most of the time, and her examination was slow work.

The plaintiffs rested their case yesterday afternoon, and the defendants then moved to dismiss the case because the plaintiffs had not shown sufficient evidence to constitute a cause of action. This motion was denied by Judge Cant.

Judge Cant also overruled the objection to the mortgages, based on the claims that the acknowledgment of the deputy sheriff on the certificates of foreclosure sale made them invalid. He said that he thought that the matter ought to go to the supreme court, and that the district court ought not to make a ruling that would cause so much confusion as this would if most of the sheriff's certificates outstanding were declared to be invalid. Therefore he overruled the objection and received the mortgages. His remarks were taken by attorneys as intimating a belief that there might be something to the objection.

The defense gave notice that it would raise the point on the Schweitzer deed that it was a will, in effect, instead of a deed, and as such could not be reformed.

This morning R. R. Briggs, one of Mrs. Mueller's attorneys, announced dramatically that he would call the widow of Johann Mueller.

"I move that that be stricken out," said George P. Knowles, who represents another set of heirs, "until it is officially determined whether she is the widow or not."

Mrs. Mueller, a German woman of 60 years, took the stand. An attempt was made to get along without the use of an interpreter, but Mrs. Mueller combined English and German so liberally in her talk that it was found impossible to get along that way, so Carl J. Ulrich, of the high school faculty, was called as an interpreter, after which the examination proceeded more smoothly, though it kept the attorneys busy to confine the witness to answering the questions.

She said that she was in 1842 in the grand duchy of Baden, Germany. She married Johann Mueller, a stone mason, in 1864, and after that lived three years with Mueller's father, who was an iron worer. She had been well acquainted with Mueller for about two years and a half before their marriage, though they were both natives of the same village. Mueller had two sisters, Agatha and Adelaide, and one brother.

A letter was introduced which Mueller had written her from Constance, while hew as in the army, Feb. 1, 1864. It accompanied a brooch bearing his picture, and both were introduced in evidence. The attorneys gathered about and examined the exhibits minutely. They looked at the ink, the paper, the writing, the date, the water-mark in the paper, and finally the exhibits were admitted in evidence. Mrs. Mueller also produced a picture of herself and Mueller taken six weeks before he went into the army, which was before they were married. In the picture they are a handsome couple, in their old-fashioned clothing. The picture on the brooch and the other were evidently of the same man. At that time the witness said she was working as a servant in Baden-Baden. She said her husband was away in the army only five or six weeks, and did not take part in any battles.

When Mrs. Mueller was handed the brooch to examine and identify it, she put it away, and when it was called for she refused to produce it again. She was willing to give up the other picture, which she said she paid for herself, but she would not return the brooch, which her husband had given her. Finally, when the attorneys had failed, Judge Cant spoke to her, and she immediately handed it over. Apparently she did not understand that the exhibits would be returned to her.

She said she had no other letters save the one introduced in evidence, which she had saved because it came with the brooch.

A notebook kept by her husband while he was in the army was also introduced. She said she got that out of a drawer containing her husband's papers, when they moved to this country. It contained three signatures of her husband, which were introduced in evidence.

Asked if she had a marriage certificate, she said she had not, but she had what was just as good, she said. She produced a certified copy made by the custodian of the records where she was married. Mr. Briggs said that he would not introduce this until he had examined it to see whether it was admissible as evidence under the statutes.

Mrs. Mueller said she and Johann Mueller had had six children, four born in Germany and two in Detroit, Mich.

She was still on the stand at noon. Several times this morning, when she mentioned the time when she was married and looked at her husband's picture, she burst into tears.

SALE OF LOTS.

E. P. Alexander is selling at auction on the second floor of the Torrey building today a large lot of property in Harrison's disivision belonging to the Harrison estate. This forenoon about a dozen parcels were sold. There was a very good attendance, chiefly of real estate men. W. M. Prindle and T. S. Wood were among the frequent buyers.

Mr. Wood bought a lot adjoining but one the grounds of F. A. Patrick's home on the hill at the East End. Mr. Wood owns the lot between the one referred to and Mr. Patrick's. He paid $1500 for his purchase today, which was the highest price bid up to that time.

Frank Buell bought a parcel of eight fractional lots on the lake shore, below the Duluth & Iron Range tracks for $250. The property is in the block between Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth avenues west.

For the most part the lots which are on ungraded streets sold for $250 to $300 each.

BOYCOTT.

The Retail Grocers' association of Duluth has declared a boycott on the firm of Epping & Osman. The boycott went went into effect yesterday morning and was still on this afternoon.

The first intimation that the grocery firm claims to have had of the boycott was yesterday morning when the commission houses of the city refused to let them have any goods, stating frankly that the Retail Grocers' association had declared a boycott and that the wholesale houses could not afford to go against the request of the association.

The boycott is just as effective if the firm tries to get its supplies from any wholesale house in St. Paul, Minneapolis or from Wisconsin, for the grocers are well organized in the Twin Cities and in Wisconsin.

The boycott against Epping & Osman is said to have been made because of the claim that the firm failed to live up to the price list established by the Retail Grocers' association and advertised the sale of sugar when the association had taken action expressly against it.

Epping & Osman claim that they never received a notification from the association that the advertising of sugar was prohibited. At the meeting held last evening it was decided to raise the boycott if the firm would pay a fine of $10 and agree not to repeat the alleged offense in the future. The firm has refused to pay the fine.

Mr. Epping said this morning, regarding the situation: "The matter stands just as it did yesterday. The boycott is still on and the wholesalers refuse to let us have any goods. The firm is holding out, however, and has not yet made any settlement with the association."

ROBBERS.

Daisy Stover's home, at 210 St. Croix avenue, was the scene of a palpitating sensation at 2:30 this morning.

Officer Gleason saw three men on the roof of the building, evidently trying to make connections with a second story window. Some person in the neighborhood informed the officer that the men had planned to rob a man sleeping in the room they were trying to enter.

The policeman managed to get one of the trio, but the other two disappeared. As he was leaving the premises one man reappeared on the roof and began throwing stones at the officer. A piece of brick hit Gleason in the mouth.

About that time a well dressed stranger appeared on the scene, and the officer, as was his right, called on the stranger to hold the prisoner while he went back after the man that was throwing the stones.

The stone thrower again disappeared from the roof when the officer reached it, and Gleason going back to the point where he left the prisoner could find no trace of him or the stranger in whose custody he was placed. The supposition is that the well dressed stranger was the third man that was first seen on the roof.

A good description of him was obtained and the police are making a thorough search for him today.

GO WAY BACK

Or Feed So You Can Keep Up.

People must be well fed in this world if they are expected to do good work. A carpenter with poor tools must take less wages and handle the poor jobs. So in life, the person with a weak, badly nourished body must get out of the way for the strong ones.

A school teacher writes from Vermont. She had been compelled to take a little, backwoods school for small wages because she had not the strength to conduct a better school.

"Small appetite and poor digestion kept me weak. I had been compelled to rest at the noon hour and shut myself away from all company morning and night. In this way only could I work, up to about a year ago, when a lady visiting here from California led me to share a dish of Grape-Nuts with her. During the winter I ate occasionally of the food, always with good results.

"Last July it was necessary for me to attend the summer school for teachers. Being poor in purse and sick in body, I could not pay the expense of boarding in a big place, so I rented a room and boarded myself. Grape-Nuts and cream tasted good, and I lived almost exclusively on the food.

"Gradually, to my surprise, toward the close of the second week the sort of mental haze that had been about me for a long time broke away and I grasped the thought presented with a clearness I had not known for a long time.

"I came back to my school with better health and memory than I have known for twenty years, and now, while at work, I repeat I have better nerve and brain power and better digestion than I have had before in twenty years."

There is a reason for this. Grape-Nuts Food is a sure, steady brain builder. It is made for that purpose, and anyone can prove it by use. Name given by Postum company, Battle Creek, Mich.

A booklet of excellent recipes in each package of Grape-Nuts.

SAILOR BOY.

George M. Smith has returned from a trip to the Pacific coast, embracing a drive up in the mountains to the edge of Yosemite park. He was one of a party of six who went up for a drive through part of the mountains and some sport in the mountain trout streams. Mr. Smith says he had good luck with the trout, which are much like the Duluth brook trout.

Up in the mountains, he ran across an old merchant and dealer in gold properties who was a companion in arms with his dead brother and Franklin Paine, of this city. These three and Theodore B. Kelley slept under the same blanket many times and chummed it through the civil war as members of Company L, First Minnesota. The old fellow—Joseph Chamberlain by name—had gone to California right after the close of the war and had been there ever since. He had completely lost sight of all his old chums. His emotion when he learned that Mr. Smith was a brother of his dear friend of war times and that he knew Mr. Paine was touching. It also transpired that with Mr. Smith was his brother, who was named after the fourth member of the quartet, Theodore Kelley, at the request of the soldier brother.

At Auburn, California, Mr. Smith ran across B. F. Hartley, a former resident of Brainerd, well known to old-time Duluthians, and a brother of G. G. Hartley, and also Charles T. and George D. Greenfield, formerly of this city.

AFTER EVIDENCE.

W. D. Beslow, chief of the Mesaba and Vermilion Range detective agency, was a caller at police headquarters this afternoon for the purpose of securing testimony from two Italians arrested yesterday at the request of Hibbing authorities.

The two men are wanted there for jumping a beer and board bill and in retaliation they threaten to have their former landlord arrested for conducting a "speak easy."

Mr. Beslow claims to represent an organization of saloon men in the range towns that is waging an energetic war on men that run liquor joints without a license. He created quite a sensation throughout the county some time ago by giving out a statement that there were 86 blind pigs in the range towns as compared with 240 licensed saloons.

AT WEST DULUTH

The committees of the West Duluth Republican club have been hard at work all day preparing the Great Eastern hall for the annual banquet of the club, which will occur this evening. The banquet will be a red letter occasion for the Republicans of this end of the city, and they expect to outdo any previous attempts along the line in this city. The committees wish it distinctly understood that the banquet will begin at 6 o'clock sharp. This comparatively early hour has been set for the reason that at the previous banquets the remarks of the last speakers have been cut short because of the lateness of the hour.

The Republican club has a splendid list of speakers, and wishes to give ample time to each toast. It is not expected that there will be a disappointment in the attendance of a single one of the speakers, in fact assurances have been received indicating that all will be on hand.

Hon. George J. Mallory will act as toastmaster, and toasts will be responded to by Governor S. R. Van Sant, Dar F. Reese, clerk of state supreme court; Ray W. Jones, candidate for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor; J. Adam Bede, candidate for congressional honors, and Joseph B. Cotton. Mr. Mallory has received word from several of the members of the state legislature, from below, denoting their intention of being here this evening. The only difficulty thus far encountered is the fact that there are not tickets enough. The demand has been large, and the committee could easily have placed 150 more were there room for the guests in the hall.

Lanner's orchestra will play during the banquet, the musicians' stand having been erected in the west end of the hall. The speakers's table has been arranged on the stage, and long tables have been placed lengthwise of the hall so that every guest will have full view of the speakers without turning around in their seats.

SENT IT BACK.

Thief Returns Certificate and Pocketbook With Advice.

The police of this city and Ashland are working on a case of burglary that occurred in this end of the city about two weeks ago, that has some unique features. The victim is one of the well-known young lady school teachers, whose name has been withheld from publication for various reasons. A pocketbook, containing $15 in money and a certificate of deposit in one of the local banks for $150, was taken from her room in a boarding house. Nothing further was heard from it until a few days ago, when she received a letter, postmarked Ashland. Inside was her certificate of deposit and the following note:

"Miss ——

"Inclosed find certificate. I send it back because I can't use it. Take better care of your pocketbook in the future.

"A CROOK."

The Ashland police department has been notified of the letter, but no clue has been found to the thief.

The young lady is very much pleased to get back her certificate of deposit, and will take that part of the advice given by the thief relating to the care of her pocketbook in the future.

ONE WAS ENOUGH.

A good story is going the rounds at West Duluth on one of the popular Central avenue barbers. It is said that the young man has been in the habit of going to a hospital in the city, where one of his customers is confined as a result of an injury and shaving him. The operation was usually performed Fridays. Yesterday the wife of the man in the hospital called at the barber shop and told the young man that he had better call at the hospital to do the shaving Thursday afternoon, for the reason that her husband would have his leg amputated Friday, and she did not think he could undergo both operations. There were a number of men in the shop when the request was made and they have since been making life a burden for the barber.

ALWAYS SOMETHING NEW.

Chief of Police O. J. Simonds of Scanlon Minn., was a business caller here today. Chief Simonds says that there is something new going on at the lumber town all the time, that he never goes back there but he finds a new house built during his absence. As Mr. Simonds lived a long time in West Duluth, his friends will not question his veracity, but make up their minds that Scanlon is a hustling place.

He says that the big Brooks-Scanlon mill is running steadily day and night, but that it has not yet been pushed to its full capacity. The work of grading the logging road was hindered several days ago by the rains, but has recommenced. The company has a steam shovel at work near Scanlon, and the road is being ballasted up as fast as possible.

TAKE CEMETERY FLOWERS.

Complaint has been made by the sexton of the Oneota cemetery of the practice of children in going to the cemetery and taking flowers from the graves. It is regarded as an act of thoughtlessness on the part of the children, but the sexton believes that the parents should know that it is being done and should put a stop to it. A number of graves have been robbed of flowers already this season, but as a rule the practice has not been so general as during the berry season, when a great many young people pass through the cemetery.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

There will be a "grubfest" at the Third Swedish Baptist church Thursday evening. Addresses will be made by Professor Ostergren and Rev. K. A. Lundin, pastor of the First Swedish church. P. J. Borgstrom will recite. A fine musical program will be rendered.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance union will be held at the Congregational church Friday afternoon, June 20. It is expected that the meeting will be of unusual interest and that the attendance will be large.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Marlin, of 201 Twenty-ninth avenue west, died yesterday morning. Interment took place yesterday afternoon.

A son has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Larson, of 129 South Sixty-sixth avenue west.

Rev. John Feeheley is taking a census of the parishioners of the St. James church, with a view of publishing a directory.

Mrs. Thomas Hallows has gone for a trip in the southern part of the state.

Miss Luetta Smith, of Grand Forks, is visiting friends here.

Mrs. F. H. Burleigh and family have gone for an extended visit with relatives at Battle Lake.

A. Chaurette has been arrested on the charge of assisting from this life the pet dog of Mrs. Mary Sorrow. His examination will take place tomorrow afternoon.

Mose Beaudette was arrested yesterday on the charge of attempting to jump his board bill of $20. The charge was made by Mrs. Antoine Connell. The bill amounted to $20 and Beaudette settled in full, with costs, rather than stand trial.

AFFECTS NEW CROP

Effect of Reduction Will Be Watched With Interest.

Shippers here regard the reductions made in export grain freights via Lake Erie and Baltimore and Philadelphia as of little bearing on the movement of wheat from Duluth until after the new crop come in. Several lines have joined. Whether the reduction, considered as compared with the rate via New York, will be a permanent matter, or is intended only to influence the increased movement of grain via Baltimore and Philadelphia, is something that is not known here.

It is understood that agents of the lake lines here have been advised of the reductions, and that these changes have been made not alone by the Baltimore & Ohio via Fairport, but by the Pennsylvania via Erie.

The effect of these reductions to Philadelphia and Baltimore on the tariff from Buffalo to New York on export grain shipments is now something that is looked for with interest. It is thought hardly posible that the Buffalo-New York lines will allow a differential of a full cent to exist against their Eastern terminal and in favor of the more southern ports.

The reductions just announced, and effective yesterday over some lines and tomorrow over others, give Baltimore a differential under the New York rate from the Eastern lakes terminal of a full cent. Heretofore the Philadelphia and Baltimore lines from Lake Erie have maintained the same rate from the lake to either port. Under the new conditions, Baltimore gets a rate 4-10ths of a cent less than the Philadelphia rate, which is 6-10ths less than the New York rate. The reductions apply not only to export wheat, but to corn, rye, and other grains. The effect of course will be to reduce the cost of laying wheat from Duluth down to Liverpool or other foreign ports by just that much from former rates via those routes.

The prediction of shippers that the reduction amounts to little as far as wheat from the old crop is concerned is based on the belief that a large part of the contract grade of wheat in store here, which amounts to less than 300,000 bushels, is either held by mills or held by shippers in the belief that it will be needed for milling purposes before wheat from the new crop will be sufficiently to be available to any extent for grinding. Some wheat is moving out—perhaps half a million bushels a week—but the bulk of this has of late gone to domestic millers for manufacture into flour.

The rest of the stocks here is No. 2 northern or lower, and can be better used here to advantage than to ship it, especially abroad.

Consequently, as long as this shipping market continues as the out-of lines as it is at present for export business, and the milling demand continues as active as it has been of late, it is considered that it will take considerably more than a 1 cent reduction via any port or all of them to result in a very large increase in foreign shipments from here.

It is the belief here that the reduction in grain freights will have no bearing on export flour rates, unless it is to bring forth another protest from the millers over discrimination against export flour and in favor of export flour. The lake and rail line rate on flour from Duluth is now 15½ cents via New York. Philadelphia has a differential of 2 cents and Baltimore one of 3 cents.

WILL BE ACTIVE.

Meeting of Duluth-Superior Passenger Association.

The Duluth-Superior Passenger association promises to become a very active organization in head of the lakes passenger matters from this time on. At the annual meeting held at the Spalding yesterday, General Agent T. E. Blanche, of the Northern Pacific, who also has direction of both freight and passenger business here, was elected president for the present year, and L. H. Kitchell, Northern passenger agent of the Great Northern, was elected secretary.

The members of the association discussed the necessity of concerted action in local matters frequently, and concluded that much better results could be obtained with greater ease by the passenger representatives here acting on them so that the necessity of taking some matters up to the general passenger departments would be avoided. Consequently, it is intended to have meetings at least twice a month from this time forward, and to make the association an active factor in head of the lake passenger traffic.

The South Shore road brought in two coach loads of immigrants on its morning train.

George J. Lovell, of St. Paul, Northwestern passenger agent of the Wabash system, was in town last evening. He stopped at the Spalding.

FROM FORTY PEOPLE.

Chicgo, June 18.—The report that John D. Rockefeller had given the university of Chicago $750,000 not heretofore announced, was denied by President Harper today. "The report that this sum came from Mr. Rockefeller is untrue," said Dr. Harper. "The money came from different people—about forty of them. I am not at liberty to give out their names and hence cannot answer the question, whether Mr. Rockefeller was among the donors."

DAILY TRAIN SERVICE.

South McAlester, I. T., June 18.—It is stated authoritatively that the Choctaw, Oklahoma & Gulf railroad will, on June 29, inaugurate daily train service from Memphis, Tenn., to Denver, Col., a distance of 1225 miles. The new train will be known as the "Denver flyer" and ill make the trip through in forty-eight hours.

INCORPORATED IN JERSEY.

Trenton, N. J., June 18.—These companies were incorporated here today: The Cerro Pasco Investment company, capital, $10,000,000; to do a general transportation business. Incorporators: Horace S. Gould, Francis S. Hutchinson, K. K. McLaren, Jersey City. The Railway Supply company, capital, $1,200,000; to do a milling, manufacturing and transportation business. Incorporators, William J. Field, J. R. Tennant, R. J. Tully, Jersey City.

TO REDUCE TAX ON MAIZE.

London, June 18.—In the commons today the chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, replying to John Redmond, the Irish leader, announced that the tax on maize would be reduced by one half.

CRAIG WANTS VACATION.

Des Moines, June 18.—J. Bayard Craig, chancellor of the Drake university of this city, today asked the board of trustees of the institution for a year's leave of absence. The request was granted, and it is generally understood that a new chancellorship will be selected during the course of the year.

FUNERAL OF VICTIMS

Lost By the Capsizing of the Steamer Ravenna.

Stillwater, June 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The bodies of Capt. Hoy and Byron Trask, victims of the Ravenna disaster, near Dubuque last Thursday, did not reach this city until this morning. They should have been here yesterday. They were shipped from Dubuque Monday night and miscarried on the road.

The funeral of Capt. Hoy was held this morning at St. Michael's church and that of Byron Trask this afternoon at the home of his mother. The bodies were found shoulder to shoulder in the cabin of the Ravenna.

TEXAS CROPS.

But Little Rain to Relieve the Drouth.

Dallas, Tex., June 18.—Up to midnight rains had been reported from only a small portion of Northeast Texas, where the corn and cotton crops are said to have been in better condition than in any other portion of the state. Outside of this limit the outlook for any corn crop in Texas this year is gloomy. The protracted drouth, aided by scorching breezes has made the destruction almost complete. Cotton is said to be in fair condition in North Texas and rains within the near future will save that crop.

BIG CROWDS AT ASCOT.

London, June 18.—Sunny weather and the promise of good sport were quite sufficient to attract big crowds to Ascot Heath today, without the presence of King Edward and Queen Alexandra. The king has practically recovered from his indisposition and their majesties are expected to go to the races in state tomorrow. The prince of Wales represented the royal family at Ascot today. Otherwise the crowd of fashionable people was much the same as at yesterday's meet.

VIRULENT CANCER CURED.

Startling proof of a wonderful advance in medicine is given by druggist G. W. Roberts, of Elizabeth, W. Va. An old man there had long suffered with what good doctors pronounced incurable cancer. They believed his case hopeless till he used Electric Bitters and applied Bucklin's Arnica Salve, which treatment completely cured him. When Electric Bitters are used to expel bilious, kidney and microbe poisons at the same time this salve exerts its matchless healing power, blood diseases, skin eruptions ulcers and sores vanish. CHILDREN'S HOME Society Holds Annual Convention at Sioux Falls.

Sioux Falls, S. D., June 18.—Twenty-five states were represented at the annual convention of the National Children's Home society, which convened in this city this afternoon. The session today was opened with devotional exercises, led by Rev. B. H. Brasted, of North Dakota, following which the annual reports of state superintendents were heard. During the afternoon Mrs. P. Quivy, of Nebraska, read a paper on "The Best Method of Managing Our Older Girls," the discussion of which was opened by Rev. W. H. Thompson, D.D., of Philadelphia.

Hon. A. O. Wright, United States inspector of Indian schools, read a paper on "How We Can Make the Society a National Power."

Center of Attraction.

It is a philosophical truth that we are instinctively attracted to anything that is perfect. This explains to quite an extent the great popularity enjoyed by the "Milwaukee's" famous Pioneer Limited and the four other splendid passenger trains running daily via that line between the Twin Cities and Chicago. Train No. 2, which leaves Minneapolis at 5:25 p. m., St. Paul 6:00 p. m., and reaches Chicago at 7 o'clock next morning is, with one exception, (the Pioneer Limited) unequalled by any train in the Northwest.

A Delightful Trip.

After June 20th the Detroit and Cleveland Navigation company's steamships will make direct connection with the D. S. S. & A. railroad at St. Ignace, Wednesday and Friday of each week, running to Detroit, Toledo and Cleveland. This is one of the most delightful water trips that could be imagined, and the service is in every way commendable. Meals are served a la carte at popular prices, and every comfort is provided for the accommodation of passengers. Tickets may be secured at the city ticket offices of the D. S. S. & A. railroad, 426 West Superior street.

One may dwell beneath poverty's lowly roof, or live in mansions of brick. They'll find a friend in Rocky Mountain Tea. It rids life of its burdens. Ask your druggist.

STRIPPING.

New Wallace and Vivian Company Will Begin Soon.

George W. Wallace and J. G. Vivian's new stripping company will begin work shortly with two steam shovels on the removal of 1,000,000 yards of surface from the new Republic iron property of the Republic Iron and Steel company in section 14-58-19. The surface here runs from fifty to sixty feet in depth. It is said that the development work already contracted for with Messrs. Wallace and Vivian will lay bare about 5,000,000 tons of ore.

While the whole contract will take about three years to complete, an effort will be made as soon as possible to get enough ore uncovered so the mine can become a shipper. The property lies about two and a half miles northeast of Buhl. It is not far from the Eastern Minnesota road, and it is understood that a spur will be built to the property at once. It is hoped to make a considerable shipment of ore during the current season.

Mr. Wallace's experience in the stripping and development business will not be a new one by any means. For a number of years he was superintendent of the development operations at the Fayal mine, which many consider to be the greatest mine on the Mesaba range, and is spoken of as one of the best developed properties that are in operation.

Winston Bros. & Dear have added a second steam shovel at the new Burt mine.

It is said that within a dozen miles of Hibbing there are developed and in course of development twenty-eight iron mines.

CONFERENCE.

Minnesota Swedish Baptists Meet---Duluth Pastor Elected President.

The local ministers representing their churches at the Minnesota Swedish Baptist church annual conference held in Fish Lake, report that the annual gathering just closed was one of the finest ever held. The reports from the various churches throughout the state indicated much activity in religious work.

Among the prominent religious workers attending the conference was Rev. and Mrs. Talquist, of China, and Rev. O. L. Chanson, of India. Rev. Mr. Talquist said that the prospect for missions in China were never brighter. The Boxers admire the spirit of the missionaries in coming back even though they were so terribly prosecuted and marvel at the religion that inspires its followers under such sufferings.

During Saturday and Sunday fully 2000 people were gathered at a meeting in a great tent that served as an auditorium. Professor C. G. Lozergren, of Chicago University, spoke on Sunday morning and in the afternoon Rev. Talquist, of the mission work in China.

Rev. F. Lindon, of the Swedish Bethel Baptist church in Duluth was elected president of the conference for the ensuing year.

Williamson, Jr., Mrs. C. A. Luster, Mrs. Robert P. Dowse, Mrs. B. F. Meyers, Mrs. L. W. Powell, Mrs. John Panton, Mrs. Alex D. McRae, Mrs. J. B. Cotton, Mrs. J. M. Smith, Mrs. A. W. Dutton, Mrs. W. J. Suffel, Mrs. R. B Knox, Mrs. W. C. Winton.

The proceeds will be used by the young ladies in fitting up a room in the new St. Luke's hospital. The room will be kept up by the society free of charge to deserving patients.

The officers of the Somerset Y are as follows: President, Miss Florence Brewer; vice president, Miss Sybilla Hartman; secretary, Miss Emma Black; treasurer, Miss Cora Letteau.

To Take Testimony.

A dispatch from Washington says that an order was issued yesterday for Lieut. Col. E. H. Crowder, judge advocate, now in the West on leave of absence, to proceed to Duluth, San Francisco and such other points as he may find necessary in order to examine witnesses in the investigation of the cases of Lieut. E. T. Arnold, Fourth cavalry, and Sergt. Edwards, of the same regiment, charged by a private of that regiment with having abusing a Filipino prisoner. Lieut. Arnold is now at Jefferson barracks, Mo., where he was ordered a few days ago. These are the cases brought to the attention of the senate by Mr. Culberson, of Texas. E. C. Carhart and William A. Melby are to be examined here.

Heisser-Barrett.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob H. Heisser, of Minneapolis, have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Helen Ruth Heisser, and William M. Barrett, of St. James, Minn., to take place at 5 o'clock Monday afternoon, June 30, at their home, 3012 Humboldt street, in Minneapolis. Mr. and Mrs. Barrett will be at home after Aug. 1, at St. ames, Minn. Mr. Barrett was formerly connected with the News Tribune circulating department, in this city.

ARE USING NEW DOCKS

Iron Range and Eastern Minnesota Ore Docks Ready.

Extensions Will Add Much to Shipping Capacity of Roads.

Great Northern New Steel Ore Cars Are of the Finest.

Two new ore docks are either in use or will be in a few days. The Eastern Minnesota extension of No. 1 dock at Allouez bay is so well done that it is being used somewhat already. The Duluth & Iron Range's rebuilt No. 4 at Two Harbors was turned over by the contractors a few days ago. Chief Engineer Angst and Resident Engineer McGonagle are at Two Harbors today looking it over and making final preparations for the operation of the dock. Tracks are being built on it.

Duluth & Iron Range dock No. 4 has been raised ten feet as a result of the re-construction. It is in reality a new dock built on the site of the old structure. The contractors have done better than it was expected at the time of the opening of navigation that they would be able to do. When the tearing down of the old dock was begun last fall, it was expected that the new structure would be ready to ship ore soon after the opening of navigation. Delays in the shipments of coast timber, however, and blockades en route at critical times made it appear evident that the work would be delayed considerably beyond the date set for its completion. In reality, it is not much more than a month behind time, for normally navigation does not open until after May 1. Vessel supply conditions also have made it possible to get along easily without the new dock, though from this time forward it is likely to cut considerable figure in the ore movement.

Old No. 4 was 52 feet high and new No. 4 is 62 feet. Otherwise, aside from the increased capacity effected by elongating the pockets, the new dock is of about the same dimensions as the old one. It has 168 pockets, the same as before, but their storage capacity is augmented from 30,420 tons to 36,960.

The dock work at the Great Northern has consisted of the extension of No. 2 dock. No. 1 dock was built by the Duluth & Winnipeg before it was absorbed by the Great Northern and while it was hauling ore for the Wright & Davis road which also was absorbed by the Hill interests.

The extension built this season is 600 feet long, making the total length of the structure, measured only for the space occupied by ore pockets, 1500 feet. It adds 100 pockets, making 250 altogether, and increases the pocket storage capacity of 87,500 tons, as compared with 40,500 tons at No. 1. No. 2 gets its greater storage capacity from being 73 feet high, while No. 1 is only 57 feet. The improvement makes No. 2 the greatest dock on the lakes. The next largest is Duluth, Missabe & Northern No. 2, which has 69,000 tons storage capacity.

FINE ORE CARS.

Great Northern Steel Cars Are Very Complete.

The Great Northern road is having a lot of modern, high capacity steel ore cars built at the Johnstown works of the Cambria Steel company. Tnte cars already received by this road this spring were built at Detroit, and in a general way the two orders are identical, each being for 100,000 pound cars. It is said that the Great Northern was promised 500 of these new ore cars by April 1 and that it received only fifty, though they are coming along pretty well now.

The new cars were designed by Max Touz, mechanical engineer of the Great Northern system. Several improvements have been made, inspired by the difficulties experienced in handling Mesaba ore with dispatch. One of these consists of the punching of two holes in each sideof the car, each hole 2½ inches in diameter, which are to be used for open holes for dislodging the fine ore of the Mesaba as it goes into the hoppers. The difficulty has been that the ore settles down solidly and heretofore has had to be scraped out at some labor.

In audition to these holes two more are punched in the sides of the extreme hoppers below the center sills, and are also provided for the purpose of poking the ore out, and these can be used in the winter months for applying a steam house for the purpose of thawing the ore out. The latter are provided with doors to prevent the lading from falling out.

Back to back, top end channels	29 ft 3¾ ins
Out to out of end sill channels	22 ft 10 ins
Width inside	7 ft 19 ins
Extreme width over stakes	8 tt 5½ ins
Distance between truck centers	13 ft 5 ins
Wheel base	5 ft 7 ins
Height rail to lower side center sill channel—car light	4 ft 3¾ ins
Height to lower side of draft sill	2 ft 6 ins
Height rail to top of center s... channel	3 ft 6¾ ins
Height from rail to top of brake mast—extreme	9 ft 8¾ ins
Height rail to top of car body	9 ft 2¾ ins
Height rail to top of running board	6 ft 6¾ ins
Height rail to center of coupler	2 ft 10½ ins

The car body is constructed of rolled steel shapes throughout and its extreme rigidity is more than sufficient to carry with perfect safety the intended load of 100,000 pounds. The center sills are composed of 15-inch 33-pound channels, riveted to the bolster channels which run unbrokenly from side to side of the car. The draft sills are 10-inch 20-pound channel sections riveted to the bolster channel and to the end sills, which later are made up of 10-inch 15-pound channel sections. The entire underframe members are of medium quality, open-hearth steel. The body bolsters are constructed of 12-inch 20½-pound channel sections spaced 6½ inches back to back, being tied to the center sill and draft sill by large gusset plates.

From this description it will be seen that the cars have many advantages over the older style. About 800 cars in all have been ordered by the road.

It's a mistake to imagine that itching piles can't be cured; a mistake to suffer a day longer than you can help. Doan's Ointment brings instant relief and permanent cure. At any drug store, 50 cents.

Eczema

Some people call it tetter, milk crust or salt rheum.

The suffering from it is sometimes intense; local applications are resorted to—they mitigate, but cannot cure.

It proceeds from humors inherited or acquired and persists until these have been removed.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

positively removes them, has radically and permanently cured the worst cases, and is without an equal for all cutaneous eruptions.

Congress Getting Ready to Quit.

Members of congress, especially the senators, are striving hard to close up unfinished business so as to adjourn by July 3 and not have the session continue over the Glorious Fourth. Numerous conferences have been held between Senators Aldrich, Allison and Hale on the part of the senate, and Speaker Henderson and Representatives Payne and Dalzell, on the part of the house, for the purpose of discussing the progress of legislation and the possibility of getting away before the Fourth of July. It is admitted, however, that the Cuban question may upset some calculations, but the general view of senators and representatives is that it is now brought squarely to an issue and the decision, either for or against the administration, will not be long delayed or involve extensive debate. Two questions of serious controversy between the two houses will be the Philippine government bill and the anarchist bill. But if the Cuban matter and the canal are out of the way, it is thought the differences between the two houses on these measures can be adjusted in time for adjournment before the Fourth. The appropriation bills are well advanced and these will not cause delay of adjournment. The coming of real hot weather is likely to have more influence on the legislators than anything else and if it is possible to close business by the first of July they will certainly do so.

The New Pension Commissioner's Policy.

Although Pension Commissioner Ware, who succeeded H. Clay Evans as the head of the pension bureau has hardly been in office long enough to determine his policy, it is predicted that he will be liberal in considerings the claims of the veterans. The pension roll shows a steady increase and is quite likely to reach the million mark by next year. There were 998,303 pensioners on the roll at the close of the month of April. The May reports are not yet in, but by the time the increases for that month and June are added to the list it is thought likely that the total will be well up in the last thousand necessary to make 1,000,000. Should congress adopt some legislation favorable to pensions next year, or soon thereafter, there would be no way of telling how many pensioners Uncle Sam would have on his roll. It may surprise some to know that there are now pending in the pension office 355,259 claims for pension, of which 33,611 are due to the war with Spain. The new commissioner is having a difficult time in trying not to lay down a policy for considering pension matters. He has been pursued by a perfect army of attorneys and Grand Army of the Republic men and by people on the other side of the question, who want to influence him one way or the other. He says they actually follow him out to Kansas and try to reach him through his wife and even more distant relatives. Mr. Ware is finding out that a lot of people are vitally interested in knowing whether he proposes to administer the pension laws in a liberal or narrow spirit. He proposes, however, to let his policy develop as he goes along with his work. As he says, he is merely sitting at his desk, disposing of cases as they come up, and those who want to know what his policy is will have to learn it by judging of his action in the various claims. Commissioner Ware says that the magnitude of the advice offered to him by people who want to influence him in this regard is only equaled by the volume of stuff that was printed at the time of his appointment as successor of H. Clay Evans. For the good of the country the best thing that Mr. Ware can do is to follow along the lines that down by his predecessor, keeping the sharks at bay and treating the worthy applicants in a just and honest manner.

RELIEF IS NEEDED.

Governor Van Sant has issued an appeal for aid for the cyclone sufferers in Clay and Becker counties, and has designated The Herald as one of a committee to solicit subscriptions from the people of Duluth and the neighboring towns. In a proclamation the governor says:

"A destructive cyclone passed over the northeastern portion of Clay and northwestern part of Becker counties on the 9th inst., killing several people and totally demolishing a number of farmhouses and barns. In a great many instances all the cattle, horses, farm machinery and household furniture of their owners were destroyed. The financial loss is far less than if the community in which the storm raged had been a city or village, but the destitution of those in the path of the storm is beyond description. The loss will exceed $35,000."

The governor recalls the fact that at the time of the serious destruction of property by cyclones visiting Rochester and St. Cloud many years ago, the people of this state contributed promptly and generously to those afflicted upon being given the opportunity, and he suggests that similar contributions be made now to the sufferers in Clay and Becker counties. All subscriptions, when finally collected, will be forwarded to Hon. J. H. Block, state treasurer, for transmission to a committee to be appointed by the public authorities of Clay and Becker counties.

In accordance with the governor's appeal, The Herald will gladly receive subscriptions from the generous people of Duluth and will forward the money to the state treasurer.

FOR CONGRESSMAN.

The opposition to J. Adam Bede becoming the Republican nominee for congress has finally secured a candidate in the person of Judge W. D. Edson, of the municipal court of Duluth. It cannot be denied that they have secured a candidate of considerable personal strength as well as of ability. Whether he can win in the contest with Mr. Bede for the nomination remains to be seen. Mr. Bede has a great advantage over any other candidate entering the field at this date because of the long time he has been working for the nomination and the numerous supporters he has gained in all sections of the district.

For several years Mr. Bede has been attending all the social entertainments and addressing public gatherings in every county in the Eighth district and thus has become personally known to a large section of the people who do the nominating. It will be necessary for his opponent to do some lively hustling through the district, if he would overcome this advantage.

On the other hand, there is a considerable element of the party that does not look with favor upon Mr. Bede's candidacy and with this element as a nucleus and with the powerful aid of the old political "machine," which is represented in every precinct in the district, Judge Edson will start out with a good-sized following. There will undoubtedly be a hard fight.

THE COMING CAMPAIGN.

Democrats and Republicans alike realize that the coming campaign, although in what is commonly termed an "off year," is to be a hard fought one and much will depend on the results. The Democrats will make every effort to capture the house and from present appearances will make the fight on the tariff issue, supplemented with anti-imperialistic arguments.

The Republican campaign committee proposes to change its plans somewhat and make a direct appeal to the people. The sentiment of the committee is against the policy of flooding the country with campaign literature during the coming campaign. It has been the custom in years past to send immense quantities of congressional speeches throughout the country. The good effect of this plan is not questioned, although the members of the committee believe that this branch of the work has been overdone. They believe that the people of the country are too busy this year to spend much of their time in reading speeches by congressmen on any subject. Individual members who are seeking re-election will naturally distribute a great deal of campaign literature, and the members of the general committee are disposed to look to that source for most of their literary efforts of that character.

It is stated that instead of the usual liberal supply of printed matter, the members of the executive committee are planning an appeal to the people direct, through speakers of national reputation, who will be urged to take the stump in the coming campaign. Developments are appearing rapidly in a number of matters of national importance, and the adjournment of congress will not end them. Members of the committee contend that it will be better to have public speakers address the voters of the country on the issues brought down to date rather than supply them with speeches delivered several months ago. In pursuance of this policy, the committee will, as soon as the next meeting is held, make an effort to secure the volunteer services of leading Republican orators from all parts of the country for the coming campaign. It is proposed to rely upon the literary work until about the first of September and to then place an army of speakers into the field and carry on a most aggressive campaign until election day.

Present indications are that the Democratic committee will let the Republicans get their work well under way and then combat the positions taken by them. The Democrats have an excellent opportunity this fall and they may secure a majority in the house of representatives for the next congress.

The attempt to make a sensation out of the story that Gen. Wood appropriated $8610 of Cuban funds to be expended in the United States in behalf of Cuban reciprocity has fallen flat. It was a legitimate expenditure in behalf of Cuban interests. There is no charge that one cent of the money was expended corruptly or was intended for any corrupt or underhand purpose. The smallness of the amount is clear evidence that it was intended for no illegitimate purpose. Any one would be ridiculous who went to Washington with a corruption fund of $8000.

The Herald is pleased to notice that the mayor has followed its suggestion made several weeks ago and ordered the police department to enforce the ordinance against permitting vehicles to block the public streets. Some of the worst offenders in this respect for several months past are within a stone's throw of the mayor's office.

It is argued by some of the politicians that as the Declaration of Independence was suppressed in Tennessee when Evans was a candidate for governor, and in Kentucky when Taylor was a candidate, it should be suppressed in the Philippines. The truth is that the Declaration ought never to be suppressed anywhere.

Is justice and fair dealing to be denied the Cubans merely because the Havemeyers happen to find it to their interest to be on the side of the islanders? That seems to be the position of the Minnesota congressmen and it is not to their credit.

Richard Croker again is heard from in his English home, declaring that he is through with New York politics. The last election settled that point, and Tammany has since affirmed the popular vote.

In St. Paul the asphalt trust has raised the price of asphalt paving from $1.77 to $2.34 a square yard. If it got a chance to hold up Duluth, it would probably charge $2.50 a square yard.

After carefully looking the situation over the Washington Post concludes that there will be factions in the political organizations as long as there are offices to distribute.

"Is lying on the increase?" anxiously inquires an Eastern church paper. Has the editor been listening to stories told by returning fishermen about their catches?

A movement has been started in the East to nominate Grover Cleveland for president in 1904. No man has been elected a third time to the presidency.

The Pennsylvania Republican platform says that the Philippine war is ended. Is this another leak from the war department?

It is unanimously agreed by the meat trust and the coal trust that we have the best tariff ever known.

INDUSTRIAL

Training at Sitka, Alaska, to Include Basket Weaving.

New York, June 18.—Basket weaving is to be introduced into the curriculum of the school for industrial training supported by the Presbyterian board, in Sitka, Alaska. Sewing, dressmaking, cooking and domestic science are all well established branches of the school. Boys learn the trades of boat-building, shoemaking, carpentery, etc. In addressing the women's board of Presbyterian Home missions, now in session here, Dr. K. B. Wilbur, of Sitka, Alaska, contrasted the condition of the native Alaskans of Sitka when the United States government bought the territory ten years before missionary work began there and the present advancement of the people. He described the new covenant legion, a society of Alaskans, who are pledged to marry according to Christian principles; to give up all feasts for the dead and to forsake Spamanim. The organization has eighty members, many of whom were graduated from the Sitka school. Eighteen model colleges in Sitka were built by the graduates, and were occupied by them and their families. Miss Dora Fisk, a missionary among the mountaineers of North Carolina, also addressed the meeting.

TRIAL DERBY.

Special Race to See What the Horses Can Do.

Chicago, June 18.—The "Derby trial special," fourth on today's program at Harlem, was responsible for an unusually large crowd at that track today.

This race, at a mile and one-eighth, was arranged as a try-out for such Derby candidates as their owners cared to enter. Each horse, it was arranged, was to carry 112 pounds, and there was to be no penalty to be attached to the winner when he faces the starter at Washington park Saturday.

Following is the card of entries as it stood this morning:

Horse.	Owner.	Jockey.

REPORTED COAL FIND

Rumor That Northern Minnesota Coal Is Being Tested at Superior.

Man Who Claims the Find Tells a Large Story.

Owner Says That Mine Will Soon Be Heard From.

For years past it has been claimed that there have been traces of bituminous coal in Northern Minnesota, but not in quantities to warrant mining operation, or of a grade to make it compete successfully with soft coal from the mines of the East.

A citizen of this city was overheard to say the other day that he saw a sample of coke that was made from Northern Minnesota coal in the coke oven in West Superior which was better than any coke ever made at the head of the lakes from Lehigh Valley coal. He said that the gentleman who had the coke told him that he has located a sixteen-foot vein of bituminous coal in the northern part of this state, from which the coal was taken to make the coke sample, and that it has been traced over seventy acres. The Duluth man said that he was much interested in the statement, and sought to draw out some information as to the location of the coal vein, and what the gentleman purporting to have made the find intends to do in the way of development, whether he will go ahead and develop the mine himself or form a stock company. No information was forthcoming on either question further than teh fact that no stock will be sold and that the mine will be heard of in the near future.

Other persons to whom the Duluth man told the story are rather incredulous about the finding of any 16-foot vein of coal in this part of the country. They declare that there has never been a vein of bituminous coal of that size found in the country.

It is conceded, however, that the discovery of coal in the Northwest in quantities to warrant the beginning of mining operations on a large scale would be next to the discovery of iron ore, one of the best things that ever happened for this city. If enough coal could be found in Minnesota to supply iron and steel manufactories, it would be only a question of a short time before Duluth would become a second Pittsburg. The great drawback against the establishment of manufactories here, so near the base of iron ore supply, is the cost of transporting coal fm the Eastern mines up the lakes to Duluth. Most of the iron and steel men have claimed that in the absence of a fuel supply at the head of the lakes, it is cheaper to ship the ore to the iron and steel mills in the East and then ship back the finished prouct.

While the report of the coal find, on the face o fit, savors of a "pipe dream," yet it is a discovery devoutly wished by every head of the lake interest, and the Duluthian who saw the coke sample firmly believes that there is some truth in the story even if the vein should prove smaller than claimed by its discoverer.

The Augustana Lutheran Synod Discusses Home Missionary Work.

Ispheming—Almost the entire session of the Augustana Lutheran synod at Ispheming was devoted to the discussion of home missionary work. Reports showed very encouraging progress, particularly in Montana and Utah. It was decided to increase the appropriation for missionary work to $10,000 and in addition the home board was authorized to engage a superintendent to push the work and raise funds. Members of the home missionary board were elected as follows: C. E. Lindberg, Rock Island, Ill.; Dr. L. G. Abrahamson, Chicago; Dr. C. A. Hemborg, Moline, Ill.; S. T. A. Lindahl, Rock Island, Ill.; Dr. C. W. Foss, Rock Island; Victor Headman, Ganeso, Ill., and A. Soderquist, Burlington, Iowa.

Sault Ste. Marie—The Northwestern Leather company, of this city and Munising, is finding the importation of labor through employment agencies in the cities an expensive luxury. In the past few months the company has paid out $14,000 in transportation to men who agreed to work in the bark camps. Most of them, however, have remained but a few days, and have then decamped. They are scattered all over the peninsula and are thought to be included in the tramps who are committing depredations in many localities.

Menominee—Menominee lodge of the Modern Brotherhood of America was organized here Monday night with fifty-two charter members.

Marquette—The Algercounty Republican convention elected delegates instructed for H. O. Young of Ispheming for congress. The standing of the two candidates is now 13 to 12 votes in favor of Congressman Sheldon, of Houghton.

S. W. Campbell, Indian agent at La Pointe agency, arrived at the St. Louis last night from Ashland, together with Mrs. Campbell and the party of four, including A. E. Jefferson and Mrs. Penfield, of Hudson, Chief Clerk R. G. Rodney, of the La Pointe agency, and R. A. Jackson, of St. Paul. They left on the Booth line boat this morning for a pleasure trip down the north shore. While away, however, Mr. Campbell will investigate to question of the marketing of the sales of cedar which the Indians have cut on the Grand Portage reservation.

These Indians were given the permission in a law recently passed to cut all their timber but pine. Their allotments are on a reservation covering two townships. The scheme was considerable of an experiment, and for that reason its results are being watched with considerable interest for their possible bearing on the legislation that may be enacted for the Indians of the Leech Lake and Net Lake reservations. The Indians worked hard and cut their cedar and market it themselves. They were especially anxious that no white man have anything to do with the matter.

However, Agent Campbell concluded that while it would be an interesting experiment to let them go ahead as they wished, he didn't have sufficient faith in the business ability of the noble red man to look for big bargains with his pale face brother. Consequently, he had an Indian farmer appointed for Grand Portage in order to check up the results of these transactions, and he himself will make an investigation of the matter when he arrives at the Portage. If the experiment proves successful, it is likely that the same privileges will be granted to Net Lake, and possibly the pending Leech Lake legislation may be influenced.

• • •

Mr. Campbell says there are about 300 Indians down the north shore. About half of them are at Winnebago City, a mile down the shore from Grand Marais, and an equal number live on the reservation at Grand Portage. Mr. Campbell says that few of the reservation Indians live on their allotments, which he thinks is a mistake.

"The Grand Portage Indians have considerable good farming land on their allotments," said Mr. Campbell this morning, "and they ought to be induced to develop it. The red man is adapted only to agricultural pursuits, and even in that work he must be under a master to succeed well."

THE DAKOTAS.

An Alleged Murderer Is Held at Sioux Falls.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—F. E. Miller, a special police officer of Sioux City, is here with a traveling man named Hall, whom he arrested at Lead, S. D., on charge of having caused the death of a man named Lovin, of Fort Dodge, Iowa, who was recently found in the river near Rock Valley, Ia. Miller has placed the prisoner in charge of Sheriff Huston of this county, and declares he will hold him here until Iowa authorities pay reward offered for the person guilty of Lovin's death. It is said that Hall was seen in the boat with Lovin on June 3, a short time before the latter was found dead. Hall protests his innocence. He is said to have friends who will stand loyally by him until convicted or cleared of the charges.

In the United States court, Peter Verwolf, who was convicted at the April term of counterfeiting, while an inmate of the Sioux Falls penitentiary, appeared before Judge Carland, who, after he had withdrawn his motion for a new trial, sentenced Verwolf to one year in the prison. Verwolf was immediately taken to that institution from which he was only recently released.

Beresford—While playing on the roof of a 3-story building, Effie Stephens, aged 13, fell through an open stairway, striking the ground head first. The skull was crushed and the girl cannot live.

Sturgis—Ernest Loves was arrested at the Boe ranch, sixty-five miles north of here, and brought to Sturgis. He is charged with the murder of George Puck, on the Red Owl. He is a halfbreed.

Pierre—The state land department is distributing to the schools of the state $270,924 of the income fund, which goes direct to the schools. his is at the rate of $2.15 per capital and is 15 cents more for each child than on any former semi-annual distribution and is made on a school population of 5104 greater than for any other distribution.

Hot Springs—A second marriage ceremony was performed for Mrs. Rosa E. Cavanaugh and William J. Cavanaugh, who secured a divorce here several months ago by mutual consent.

Chamberlain—During the first two weeks of June there were 197 original homestead filings, covering 28,240 acres, made at the local land office. The town is absolutely filled with landseekers, and every train is bringing them to town in large numbers. Since Jan. 1, there have been a total of 776 filings, appropriating the immense total of 112,555 acres of land. The city has just completed the construction of an immense barn on American island, the city park, and the track has been put in the best of order for the races of the central circuit, which holds meets here on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. More than thirty horses have been entered among them being horses with records as low as 2:12½ and purses aggregating $1625 will be paid.

ANOTHER IS DEAD

Second Fatal Case of Diphtheria on Park Point.

Dr. Robinson Declares There Is No Danger of Epidemic.

Coroner Boyer Will Follow Up Ball Case, If Possible.

Another death from diphtheria occurred on Minnesota Point last night.

In this instance, however, Christian science is not assigned as the contributing cause of death.

The two diphtheria deaths coming so close together caused something of a scare among the campers, but Health Commissioner Robinson says there is absolutely no cause for apprehension or anxiety.

The health department has taken charge of the homes in which the disease exists, and is enforcing the most careful quarantine. Commissioner Robinson declined to give permission to transport the caskets of the diphtheria victims on the street cars or the ferry boat, and members of the families afflicted are not permitted to ride in public conveyances during the period of quarantine.

There is absolutely no danger of an epidemic on Park Point, according to the health authorities, and every precaution will be taken to afford the campers due protection.

Coroner Boyer, speaking of the death of Ernest E. Ball, who was first treated by Christian Science, says it is an outrage that people should impose death on an innocent child, and he will use his best endeavors to have the Christian Scientists interested in the case criminally prosecuted.

The coroner does not blame Mr. and Mrs. Ball in this connection, as he says they did not know that the child had more than a severe cold, and their employing a Christian Science healer was more of an accident than anything else. It is said that Mrs. Mary Jackson, the Christian Scientist in charge of the case, diagnosed it as quinsy.

The second death was that of the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Berry. It was thought that the child had only a severe cold, but the moment a physician saw it he pronounced it a clear case of diphtheria. Medical aid, however, came too late to do any good.

The only two remaining cases of diphtheria on Minnesota point are reported getting along nicely. Anti-toxine has been administered and the disease germs seem to have little chance against this form of treatment.

Health Commissioner Robinson reports that out of twelve cases of diphtheria reported in Duluth within the past month ten that were treated with anti-toxine got well and two that did not receive the anti-toxine treatment died.

At present there are nine cases of diphtheria in Duluth, all of which are reported well under control. Continued wet weather is said to be the leading cause of the comparatively large number of cases.

The health department finds that the people quarantined are moderately careless about observing the quarantine regulations, and incidentally he includes a warning to those offending.

It is the rule of the department that no member of a quarantined family shall ride in a street car or other public conveyance, or attend public meetings. This, of course, refers to those members that have been in the house where diphtheria exists.

The wage earner of the family is allowed to continue his work, only on condition that he be isolated from the rest of the family.

The smallpox epidemic has been stamped out. There are only two cases in the detention hospital and these will be released in a day or so. During the past winter there were as many as twenty-seven patients in the hospital at one time.

FAILS TO APPEAR.

Joe Sheehy Does Not Prosecute Doc French.

During the recent crusade in the interest of high moral endeavor on the Bowery, Joseph Sheehy caused the arrest of "Doc" French, whom he charged with gambling.

The hearing was set for this morning, in police court. Mr. French was there to take up the case, but Sheehy failed to appear and the charges were dismissed.

It is probable that the next crusade for reform that Mr. Sheehy decides on will be without the support of the city officials. In two cases where warrants were issued on his complaint, he failed to appear in court.

ANXIOUS TO COME.

People of Wheatland Want Excursion to Duluth.

The Commercial club has been advised by the Northern Pacific road that its passenger department has taken up with its agents in the vicinity of Wheatland, N. D., the subject of running an early excursion to Duluth. As soon as the agents report on the amount of business in sight for such an excursion, the road will determine whether it will pay to run a special train for the purpose. It will be recalled that the business men of Wheatland urged the aid of this city in behalf of another excursion from that town.

It is believed that a sufficient number of people will be anxious to come to cause a favorable decision to be made.

THE PARK.

Mayor Hugo to Discuss Minnesota Point Proposition.

Mayor Hugo will address the members of the Commercial club this evening at the regular monthly meeting of the members, which will be held on the tenth floor of the Torrey building beginning at 8 o'clock. The mayor's subject will be the proposition to create a government park out of the unplatted portions of Park and Wisconsin Points. It is understood that that committee of which Mayor Hugo is chairman will recommend that the Commercial club take active action in endorsing the movement in favor of having the government create such a park.

Among other important matters to be discussed will be that of fake advertising and the methods through which local merchants have been victimized in the past with the aim of averting a repetition in future. This is regarded as a matter of much importance, and as one that should enlist a large attendance of the merchant-members of the club.

President Patrick will probably announce the appointment of a committee to circulate a petition and take such other action as may appear necessary in behalf of closer reciprocal relations with Canada.

It is also quite likely that action will be taken looking toward the inducing of President Roosevelt to include Duluth among the cities visited by him in September.

A report is also expected from the committee appointed to investigate the present system of packaging mail arriving on the Omaha from the East.

Marriage Consummated In August Last Just Announced.

The marriage of Miss E. P. LaFortune, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph LaFortune, and Otto E. Lund, which took place in St. Paul, six months ago, has just been made public and has caused surprises not only among their friends, but in both homes.

After the ceremony in St. Paul, in August, of last year, the young people returned to their separate homes in this city. Immediately after making known their marriage they left on a wedding trip and will be gone until they think time will have softened the blow at the two homes and brought about paternal forgiveness.

The groom is a member of the employment agency of Olund & King, on West Michigan street. Objection on the part of the parents was the reason of the secrecy of the affair. It is said that the marriage would not now have been made public except that rumors of it were afloat among the acquaintances of the young people and they decided to make it known.

The officers pleaded self-defense against civilians; that no police were knowingly resisted, and that their intention was not to rescue Lieut. Doddridge, but to protect him from violence inflicted by outsiders.

The court refers to the disadvantage at which the officers were placed during the trial owing to their ignorance of the Italian language and laws, and says:

"The interpreter, who was a consular clerk, was not successful. The strong feeling against the officers amongst the audience was frequently manifested, and efforts were made by the magistrate to suppress the manifestations."

In summing up, the court finds that while the actions of Cadet Kress were indiscreet, no further proceedings against him should be taken. The same conclusion is arrived at regarding Langley, and the court recommends that Lieut. Doddridge, Capt. Wyane and Surgeon Ledbetter be treated by court-martial for "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman;" that Lieut. Doddridge and Surgeon Ledbetter be tried for "being noticeably affected by liquor and upsetting tables and chairs," and that Capt. Wynne be tried for "his unusual hall in the quiet of St. Mark's square," and running among chairs and tables in a public cafe.

In quashing all the recommendations for court-martials, Admiral Crownlnshield says:

"After a minute examination it appears there was not sufficient evidence adduced before the court of inquiry to establish the allegations against Surgeon Ledbetter, Lieut. Doddridge and Capt. Wynne. The weight of the evidence shows that the two first named were not noticeably affected by liquor. The matter appears to have been forced to trial on account of the representations of civilians, who were in no way under the authority of any branch of the Italian government, national or municipal, and whose character was such that the officers were victimized. That the matter did come to trial, resulting in notoriety detrimental to the reputation of those involved, and to the good name of the servce, was due at least in part to the omission to observe that custom of the service whereby the commanding officer of a United States naval vessel in case of the arrest on shore of one of his command, himself either makes immediate and direct representations for his relief, or appears in court to aid in seeing that justice is done, or designates an officer to perform these duties. Without this customary assistance all these parties were suffering revolting indignities during the period of their confinement, and even in court, such as are unknown in the case of the lowest criminal in our own country, and though these matters are apart from the question of culpability of persons arrested they are the cause of much of the notoriety attendant on the case."

The sum total of the matter is that two officers had a dispute with a waiter there and ran amongst chairs and tables, all the tables and chairs being deserted at the time; that one of them upset tables and chairs, and that another called out in loud tones in the deserted square. While some of these actions may be considered indiscreet, or lacking in dignity, none of them merit a court-martial, and none can be characterized as bringing scandal or disgrace on teh naval service. Hence the court of inquiry clears the officers of resisting public authority and unwarrantably attacking citizens, which are the principal and only points which the Italian court found the parties guilty. The government is relieved of the embarrassment of bringing the parties to trial, in which no offense exists, simply to keep a possible, though entirely unauthorized promise that a court-martial should follow the court of inquiry. They will be admonished to so conduct themselves in the future as as to avoid, if possible, a repetition of the occurrences leading to this court of inquiry.

Yet Camille Lemoine of New York Lived Like a Man In Dire Poverty and Died Uncared For and Alone.

New York, une 18.—In the basement of No. 65 West Houston street, which was both his home and workshop, Camille Lemoine has been found dead. In his pockets $178.75 and a gold watch and chain were found, and in a strong box were dees of property estimated to be worth $50,000, but he lived like a man in dire poverty and died uncared for and alone. A kitten that was his only companion lay by the body of the miser. Lemoine was 57 years old and was a clever mechanic and manufacturer of tools and dies. It was said he once served in the French army, but he never told much of his life even to his intimate friends, and he had few of these. He slept on a wretched bed in the rear of the little shop, and ate sparingly at the cheapest restaurants The police say he spent less than 15 cents a day for food.

Most of the property to which deeds were found is in Hoboken. It is not known whether Lemoine has any relatives living or not, so the public will administrator took charge of the money and papers, and the body was sent to the morgue.

PATRICK'S WILL IS REFUSED

New York, June 18.—Surrogate Fitzgerald today, after an attorney for Albert T. Patrick had closed the evidence on his behalf in regard to the alleged will of William Marsh Rice, said to have been executed in September, 1900, announced that he would refuse to admit the will to probate. The ground given by the surrogate was that the proof was as to the will's due execution and that it was the last will of Rice was insufficient. The surrogate then proceeded to take evidence as to the 1896 will.

NEW MESABA TOWN.

Nashwauk Lots to Go on Sale Monday.

Lots in the new town of Nashwauk will be put on sale at the office of E. J. Longyear at Hibbing, Minn., Monday, June 23. Nashwauk is located in the southwest corner of town 57-22, between Hibbing and Grand Rapids, in the immediate vicinity of the Hawkins mine. This town is far enough distant from both Grand Rapids and Hibbing to have a large field to itself. It will become one of the most important towns on the Mesaba range. Much iron ore is being shown up in that vicinity; a railroad is now in the course of construction into this location and will be completed this fall. Nashwauk now centers the most active field of iron exploration in the Lake Superior district. Nashwauk is located in one of the best pine timber forests in Minnesota, and, like Hibbing, will be both a mining and lumber town. There is immediate demand for stores in all lines at this new location.

GIVEN NO CHANCE

Frank E. Searle Quietly Frozen Out of Congressional Race.

Was Ready to Announce Himself If Daugherty Declined.

Edson Out Before He Heard of Daugherty's Decision.

It looks a little bit as though Frank E. Searle had been frozen out of the congressional race again.

For the last two or three days of last week the opinion that Senator Daugherty would run if he was given proper support held the boards, until Friday afternoon.

Then the tip came straight that Senator Daugherty had concluded not to run, and that F. E. Searle was surging to the front again. It came too late for publication in The Herald Friday, but it was published in the political column Saturday, and by that time it had become well circulated.

All this time there was a quiet movement under way that boded ill for the Searle boom, had he but known it. The Willcuts contingent was getting ready to spring a new candidate, one that had been mentioned frequently in a quiet way.

Monday evening the coup was sprung. A letter came from Senator Daugherty confirming the report that he would not run for congress. It is understood that Mr. Searle was only waiting for this intelligence to swing into line on the race track behind J. Adam Bede.

He did not get it in time, however.

It is known that Monday afternoon Judge Edson had no idea of immediately announcing himself as a candidate. But that was before the Daugherty letter came. When it came it was dispatched out to Judge Edson on the fleetest street car that could be found. He saw his opportunity, and he lost no time in announcing his candidacy. And again did the Searle ambition become blighted.

* * *

That is how it happened that the announcement that Mr. Searle would be the candidate failed to come true. Judge Edson got there first.

* * *

It is reported that there will be an attempt to put a set of delegates in the field at the Republican primaries to bring about an endorsement of Judge Edson at the county convention next Tuesday. The friends of Odin Halden's candidacy for state auditor say that this will hurt his chances, and they will oppose any such attempt. Mr. Halden himself is not in the city, and they do not know how he would regard it if he were, but as they believe it would hurt him, they intend to resist the attempt to endorse any congressional candidate at the county convention, which is called simply to select delegates to the state convention.

It is not likely, in view of the opposition that is developing, that there will be any particular fight about the matter, however.

* * *

In mentioning the various candidates for the legislature in the three Duluth districts last evening, The Herald inadvertently omitted to mention the name of E. R. Jefferson, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for senator in the Fiftieth district.

THE CROPS.

North Dakota Is In Fear of Grasshoppers--- Weather Good.

Crop reports for the week ending Monday for the states of Minnesota and North Dakota show too much rain in some sections of the latter state, although probably not enough to be injurious, while in the former rain is needed in some quarters. North Dakota is considerably alarmed over the appearance of grasshoppers in some parts of the state. The report from that state is as follows:

"Favorable weather has prevailed the past week, except that in some sections the rainfall was more than was required. Frequent showers fell in all sections, in some quite heavy, in others scarcely heavy enough to be of any benefit. The temperature was slightly lower than the normal, but most of the week was clear, aside from the time it was raining.

"Wheat continues to make rapid growth and is generally strong and healthy, stooling well, and in most sections completely covers the ground. On low land in the river bottoms it is turning yellow from too much moisture.

"Oats are vigorous and growing rapidly; a larger area than usual has been sown to them and prospects are now very favorable.

"Some early sown rye is heading out, and it, like other grain, is in fine condition.

"The weather has been rather too cool for corn; the most of it is up, but is making slow growth, and sunshine and warmer weather are needed for it.

"Flax and millet are still being sown, although the most of the crop is now in; in the northern part of the state considerable land is being broken with the intention of sowing flax on the sod. Early sown flax is up, and as a rule is strong and growing wast.

"Grasshoppers still continue numerous in the Red river counties and are hatching out fast; reports indicate that they are beginning to appear in the north central portion. While they have done but little damage yet, still they have done some, and apprehensions are felt that they may become dangerous."

The Minnesota report was as follows:

"The week's temperatures have been moderate, except that on the 14th the day temperatures were high in southern counties. There were light to moderate showers of rain in the Red River valley on the 11th and 13th. Frequent showers fell in south central and southeastern portions up to the morning of the 15th, and there were light showers in teh southwest on the 14th. In the southwest quarter of the state the need of rain is beginning to be felt. On the afternoon of the 9th a severe tornado visited Southern Norman, Northeastern Clay and Northwestern and Central Becker counties, causing the death of six persons and great loss to dwallings, farm buildings, farm machinery, fences and crops. On the afternoon of the 14th there was a severe storm in Renville, McLeod, Sibley, Scott and Rice counties, with very large hail-stones, heavy rain locally, and destructively high winds, with considerable loss to light buildings, telephone lines, glass, etc.

The week has been very favorable to a splendid growth of all the crops, grasses and pastures, but there is fear that on rich soils wheat, oats, barley and heavy grass may lodge. Early barley is heading well. Corn and potatoes are growing rapidly, but in places where the rains have been heavy their cultivation has not been sufficient to keep down the weeds. Early potatoes are in blossom. Flax is growing satisfactorily. Timothy on the old meadows, and clover are fine, and clover is about ready to cut. The wild grass hay-crop will be large. Millet and fodder-corn are being planted. Apples are said to be dropping their fruit. The strawberry crop in southeastern counties is good, and it is being sent to market."

DIED FROM HIS WOUNDS.

Peru, Ind., June 18.—Clarence Gillespie, a young molder, whose home is in Glasgow, Pa., died last night from a bullet wound received on Sunday in a saloon from John Haynes, colored. Haynes is now in custody and extra guards have been placed around the jail to prevent a threatened lynching.

MARGARET TOOK MORPHINE.

Durango, Col., June 18.—Mrs. Margaret Feeney, wife of a horse jocky, has committed suicide by taking morphine. She was separated from her husband. She was the widow of Bob Ford, the slayer of Jesse James, and lived with him at Creede during the wild days of that camp. She bore the scare of a bullet wound on her body given by Ford in one of his outbursts. Her second husband was killed in a mine accident.

ROMANCE

Ends at Chicago In Marriage of a Kentucky Couple.

Chicago, June 18.—A romance which began in Kentucky many months ago had its climax last evening when Ezekiel F. Clay, a nephew of the famous Kentucky war general, Cassius Marcellus Clay, was united in marriage to Miss Florence K. Lockhart. The groom is 61 years old and the bride is seventeen years his junior. Both live in Paris, Ky. They preferred to be married in Chicago rather than face the curious residents of the Kentucky town.

To escape all notoriety the couple came to Chicago Sunday. Miss Lockhart went to the home of friends, while Mr. Clay went quietly to the Palmer house. He was given a room on the parlor floor.

Monday afternoon Mr. Clay strolled over to the county building and, walking up to Clerk Salmonson, asked for a marriage license.

"Ezekiel F. Clay, Paris, Ky., age 61; Florence K. Lockhart, Paris, Ky., age 4," were the names filled in by the clerk, who at once recalled the storm raised by the relatives of Mr. Clay's uncle when he married his 16-year-old ward, Dora Richardson, five years ago.

The issuance of the certificate at once gave rise to a rumor that one of the Clay family had eloped. To this report the groom entered a vehement denial when interviewed early yesterday morning. Mr. Clay was sound asleep when an effort was made to have him give out the true facts of the marriage. It required considerable knocking before he could be aroused.

When he awoke, however, he did not open the door, and remained in his bed while he answered the questions which seemed to him proper.

"Is it true that you have been married to Miss Lockhart, Mr. Clay?" he was asked.

"No, sir, it is not," came the voice from within, "but I will be this evening."

"Is there any truth in the report that you and Miss Lockhart eloped from Paris?"

"No, there was no elopement," said the voice.

"Will you say where the ceremony will take place?"

"No, I don't care to say that."

"Will you tell where the bride is?"

"Well, she is stopping with friends," thundered the voice; "but I don't care to be bothered with reporters."

"Good night, Mr. Clay."

"Good night."

Friends of Mr. Clay will wonder why he surrounds his coming marriage with so much secrecy. Mr. Clay is a direct descendent of the family of Henry Clay. His cousin, Gen. Cassius M. Clay, who lives at Whitehall, Ky., is 91 years old.

ELOPEMENT

Of Dr. Boxell of St. Paul and His Niece Suspected.

St. Paul, June 18.—Mare E. Hess, living with her mother at 408 Carroll steet ,is missing from home.

Dr. E. C. Boxell, residing at the same place, is also out of the city, and Mrs. Hess, who is Dr. Boxell's only sister, believes there has been an elopement, as Miss Hess and Dr. Boxell have declared their intention of wedding in spite of the opposition of the bride's mother.

Miss Hess, her mother says, went Sunday evening to visit her uncle, living a block away. It was discovered that she was not there, and the absence of Dr. Boxell made an elopement probable.

Mrs. Hess said: "My daughter and Dr. Boxell have been going together for a long time, but I supposed that they felt for each other only the affection customary between uncle and niece. When I found they intended to marry I did everything I could to prevent it, even appealing to the police, but in vain, as I was told the police were powerless to interfere.

"Dr. Boxell seemed to have some strange power over my daughter, and frequently declared that unless she would marry him he would go to the devil. It did not seem to me she loved him, but she was strongly under his control."

Mrs. Hess added that Dr. Boxell said that he would be out of town yesterday, but that he was only going to the letter carriers' picnic. She did not suspect that the elopement had taken place until she found Miss Hess was not at her uncle's.

At Dr. Boxell's office it was said that he left for Chicago and that he was on his way South.

SCARCITY OF RAIN.

Bombay, June 18.—The meterological department predicts a deficiency of rain almost everywhere in the Bombay presidency, particularly at Guierat, and warns the government to prepare for a severe famine.

ILLINOIS AT SOUTHAMPTON.

Southampton, Eng., June 18.—The United States battleship Illinois, flagship of Rear Admiral Arent S. Crowninshield, commanding the United States squadron, arrived here today. The Illinois is to represent the American navy in the naval review in the Solent, in honor of the coronation of King Edward.

SHORT CUT.

Automobilists to Shorten Road From New York to Chicago.

New York, June 18.—Prominent automobilists, bicyclists and good roads crusaders have formed a national alliance to promote the building of a short cut highway from New York to Chicago, which will reduce the distance of the present roundabout route between the metropolitan cities of the East and the West from 987 miles to 850 miles.

At a meeting held in this city, the New York and Chicago Road association was former. Its formation is the result of six months of negotiation and correspondence among members of various bodies interest in highway improvement.

Officers of the new body were elected as follows: Col. Albert A. Pope, Boston, president; John B. Unle, New York, who is president of the Highway Alliance, vice president; W. L. Dickinson, Springfield, Mass., secretary, and A. H. Battey, New York, treasurer. The associate members of the executive committee chosen were Timothy L. Woodruff, lieutenant governor of New York, Winthrow E. Scarritt, president Chicago Automobile club; Burley Ayres, Chicago; Thomas J. Keenan, Pittsburg, former president of the League of American Wheelmen; W. S. Randall, Minneapolis, secretary of the Roadmakers' association; W. A. Howell, Rockville, Conn., president of the League of American Wheelmen; Milo M. Belding, New York, vice president League of American Wheelmen, and H. L. Perkins, Providence, R. I., second vice president of the League of American Wheelmen. It is estimated that fully 400 miles of the projected route already has been equipped with good roads. The scheme is to connect those highways by new ones to be built by the states counties and municipalities on the line of the proposed highway. Local organizations will be formed which, backed by the national association, will be relied upon to secure the building of the connecting links that will complete the through direct line.

It is intended that the road shall begin at Fort Lee and run through New York state by way of Newburg, Binghamton, Elmira, Corning, Olean and Jamestown to Conneaut, Ohio, on Lake Erie. In Ohio, it will pass through Cleveland, Elyria and Sandusky, and thence through Indiana by way of South Bend and Hammond to Chicago.

A convention in the interest of the project is to be called to meet at Atlantic City July 18.

THE COUNT LOVES HER.

St. Louis Society Woman Ensnares a Frenchman.

St. Louis, June 18.—Social circles of St. Louis are discussing the rather mysterious return of Comte de Sehan de Lafayette to this city. When he left St. Louis with the Rochambeau party a few days ago nothing was said of a return visit. But the count left the Rochambeau party at Cincinnati and quietly slipped back, registering at the Planters' hotel, but denying himself to all callers.

At the St. Louis club's banquet to the Rochambeau party, Count de Lafayette was much impressed by a beautiful society woman of St. Louis with whom he spent almost the entire evening. She and the illustrious Frenchman had met before in Paris. It is said the count has fallen in love with her now and that this is the cause of his return.

FOR DERBY.

Arsenal and Pentecost Ready For Chicago's Great Event.

New York, June 18—A. Featherstone's horse, Arsenal, and J. E. Madden's Pentecost, have received their final "preps" for the American derby, to be run Saturday at Washington park, Chicago and will be shipped today over the Pennsylvania railroad. Winnie O'Connor and Cochran, who will have the mounts, will accompany them.

Arsenal's work was on the Gravesend track, while Pentecost was put through his final sprint at Sheepshead bay. Arsenal was breezed over the derby distance, but was not asked to extend himself. His owner expressed pleasure over his condition, which, he said, had improved greatly over the form shown when the horse won the Metropolitan handicap at Morris park.

It is said Jockey Bullman will ride Clarence Mackay's Heno in the derby. Bullman is under contract with August Belmont, who is said, however, to have given consent. Last year's derby was won by Bullman on Robert Waddell, and he is anxious to make it "two straight."

CHARTER CHANGES

Four Amendments to Be Submitted at September Special Election.

Same That Were Defeated at the Election Last Spring.

Possibility That Other Important Amendments Will Be Proposed.

The four charter amendments defeated at the last city election will be voted on again at a special election to be held in September.

It is probable that other amendments will be drawn up and submitted at that time.

The special election is to be held in order to submit the West Duluth water plant purchase to a vote of the people, and the opportunity will be taken to improve the charter workings.

It is almost impossible to carry a charter amendment at a general election. In order to be carried an amendment must receive an affirmative vote equal to four-sevenths of the entire vote cast at the election. Every voter that does not vote on the charter amendment practically votes again it, and there are several thousand voters at each general election that mark their ballots for offices only, leaving all other propositions that may be on the ballot, go by default.

The only way to get charter amendments through is by strenuous campaigning and special ballots or by a special election. The authorities have decided on the latter.

At the city election last February four charter amendments were defeated although the actual vote was four to one in favor of their adoption. It was simply the lack of interest by voters that did not vote on the charter amendments at all, that brought about the defeat.

The first of the proposed amendments is designed to promote the speed and power of the revolving fund. The idea is to levy and collect 75 or 80 per cent of the assessment for any improvement as soon as the contract is let.

At present the assessment cannot be collected till the improvement is made. The result of the proposed amendment is obvious—where the balance in the revolving fund can be used but once in a season under the present conditions, it could be used two or three times if the proposed amendment should carry.

The second of the amendments, like the first relates to improvements that come out of the revolving fund. It is designed to do away with obstructionists to necessary improvements.

Under the present charter provisions to get a street paved, 25 per cent of the property owners owning 25 per cent of the property to be assessed, must petition for the improvement.

It is possible in a close fight for a necessary improvement, that an obstructionist owning a 25-foot lot may put the lot in the name of a dozen or more persons thereby making it more difficult to assure the names of 25 per cent of the property owners.

The second proposed amendment says that in determining the ownership of property owned by two or more persons jointly, or in common, all such owners shall be considered as one.

The third amendment to be re-voted on at September's special election is to remedy a palpable error in the new charter regarding the collection of delinquent assessment penalties. These assessments are strictly city property, and yet under the present provisions of the charter the penalities are turned into the county treasury when collected, instead of the city treasurey. The amendment is designed to change the collection from the county to the city treasurer's office.

The fourth proposed amendment does away with petitions from property owners when it comes to building trunk sewers. It provides that when fourteen out of sixteen aldermen vote for a trunk sewer, the contract can be let without resort to a property owners' petition.

Many more amendments are likely to be suggested before the day of election. One will be undoubtedly be made to stop the present leakage in the permanent improvement revolving fund.

At present property owners are given 10 per cent off as an inducement to pay their assessments within thirty days after confirmation. This simply means a loss of so much to the revolving fund on every assessment. It is now proposed to add a penalty of 10 per cent on delinquent assessments instead of offering an inducement for prompt payment.

The date of the special election has not been determined, but it is rumored that time will be set for the latter part of September.

IS SERIOUS.

Lack of Piling Room May Result In Damage to Lumber.

One of the local manufacturers of lumber said yesterday that the lack of piling room that is being felt at some of the docks is likely to be of more serious consequence than at first thought, for the reason that the season up to the present time has been so damp. He claims that there is danger of what the lumbermen term "stain," which is caused, as a rule, where the yard is damp and where the lumber gets thoroughly wet and is left for several days before piling.

Two years ago when the docks were crowded a wet summer season there was trouble of this kind and a small amount of lumber was affected. It is claimed that there have been instances where high grade lumber has been affected my "stain" and when taken out of the pile a year after it was put in it had deteriorated until it was worth about half as much as when first cut.

Head of the lakes lumbermen have been very cautious from past experiences and in later years, when there has been long continued wet weather they have taken precautions to thoroughly protect their product and keep it dry and bright.

These precautions are more readily understood by those in the lumber business and consist in the main of piling the lumber before it is wet, clear of the ground and in such a manner that the air will circulate freely and destroy all fungus growths. Care is usually taken to pile lumber of uniform width and slant the top in such a way that forms a good water shed. Another thing that the manufacturers look to with care is the covering of the top of the pile, which is usually done with cheaper grades of lumber.

White Cap Story Discredited By Land Office Officials.

A decision has been rendered by the local land office confirming the claim of Wesley McMullen to the title of the e½ of the ne¼ of section 10 and the s½ of the nw¼ of section 51-29. The suit was brought by McMullen against Joseph A. Brown, who had filed on the land and who made the sensational claim that he was driven from his claim by white-caps. Brown first settled on the land in 1892, and then left it for fifteen months, claiming that he was threatened with assassination. He testified that he was shot at and at divers times armed men appeared about his cabin.

In rendering decision the land officials declare that the testimony of Brown and his witnesses was filled with improbabilities and contradictions and that it appeared that Brown had simply abandoned the claim. His application was rejected.

The Four-Track News.

When the different members of the editor's family ask, "Why don't the Four-Track News come?" it is getting to be like Castoria, even "the children cry for it," and this tells the story. It is the most interesting publication that comes in our exchanges, and the reason is easily told. Mr. George H. Daniels, the general passenger agent, who has charge of it, has the "Carnegie Faculty" of getting good men around him, who know their business, and the result is that in everything the publication department of the New York Central distributes it is "all right."—Brooklyn, N. THE Y. W. C. A.

The Membership Reaches Three Hundred--Rooms to Open Sept. 1.

A meeting of the Young Women's Christian association was held in the lecture room of the First Methodist church Monday evening. Mrs. R. Titcomb occupied the chair with Mrs. J. McCord as secretary. Reports were received from the state secretary and the treasurer.

The secretary's report showed the membership increased to three hundred. The treasurer's report showed a cash account on hand of a little over $100 and about $60 expenses already paid from fees and donations; also, nine hundred dollars in promises to be paid on Sept. 1 when the rooms will be opened.

The board of directors is well pleased and grateful for the support and goodwill that has already been given it and hope for its continuance as a great work must yet be accomplished before the rooms can be opened on such a financial basis as to assure a successful issue.

It is gratifying to the board to notice the enthusiasm of the members in the prospect of the rooms being opened this autumn, and it is believed that every one is endeavoring to make the membership reach one thousand. This, it is thought, will be an easy achievement, it being only half the number of self-supporting young women in the city of Duluth.

Miss Henderson, the state secretary, has been calling on many of the business men of the city and almost without exception receiving support or promises of the same. A systematic canvas for membership will be made throughout the city at once, as it is believed, all that is needed is a knowledge of the work and aim of the association to be known and the membership will rise to the limit.

The next meeting will be held at the same place on Monday evening, July 7, at 8 o'clock when, it is hoped, not only those who are already members and those canvassed, but every one interested in such a movement will be present.

SPEAK THEIR THANKS.

Fishermen Pleased With Treatment on the America.

The party of fishermen headed by Fred Schiffman, of St. Paul, which returned yesterday from Chicago Bay, reported before they left that the steamer America and her stefard, H. C. Dunbar, made a great hit with them. Their testimonial to that effect, signed by all the fishermen in the party, is as follows:

At Sea on Good Ship America, between Chicago Bay and Grand Marais, June 16, 1902.

To Whom It May Concern:

The undersigied having cruised on the steamer America of the Booth line, take great pleasure in voting her the best boat on the northern service, and in expressing herewith our kindly regard for the many courtesies shown us by her officers and crew. We especially desire to express our cordial thanks to H. E. Dunbar, steward on said boat, to vote that he is the right man in the right position, and have elected that on all future excursions of this tribe that we shall use every effort to ship with him, so as to secure excellent cuisine and kindly attentions.

AMUSEMENTS.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Flint again entertained a large audience at the Lyceum last evening. The feature of their performance was a cataleptic exhibition. A young man was placed in a state of catalepsy, stretched across two chairs, and five men stood on his body. Tonight a man will be placed in a cataleptic sleep, taken to Kenney, Anker & Denny's store and left in the show window for twenty-four hours.

RICHARD MANSFIELD.

Richard Mansfield's appearance at the Lyceum Monday, in his latest success, "Beaucaire," will be a rare opportunity to enjoy a new revelation of this great artist's illuminating genius. His conception of the role, his creation, his production, his company and the play itself stands perhaps for the most popular conception of entertainment allied with fine art. It is not art for art's sake only: Mansfield's Beaucaire is in the highest sense art for amusement's sake. The play is a charming story told with humor and strengthened with dramatic virility. The great artist has illustrated it with a series of gorgeous settings and with sartorial dressing, not merely of the fashion of Beaucaire's period, but richer than anything seen before. The company is large and the artists are well known for their excellence.

KATHRYNE KIDDER.

No actress is more welcome to thi scity than Miss Kathryn Kidder. This season her coming is particularly interesting in view of the fact that she will be seen for the first time in her famous impersonation of Peggy in David Garrick's immortal comedy, "The Country Girl." In many respects Peggy is the most humorous character ever given to the English speaking stage. For centuries theater-goers have laughed at her awkwardness, her humor and her mirth-provoking antics. Many celebrated American actresses have impersonated the role. Miss Kidder is booked to appear in this city in "The Country Girl" at the Lyceum on June 30, and as she is a strong favorite here a large audience will undobutedly greet her.

CORN HAS A BREAK

Starts Nervous and Higher But Has a Heavy Slump.

Wheat Starts Strong But Reacts, Later Turning Stronger.

Liberal Offerings and Corn Decline Weakened Wheat.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 18.—July corn in the Chicago market was the absorbing feature of the market at the opening today and when it opened at from 68c to 69c against a close of 67c yesterday it looked like another day of punishment for the shorts. The strength was short dyed, however, for the price steadily sagged until it finally closed 2c below yesterday and 3½c from the highest price of the morning.

The wheat market started out at an advance and fairly strong, but turned easier and declined. Wet weather in the winter wheat region and the corner in corn were responsible for the opening strength but full receipts, a decline in corn and liberal offerings unsettled the market. The Liverpool market closed 1sd higher to ½d lower. Paris was up ½@¾ and Antwerp and Amsterdam unchanged. New York reported twenty-six loads of wheat taken for export.

Primary receipts of wheat were 552,000 bus, last year 422,000 bus. Shipments were 298,000 bus, last year 362,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 171,000 bus.

Oats suffered an advance of 1c, selling today, declining the primary receipts of corn were, 330,000 bus, last year 359,000 bus. Shipments 152,000 bus, last year 514,000 bus. Clearances were 56 bus.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 254 cars, and at Chicago, 35, a total of 311 cars, against 188 last week and 311 last year.

The Duluth wheat market was quiet. In the early part of the day it was strong, but later failed to hold. It opened unchanged at 74¾c, sold at 74¾c at 9:40 and then dropped to 73⅞c at 11:10. From that point there was a rally and the market finally closed on sales at 74¼c. This was a decline of 1c. Chicago advanced ¼@⅝c and Minneapolis was slightly higher.

Cash prices continued at 1c over July for No. 1 northern, 2c under for No. 2 and 3c under for No. 3. Sales were 10,000 bus.

The flax market was fairly active but the prices were weaker. Cash declined 1c, September was off 1½c and October 1c. Rye fell ¼c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—Cash, No. 1 hard, 76⅝c; No. 1 northern, 74⅜c; No. 2 northern, 72⅞c; No. 3 spring, 71¾c. To arrive—No. 1 hard, 77⅝c, No. 1 northern, 75⅝c; July, 74¼c; September, 72⅞c bid. Manitoban—No. 1 northern, cash, 74⅛c; No. 2 northern, 72⅝c. Oats—September, 29¾c. Rye, 55½c; September, 52c. Flax—Cash, $1.74; to arrive, $1.70; on track $1.70; June, $1.70; September, $1.40½; October, $1.36¾; cash No. 1 Northwestern, $1.75.

Cars inspected—Wheat, 12; last year, 169; flax, 1. Receipts—Wheat, 4273; corn, 5006; flax, 1895. Shipments—Wheat, 21,354.

MARKET REPORT.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, 307 Board of Trade, Duluth, Minn.

Chicago, June 18.—There was a fairly large trade in wheat today and the market after opening firm later declined on heavy selling of September wheat by a prominent commission house, but toward the end of the session, prices rallied and closed firm, July, ¾c, and September and December, ½c higher than yesterday. Foreign markets quiet, Liverpool closed ¼d lower. Paris was also lower on improved weather conditions. There was a good cash demand again and fairly liberal sales reported for shipment. No. 1 northern spring sold at 1c over July in store. The weather throughout the winter wheat belt continues unsettled and heavy rains were reported in Kansas. This helped the market toward the close. The general situation looks healthy, but the future course will depend a great deal on the weather. Estimated receipts tomorrow, 25 cars.

There was a large and active trade in corn today, the principal feature to the market was the further covering by July shorts, that option sold as high as 69c early, but later became weak on free selling and declined to 65¾c and closed at 65½c. The other futures were fairly active and ruled strong during the early part of the session, but later eased off in sympathy with the break in July. September closed ¼c lower than yesterday. Foreign markets were firm, Liverpool closed ½d higher for the day. Cash demand very quiet. The weather generally favorable for the growing crop. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 200 cars.

The trade in oats was light today and the principal feature was that the market was scattered selling by longs of old July oats. That future closed 1c lower than last night. The new July oats sympathized more or less and closed ½c lower than last night, while September held very steady and closed ⅛c lower than last night. There was special reason for today's decline in July. Country offerings were very light and cash demand good, number three white oats bringing 37½@37¾c on track. The weather was generally favorable although we are getting too much rain again. The cash situation is strong and we think new July a purchase around present prices. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 190 cars.

Provisions opened higher, although hogs were cheaper and receipts large. Strength in wheat has something to do with it. But leaders were supposed to be giving the market support. Closing was firm on lard and ribs and easy on pork. There was aggressive buying of September pork probably for a leading packer to help the list, but after large purchases were made the market slipped back again with outside holders liberal sellers. We see no change in the situation from what we regard as extremely bearish considering the prices. The market requires constant support and this without any damage to the bears. It is developing trade in December, January and May lard, foreigners are the sellers and it is suspected some of the packers also. January pork is the same price it was eighteen days ago, and September is 60c higher. We advocate selling on all forced rallies. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 33,000 hogs.

THE CORNER IN CORN.

Another Turbulent Day In the Corn Pit.

Chicago, June 18.—The corn pit was again the scene of the tumultuous mob of grain speculators today. The scene stared skyward under the manipulation of the crowd that has cornered July options and as quickly dropped with a thud. Every trader in the pit was kept guessing as to what would be the price at the end of the day. Natural conditions were entirely ignored. In the first ten minutes, advances of 1½c were made. In the next hour prices slumped 2 cents.

All sorts of conjectures were made as to the final outcome of the corner. Private elevators are making contract corn as fast as possible in order gradually to undo and overcome the congested condition. In three days 500,000 bus have been made. Just as earnest is the big bull clique in keep cash stocks out of this market. Country markets are rushing corn here to take advantage of the high prices, but opposed to this movement is that of the bull operators, who are buying up cash stuff and selling it at a discount to prevent large arrivals. Efforts are even being made to ship stuff to Milwaukee to grade in that market.

July options practically control all action on the board of trade. At the opening they sold ½ to 1½c higher than yesterday's closing price, the first two sales being made at 68c and 69c. From the top figure there was a constant and rapid decline, which carried July to a whipsawing process of the bulls, until July floundered at 6c. September options showed strength, following July, but did not fluctuate widely.

There was a constant pressure of the corn pit during the closing hour. The manipulators pushed July down to 63¾c, a loss of 3⅝c from the opening high prices. Old traders say that in a market that is being played as corn is now irrespective of its commercial merits just such pranks as it played today may be expected from day to day. The close was comparatively weak, July selling 2c under yesterday's close, at 65½c.

BREAK CAMP.

The Third Regiment Leaves Lake City For Home.

St. Paul, June 18.—A Lake City, Minn., special to the Dispatch says: The Third regiment of the National Guards broke camp today at 1:30 p. m. and departed on a special over the Milwaukee to their respective posts. This morning the paying off of the men was finished. The medals won by the sharpshooters and marksmen were presented in front of the colonel's headquarters this morning. Considering its being the last night in camp, last night, the camp was quiet, the men retiring early. The general sentiment among the officers and men is to the effect that a more ideal camp was never held in the history of the Third and mores satisfactory results were never obtained than this year.

The Second regiment under Col. Joseph Bobleter will come into camp tomorrow morning at 12 o'clock.

FOR LA FOLLETTE,

Dane County Has Gone Solid For Governor.

St. Paul, June 18.—A Madison, Wis., special says: Dane county has gone solid for Governor La Follette without question, a majority of delegates for him being elected in all three assembly districts.

The First, or city district, is close, but the governor has beyond dispute a majority of 4 2-3 votes in the 36 delegates. In the Second district he has 39 of 54 delegates and in the Third he has at least 50 of the .. delegates to the district convention.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Antics of Tuesday Continue In Corn Pit.

Chicago, June 18.—Operations in the corn pit at the opening today were simply continuations of yesterday's antics. July shorts are in a corner and that tells the story. There was a scramble to get under cover at the opening and the result was that July sold 9c to 12c higher at 68c to 69c on the first two sales. All conditions save that of the manipulation were lost sight of. At the top figure considerable stuff came out, some from the big bull leaders and a good deal from "tailers" who had good paper profits they wished to secure. Gradually prices weakened as stuff was offered and July slid off to 67¾c. All sorts of gossip was going around the pit. Elevators were naturally against the manipulation and showed their position by their attempts to make contract stuff. Yet 200,000 bus were made—a total of 500,000 bus in three days. The Gates crowd, which is credited with the corner, is said to be stalling off the shipment of cash corn to this point by offering cash stuff on all hands at reduced prices. There was talk of stuff being shipped to Milwaukee to grade there. Of today's car lot receipts of 219 cars, only 21 were contract.

Bulls let the shorts have all they wanted of the July corn and as a consequence prices broke very ruggedly. The Gates crowd was supposed to be a heavy seller, but its brokers bought openly in the market on all declines. Excitement ruled the day. The tension was great and so nervous was the feeling that fluctuations that ordinarily would be considered broad, were lost sight of in the great slump. July broke 2⅝c from its top and closed 2c lower than yesterday at 65¾c.

Wheat felt the influence of the corn corner and of wet weather in the winter wheat belt. July in consequence opened ¼@⅝c up at 72⅝c and sold at 72½c. General buying was the order at the start, but receipts were fair, corn slipped back and offerings became somewhat liberal. July sold back to 72¼c and steadied. Cables were steady. The weather conditions in France promise to be something of a factor in the near future. Receipts 87 cars, five contract; Minneapolis and Duluth reported 274 cars, a total for the three points of 311 against 188 last week and 311 a year ago.

The corn crowd sold September wheat freely and broke the price 1c. This brought a dip in July to 71¾c. A fair rally followed and July wheat closed firm, ⅜c up at 72⅜@¼c.

Oats were very dull and steady early. There was some small buying of deferred futures on the weather, but July opened unchanged at 39½ and did not budge the first hour. Receipts 112 cars.

Provisions were dull, but in fair demand. Offerings were light. The hog market was firm and induced strength, especially in ribs. July pork opened 5c up at $17.60; July lard unchanged at $10.15, and July ribs 5c up at $10.45.

Close, wheat, June, 73¼c; July, 72⅜@¼c; September, 71⅛@⅜c; December, 72⅝@¾c. Corn, June, 64½c; July, 65½c; September, 58⅜@½c; December, 44⅝@½c; May, 43¼c. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The market was irregular. It opened firm on the rains West and Southwest, holding firm in spite of weakness in corn, but still a dull market, without tendency either way. While the weather predictions are for an improvement, yet the general condition is an unsatisfactory one. Certainly more rain is not needed in the Southwest. Our advices from Missouri are that there, so far as the threshing has progressed, the yield is disappointing. Specks are not scattered, long interest is reduced to a minimum and a good deal of wheat has gradually drifted into the hands of strong people. We see nothing bearish in the situation, but doubt if materially lower prices are likely and the accidents we think are likely to be favorable to the bull side. We rather advise buying wheat on the soft spots.

• • •

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: A friend in St. Louis writes: The yield of wheat in Missouri is going to be very disappointing. Teasdale, our largest receiver, says his advices are that Missouri will fall below expectations. Judge Wilkinson, who has a large farm in Perry county, says the berr is badly shrivled."

The weather was generally favorable although we are getting too much rain again. The cash situation is strong and we think new July a purchase around present prices. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 190 cars.

Provisions opened higher, although hogs were cheaper and receipts large. Strength in wheat has something to do with it. But leaders were supposed to be giving the market support. Closing was firm on lard and ribs and easy on pork. There was aggressive buying of September pork probably for a leading packer to help the list, but after large purchases were made the market slipped back again with outside holders liberal sellers. We see no change in the situation from what we regard as extremely bearish considering the prices. The market requires constant support and this without any damage to the bears. It is developing trade in December, January and May lard, foreigners are the sellers and it is suspected some of the packers also. January pork is the same price it was eighteen days ago, and September is 60c higher. We advocate selling on all forced rallies. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 33,000 hogs.

TRADING ANIMATED

Stock Market Broader and More Active Than of Late.

Enormous Absorption of Illinois Central Which Made Advance.

This Sustained Prices of the Other Railroad Stocks.

New York, June 18.—Only a few stocks changed more than ½ from last night's prices on opening sales this morning. There were sales of 1000 shares of Missouri Pacific at an advance of ½ and St. Joe & Grand Island preferred rose ¾. Sugar and Anaconda lost a point each.

Business was quite animated for a time under the impetus of large purchases of Reading, the second preferred; Missouri Pacific, Illinois Central. These stocks advanced from ¾ to 2⅜ with Illinois Central scoring the maximum rise. The strength of these stocks helped some other standard stocks but the response was not general. General Electric jumped 5 points and Wheeling & Lake Erie second preferred 3. Chicago Great Grand Island first preferred 1¼ each. Ann Arbor preferred and Minneapolis & St. Louis lost 1, Northwestern 2 and Peekuk & Des Moines 3 points. There were additional reactions before the end of the hour and St. Paul, Union Pacific and Atchison were below last night.

Traders took profits in the notably strong stocks and bid up others causing an irregular market. Missouri Pacific felt the realizing sales most, losing over a point and while the grangers and Reading reacted large fractions. Wabash and Chicago & Alton was bought heavily at advances of 1¼@1½. Illinois Central yielded only slightly and then rose above 117. Before noon prices generally were declining, Sugar breaking 1¾ and other active stocks a fraction. General Electric reacted 3. New York Air Brake fell 4 points and General Chemical 1⅜. Bonds were irregular at noon.

Illinois Central was bought confidently to 159 making its rise 5¾. The enormous absorption of this stock encouraged the bulls to bid the general market up again and there was increased demand for the trans-continental stocks. St. Paul, Union Pacific and Southern Pacific gained 1@1¾ and many other roads sold higher but the Louisville & Nashville, Rock Island, western preferred and Hocking Valley advanced a point and Northwestern rushed up its early loss. The market eased off and became dull at 1 o'clock.

There was reaction in St. Paul, it falling back over a point and St. Joe & Grand Island first preferred 1¼. The persistent strength of Illinois Central sustained the market. Prices of railroads rose generally to the best again. The gain in Illinois Central reached 1¾, St. Louis Southwestern 1¼, the preferred 4, Wabash and New York Central 1¾ and Pennsylvania ¾. The American Ice stocks, Texas Land Trust and Pere Marquette lost 1 to 1¼. The market was broader and more active than on any day this week.

The advance extended to new stocks in the final hour various grain carrying roads and soft coolers rising a point or more over last night. A movement to take profits in Illinois Central forced it back 2 points and checked the rise elsewhere. Rumors were current of coming stock subscription rights. Colorado Fuel lost 1¼. South Shore preferred 2⅜ and Linseed preferred a point. Reading receded to a shade below last night. The closing was active and rather easy.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Waldorf to Edwards, Wood & Co.: The action of the market is regarded tonight as confirmatory of the theory that slowly but surely it is working toward a higher level. The general surroundings and prospects are considered favorable to such an outcome. Thus developments bearing on the coal strike are indicative of the early defeat of strikers and in their private conversation the operators declare with much emphasis that before the month is out normal conditions would be restored in the Pennsylvania anthracite regions. Money on call is freely offered at 1½ per cent and even lower rates. The commission houses books, crop advices, railroad earnings and reports from general business are all suggestive of continued industrial activity. As to the falling off in exports reflected by the government's trade statement for April it is pointed out that with business reviving abroad as a consequence of the ending of the Boer war and good crops in this country, reasonably assured the outlook for our foreign trade is for a later recovery in the exports of merchandise and for order products. Interests identified with the grangers and coal shares hold that on all moderate reactions these stocks would be a purchase for some time to come. The heavy buying of Reading common is for control and has little bearing on the labor troubles. Insiders in St. Paul, argue that on its earnings and dividend prospects the stock should be quoted twenty points above its present price and they predict that it will sell before September, barring accident to crops about 190. The Gould people continue to talk bullish on their favorite stocks particularly Missouri Pacific, Manhattan, Wabash common. The movement in the first named is under way that in Manhattan and Wabash may not come till later.

• • •

New York to Paine, Webber & Co.: After being floated a little more than a year the United States Steel company now acknowledges that it has to borrow $50,000,000 more. This does not argue very well for dividends on the common. We think the stocks a sale on every rally.

• • •

Warrington to W. H. Laidley & Co.: It is only a question of a few days or a week at the most before a general advance is in progress. Most traders and the public are bearish, but the fact is apparent to any observer that prices hold strong and in some instances prices do not advance there is no recession of more than a few fractions. I cannot advise or suggest any change of market position from that so strongly urged for the past two weeks. I think my advice on Missouri Pacific was most definite and you cannot do better than hold all stocks purchased at lower prices and buy more on any two-point reaction if the opportunity offers and I expect to see it around 115 in the near future. You can make no mistake in buying Union Pacific and holding it for a marked advance.

• • •

Dow-Jones to Edwards, Wood & Co.: We think that it can be accepted that if Illinois Central directors will this afternoon offer to stockholders new stock at par to amount of 20 per cent of their holdings. The proceeds of new stock will be used for double tracking portions of the line, new terminals and other purposes.

DOCTORS DIFFERING

As to Merit of Salt as Cure For Pneumonia.

Discovery By Chicago Physician Explained to Medical Convention.

Provides For Injection of Sodium Chloride Solution Into Lungs.

Chicago, June 18.—After experimenting for several months, Dr. W. Byron Coakley, of this city, has discovered, he believes, a method of curing pneumonia by means of sodium chloride. The manner of using this chemical, and the apparatus required in its application, were made public in a paper read by the doctor before the American Medical association at its Saratoga, N. Y., convention last week. His theory has been bitterly attacked and defended by those who are considered authorities on the subject.

The proposition of Dr. Coakley is that "all bacteria directly or indirectly concerned in the production of pneumonia succumb to an 8 per cent sodium chloride solution at temperatures ranging from 120 to 130 degrees Fahrenheit." That this is true is not denied, but the value of the discovery, the doctor says, is in the method and apparatus that he has used in supplying the solution.

In his paper and experiments before the Saratoga convention Dr. Coakley used an instrument invented by himself, called the "organometer." This overcomes all objections to the use of a liquid injection, he explained, in that it reached the diseased portions of the lungs without any injury to those organs. It does this by the use of a fine gold needle that punctures the lungs and spreads the solution. When the lungs have been reached the sodium chloride is pumped into them and takes immediate effect.

The heated solution, when it reaches the bacteria, the physician explains, first inhibits their growth and then destroys them, the salt acting all the time as an antiseptic of an effective type. It increases the white blood cells in the infected parts, the doctor holds, thus strengthening the diseased organ, while it destroys and aids in the carrying away of the dead and dying microorganisms.

After the salt solution cools to the body temperature, it is absorbed into the blood and does not clog up the lungs. In doing this it protects the red corpuscles against destruction by the poisons of pneumonia and its accumulation of carbon dioxide. This method of absorption has been named "endosmosis" by Dr. Coakley, and is declared by him to be effective.

The washing out of the lungs by means of salt solutions has been tried before, but in practically every case the patient has been unable to stand the treatment. The inability to use the solution was urged against Dr. Coakley's method, until the demonstration before the association showed its success.

When the paper was read at Saratoga it created a furore among the physicians, and was attacked by many of them, but has found a number of defenders.

Another Improvement.

CHICAGO, BOSTON AND NEW YORK TRAVEL.

On and after June 15th, the Erie railroad will still further improve their Boston and New York service by offering to the public a handsome limited train to leave Chicago from Dearborn station every day at 10:30 a. m., arriving New York next afternoon at 3:30, and Boston at 9 o'clock.

There is no doubt that this service will be highly patronized, as this new train will land the traveler in New York city in ample time to permit him to proceed leisurely to his hotel or home, rest, dress, dine and spend the evening in whatever manner may appeal to him most.

This every-day morning train will consist of standard Pullman drawing-room and sleeping cars. All meals en route served by the famous Erie dining cars. No extra fare charged on this train.

A TICKET SELECTED

Nominations Made By Illinois Democratic State Convention.

Hopkins Re-Elected Chairman of State Central Committee.

Won Out After Hard Fought Battle With Harrison.

Springfield, Ill., June 18.—Clerk of the supreme court, John L. Pickering, of Springfield.

State treasurer, George W. Duddleston, of Chicago.

Trustees of the state university, Dr. Julia Holmes Smith, of Chicago; J. A. White, of Urbana, and S. S. Paxton, of Monmouth.

The foregoing ticket was nominated by the Democratic state convention yesterday afternoon, and John P. Hopkins was re-elected chairman of the state central committee after a bitter contest with Carter H. Harrison, of Chicago.

The election of Chairman Hopkins produced the only fight in the convention, but it was stirring enough to make up for the tameness that characterized the other proceedings of the convention.

The day was full of clashes between Hopkins and Harrison. The two men indulged in an acrimonious quarrel in the St. Nicholas hotel during the morning, during which Hopkins bitterly resented criticisms by Harrison of convention methods. Later Harrison and his friends succeeded in beating Hopkins in the district caucus for state committeeman and elected Thomas J. McNally, of Chicago, in his stead. Hopkins' one chance to be re-elected was in the caucus of the general committee appointed to select the chairman—and the Harrison forces were jubilant, claiming that Hopkins was beaten beyond all redemption. He himself was confident of the outcome, however, and his confidence was justified when the committee by a majority of three recommended his selection—the vote being: Hopkins, 13; Harrison, 10.

A minority report favoring the election of Harrison was made, and the fight carried upon the floor of the convention.

The struggle produced wild excitement. Impassioned speeches were made in favor of both reports, and the adherents of both cheered or jeered according to their approval or disapproval of the speakers' attitude. The delegates at times were frantic, and criticisms highly personal in their nature were frequently exchanged.

The first question before the convention in selecting the chairman was the adoption of the minority report as a substitute for that of the majority. This was voted down by the ayes and noes. The roll was then called upon the adoption of the majority report.

On this Hopkins won easily, the result of the ballot being announced by Chairman Stringer as 862 for the adoption of the report and 397 against.

The committee on resolutions held a long and stormy session before their report was finally adopted. They were so long at their task that all the nominations had been made, and half the delegates had left the hall when the report was read and adopted.

The principal fight was over the first plank in the platform.

As originally drafted, this read: "That the Democrats of Illinois in state convention declare their adherence to the fundamental principles of the Democratic party as laid down in the Declaration of Independence and the constitution of the United States, affirmed at our last national convention."

This was considered by the opponents of silver as a too specific declaration in favor of the Kansas City platform, and, headed by John C. Richberg and Adolf Kraus, of Chicago, they fought it. For three hours the debate went on, and the plank was amended to read:

"All fundamental principles of the Democratic party, etc., repeatedly affirmed by past Democratic conventions."

No effort was made to bring in the name of W. J. Bryan.

The Philippine plank also produced a long debate, some members of the committee wishing to strike it out entirely. They were overruled, however.

SYMPATHY FOR MINERS

Causes Employes of Lace Works to Strike.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 18.—Because the general manager would not discharge five girls whose relatives are still at work in the mines, the Wilkesbarre Lace Manufacturing company, the largest in the United States, was compelled to shut down yesterday. Some 1000 persons are affected. The lacemakers and cotton workers are strongly organized and have been helping the striking miners in every way possible. It appears the lacemakers learned that relatives of the girls working in the mines and the girls were given the alternative of either quitting the lace mill or having their relatives leave the collieries. Failing in this, the cotton workers' union requested the discharge of the girls, but the manager refused to comply. The employes of the cotton department thereupon quit. The manager then asked the weavers what they intended to do and after a meeting the weavers reported that they could not work with "unfair" workers and also quit.

TRAGEDY

Of Three Bridal Gowns That Were Made at Home.

Indianapolis, June 18.—Three times a bride and twice torn from the altar by death is the record of pretty Mlle. Rachel Brasseur, recognized leader of society in the large French colony at Muncie.

Homemade bridal gowns are said to have been the cause of all this disaster. The first gown was made and the groom was expected. In his place came a telegram announcing his death. From that day ill-fortune reigned until one night fire destroyed the house of Pere Brasseur and with it the ill-fated wedding gown. Immediately the pall seemed to be lifted and peace and happiness reigned once more in the household.

But all this time there was one who had no faith in the superstition of the wedding gown.

That was Mlle. Brasseur herself. In the course of a couple of years preparations were again made for a wedding at the Brasseur home. From some unknown motive Mlle. Rachel dreaded to again make her own wedding gown. Contrary to the earnest advice of her friends and relatives, she began her work, and in a short time completed a gown that was the pride of the city. As yet there was no shadow of impending calamity.

One day, while at her work, a messenger arrived at the store and delivered to the mademoiselle a beautiful diamond ring. In the course of half an hour another messenger arrived for Mlle. Brasseur. He bore the news of her fiance's sudden death. Once more the dreadful influence of the wedding gown was felt. Stricken with the knowledge of the supposed hand of fate, Mlle. Brasseur gave the dress to a friend and retired from the public eye. Not long ago Mlle. Rachel, whose former heart wounds were successfully healing, decided to become Mme. La Chapelle. By this time the fatality of the bride-made wedding dress was so deeply impressed upon her that nothing could persuade her to repeat the experiment. A New York tailor made the wedding dress, and fortune smiled upon the young couple.

They were married recently, but in good health and spirits. The ban of the wedding gown had passed.

"Although I am not of a superstitious nature," she said, "I would advise girls to refrain from making their own wedding gowns, and I certainly speak from experience."

VERY COLD.

Unseasonable Weather Causes Suffering In Germany and Austria.

Berlin, June 18.—While snow is falling in the Alps, there are cold rains here and over a large part of Germany. The temperature here is 54 degrees, while Munich reports 47 degrees and Metz 49. The coldest place in Germany is Rostock, with 36 degrees, and nowhere in Germany does the thermometer touch 60 degrees above.

Rye, now in flower, has sustained much damage. Fruits and vegetables, which were frost bitten a few weeks ago, are now suffering from excessive moisture. Cherries are especially poor. With short interludes of sunshine, rain has been falling for the past six weeks.

Vienna, June 18.—The unprecedented and persistent cold weather in Austro-Hungary is causing great apprehension among those interested in agriculture throughout the country. In addition to the heavy losses already sustained by hotels and shopkeepers, the fruit crop has been badly damaged, while the prospects for cereals are dubious.

Professor Haensler, secretaary of the Imperial Agricultural society, completed a special crop report, which it was decided to bring out on account of the unusual weather. Professor Haensler said he had no doubt that the yield of fruit throughout Austria this season would be less than half the average, while in many districts the crop would be totally destroyed.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Justice Charles M. Waterman, for four years, a member of the supreme bench of Iowa, has tendered his resignation to Governor Cummings to take effect July 1. He forms a law partnership with ex-Congressman Joe R. Lane, at Davenport. He served on the district bench at Davenport for ten years.

A favorable report was authorized by the senate committee on public lands on the bill creating a national park surrounding the famous Wind Cave in South Dakota. The purpose of the proposed legislation is to protect the cave from vandalism.

Maud Moore and Axy Walker, 13 years old, were drowned Tuesday at Kingston, Wis., while boating on a mill pond. The bodies of the girls have not been recovered.

Two unknown men were seen crossing the railroad bridge over Ottawa river some distance above Chaudlerre Falls, Tuesday. When they reached the third pier where the water runs swift and deep they plunged into the stream. Workmen near the shore saw them float down stream and over the falls. The bodies have not been found.

Four men were struck by lightning and killed on a farm twelve miles southwest of Sherman, Tex., Tuesday. The dead: William Coleman, Henry Colway, George Bracher, — —, Bracher.

The mandamus sought by the railroad and warehouse commission to compel the Great Northern to include in its annual report to the commission the proportion of its earnings within the state on interstate commerce, both that arising without and coming into the state, which was set for hearing before Judge Lewis today, has been postponed until the October term of court, this agreement having been reached by both parties to the suit this afternoon.

WOLVIN STEAMER ASHORE.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., June 18.—By the parting of a tow line the stern section of the Wolvin syndicate's ocean steamship Ammewaska, bound down the St. Lawrence to Quebec, is hard aground on Two Saints' island between Gallops and Duplette rapids, near Port Colborne. The tug Escort, acting as guide at stern, was also drawn ashore. Kingston wreckers have been summoned. The steamer is valued at $400,000.

RHEUMATISM

Almost as Common in Summer as in Winter

When the blood is charged with Uric Acid and other inflammatory matter, and muscles and joints, tissues and nerves having become saturated with it, an attack of Rheumatism is liable to come at anytime, and from very slight causes—sudden chilling of the body when over-heated, exposure to night air, a fit of indigestion, an easterly wind, or any sudden change in the weather will stir the blood and set in motion these demon forces as quickly as the cold, piercing winds of winter.

The real cause of Rheumatism is a polluted, sour and acid condition of the blood, and as it flows through the body it deposits a gritty, irritating substance or sediment in the muscles, joints and nerves, and it is these that produce the terrible pains, inflammation and swelling, and the misery and torture of acute Rheumatism. No other disease causes such pain, such widespread suffering as Rheumatism. It deforms and cripples its thousands, leaving them helpless and miserable. When neglected or improperly treated, Rheumatism becomes chronic; the pains are wandering or shifting from one place to another, sometimes sharp and cutting, again dull and aggravating. The muscles of the neck, shoulders and back, the joints of the knees, ankles and wrists, are most often the seat of pain. Countless liniments are rubbed upon the affected parts, and plasters are applied to get relief, but such things do not reach the poisoned blood; their effect is only temporary; they are neither curative nor preventive. The blood must be purified, the acid poison counteracted, and all irritating matter removed from the circulation before permanent relief and a thorough cure is effected, and no remedy does this so certainly and so quickly as S. S. S. It contains not only purifying and tonic properties, but solvent qualities as well, all these being necessary in eradicating the poison and making a complete and lasting cure of Rheumatism. S. S. S. cleanses the blood, and under its tonic effect the nervous system regains its normal tone and the appetite and digestion improve, resulting in the upbuilding of the general health, and because of its solvent properties all irritating matter and acid particles are dissolved and filtered out of the system, thus relieving the muscles and joints and removing all danger of future attacks. S. S. S. contains no Mercury, Potash or minerals of any description, but is guaranteed purely vegetable. Old people will find it not only the best blood purifier, but a most invigorating tonic. Just such a remedy as they need to enrich the blood and quicken the circulation.

Whether you have Rheumatism in the acute or chronic stage, the treatment must be internal, deep and thorough in order to be lasting. Never be satisfied with anything less than an absolutely perfect cure. This you can get by the use of S. S. S.

GOT PROMPT RELIEF.

LOUISVILLE, KY., April 1, 1902.

GENTLEMEN:—For the past twenty-three years I have used S. S. S. in my family as a general spring tonic. I have also used it personally for Rheumatism and got prompt relief. I have bought many bottles of S. S. S. to give to those needing a good medicine and who were unable to buy it themselves. There is nothing that I can say too highly in favor of S. S. S., and will continue both to keep it in the house and recommend it to any whom I think need a sure cure for impure blood arising from any cause.

Yours very truly,
1917 Preston St. JAS. ANDERSON.

DOCTOR CUT HIS THROAT

To Find Out If the Man Was Alive.

Elgin, Ill., June 18.—The town of St. Charles is stirred to the utmost, lynching is threatened and indignation runs high because Dr. H. A. White, a young physician of that city, cut the throat of a Swede who was drowned in Fox river, near that city, Sunday morning, "to make sure that he was dead."

In company with several other boys of about his own age, Charles Durie, employed by the electric railroad as a section hand, went swimming near the railroad bridge Sunday morning. They had been in the water but a short time when Durie was seized with cramps and sank.

The report that a man had been drowned attracted the attention of the entire population of the town to the spot, and with the recovery of the body, which was still warm, every one took a hand in attempting to resuscitate it. The head was bumped against the piers of the bridge and the body was submitted to much brutal treatment. Efforts were still being made to restore life to the body when Dr. White arrived at the morgue. Taking out a jack knife he cut the throat of the victim, destroying any chance which he might have had for recovery. He explained that he wanted to see if there was any pulsation in the jugular vein. The verdict of the coroner's jury has been withheld pending an examination.

No one would ever be bothered with constipation if everyone knew how naturally and quickly Burdock Blood Bitters regulates the stomach and bowels.

ORDER TO EXAMINE ACCOUNTS, ETC.—

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis. —ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, June 11th, 1902.

In the Matter of the Estate of Charles W. Field, Deceased:

On reading and filing the petition of Charles W. Field, Jr., executor of the estate of Charles W. Field, deceased, representing among other things, that he has fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining, settling and allowing the final account of his administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the parties entitled thereto by law.

It is ordered, that said account be examined, and petition heard by this court, on the second day of July, A. D. 1902, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the probate office, in the court house, in the city of Duluth, in said county.

And it is further ordered, that notice thereof be given to all persons interested, by publishing a copy of this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in The Duluth Evening Herald, a newspaper printed and published at Duluth, in said county.

Dated at Duluth, this eleventh day of June, A. D. 1902.

By the Court,
W. G. BONHAM,
Judge of Probate.
